often thus,

And hath been from his youth. Pray you, keep seat.

The fit is momentary ; upon a thought
He will again be well. If much you note

him,
You shall offend him and extend his passion.

Feed, and regard him not.—Are you a man?

Macb. Ay, and a bold one that dare look on that

Which might appal the devil.

Lady M. O proper stuff! 60

This is the very painting of your fear;
This is the air-drawn dagger which you said Led you to Duncan. O, these flaws and starts—

Impostors to true fear—would well become
A woman's story at a winter's fire, 65
Authoriz'd by her grandam. Shame itself!
Why do you make such faces? When all's done,

You look but on a stool.

Macb. Prithee see there.

Behold! look! lo! how say you?

Why, what care I? If thou canst nod, speak too. 70

If charnel-houses and our graves must send
Those that we bury back, our monuments
Shall be the maws of kites. [Exit Ghost.

Lady M. What, quite unmann'd in folly?

Macb. If I stand here, I saw him.

Lady M. Fie, for shame!

Macb. Blood hath been shed ere now, i'
th' olden time, 75

Ere humane statute purg'd the gentle weal; Ay, and since too, murders have been perform'd

Too terrible for the ear. The time has been That when the brains out the man would die,

And there an end; but now they rise again,
With twenty mortal murders on their crowns, 81

And push us from our stools. This is more strange

Than such a murder is.

Lady M. My worthy lord,

Your noble friends do lack you.

Macb. I do forget.

Do not muse at me, my most worthy
friends; 85

I have a strange infirmity, which is nothing
To those that know me. Come, love and health to all;

Then I'll sit down. Give me some wine, fill full.

Enter Ghost.

I drink to the general joy o' th' whole table,
And to our dear friend Banquo, whom we miss. 90

Would he were here! To all, and him, we thirst,

And all to all.

Lords. Our duties, and the pledge.

Macb. Avaunt, and quit my sight. Let the earth hide thee.

Thy bones are marrowless, thy blood is cold;
Thou hast no speculation in those eyes 95
Which thou dost glare with!

Lady M. Think of this, good peers,

But as a thing of custom. 'Tis no other;
Only it spoils the pleasure of the time.

Macb. What man dare, I dare.

Approach thou like the rugged Russian
bear, 100

The arm'd rhinoceros, or th' Hyrcan tiger;
Take any shape but that, and my firm nerves

Shall never tremble. Or be alive again,
And dare me to the desert with thy sword;
If trembling I inhabit, then protest me 105
The baby of a girl. Hence, horrible shadow!
Unreal mock'ry, hence! [Exit Ghost.

Why, so; being gone,

I am a man again. Pray you, sit still.

Lady M. You have displac'd the mirth, broke the good meeting,

With most admir'd disorder.

Macb. Can such things be, 110

And overcome us like a summer's cloud, Without our special wonder? You make me strange

Even to the disposition that I owe,
When now I think you can behold such sights 114

And keep the natural ruby of your cheeks,
When mine is blanch'd with fear.

Ross. What sights, my lord?

Lady M. I pray you speak not; he grows worse and worse;

Question enrages him. At once, good night.
Stand not upon the order of your going,
But go at once.

Len. Good night; and better health 120
Attend his Majesty!

Lady M. A kind good night to all!
[Exeunt Lords and Attendants.

Macb. It will have blood; they say blood will have blood.

Stones have been known to move, and trees
to speak;

Augurs and understood relations have
By maggot-pies and choughs and rooks brought forth 125

The secret'st man of blood. What is the
night?

Lady M. Almost at odds with morning, which is which.

Macb. How say'st thou that Macduff denies his person

At our great bidding?

Lady M. Did you send to him, sir?

Macb. I hear it by the way; but I will send— 130

There's not a one of them but in his house
I keep a servant feed'd—I will to-morrow.
And betimes I will to the Weird Sisters:
More shall they speak; for now I am bent
to know

By the worst means the worst. For mine own good 135

All causes shall give way. I am in blood Stepp'd in so far that, should I wade no
more,

Returning were as tedious as go o'er.
 Strange things I have in head that will to
 hand,
 Which must be acted ere they may be scann'd.

Lady M. You lack the season of all natures, sleep.

Macb. Come, we'll to sleep. My strange and self-abuse

Is the initiate fear that wants hard use.
 We are yet but young in deed. [Exeunt.

SCENE V. A heath.

Thunder. Enter the three Witches, meeting
 HECATE.

1 Witch. Why, how now, Hecat! You look angerly.

Hec. Have I not reason, beldams as you
 are,

Saucy and overbold? How did you dare
 To trade and traffic with Macbeth
 In riddles and affairs of death;
 And I, the mistress of your charms,
 The close contriver of all harms,
 Was never call'd to bear my part,
 Or show the glory of our art?

And, which is worse, all you have done 10
 Hath been but for a wayward son,
 Spiteful and wrathful; who, as others do,
 Loves for his own ends, not for you.

But make amends now. Get you gone,
 And at the pit of Acheron 15

Meet me i' th' morning; thither he Will come to know his destiny.

Your vessels and your spells provide,
 Your charms, and everything beside.

I am for th' air; this night I'll spend 20
 Unto a dismal and a fatal end.

Great business must be wrought ere noon.
 Upon the corner of the moon

There hangs a vap'rous drop profound;
 I'll catch it ere it come to ground;

And that, distill'd by magic sleights, 25
 Shall raise such artificial sprites

As, by the strength of their illusion,
 Shall draw him on to his confusion. 29

He shall spurn fate, scorn death, and bear
 His hopes 'bove wisdom, grace, and fear;

And you all know security
 Is mortals' chiefest enemy.

[Music and a song within:

'Come away, come away, etc.'

Hark! I am call'd; my little spirit, see,
 Sits in a foggy cloud, and stays for me. 35

[Exit.

1 Witch. Come, let's make haste; she'll soon be back again. [Exeunt.

SCENE VI. Forres. The palace.

Enter LENNOX and another Lord.

Len. My former speeches have but hit your thoughts,

Which can interpret farther. Only I say Things have been strangely borne. The gracious Duncan

Was pitied of Macbeth. Marry, he was dead.

And the right-vaillant Banquo walk'd too
 late; 5

Whom, you may say, if't please you,
 Fleance kill'd,

For Fleance fled. Men must not walk too
 late.

Who cannot want the thought how monstrous

It was for Malcolm and for Donalbain
 To kill their gracious father? Damned fact! 10

How it did grieve Macbeth! Did he not straight,

In pious rage, the two delinquents tear,
 That were the slaves of drink and thralls of sleep?

Was not that nobly done? Ay, and wisely
 too;

For 'twould have anger'd any heart alive 15
 To hear the men deny't. So that, I say,

He has borne all things well; and I do think

That had he Duncan's sons under his key—As, an't please heaven, he shall not—they should find

What 'twere to kill a father; so should Fleance. 20

But peace! For from broad words, and
 'cause he fail'd

His presence at the tyrant's feast, I hear, Macduff lives in disgrace. Sir, can you tell

Where he bestows himself?

Lord. The son of Duncan, From whom this tyrant holds the due of birth, 25

Lives in the English court, and is receiv'd
 Of the most pious Edward with such grace

That the malevolence of fortune nothing Takes from his high respect; thither

Macduff 29

Is gone to pray the holy King upon his aid
 To wake Northumberland and warlike

Siward,

That by the help of these—with Him above
 To ratify the work—we may again

Give to our tables meat, sleep to our nights,

Free from our feasts and banquets bloody knives, 35

Do faithful homage and receive free
 honours—

All which we pine for now. And this report Hath so exasperate the King that he Prepares for some attempt of war.

Len. Sent he to Macduff?
Lord. He did; and with an absolute

'Sir, not I!' 40

The cloudy messenger turns me his back
 And hums, as who should say 'You'll rue the time

That clogs me with this answer'.

Len. And that well might Advise him to a caution t' hold what distance

His wisdom can provide. Some holy angel
Fly to the court of England and unfold 46
His message ere he come, that a swift blessing

May soon return to this our suffering country

Under a hand accurs'd!

Lord. I'll send my prayers with him.
[Exeunt.]

ACT FOUR

SCENE I. A dark cave. In the middle, a cauldron boiling.

Thunder. Enter the three Witches.

1 Witch. Thrice the brinded cat hath mew'd.

2 Witch. Thrice and once the hedge-pig whin'd.

3 Witch. Harpier cries; 'tis time, 'tis
time.

1 Witch. Round about the cauldron go;
In the poison'd entrails throw. 5
Toad that under cold stone Days and nights has thirty-one Swelt' red venom sleeping got Boil thou first i' th' charmed pot.

All. Double, double toil and trouble; 10
Fire burn, and cauldron bubble.

2 Witch. Fillet of a fenny snake,
In the cauldron boil and bake;
Eye of newt, and toe of frog,
Wool of bat, and tongue of dog, 15
Adder's fork, and blind-worm's sting,
Lizard's leg, and howlet's wing—
For a charm of pow'rful trouble,
Like a hell-broth boil and bubble.

All. Double, double toil and trouble; 20
Fire burn, and cauldron bubble.

3 Witch. Scale of dragon, tooth of wolf,
Witch's mummy, maw and gulf
Of the ravin'd salt-sea shark,
Root of hemlock digg'd i' th' dark, 25
Liver of blaspheming Jew,
Gall of goat, and slips of yew
Sliver'd in the moon's eclipse,
Nose of Turk, and Tartar's lips,
Finger of birth-strangled babe 30
Ditch-deliver'd by a drab—
Make the gruel thick and slab;
Add thereto a tiger's chaudron,
For th' ingreience of our cauldron.

All. Double, double toil and trouble; 35
Fire burn, and cauldron bubble.

2 Witch. Cool it with a baboon's blood,
Then the charm is firm and good.

Enter HECATE.

Hec. O, well done! I commend your pains;

And every one shall share i' th' gains. 40

And now about the cauldron sing,
Like elves and fairies in a ring,
Enchanting all that you put in.

[Music and a song: 'Black spirits, etc.' Exit Hecate.]

2 Witch. By the pricking of my thumbs,
Something wicked this way comes. 45
Open, locks, whoever knocks.

Enter MACBETH.

Macb. How now, you secret, black, and midnight hags!

What is't you do?

All. A deed without a name.

Macb. I conjure you by that which you profess— 50

Howe'er you come to know it—answer
me.

Though you untie the winds and let them
fight

Against the churches; though the yesty waves

Confound and swallow navigation up;
Though bladed corn be lodg'd and trees blown down; 55

Though castles topple on their warders'
heads;

Though palaces and pyramids do slope
Their heads to their foundations; though the treasure

Of nature's germens tumble all together,
Even till destruction sicken—answer me 60
To what I ask you.

1 Witch. Speak.

2 Witch. Demand.

3 Witch. We'll answer.

1 Witch. Say, if thou'dst rather hear it from our mouths,
Or from our masters?

Macb. Call 'em; let me see 'em.

1 Witch. Pour in sow's blood that hath eaten

Her nine farrow; grease that's sweaten 65
From the murderer's gibbet throw
Into the flame.

All. Come, high or low;
Thyself and office deftly show.

Thunder. First Apparition, an Armed Head.

Macb. Tell me, thou unknown power—

1 Witch. He knows thy thought.
Hear his speech, but say thou nought. 70

App. Macbeth! Macbeth! Macbeth!
Beware Macduff;

Beware the Thane of Fife. Dismiss me.
Enough. [He descends.]

Macb. Whate'er thou art, for thy good caution, thanks;

Thou hast harp'd my fear aright. But one word more—

1 Witch. He will not be commanded.
Here's another, 75
More potent than the first.

Thunder. Second Apparition, a Bloody Child.

App. Macbeth! Macbeth! Macbeth!

Macb. Had I three ears, I'd hear thee.

App. Be bloody, bold, and resolute ;
laugh to scorn 79

The pow'r of man, for none of woman born
Shall harm Macbeth. [Descends.]

Macb. Then live, Macduff ; what need I fear of thee ?

But yet I'll make assurance double sure
And take a bond of fate. Thou shalt not live ;

That I may tell pale-hearted fear it lies, 85
And sleep in spite of thunder.

Thunder. Third Apparition, a Child
Crowned, with a tree in his hand.

What is this

That rises like the issue of a king,
And wears upon his baby brow the round
And top of sovereignty ?

All. Listen, but speak not to't.

App. Be lion-mettled, proud, and take no care

Who chafes, who frets, or where conspirers
are ; 91

Macbeth shall never vanquish'd be until Great Birnam wood to high Dunsinane Hill
Shall come against him. [Descends.]

Macb. That will never be.

Who can impress the forest, bid the tree 95
Unfix his earth-bound root ? Sweet bodements, good !

Rebellion's head rise never till the wood
Of Birnam rise, and our high-plac'd
Macbeth

Shall live the lease of nature, pay his breath
To time and mortal custom. Yet my heart Throbs to know one thing ; tell me, if your art 101

Can tell so much—shall Banquo's issue ever Reign in this kingdom ?

All. Seek to know no more.

Macb. I will be satisfied. Deny me this,
And an eternal curse fall on you ! Let me know. 105

Why sinks that cauldron, and what noise is this ? [Hautboys.]

1 Witch. Show !

2 Witch. Show !

3 Witch. Show !

All. Show his eyes, and grieve his heart ;
Come like shadows, so depart ! 111

A Show of eight Kings, and BANQUO last ;
the last king with a glass in his hand.

Macb. Thou art too like the spirit of Banquo ; down !

Thy crown does sear mine eye-balls. And thy hair,

Thou other gold-bound brow, is like the first.

A third is like the former. Filthy hags ! 115
Why do you show me this ? A fourth ?
Start, eyes.

What, will the line stretch out to th' crack of doom ?

Another yet ? A seventh ? I'll see no more.
And yet the eighth appears, who bears a glass

Which shows me many more ; and some I
see 120

That twofold balls and treble sceptres carry.
Horrible sight ! Now I see 'tis true ;
For the blood-bolter'd Banquo smiles upon
me,

And points at them for his. [The show vanishes] What ! is this so ?

1 Witch. Ay, sir, all this is so. But why Stands Macbeth thus amazedly ? 126

Come, sisters, cheer we up his sprites,
And show the best of our delights ;
I'll charm the air to give a sound,
While you perform your antic round ; 130
That this great king may kindly say,
Our duties did his welcome pay.

Music. The Witches dance, and vanish.

Macb. Where are they ? Gone ? Let this pernicious hour
Stand aye accursed in the calendar.
Come in, without there.

Enter LENNOX.

Len. What's your Grace's will ? 135

Macb. Saw you the Weird Sisters ?

Len. No, my lord.

Macb. Came they not by you ?

Len. No, indeed, my lord.

Macb. Infected be the air whereon they ride ;

And damn'd all those that trust them ! I did hear 139

The galloping of horse. Who was't came by ?
Len. 'Tis two or three, my lord, that bring you word

Macduff is fled to England.

Macb. Fled to England !

Len. Ay, my good lord.

Macb. [Aside] Time, thou anticipat'st
my dread exploits.

The flighty purpose never is o'ertook 145 Unless the deed go with it. From this moment

The very firstlings of my heart shall be
The firstlings of my hand. And even now,
To crown my thoughts with acts, be it thought and done :

The castle of Macduff I will surprise, 150
Seize upon Fife, give to the edge o' th'
sword

His wife, his babes, and all unfortunate souls

That trace him in his line. No boasting like a fool :

This deed I'll do before this purpose cool.

But no more sights!—Where are these gentlemen? ¹⁵⁵
Come, bring me where they are. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II. Fife. Macduff's castle.

Enter LADY MACDUFF, her Son, and ROSS.

Lady Macd. What had he done to make him fly the land?

Ross. You must have patience, madam.

L. Macd. He had none;

His flight was madness. When our actions do not,

Our fears do make us traitors.

Ross. You know not Whether it was his wisdom or his fear. ⁵

L. Macd. Wisdom! To leave his wife, to leave his babes,

His mansion, and his titles, in a place From whence himself does fly? He loves us not;

He wants the natural touch; for the poor wren,

The most diminutive of birds, will fight, ¹⁰
Her young ones in her nest, against the owl.

All is the fear, and nothing is the love;
As little is the wisdom, where the flight So runs against all reason.

Ross. My dearest coz,
I pray you, school yourself. But, for your husband, ¹⁵

He is noble, wise, judicious, and best knows The fits o' th' season. I dare not speak much further;

But cruel are the times, when we are traitors

And do not know ourselves; when we hold rumour

From what we fear, yet know not what we fear, ²⁰

But float upon a wild and violent sea Each way and none. I take my leave of you;

Shall not be long but I'll be here again.— Things at the worst will cease, or else climb upward

To what they were before.—My pretty cousin, ²⁵

Blessing upon you!

L. Macd. Father'd he is, and yet he's fatherless.

Ross. I am so much a fool, should I stay longer,

It would be my disgrace and your discomfort.

I take my leave at once. [Exit.]

L. Macd. Sirrah, your father's dead;

And what will you do now? How will you live? ³¹

Son. As birds do, mother.

L. Macd. What, with worms and flies?

Son. With what I get, I mean; and so do they.

L. Macd. Poor bird! thou'dst never fear the net nor lime,

The pitfall nor the gin. ³⁵

Son. Why should I, mother? Poor birds they are not set for.

My father is not dead, for all your saying.

L. Macd. Yes, he is dead. How wilt thou do for a father?

Son. Nay, how will you do for a husband?

L. Macd. Why, I can buy me twenty at any market.

Son. Then you'll buy 'em to sell again. ⁴¹

L. Macd. Thou speak'st with all thy wit; and yet, i' faith,

With wit enough for thee.

Son. Was my father a traitor, mother?

L. Macd. Ay, that he was. ⁴⁵

Son. What is a traitor?

L. Macd. Why, one that swears and lies.

Son. And be all traitors that do so?

L. Macd. Every one that does so is a traitor, and must be hang'd. ⁵⁰

Son. And must they all be hang'd that swear and lie?

L. Macd. Every one.

Son. Who must hang them?

L. Macd. Why, the honest men. ⁵⁴

Son. Then the liars and swearers are fools; for there are liars and swearers enow to beat the honest men and hang up them.

L. Macd. Now, God help thee, poor monkey! But how wilt thou do for a father? ⁵⁹

Son. If he were dead, you'd weep for him; if you would not, it were a good sign that I should quickly have a new father.

L. Macd. Poor prattler, how thou talk'st!

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Bless you, fair dame! I am not to you known,

Though in your state of honour I am perfect. I doubt some danger does approach you nearly. ⁶⁶

If you will take a homely man's advice, Be not found here; hence, with your little ones.

To fright you thus, methinks, I am too savage;

To do worse to you were fell cruelty, ⁷⁰
Which is too nigh your person. Heaven preserve you!

I dare abide no longer. [Exit.]

L. Macd. Whither should I fly?

I have done no harm. But I remember now I am in this earthly world, where to do harm

Is often laudable, to do good sometime ⁷⁵ Accounted dangerous folly. Why then, alas,

Do I put up that womanly defence To say I have done no harm?

Enter Murderers.

What are these faces?

1 Mur. Where is your husband ?
 L. Macd. I hope, in no place so unsanctified 80
 Where such as thou mayst find him.
 1 Mur. He's a traitor.
 Son. Thou liest, thou shag-ear'd villain.
 1 Mur. What, you egg ? [Stabbing him.
 Young fry of treachery !
 Son. He has kill'd me, mother.
 Run away, I pray you. [Dies.
 [Exit Lady Macduff, crying 'Murder !']

SCENE III. England. Before King Edward's palace.

Enter MALCOLM and MACDUFF.

Mal. Let us seek out some desolate shade, and there
 Weep our sad bosoms empty.
 Macd. Let us rather Hold fast the mortal sword, and like good
 men Bestride our down-fall'n birthdom. Each new morn
 New widows howl, new orphans cry ; new sorrows 5
 Strike heaven on the face, that it resounds
 As if it felt with Scotland and yell'd out Like syllable of dolour.
 Mal. What I believe, I'll wail ;
 What know, believe ; and what I can redress,
 As I shall find the time to friend, I will. 10
 What you have spoke, it may be so perchance.
 This tyrant, whose sole name blisters our tongues,
 Was once thought honest ; you have lov'd him well ;
 He hath not touch'd you yet. I am young ;
 but something
 You may deserve of him through me ; and wisdom 15
 To offer up a weak, poor, innocent lamb
 T' appease an angry god.
 Macd. I am not treacherous.
 Mal. But Macbeth is.
 A good and virtuous nature may recoil
 In an imperial charge. But I shall crave your pardon ; 20
 That which you are, my thoughts cannot transpose ;
 Angels are bright still, though the brightest fell.
 Though all things foul would wear the brows
 of grace,
 Yet grace must still look so.
 Macd. I have lost my hopes.
 Mal. Perchance even there where I did find my doubts. 25
 Why in that rawness left you wife and child,
 Those precious motives, those strong knots
 of love,

Without leave-taking ? I pray you,
 Let not my jealousies be your dishonours,
 But mine own safeties. You may be rightly just, 30
 Whatever I shall think.
 Macd. Bleed, bleed, poor country.
 Great tyranny, lay thou thy basis sure,
 For goodness dare not check thee. Wear thou thy wrongs,
 The title is affeer'd. Fare thee well, lord.
 I would not be the villain that thou think'st
 For the whole space that's in the tyrant's grasp 36
 And the rich East to boot.
 Mal. Be not offended.
 I speak not as in absolute fear of you.
 I think our country sinks beneath the yoke ;
 It weeps, it bleeds ; and each new day a gash 40
 Is added to her wounds. I think withal
 There would be hands uplifted in my right ;
 And here, from gracious England, have I offer
 Of goodly thousands. But, for all this,
 When I shall tread upon the tyrant's head,
 Or wear it on my sword, yet my poor
 country 46
 Shall have more vices than it had before ;
 More suffer, and more sundry ways than ever,
 By him that shall succeed.
 Macd. What should he be ?
 Mal. It is myself I mean ; in whom I
 know 50
 All the particulars of vice so grafted
 That, when they shall be open'd, black
 Macbeth
 Will seem as pure as snow ; and the poor
 state
 Esteem him as a lamb, being compar'd
 With my confineless harms.
 Macd. Not in the legions 55
 Of horrid hell can come a devil more damn'd
 In evils to top Macbeth.
 Mal. I grant him bloody,
 Luxurious, avaricious, false, deceitful,
 Sudden, malicious, smacking of every sin
 That has a name ; but there's no bottom,
 none, 60
 In my voluptuousness. Your wives, your daughters,
 Your matrons, and your maids, could not fill up
 The cistern of my lust ; and my desire
 All continent impediments would o'erbear
 That did oppose my will. Better Macbeth
 Than such an one to reign.
 Macd. Boundless intemperance
 In nature is a tyranny ; it hath been 67
 Th' untimely emptying of the happy throne
 And fall of many kings. But fear not yet
 To take upon you what is yours. You may Convey your pleasures in a spacious plenty,

And yet seem cold, the time you may so hoodwink.

We have willing dames enough ; there cannot be

That vulture in you to devour so many As will to greatness dedicate themselves, 75 Finding it so inclin'd.

Mal. With this there grows In my most ill-compos'd affection such A stanchless avarice that, were I King, I should cut off the nobles for their lands,

Desire his jewels, and this other's house ; 80 And my more-having would be as a sauce To make me hunger more, that I should forge

Quarrels unjust against the good and loyal, Destroying them for wealth.

Macd. This avarice Sticks deeper, grows with more pernicious root 85

Than summer-seeming lust ; and it hath been

The sword of our slain kings. Yet do not fear ;

Scotland hath foisons to fill up your will Of your mere own. All these are portable, With other graces weigh'd. 90

Mal. But I have none. The king-becoming graces,

As justice, verity, temp'rance, stableness, Bounty, perseverance, mercy, lowliness, Devotion, patience, courage, fortitude, I have no relish of them ; but abound 95

In the division of each several crime, Acting it many ways. Nay, had I pow'r, I should Pour the sweet milk of concord into hell, Uproar the universal peace, confound All unity on earth.

Macd. O Scotland, Scotland ! 100

Mal. If such a one be fit to govern, speak. I am as I have spoken.

Macd. Fit to govern !

No, not to live ! O nation miserable, With an untitled tyrant bloody-scept'red, When shalt thou see thy wholesome days again, 105

Since that the truest issue of thy throne By his own interdiction stands accurs'd And does blaspheme his breed ? Thy royal father

Was a most sainted king ; the queen that bore thee,

Of't'ner upon her knees than on her feet, 110 Died every day she liv'd. Fare thee well ! These evils thou repeat'st upon thyself Hath banish'd me from Scotland. O my breast, Thy hope ends here !

Mal. Macduff, this noble passion, Child of integrity, hath from my soul 115 Wip'd the black scruples, reconcil'd my thoughts

To thy good truth and honour. Devilish Macbeth

By many of these trains hath sought to win me

Into his power ; and modest wisdom plucks me 119

From over-credulous haste. But God above Deal between thee and me ; for even now I put myself to thy direction, and

Unspeak mine own detraction, here abjure The taints and blames I laid upon myself

For strangers to my nature. I am yet 125 Unknown to woman, never was forsworn, Scarcely have coveted what was mine own,

At no time broke my faith, would not betray

The devil to his fellow, and delight

No less in truth than life. My first false speaking 130

Was this upon myself. What I am truly Is thine and my poor country's to command :

Whither indeed, before thy here-approach, Old Siward with ten thousand warlike men Already at a point was setting forth. 135

Now we'll together ; and the chance of goodness

Be like our warranted quarrel ! Why are you silent ?

Macd. Such welcome and unwelcome things at once

'Tis hard to reconcile.

Enter a Doctor.

Mal. Well ; more anon. Comes the King forth, I pray you ? 140

Doct. Ay, sir. There are a crew of wretched souls

That stay his cure. Their malady convinces The great assay of art ; but at his touch, Such sanctity hath heaven given his hand, They presently amend.

Mal. I thank you, doctor. [Exit Doctor.

Macd. What's the disease he means ?

Mal. 'Tis called the evil : A most miraculous work in this good king ; Which often since my here-remain in England

I have seen him do. How he solicits heaven, Himself best knows ; but strangely-visited people, 150

All swoln and ulcerous, pitiful to the eye, The mere despair of surgery, he cures,

Hanging a golden stamp about their necks, Put on with holy prayers ; and 'tis spoken,

To the succeeding royalty he leaves 155 The healing benediction. With this strange virtue,

He hath a heavenly gift of prophecy ; And sundry blessings hang about his throne

That speak him full of grace.

Enter Ross.

Macd. See, who comes here ?

Mal. My countryman; but yet I know him not. 160

Macd. My ever gentle cousin, welcome hither.

Mal. I know him now. Good God betimes remove

The means that makes us strangers!

Ross. Sir, amen.

Macd. Stands Scotland where it did?

Ross. Alas, poor country,

Almost afraid to know itself! It cannot 165

Be call'd our mother, but our grave; where nothing,

But who knows nothing, is once seen to smile;

Where sighs, and groans, and shrieks, that rent the air,

Are made, not mark'd; where violent sorrow seems 169

A modern ecstasy; the dead man's knell Is there scarce ask'd for who; and good men's lives

Expire before the flowers in their caps, Dying or ere they sicken.

Macd. O, relation Too nice, and yet too true!

Mal. What's the newest grief?

Ross. That of an hour's age doth hiss the speaker: 175

Each minute teems a new one. Macd. How does my wife?

Ross. Why, well. Macd. And all my children?

Ross. Well too. Macd. The tyrant has not batter'd at their peace?

Ross. No; they were well at peace when I did leave 'em.

Macd. Be not a niggard of your speech. How goes't? 180

Ross. When I came hither to transport the tidings,

Which I have heavily borne, there ran a rumour

Of many worthy fellows that were out; Which was to my belief witness'd the rather

For that I saw the tyrant's power afoot. 185

Now is the time of help; your eye in Scotland

Would create soldiers, make our women fight,

To doff their dire distresses. Mal. Be't their comfort

We are coming thither. Gracious England hath

Lent us good Siward and ten thousand men— 190

An older and a better soldier none That Christendom gives out.

Ross. Would I could answer This comfort with the like! But I have words

That would be howl'd out in the desert air,

Where hearing should not latch them.

Macd. What concern they?

The general cause, or is it a fee-grief 196

Due to some single breast? Ross. No mind that's honest

But in it shares some woe, though the main part

Pertains to you alone. Macd. If it be mine,

Keep it not from me; quickly let me have it. 200

Ross. Let not your ears despise my tongue for ever,

Which shall possess them with the heaviest sound

That ever yet they heard. Macd. Humh! I guess at it.

Ross. Your castle is surpris'd; your wife and babes

Savagely slaughter'd. To relate the manner, 205

Were, on the quarry of these murder'd deer, To add the death of you.

Mal. Merciful heaven! What, man! Ne'er pull your hat upon your brows;

Give sorrow words. The grief that does not speak

Whispers the o'erfraught heart and bids it break. 210

Macd. My children too? Ross. Wife, children, servants, all

That could be found. Macd. And I must be from thence!

My wife kill'd too? Ross. I have said.

Mal. Be comforted. Let's make us med'cines of our great revenge

To cure this deadly grief. 215

Macd. He has no children. All my pretty ones?

Did you say all? O hell-kite! All? What, all my pretty chickens and their dam

At one fell swoop? Mal. Dispute it like a man.

Macd. I shall do so; 220

But I must also feel it as a man. I cannot but remember such things were

That were most precious to me. Did heaven look on,

And would not take their part? Sinful Macduff,

They were all struck for thee—nought that I am; 225

Not for their own demerits, but for mine, Fell slaughter on their souls. Heaven rest them now!

Mal. Be this the whetstone of your sword. Let grief

Convert to anger; blunt not the heart, enrage it.

Macd. O, I could play the woman with mine eyes 230

And braggart with my tongue! But, gentle heavens, Cut short all intermission; front to front
Bring thou this fiend of Scotland and myself;
Within my sword's length set him; if he scape,
Heaven forgive him too!

Mal. This tune goes manly. 235
Come, go we to the King. Our power is ready;

Our lack is nothing but our leave. Macbeth
Is ripe for shaking, and the pow'rs above
Put on their instruments. Receive what cheer you may; 239

The night is long that never finds the day.
[Exeunt.]

ACT FIVE

SCENE I. Dunsinane. Macbeth's castle.

Enter a Doctor of Physic and a Waiting-Gentlewoman.

Doct. I have two nights watch'd with you, but can perceive no truth in your report. When was it she last walk'd?

Gent. Since his Majesty went into the field, I have seen her rise from her bed, throw her nightgown upon her, unlock her closet, take forth paper, fold it, write upon't, read it, afterwards seal it, and again return to bed; yet all this while in a most fast sleep. 8

Doct. A great perturbation in nature, to receive at once the benefit of sleep and do the effects of watching! In this slumb'ry agitation, besides her walking and other actual performances, what, at any time, have you heard her say? 13

Gent. That, sir, which I will not report after her.

Doct. You may to me; and 'tis most meet you should.

Gent. Neither to you nor any one, having no witness to confirm my speech.

Enter LADY MACBETH, with a taper.

Lo you, here she comes! This is her very guise; and, upon my life, fast asleep. Observe her; stand close.

Doct. How came she by that light? 20

Gent. Why, it stood by her. She has light by her continually; 'tis her command.

Doct. You see her eyes are open.

Gent. Ay, but their sense is shut.

Doct. What is it she does now? Look how she rubs her hands. 26

Gent. It is an accustomed action with her, to seem thus washing her hands; I have known her continue in this a quarter of an hour.

Lady M. Yet here's a spot. 30

Doct. Hark, she speaks. I will set down what comes from her, to satisfy my remembrance the more strongly.

Lady M. Out, damned spot! out, I say! One, two; why then 'tis time to do't. Hell is murky. Fie, my lord, fie! a soldier, and afeard? What need we fear who knows it, when none can call our pow'r to account? Yet who would have thought the old man to have had so much blood in him?

Doct. Do you mark that? 39

Lady M. The Thane of Fife had a wife; where is she now? What, will these hands ne'er be clean? No more o' that, my lord, no more o' that; you mar all with this starting.

Doct. Go to, go to; you have known what you should not. 45

Gent. She has spoke what she should not, I am sure of that. Heaven knows what she has known.

Lady M. Here's the smell of the blood still. All the perfumes of Arabia will not sweeten this little hand. Oh, oh, oh! 50

Doct. What a sigh is there! The heart is sorely charg'd.

Gent. I would not have such a heart in my bosom for the dignity of the whole body.

Doct. Well, well, well. 55

Gent. Pray God it be, sir.

Doct. This disease is beyond my practice. Yet I have known those which have walk'd in their sleep who have died holily in their beds. 59

Lady M. Wash your hands, put on your nightgown, look not so pale. I tell you yet again, Banquo's buried; he cannot come out on's grave.

Doct. Even so? 63

Lady M. To bed, to bed; there's knocking at the gate. Come, come, come, come, give me your hand. What's done cannot be undone. To bed, to bed, to bed. [Exit.]

Doct. Will she go now to bed?

Gent. Directly.

Doct. Foul whisp'rings are abroad. Unnatural deeds

Do breed unnatural troubles; infected minds 70

To their deaf pillows will discharge their secrets.

More needs she the divine than the physician.

God, God forgive us all. Look after her; Remove from her the means of all annoyance,

And still keep eyes upon her. So, good night. 75

My mind she has mated, and amaz'd my sight.

I think, but dare not speak.

Gent. Good night, good doctor. [Exit.]

SCENE II. The country near Dunsinane.

Drum and colours. Enter MENTEITH, CAITHNESS, ANGUS, LENNOX, and Soldiers.

Ment. The English pow'r is near, led on by Malcolm,

His uncle Siward, and the good Macduff.
Revenge burn in them; for their dear causes

Would to the bleeding and the grim alarm Excite the mortified man.

Ang. Near Birnam wood
Shall we well meet them; that way are they coming. 6

Caith. Who knows if Donalbain be with his brother?

Len. For certain, sir, he is not; I have a file

Of all the gentry. There is Siward's son,
And many unrough youths that even now
Protest their first of manhood.

Ment. What does the tyrant?

Caith. Great Dunsinane he strongly fortifies. 12

Some say he's mad; others, that lesser hate him,

Do call it valiant fury; but for certain
He cannot buckle his distemper'd cause 15
Within the belt of rule.

Ang. Now does he feel
His secret murders sticking on his hands;
Now minutely revolts upbraid his faith-breach;

Those he commands move only in command, 19

Nothing in love. Now does he feel his title
Hang loose about him, like a giant's robe
Upon a dwarfish thief.

Ment. Who then shall blame
His pester'd senses to recoil and start,
When all that is within him does condemn Itself for being there?

Caith. Well, march we on 25
To give obedience where 'tis truly ow'd.
Meet we the med'cine of the sickly weal;
And with him pour we in our country's purge
Each drop of us.

Len. Or so much as it needs To dew the sovereign flower and drown the weeds. 30

Make we our march towards Birnam.
[Exeunt, marching.]

SCENE III. Dunsinane. Macbeth's castle.

Enter MACBETH, Doctor, and Attendants.

Macb. Bring me no more reports; let them fly all.

Till Birnam wood remove to Dunsinane
I cannot taint with fear. What's the boy Malcolm?

Was he not born of woman? The spirits that know

All mortal consequences have pronounc'd me thus: 5

'Fear not, Macbeth; no man that's born of woman

Shall e'er have power upon thee'. Then fly, false thanes,

And mingle with the English epicures.

The mind I sway by and the heart I bear Shall never sag with doubt nor shake with fear. 10

Enter Servant.

The devil damn thee black, thou cream-fac'd loon!

Where got'st thou that goose look?

Serv. There is ten thousand—

Macb. Geese, villain?

Serv. Soldiers, sir.

Macb. Go, prick thy face, and over-red thy fear,

Thou lily-liver'd boy. What soldiers, patch? 15

Death of thy soul! Those linen cheeks of thine

Are counsellors to fear. What soldiers, whew-face?

Serv. The English force, so please you.

Macb. Take thy face hence. [Exit Servant.]

Seyton!—I am sick at heart,

When I behold—Seyton, I say!—This push
Will cheer me ever, or disseat me now. 21

I have liv'd long enough. My way of life
Is fall'n into the sear, the yellow leaf;

And that which should accompany old age,
As honour, love, obedience, troops of
friends, 25

I must not look to have; but, in their stead,
Curses not loud but deep, mouth-honour,

breath,
Which the poor heart would fain deny, and dare not.

Seyton!

Enter SEYTON.

Sey. What's your gracious pleasure?

Macb. What news more?

Sey. All is confirm'd, my lord, which was reported. 31

Macb. I'll fight till from my bones my flesh be hack'd.

Give me my armour.

Sey. 'Tis not needed yet.

Macb. I'll put it on.

Send out moe horses, skirr the country round; 35

Hang those that talk of fear. Give me mine armour.

How does your patient, doctor?

Doct. Not so sick, my lord,
As she is troubled with thick-coming fancies 38

That keep her from her rest.

Macb. Cure her of that.
Canst thou not minister to a mind diseas'd,

Pluck from the memory a rooted sorrow, Raze out the written troubles of the brain,
And with some sweet oblivious antidote
Cleanse the stuff'd bosom of that perilous stuff
Which weighs upon the heart ?

Doct. Therein the patient 45
Must minister to himself.

Macb. Throw physic to the dogs—I'll none of it.

Come, put mine armour on ; give me my staff.

Seyton, send out. Doctor, the thanes fly from me.

Come, sir, dispatch. If thou couldst, doctor, cast 50

The water of my land, find her disease,
And purge it to a sound and pristine health,
I would applaud thee to the very echo,
That should applaud again.—Pull't off, I say.—

What rhubarb, senna, or what purgative drug, 55

Would scour these English hence ? Hear'st thou of them ?

Doct. Ay, my good lord. Your royal preparation

Makes us hear something.

Macb. Bring it after me.
I will not be afraid of death and bane
Till Birnam Forest come to Dunsinane. 60

[Exeunt all but the Doctor.]

Doct. Were I from Dunsinane away and clear,

Profit again should hardly draw me here.
[Exit.]

SCENE IV. Before Birnam Wood.

Drum and colours. Enter MALCOLM, SIWARD, MACDUFF, Siward's Son, MEN-
TEITH, CAITHNESS, ANGUS, LENNOX,
ROSS, and Soldiers, marching.

Mal. Cousins, I hope the days are near at
hand

That chambers will be safe.

Ment. We doubt it nothing.

Siw. What wood is this before us ?

Ment. The wood of Birnam.

Mal. Let every soldier hew him down a bough

And bear't before him ; thereby shall we shadow 5

The numbers of our host, and make discovery

Err in report of us.

Sold. It shall be done.

Siw. We learn no other but the confident tyrant

Keeps still in Dunsinane, and will endure
Our setting down before't.

Mal. 'Tis his main hope ; 10
For where there is advantage to be given,

Both more and less have given him the revolt ;

And none serve with him but constrained things,

Whose hearts are absent too.

Macd. Let our just censures Attend the true event, and put we on 15

Industrious soldiership.

Siw. The time approaches
That will with due decision make us know

What we shall say we have, and what we owe.

Thoughts speculative their unsure hopes relate,

But certain issue strokes must arbitrate ; 20
Towards which advance the war.

[Exeunt, marching.]

SCENE V. Dunsinane. Macbeth's castle.

Enter MACBETH, SEYTON, and Soldiers, with drum and colours.

Macb. Hang out our banners on the outward walls ;

The cry is still ' They come '. Our castle's strength

Will laugh a siege to scorn. Here let them lie

Till famine and the ague eat them up.
Were they not forc'd with those that should be ours, 5

We might have met them dareful, beard to beard,

And beat them backward home.

[A cry within of women.]

What is that noise ?

Sey. It is the cry of women, my good lord.
[Exit.]

Macb. I have almost forgot the taste of fears.

The time has been my senses would have cool'd 10

To hear a night-shriek, and my fell of hair

Would at a dismal treatise rouse and stir
As life were in't. I have supp'd full with horrors ;

Direness, familiar to my slaughterous

thoughts,
Cannot once start me.

Re-enter SEYTON.

Wherefore was that cry ? 15

Sey. The Queen, my lord, is dead.

Macb. She should have died hereafter ;
There would have been a time for such a word.

To-morrow, and to-morrow, and to-morrow,
Creeps in this petty pace from day to day

To the last syllable of recorded time, 21
And all our yesterdays have lighted fools

The way to dusty death. Out, out, brief candle !

Life's but a walking shadow, a poor player,

That struts and frets his hour upon the stage,²⁵
 And then is heard no more ; it is a tale
 Told by an idiot, full of sound and fury, Signifying nothing.

Enter a Messenger.

Thou com'st to use thy tongue ; thy story quickly.

Mess. Gracious my lord,³⁰
 I should report that which I say I saw,
 But know not how to do't.

Macb. Well, say, sir.

Mess. As I did stand my watch upon the hill,

I look'd toward Birnam, and anon methought

The wood began to move.

Macb. Liar and slave !³⁵

Mess. Let me endure your wrath, if't be not so.

Within this three mile may you see it coming ;

I say, a moving grove.

Macb. If thou speak'st false,
 Upon the next tree shalt thou hang alive,
 Till famine cling thee. If thy speech be sooth,⁴⁰

I care not if thou dost for me as much.

I pull in resolution, and begin

To doubt th' equivocation of the fiend
 That lies like truth. ' Fear not, till Birnam wood⁴⁴

Do come to Dunsinane.' And now a wood Comes toward Dunsinane. Arm, arm, and out.

If this which he avouches does appear,
 There is nor flying hence nor tarrying here.
 I gin to be aweary of the sun,

And wish th' estate o' th' world were now undone.⁵⁰

Ring the alarum bell. Blow wind, come wrack ;

At least we'll die with harness on our back.
[Exeunt.]

SCENE VI. Dunsinane. Before the castle.

Drum and colours. Enter MALCOLM, SIWARD, MACDUFF, and their Army with boughs.

Mal. Now near enough ; your leavy screens throw down,

And show like those you are. You, worthy uncle,

Shall with my cousin, your right noble son,

Lead our first battle ; worthy Macduff and we Shall take upon's what else remains to do,

 According to our order.

Siw. Fare you well.⁶

Do we but find the tyrant's power to-night,
 Let us be beaten, if we cannot fight.

Macd. Make all our trumpets speak ;
 give them all breath,⁹
 Those clamorous harbingers of blood and death.
[Exeunt.]

SCENE VII. Another part of the field.

Enter MACBETH.

Macb. They have tied me to a stake ; I cannot fly,
 But bear-like I must fight the course.
 What's he
 That was not born of woman ? Such a one Am I to fear, or none.⁴

Enter young SIWARD.

Yo. Siw. What is thy name ?

Macb. Thou'lt be afraid to hear it.

Yo. Siw. No ; though thou call'st thyself a hotter name
 Than any is in hell.

Macb. My name's Macbeth.

Yo. Siw. The devil himself could not pronounce a title
 More hateful to mine ear.

Macb. No, nor more fearful.

Yo. Siw. Thou liest, abhorred tyrant ;
 with my sword¹⁰

I'll prove the lie thou speak'st.

[Fight, and young Siward slain.]

Macb. Thou wast born of woman.
 But swords I smile at, weapons laugh to scorn,

Brandish'd by man that's of a woman born.
[Exit.]

Alarums. Enter MACDUFF.

Macd. That way the noise is. Tyrant, show thy face.

If thou beest slain and with no stroke of mine,¹⁵

My wife and children's ghosts will haunt me still.

I cannot strike at wretched kerns, whose arms

Are hir'd to bear their staves ; either thou,
 Macbeth,

Or else my sword with an unbattered edge

I sheathe again undeeded. There thou shouldst be ;²⁰

By this great clatter, one of greatest note
 Seems bruited. Let me find him, Fortune,
 And more I beg not. [Exit. Alarums.]

Enter MALCOLM and old SIWARD.

Siw. This way, my lord. The castle's gently rend'red ;²⁴

The tyrant's people on both sides do
 fight ;

The noble thanes do bravely in the war ;
 The day almost itself professes yours,
 And little is to do.

Mal. We have met with foes

That strike beside us.

Siw. Enter, sir, the castle.
[Exeunt. Alarum.]

SCENE VIII. Another part of the field.

Enter MACBETH.

Macb. Why should I play the Roman fool, and die
On mine own sword? Whiles I see lives, the gashes
Do better upon them.

Enter MACDUFF.

Macd. Turn, hell-hound, turn.
Macb. Of all men else I have avoided thee.
But get thee back; my soul is too much charg'd
With blood of thine already.

Macd. I have no words—
My voice is in my sword: thou bloodier villain
Than terms can give thee out.

[Fight. Alarum.]

Macb. Thou lovest labour.
As easy mayst thou the intrenchant air
With thy keen sword impress as make me bleed.

Let fall thy blade on vulnerable crests;
I bear a charmed life, which must not yield
To one of woman born.

Macd. Despair thy charm;
And let the angel whom thou hast serv'd

Tell thee Macduff was from his mother's womb Untimely ripp'd.

Macb. Accursed be that tongue that tells me so,
For it hath cow'd my better part of man;
And be these jugling fiends no more believ'd

That palter with us in a double sense,
That keep the word of promise to our ear,
And break it to our hope! I'll not fight with thee.

Macd. Then yield thee, coward,
And live to be the show and gaze o' th'
time.

We'll have thee, as our rarer monsters are,
Painted upon a pole, and underwrit
'Here may you see the tyrant'.

Macb. I will not yield,
To kiss the ground before young Malcolm's feet

And to be baited with the rabble's curse.
Though Birnam wood be come to Dunsinane,

And thou oppos'd, being of no woman born,
Yet I will try the last. Before my body
I throw my warlike shield. Lay on,
Macduff;

And damn'd be him that first cries 'Hold, enough!' [Exeunt, fighting. Alarums.]

Retreat and flourish. Enter, with drum and colours, MALCOLM, SIWARD, ROSS, LENNOX, ANGUS, CAITHNESS, MENTEITH, and Soldiers.

Mal. I would the friends we miss were safe arriv'd.

Siw. Some must go off; and yet, by these
I see,
So great a day as this is cheaply bought.

Mal. Macduff is missing, and your noble son.

Ross. Your son, my lord, has paid a soldier's debt:

He only liv'd but till he was a man;
The which no sooner had his prowess confirm'd

In the unshrinking station where he fought,
But like a man he died.

Siw. Then he is dead?

Ross. Ay, and brought off the field.
Your cause of sorrow

Must not be measur'd by his worth, for then

It hath no end.

Siw. Had he his hurts before?

Ross. Ay, on the front.

Siw. Why, then, God's soldier be he!
Had I as many sons as I have hairs,
I would not wish them to a fairer death.
And so his knell is knoll'd.

Mal. He's worth more sorrow, so
And that I'll spend for him.

Siw. He's worth no more.
They say he parted well and paid his score;

And so, God be with him! Here comes newer comfort.

Re-enter MACDUFF, with MACBETH'S head.

Macd. Hail, King! for so thou art.
Behold where stands

Th' usurper's cursed head. The time is free.

I see thee compass'd with thy kingdom's pearl

That speak my salutation in their minds
Whose voices I desire aloud with mine—
Hail, King of Scotland!

All. Hail, King of Scotland! [Flourish.]
Mal. We shall not spend a large expense of time

Before we reckon with your several loves,
And make us even with you. My Thanes and kinsmen,

Henceforth be Earls, the first that ever Scotland

In such an honour nam'd. What's more to do,

Which would be planted newly with the
time—

As calling home our exil'd friends abroad
That fled the snares of watchful tyranny
Producing forth the cruel ministers

Of this dead butcher, and his fiend-like
queen,
Who, as 'tis thought, by self and violent hands
Took off her life—this, and what needful else

That calls upon us, by the grace of Grace,
We will perform in measure, time, and place.
So thanks to all at once and to each one, ⁷⁴
Whom we invite to see us crown'd at Scone.
[Flourish. Exeunt.]

ACT ONE

SCENE I. Elsinore. The guard-platform of the Castle.

FRANCISCO at his post. Enter to him
BERNARDO.

Ber. Who's there ?

Fran. Nay, answer me. Stand and unfold yourself.

Ber. Long live the King !

Fran. Bernardo ?

Ber. He.

Fran. You come most carefully upon your hour.

Ber. 'Tis now struck twelve ; get thee to bed, Francisco.

Fran. For this relief much thanks. 'Tis bitter cold,

And I am sick at heart.

Ber. Have you had quiet guard ?

Fran. Not a mouse stirring.

Ber. Well, good night.

If you do meet Horatio and Marcellus,
The rivals of my watch, bid them make haste.

Enter HORATIO and MARCELLUS.

Fran. I think I hear them. Stand, ho !
Who is there ?

Hor. Friends to this ground.

Mar. And liegemen to the Dane.

Fran. Give you good night.

Mar. O, farewell, honest soldier !
Who hath reliev'd you ?

Fran. Bernardo hath my place.
Give you good night. [Exit.]

Mar. Holla, Bernado !

Ber.

Say—

What, is Horatio there ?

Hor. A piece of him.

Ber. Welcome, Horatio ; welcome, good Marcellus.

Hor. What, has this thing appear'd again to-night ?

Ber. I have seen nothing.

Mar. Horatio says 'tis but our fantasy,
And will not let belief take hold of him
Touching this dreaded sight, twice seen of us ;

Therefore I have entreated him along
With us to watch the minutes of this night,
That, if again this apparition come,
He may approve our eyes and speak to it.

Hor. Tush, tush, 'twill not appear.

Ber. Sit down awhile,
And let us once again assail your ears,
That are so fortified against our story,
What we have two nights seen.

Hor. Well, sit we down,
And let us hear Bernardo speak of this.

Ber. Last night of all,
When yond same star that's westward from the pole

Had made his course t' illume that part of heaven

Where now it burns, Marcellus and myself,
The bell then beating one—

Enter Ghost.

Mar. Peace, break thee off ; look where it comes again.

Ber. In the same figure, like the King that's dead.

Mar. Thou art a scholar ; speak to it, Horatio.

Ber. Looks 'a not like the King ? Mark it, Horatio.

Hor. Most like. It harrows me with fear and wonder.

Ber. It would be spoke to.

Mar. Question it, Horatio. 45

Hor. What art thou that usurp'st this time of night

Together with that fair and warlike form
In which the majesty of buried Denmark Did sometimes march? By heaven I charge thee, speak!

Mar. It is offended.

Ber. See, it stalks away. 50

Hor. Stay! speak, speak! I charge thee, speak! [Exit Ghost.

Mar. 'Tis gone, and will not answer.

Ber. How now, Horatio! You tremble and look pale.

Is not this something more than fantasy?
What think you on't? 55

Hor. Before my God, I might not this believe

Without the sensible and true avouch
Of mine own eyes.

Mar. Is it not like the King?

Hor. As thou art to thyself:

Such was the very armour he had on 60
When he the ambitious Norway combated;
So frown'd he once when, in an angry parle,
He smote the sledged Polacks on the ice.
'Tis strange.

Mar. Thus twice before, and jump at this dead hour, 65

With martial stalk hath he gone by our watch.

Hor. In what particular thought to work
I know not;

But, in the gross and scope of mine opinion,
This bodes some strange eruption to our
state.

Mar. Good now, sit down, and tell me,
he that knows, 70

Why this same strict and most observant
watch

So nightly toils the subject of the land;
And why such daily cast of brazen cannon,
And foreign mart for implements of war;
Why such impress of shipwrights, whose sore task 75

Does not divide the Sunday from the week;
What might be toward, that this sweaty
haste

Doth make the night joint-labourer with
the day:

Who is't that can inform me?

Hor. That can I;

At least, the whisper goes so. Our last
king, 80

Whose image even but now appear'd to us,
Was, as you know, by Fortinbras of Norway,

Thereto prick'd on by a most emulate
pride,

Dar'd to the combat; in which our valiant Hamlet—

For so this side of our known world esteem'd
him— 85

Did slay this Fortinbras; who, by a seal'd compact,

Well ratified by law and heraldry,
Did forfeit, with his life, all those his lands
Which he stood seiz'd of, to the conqueror;
Against the which a moiety competent 90 Was gaged by our king; which had return'd

To the inheritance of Fortinbras,
Had he been vanquisher; as, by the same comart

And carriage of the article design'd,
His fell to Hamlet. Now, sir, young
Fortinbras, 95

Of unimproved mettle hot and full, Hath in the skirts of Norway, here and
there,

Shark'd up a list of lawless resolute,
For food and diet, to some enterprise
That hath a stomach in't; which is no
other, 100

As it doth well appear unto our state,
But to recover of us, by strong hand
And terms compulsory, those foresaid lands

So by his father lost; and this, I take it,
Is the main motive of our preparations, 105
The source of this our watch, and the chief
head

Of this post-haste and romage in the land.

Ber. I think it be no other but e'en so.

Well may it sort, that this portentous figure Comes armed through our watch; so like the King 110

That was and is the question of these wars.

Hor. A mote it is to trouble the mind's eye.

In the most high and palmy state of Rome,
A little ere the mightiest Julius fell,
The graves stood tenantless, and the sheeted dead 115

Did squeak and gibber in the Roman streets;

As, stars with trains of fire, and dews of
blood,

Disasters in the sun; and the moist star Upon whose influence Neptune's empire
stands 119

Was sick almost to doomsday with eclipse;
And even the like precurse of fear'd events,
As harbingers preceding still the fates
And prologue to the omen coming on,

Have heaven and earth together demonstrated

Unto our climatures and countrymen. 125

Re-enter Ghost.

But, soft, behold! Lo, where it comes
again!

I'll cross it, though it blast me. Stay, illusion. [Ghost spreads its arms.

If thou hast any sound or use of voice,

Speak to me.
If there be any good thing to be done, ¹³⁰
That may to thee do ease and grace to me,
Speak to me.

If thou art privy to thy country's fate,
Which happily foreknowing may avoid,
O, speak ! ¹³⁵

Or if thou hast uphoarded in thy life
Extorted treasure in the womb of earth,
For which, they say, you spirits oft walk
in death, [The cock crows.
Speak of it. Stay, and speak. Stop it,
Marcellus.

Mar. Shall I strike at it with my partisan ? ¹⁴⁰

Hor. Do, if it will not stand.

Ber. 'Tis here !

Hor. 'Tis here !

Mar. 'Tis gone ! [Exit Ghost.

We do it wrong, being so majestical,
To offer it the show of violence ;
For it is, as the air, invulnerable, ¹⁴⁵
And our vain blows malicious mockery.

Ber. It was about to speak, when the cock crew.

Hor. And then it started like a guilty
thing

Upon a fearful summons. I have heard
The cock, that is the trumpet to the morn, Doth with his lofty and shrill-sounding throat ¹⁵¹

Awake the god of day ; and at his warning,
Whether in sea or fire, in earth or air,
Th' extravagant and erring spirit hies
To his confine ; and of the truth herein ¹⁵⁵
This present object made probation.

Mar. It faded on the crowing of the cock.
Some say that ever 'gainst that season comes

Wherein our Saviour's birth is celebrated,
This bird of dawning singeth all night long ;
And then, they say, no spirit dare stir abroad, ¹⁶¹

The nights are wholesome, then no planets
strike,

No fairy takes, nor witch hath power to charm,

So hallowed and so gracious is that time.

Hor. So have I heard, and do in part believe it. ¹⁶⁵

But look, the morn, in russet mantle clad,
Walks o'er the dew of yon high eastward hill.
Break we our watch up ; and, by my advice,

Let us impart what we have seen to-night
Unto young Hamlet ; for, upon my life, ¹⁷⁰
This spirit, dumb to us, will speak to him.
Do you consent we shall acquaint him with it,

As needful in our loves, fitting our duty ?

Mar. Let's do't, I pray ; and I this morning know

Where we shall find him most convenient.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE II. Elsinore. The Castle.

Flourish. Enter CLAUDIUS KING OF DEN-MARK, GERTRUDE THE QUEEN, and Councillors, including POLONIUS, his son LAERTES, VOLTEMAND, CORNELIUS, and HAMLET.

King. Though yet of Hamlet our dear brother's death
The memory be green ; and that it us befitted

To bear our hearts in grief, and our whole kingdom

To be contracted in one brow of woe ;
Yet so far hath discretion fought with nature ⁵

That we with wisest sorrow think on him,
Together with remembrance of ourselves.
Therefore our sometime sister, now our
queen,

Th' imperial jointress to this warlike state,
Have we, as 'twere with a defeated joy, ¹⁰
With an auspicious and a dropping eye,
With mirth in funeral, and with dirge in marriage,

In equal scale weighing delight and dole,
Taken to wife ; nor have we herein barr'd
Your better wisdoms, which have freely gone ¹⁵

With this affair along. For all, our thanks.
Now follows that you know : young
Fortinbras,

Holding a weak supposal of our worth,
Or thinking by our late dear brother's
death

Our state to be disjoint and out of frame, ²⁰
Co-leagued with this dream of his advantage—

He hath not fail'd to pester us with message
Importing the surrender of those lands
Lost by his father, with all bands of law,
To our most valiant brother. So much for him. ²⁵

Now for ourself, and for this time of meeting,

Thus much the business is : we have here
writ

To Norway, uncle of young Fortinbras—
Who, impotent and bed-rid, scarcely hears
Of this his nephew's purpose—to suppress
His further gait herein, in that the levies,
The lists, and full proportions, are all made
Out of his subject ; and we here dispatch
You, good Cornelius, and you, Voltemand,
For bearers of this greeting to old Norway ;
Giving to you no further personal power
To business with the King more than the scope

Of these delated articles allow.

Farewell ; and let your haste commend your duty.

Cor. } In that and all things will we
Vol. } show our duty. ⁴⁰

King. We doubt it nothing, heartily farewell.

[Exeunt Voltemand and Cornelius.]

And now, Laertes, what's the news with
you?

You told us of some suit; what is't, Laertes?

You cannot speak of reason to the Dane
And lose your voice. What wouldst thou beg, Laertes,

That shall not be my offer, not thy asking?
The head is not more native to the heart,
The hand more instrumental to the mouth,
Than is the throne of Denmark to thy father.

What wouldst thou have, Laertes?

Laer. My dread lord, 50
Your leave and favour to return to France;
From whence though willingly I came to Denmark

To show my duty in your coronation,
Yet now, I must confess, that duty done,
My thoughts and wishes bend again toward France,

And bow them to your gracious leave and pardon.

King. Have you your father's leave?
What says Polonius?

Pol. 'A hath, my lord, wrung from me
my slow leave

By laboursome petition; and at last
Upon his will I seal'd my hard consent. 60
I do beseech you, give him leave to go.

King. Take thy fair hour, Laertes; time be thine,

And thy best graces spend it at thy will!
But now, my cousin Hamlet, and my son—

Ham. [Aside] A little more than kin, and less than kind. 65

King. How is it that the clouds still hang on you?

Ham. Not so, my lord; I am too much in the sun.

Queen. Good Hamlet, cast thy nighted colour off,

And let thine eye look like a friend on Denmark.

Do not for ever with thy veiled lids 70
Seek for thy noble father in the dust.

Thou know'st 'tis common—all that lives must die,

Passing through nature to eternity.

Ham. Ay, madam, it is common.
Queen. If it be,

Why seems it so particular with thee? 75
Ham. Seems, madam! Nay, it is; I know not seems.

'Tis not alone my inky cloak, good mother,
Nor customary suits of solemn black,
Nor windy suspiration of forc'd breath,
No, nor the fruitful river in the eye, 80
Nor the dejected haviour of the visage, Together with ail forms, moods, shapes of grief,

That can denote me truly. These, indeed, seem;

For they are actions that a man might play;
But I have that within which passes
show— 85

These but the trappings and the suits of
woe.

King. 'Tis sweet and commendable in your nature, Hamlet,

To give these mourning duties to your
father;

But you must know your father lost a
father;

That father lost lost his; and the survivor
bound, 90

In filial obligation, for some term
To do obsequious sorrow. But to persevere

In obstinate condolement is a course Of impious stubbornness; 'tis unmanly
grief;

It shows a will most incorrect to heaven, 95
A heart unfortified, a mind impatient,

An understanding simple and unschool'd;
For what we know must be, and is as common

As any the most vulgar thing to sense, 99
Why should we in our peevish opposition

Take it to heart? Fie! 'tis a fault to heaven,
A fault against the dead, a fault to nature,

To reason most absurd; whose common theme

Is death of fathers, and who still hath cried,
From the first corse till he that died to-day,

'This must be so'. We pray you throw to earth 106

This unprevailing woe, and think of us
As of a father; for let the world take note

You are the most immediate to our throne;
And with no less nobility of love 110

Than that which dearest father bears his
son

Do I impart toward you. For your intent
In going back to school in Wittenberg,

It is most retrograde to our desire;
And we beseech you bend you to remain 115

Here, in the cheer and comfort of our eye,
Our chiefest courtier, cousin, and our son.

Queen. Let not thy mother lose her prayers, Hamlet:

I pray thee stay with us; go not to Wittenberg.

Ham. I shall in all my best obey you,
madam. 120

King. Why, 'tis a loving and a fair reply.
Be as ourself in Denmark. Madam, come;

This gentle and unforc'd accord of Hamlet
Sits smiling to my heart; in grace whereof,

No jocund health that Denmark drinks to-day 125

But the great cannon to the clouds shall tell,

And the King's rouse the heaven shall bruit
again.

Re-speaking earthly thunder. Come away.

[Flourish. Exeunt all but Hamlet.]

Ham. O, that this too too solid flesh would melt,

Thaw, and resolve itself into a dew! 130

Or that the Everlasting had not fix'd
His canon 'gainst self-slaughter! O God!

God!

How weary, stale, flat, and unprofitable,
Seem to me all the uses of this world!

Fie on't! Ah, fie! 'tis an unweeded garden,
That grows to seed; things rank and gross in nature 136

Possess it merely. That it should come to this!

But two months dead! Nay, not so much,
not two.

So excellent a king that was to this Hyperion to a satyr; so loving to my mother, 140

That he might not beteem the winds of
heaven

Visit her face too roughly. Heaven and earth!

Must I remember? Why, she would hang on him

As if increase of appetite had grown
By what it fed on; and yet, within a month— 145

Let me not think on't. Frailty, thy name is woman!—

A little month, or ere those shoes were old
With which she followed my poor father's

body,

Like Niobe, all tears—why she, even she—

O God! a beast that wants discourse of reason 150

Would have mourn'd longer—married with
my uncle,

My father's brother; but no more like my father

Than I to Hercules. Within a month,

Ere yet the salt of most unrighteous tears
Had left the flushing in her galled eyes, 155

She married. O, most wicked speed, to post

With such dexterity to incestuous sheets!

It is not, nor it cannot come to good.

But break, my heart, for I must hold my tongue.

Enter HORATIO, MARCELLUS, and BERNARDO.

Hor. Hail to your lordship!

Ham. I am glad to see you well. 160

Horatio—or I do forget myself.

Hor. The same, my lord, and your poor servant ever.

Ham. Sir, my good friend. I'll change that name with you.

And what make you from Wittenberg,
Horatio?

Marcellus? 165

Mar. My good lord!

Ham. I am very glad to see you. [To Bernardo] Good even, sir.—

But what, in faith, make you from Wittenberg?

Hor. A truant disposition, good my lord.

Ham. I would not hear your enemy say
so; 170

Nor shall you do my ear that violence,
To make it truster of your own report

Against yourself. I know you are no truant.

But what is your affair in Elsinore?

We'll teach you to drink deep ere you depart. 175

Hor. My lord, I came to see your father's funeral.

Ham. I prithee do not mock me, fellow-student;

I think it was to see my mother's wedding.

Hor. Indeed, my lord, it followed hard upon.

Ham. Thrift, thrift, Horatio! The funeral bak'd-meats 180

Did coldly furnish forth the marriage tables.

Would I had met my dearest foe in heaven
Or ever I had seen that day, Horatio!

My father—methinks I see my father.

Hor. Where, my lord?

Ham. In my mind's eye, Horatio. 185

Hor. I saw him once; 'a was a goodly
king.

Ham. 'A was a man, take him for all in all,

I shall not look upon his like again.

Hor. My lord, I think I saw him yester-
night.

Ham. Saw who? 190

Hor. My lord, the King your father.

Ham. The King my father!

Hor. Season your admiration for a while
With an attent ear, till I may deliver,

Upon the witness of these gentlemen,
This marvel to you.

Ham. For God's love, let me hear.

Hor. Two nights together had these gentlemen, 196

Marcellus and Bernardo, on their watch,

In the dead waste and middle of the night,
Been thus encount'ed. A figure like your

father,

Armed at point exactly, cap-a-pe, 200

Appears before them, and with solemn march

Goes slow and stately by them; thrice he walk'd

By their oppress'd and fear-surprised eyes, Within his truncheon's length; whilst they, distill'd

Almost to jelly with the act of fear, 205

Stand dumb and speak not to him. This to me

In dreadful secrecy impart they did;
And I with them the third night kept the
watch;

Where, as they had delivered, both in time,
Form of the thing, each word made true and good, 210

The apparition comes. I knew your father ;
These hands are not more like.

Ham. But where was this ?

Mar. My lord, upon the platform where we watch.

Ham. Did you not speak to it ?

Hor. My lord, I did ;

But answer made it none ; yet once me-
thought 215

It lifted up it head and did address
Itself to motion, like as it would speak ;
But even then the morning cock crew
loud,

And at the sound it shrunk in haste away
And vanish'd from our sight.

Ham. 'Tis very strange. 220

Hor. As I do live, my honour'd lord, 'tis
true ;

And we did think it writ down in our duty
To let you know of it.

Ham. Indeed, indeed, sirs, but this troubles me.

Hold you the watch to-night ?

All. We do, my lord. 225

Ham. Arm'd, say you ?

All. Arm'd, my lord.

Ham. From top to toe ?

All. My lord, from head to foot.

Ham. Then saw you not his face ?

Hor. O yes, my lord ; he wore his beaver up.

Ham. What, look'd he frowningly ? 230

Hor. A countenance more in sorrow than in anger.

Ham. Pale or red ?

Hor. Nay, very pale.

Ham. And fix'd his eyes upon you ?

Hor. Most constantly.

Ham. I would I had been there.

Hor. It would have much amaz'd you. 235

Ham. Very like, very like. Stay'd it long ?

Hor. While one with moderate haste might tell a hundred.

Both. Longer, longer.

Hor. Not when I saw't.

Ham. His beard was grizzl'd—no ? 239

Hor. It was, as I have seen it in his life,
A sable silver'd.

Ham. I will watch to-night ;
Perchance 'twill walk again.

Hor. I warr'nt it will.

Ham. If it assume my noble father's person,

I'll speak to it, though hell itself should gape 244

And bid me hold my peace. I pray you all,
If you have hitherto conceal'd this sight,
Let it be tenable in your silence still ;
And whatsomever else shall hap to-night,
Give it an understanding, but no tongue ;
I will requite your loves. So, fare you well—

Upon the platform, 'twixt eleven and twelve, 251

I'll visit you.

All. Our duty to your honour.

Ham. Your loves, as mine to you ; farewell. [Exeunt all but Hamlet.]

My father's spirit in arms ! All is not well.
I doubt some foul play. Would the night were come ! 255

Till then sit still, my soul. Foul deeds will rise,

Though all the earth o'erwhelm them, to men's eyes. [Exit.]

SCENE III. Elsinore. The house of Polonius.

Enter LAERTES and OPHELIA his sister.

Laer. My necessities are embark'd.
Farewell.

And, sister, as the winds give benefit
And convoy is assistant, do not sleep,
But let me hear from you.

Oph. Do you doubt that ?

Laer. For Hamlet, and the trifling of his favour, 5

Hold it a fashion and a toy in blood,
A violet in the youth of primy nature,
Forward not permanent, sweet not lasting,
The perfume and suppliance of a minute ;
No more.

Oph. No more but so ?

Laer. Think it no more ; 10
For nature crescent does not grow alone
In thews and bulk, but as this temple
waxes,

The inward service of the mind and soul
Grows wide withal. Perhaps he loves you
now, 14

And now no soil nor cautel doth besmirch
The virtue of his will ; but you must fear,
His greatness weigh'd, his will is not his own ;

For he himself is subject to his birth :
He may not, as unvalued persons do,
Carve for himself ; for on his choice depends 20

The sanity and health of this whole state ;
And therefore must his choice be circum-scrib'd

Unto the voice and yielding of that body Whereof he is the head. Then if he says he loves you,

It fits your wisdom so far to believe it 25
As he in his particular act and place
May give his saying deed ; which is no further

Than the main voice of Denmark goes withal.

Then weigh what loss your honour may sustain,

If with too credent ear you list his songs, 30
Or lose your heart, or your chaste treasure open

To his unmast' red importunity.

Fear it, Ophelia, fear it, my dear sister ;
 And keep you in the rear of your affection,
 Out of the shot and danger of desire. 35
 The chariest maid is prodigal enough
 If she unmask her beauty to the moon.
 Virtue itself scapes not calumnious strokes ;
 The canker galls the infants of the spring
 Too oft before their buttons be disclos'd ; 40
 And in the morn and liquid dew of youth Contagious blastments are most imminent.
 Be wary, then ; best safety lies in fear :
 Youth to itself rebels, though none else near.

Oph. I shall the effect of this good lesson
 keep 45
 As watchman to my heart. But, good my brother,
 Do not, as some ungracious pastors do, Show me the steep and thorny way to
 heaven,
 Whiles, like a puff'd and reckless libertine, Himself the primrose path of dalliance treads 50
 And recks not his own rede.
Laer. O, fear me not !

Enter POLONIUS.

I stay too long. But here my father comes.
 A double blessing is a double grace ;
 Occasion smiles upon a second leave.

Pol. Yet here, Laertes ! Aboard, aboard,
 for shame ! 55
 The wind sits in the shoulder of your sail,
 And you are stay'd for. There—my blessing with thee !

And these few precepts in thy memory
 Look thou character. Give thy thoughts no
 tongue,

Nor any unproportion'd thought his act. 60
 Be thou familiar, but by no means vulgar.
 Those friends thou hast, and their adoption tried,

Grapple them to thy soul with hoops of steel ;

But do not dull thy palm with entertainment

Of each new-hatch'd, unfledg'd courage.
 Beware 65

Of entrance to a quarrel ; but, being in,
 Bear't that th' opposed may beware of thee.
 Give every man thy ear, but few thy voice ;

Take each man's censure, but reserve thy judgment.

Costly thy habit as thy purse can buy, 70
 But not express'd in fancy ; rich, not gaudy ;

For the apparel oft proclaims the man ;
 And they in France of the best rank and station

Are of a most select and generous choice in that.

Neither a borrower nor a lender be ; 75
 For loan oft loses both itself and friend,

And borrowing dulls the edge of husbandry.
 This above all—to thine own self be true,
 And it must follow, as the night the day,
 Thou canst not then be false to any man. 80
 Farewell ; my blessing season this in thee !

Laer. Most humbly do I take my leave,
 my lord.

Pol. The time invites you ; go, your servants tend.

Laer. Farewell, Ophelia ; and remember
 well

What I have said to you.

Oph. 'Tis in my memory lock'd, 85
 And you yourself shall keep the key of it.

Laer. Farewell. [Exit.

Pol. What is't, Ophelia, he hath said to
 you ?

Oph. So please you, something touching the Lord Hamlet.

Pol. Marry, well bethought ! 90
 'Tis told me he hath very oft of late Given private time to you ; and you yourself

Have of your audience been most free and bounteous.

If it be so—as so 'tis put on me,
 And that in way of caution—I must tell
 you 95

You do not understand yourself so clearly
 As it behoves my daughter and your honour.

What is between you ? Give me up the truth.

Oph. He hath, my lord, of late made many tenders

Of his affection to me. 100

Pol. Affection ! Pooh ! You speak like a green girl,

Unsifted in such perilous circumstance.
 Do you believe his tenders, as you call
 them ?

Oph. I do not know, my lord, what I should think.

Pol. Marry, I will teach you : think yourself a baby 105

That you have ta'en these tenders for true pay

Which are not sterling. Tender yourself more dearly ;

Or—not to crack the wind of the poor
 phrase,

Running it thus—you'll tender me a fool.

Oph. My lord, he hath importun'd me with love 110

In honourable fashion.

Pol. Ay, fashion you may call it ; go to, go to.

Oph. And hath given countenance to his speech, my lord,
 With almost all the holy vows of heaven.

Pol. Ay, springes to catch woodcocks ! I do know, 115
 When the blood burns, how prodigal the soul

Lends the tongue vows. These blazes,
daughter,
Giving more light than heat—extinct in both, 118
Even in their promise, as it is a-making—
You must not take for fire. From this time
Be something scanted of your maiden
presence ;
Set your entreatments at a higher rate
Than a command to parle. For Lord
Hamlet,
Believe so much in him, that he is young,
And with a larger tether may he walk 125
Than may be given you. In few, Ophelia, Do not believe his vows ; for they are brokers,
Not of that dye which their investments
show,
But mere implorers of unholy suits, 129
Breathing like sanctified and pious bonds,
The better to beguile. This is for all—
I would not, in plain terms, from this time
forth
Have you so slander any moment leisure
As to give words or talk with the Lord
Hamlet. 134
Look to't, I charge you. Come your ways.
Oph. I shall obey, my lord. [Exeunt.

SCENE IV. Elsinore. The guard-platform of the Castle.

Enter HAMLET, HORATIO, and MARCELLUS.

Ham. The air bites shrewdly ; it is very cold.

Hor. It is a nipping and an eager air.

Ham. What hour now ?

Hor. I think it lacks of twelve.

Mar. No, it is struck.

Hor. Indeed ? I heard it not. It then draws near the season 5

Wherein the spirit held his wont to walk.

[A flourish of trumpets, and two pieces go off.

What does this mean, my lord ?

Ham. The King doth wake to-night and takes his rouse,

Keeps wassail, and the swagg'ring up-spring reels,

And, as he drains his draughts of Rhenish
down, 10

The kettle-drum and trumpet thus bray out
The triumph of his pledge.

Hor. Is it a custom ?

Ham. Ay, marry, is't ;

But to my mind, though I am native here
And to the manner born, it is a custom 15

More honour'd in the breach than the observance.

This heavy-headed revel east and west Makes us traduc'd and tax'd of other nations ;

They clepe us drunkards, and with swinish phrase

Soil our addition ; and, indeed, it takes 20
From our achievements, though perform'd at height,

The pith and marrow of our attribute.

So, oft it chances in particular men

That, for some vicious mole of nature in
them,

As in their birth, wherein they are not guilty, 25

Since nature cannot choose his origin ;

By the o'ergrowth of some complexion,

Oft breaking down the pales and forts of
reason ;

Or by some habit that too much o'er-leavens

The form of plausible manners—that these men, 30

Carrying, I say, the stamp of one defect,

Being nature's livery or fortune's star,

His virtues else, be they as pure as grace,

As infinite as man may undergo, 34

Shall in the general censure take corruption From that particular fault. The dram of eale

Doth all the noble substance of a doubt

To his own scandal.

Enter Ghost.

Hor. Look, my lord, it comes.

Ham. Angels and ministers of grace defend us ! 39

Be thou a spirit of health or goblin damn'd, Bring with thee airs from heaven or blasts from hell,

Be thy intents wicked or charitable,

Thou com'st in such a questionable shape
That I will speak to thee. I'll call thee

Hamlet, 44

King, father, royal Dane. O, answer me !

Let me not burst in ignorance, but tell
Why thy canoniz'd bones, hearsed in death,

Have burst their cerements ; why the sepulchre

Wherein we saw thee quietly enurn'd 49

Hath op'd his ponderous and marble jaws
To cast thee up again. What may this mean

That thou, dead corse, again in complete steel

Revisits thus the glimpses of the moon, Making night hideous, and we fools of nature

So horridly to shake our disposition 55

With thoughts beyond the reaches of our souls ?

Say, why is this ? wherefore ? What should we do ? [Ghost beckons Hamlet.

Hor. It beckons you to go away with it,
As if it some impartment did desire

To you alone.

Mar. Look with what courteous action
It waves you to a more removed ground. 61

But do not go with it.

Hor. No, by no means.

Ham. It will not speak ; then I will follow it.

Hor. Do not, my lord.

Ham. Why, what should be the fear ?
I do not set my life at a pin's fee ; 65
And for my soul, what can it do to that,
Being a thing immortal as itself ?
It waves me forth again ; I'll follow it.

Hor. What if it tempt you toward the flood, my lord,
Or to the dreadful summit of the cliff 70
That beetles o'er his base into the sea,
And there assume some other horrible form,
Which might deprive your sovereignty of reason

And draw you into madness ? Think of it :
The very place puts toys of desperation, 75
Without more motive, into every brain
That looks so many fathoms to the sea
And hears it roar beneath.

Ham. It waves me still.
Go on ; I'll follow thee. 79

Mar. You shall not go, my lord.

Ham. Hold off your hands.

Hor. Be rul'd ; you shall not go.

Ham. My fate cries out,
And makes each petty arture in this body
As hardy as the Nemean lion's nerve.

[Ghost beckons.]

Still am I call'd. Unhand me, gentlemen.
By heaven, I'll make a ghost of him that lets me. 85

I say, away ! Go on ; I'll follow thee.

[Exeunt Ghost and Hamlet.]

Hor. He waxes desperate with imagination.

Mar. Let's follow ; 'tis not fit thus to obey him.

Hor. Have after. To what issue will this come ?

Mar. Something is rotten in the state of Denmark. 90

Hor. Heaven will direct it.

Mar. Nay, let's follow him.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE V. Elsinore. The battlements of the Castle.

Enter Ghost and HAMLET.

Ham. Whither wilt thou lead me ?
Speak. I'll go no further.

Ghost. Mark me.

Ham. I will.

Ghost. My hour is almost come,
When I to sulph'rous and tormenting flames
Must render up myself.

Ham. Alas, poor ghost !

Ghost. Pity me not, but lend thy serious hearing
To what I shall unfold. 5

Ham. Speak ; I am bound to hear.

1036

Ghost. So art thou to revenge, when thou shalt hear.

Ham. What ?

Ghost. I am thy father's spirit,
Doom'd for a certain term to walk the night, 10

And for the day confin'd to fast in fires,
Till the foul crimes done in my days of nature

Are burnt and purg'd away. But that I am forbid

To tell the secrets of my prison-house,
I could a tale unfold whose lightest word 15
Would harrow up thy soul, freeze thy young blood,

Make thy two eyes, like stars, start from their spheres,

Thy knotted and combined locks to part,
And each particular hair to stand an end,
Like quills upon the fretful porpentine. 20

But this eternal blazon must not be
To ears of flesh and blood. List, list, O, list !
If thou didst ever thy dear father love—

Ham. O God !

Ghost. Revenge his foul and most unnatural murder.

Ham. Murder ! 26

Ghost. Murder most foul, as in the best it is ;

But this most foul, strange, and unnatural.

Ham. Haste me to know't, that I, with wings as swift

As meditation or the thoughts of love, 30
May sweep to my revenge.

Ghost. I find thee apt ;
And duller shouldst thou be than the fat weed

That roots itself in ease on Lethe wharf, Wouldst thou not stir in this. Now, Hamlet, hear :

'Tis given out that, sleeping in my orchard, 35

A serpent stung me ; so the whole ear of Denmark

Is by a forged process of my death
Rankly abus'd ; but know, thou noble youth,

The serpent that did sting thy father's life
Now wears his crown.

Ham. O my prophetic soul !
My uncle ! 40

Ghost. Ay, that incestuous, that adulterate beast,

With witchcraft of his wits, with traitorous gifts—

O wicked wit and gifts that have the power
So to seduce !—won to his shameful lust 45

The will of my most seeming virtuous queen.

O Hamlet, what a falling off was there,
From me, whose love was of that dignity

That it went hand in hand even with the vow
I made to her in marriage ; and to decline 49

Upon a wretch whose natural gifts were poor

To those of mine !

But virtue, as it never will be moved,

Though lewdness court it in a shape of
heaven,

So lust, though to a radiant angel link'd, 55

Will sate itself in a celestial bed

And prey on garbage.

But soft ! methinks I scent the morning air.

Brief let me be. Sleeping within my orchard,

My custom always of the afternoon, 60

Upon my secure hour thy uncle stole,

With juice of cursed hebona in a vial,

And in the porches of my ears did pour

The leperous distilment ; whose effect

Holds such an enmity with blood of man 65

That swift as quicksilver it courses through

The natural gates and alleys of the body ;

And with a sudden vigour it doth posset

And curd, like eager droppings into milk,

The thin and wholesome blood. So did it
mine ; 70

And a most instant tetter bark'd about,
Most lazarus-like, with vile and loathsome crust,

All my smooth body.

Thus was I, sleeping, by a brother's hand

Of life, of crown, of queen, at once dis-patch'd ; 75

Cut off even in the blossoms of my sin,

Unhous'd, disappointed, unanel'd ;

No reck'ning made, but sent to my account

With all my imperfections on my head.

O, horrible ! O, horrible ! most horrible !

If thou hast nature in thee, bear it not ;

Let not the royal bed of Denmark be

A couch for luxury and damned incest.

But, howsoever thou pursuest this act,
Taint not thy mind, nor let thy soul
contrive 85

Against thy mother aught ; leave her to
heaven,

And to those thorns that in her bosom lodge

To prick and sting her. Fare thee well at once.

The glowworm shows the matin to be near,

And gins to pale his uneffectual fire. 90

Adieu, adieu, adieu ! Remember me. [Exit.]

Ham. O all you host of heaven ! O earth !
What else ?

And shall I couple hell ? O, fie ! Hold,
hold, my heart ;

And you, my sinews, grow not instant old,

But bear me stiffly up. Remember thee ! 95

Ay, thou poor ghost, whiles memory holds a seat

In this distracted globe. Remember thee !

Yea, from the table of my memory

I'll wipe away all trivial fond records,

All saws of books, all forms, all pressures
past, 100

That youth and observation copied there,

And thy commandment all alone shall live
Within the book and volume of my brain, Unmix'd with baser matter. Yes, by
heaven !

O most pernicious woman ! 105

O villain, villain, smiling, damned villain !

My tables—meet it is I set it down

That one may smile, and smile, and be a villain ;

At least I am sure it may be so in Denmark.

[Writing.]

So, uncle, there you are. Now to my word :

It is ' Adieu, adieu ! Remember me '. 111
I have sworn't.

Hor. [Within] My lord, my lord !

Enter HORATIO and MARCELLUS.

Mar. Lord Hamlet !

Hor. Heavens secure him !

Ham. So be it !

Mar. Illo, ho, ho, my lord ! 115

Ham. Hillo, ho, ho, boy ! Come, bird,
come.

Mar. How is't, my noble lord ?

Hor. What news, my lord ?

Ham. O, wonderful !

Hor. Good my lord, tell it.

Ham. No ; you will reveal it.

Hor. Not I, my lord, by heaven !

Mar. Nor I, my lord. 120

Ham. How say you, then ; would heart of man once think it ?

But you'll be secret ?

Both. Ay, by heaven, my lord !

Ham. There's never a villain dwelling in all Denmark

But he's an arrant knave.

Hor. There needs no ghost, my lord, come from the grave 125

To tell us this.

Ham. Why, right ; you are in the right ;
And so, without more circumstance at all,
I hold it fit that we shake hands and part ;
You, as your business and desire shall point
you—

For every man hath business and desire, 130
Such as it is ; and for my own poor part,
Look you, I will go pray.

Hor. These are but wild and whirling words, my lord.

Ham. I am sorry they offend you, heartily ;
Yes, faith, heartily.

Hor. There's no offence, my lord. 135

Ham. Yes, by Saint Patrick, but there is,
Horatio,

And much offence too. Touching this vision
here—

It is an honest ghost, that let me tell you.
For your desire to know what is between us, O'ermaster't as you may. And now, good
friends, 140

As you are friends, scholars, and soldiers,
Give me one poor request.

Hor. What is't, my lord ? We will.

Ham. Never make known what you have seen to-night.
 Both. My lord, we will not.
 Ham. Nay, but swear't.
 Hor. In faith,
 My lord, not I.
 Mar. Nor I, my lord, in faith. 146
 Ham. Upon my sword.
 Mar. We have sworn, my lord, already.
 Ham. Indeed, upon my sword, indeed.
 Ghost. [Cries under the stage] Swear.
 Ham. Ha, ha, boy! say'st thou so? Art thou there, truepenny? 150
 Come on. You hear this fellow in the cellarage:
 Consent to swear.
 Hor. Propose the oath, my lord.
 Ham. Never to speak of this that you have seen,
 Swear by my sword.
 Ghost. [Beneath] Swear. 155
 Ham. Hic et ubique? Then we'll shift our ground.
 Come hither, gentlemen,
 And lay your hands again upon my sword.
 Swear by my sword
 Never to speak of this that you have heard.
 Ghost [Beneath] Swear, by his sword. 161
 Ham. Well said, old mole! Canst work i' th' earth so fast?
 A worthy pioneer! Once more remove, good friends.
 Hor. O day and night, but this is wondrous strange!
 Ham. And therefore as a stranger give it welcome. 165
 There are more things in heaven and earth, Horatio,
 Than are dreamt of in your philosophy.
 But come.
 Here, as before, never, so help you mercy,
 How strange or odd some'er I bear myself—
 As I perchance hereafter shall think meet
 To put an antic disposition on— 172
 That you, at such times, seeing me, never shall,
 With arms encumb'ed thus, or this head-shake,
 Or by pronouncing of some doubtful phrase,
 As 'Well, well, we know' or 'We could, an if we would' 176
 Or 'If we list to speak' or 'There be, an if they might'
 Or such ambiguous giving out, to note
 That you know aught of me—this do swear,
 So grace and mercy at your most need help you. 180
 Ghost. [Beneath] Swear.
 Ham. Rest, rest, perturbed spirit! So, gentlemen,
 With all my love I do commend me to you;
 And what so poor a man as Hamlet is 185
 May do t'express his love and friending to you,

God willing, shall not lack. Let us go in together;
 And still your fingers on your lips, I pray.
 The time is out of joint. O cursed spite,
 That ever I was born to set it right! 190
 Nay, come, let's go together. [Exeunt.]

ACT TWO

SCENE I. Elsinore. The house of Polonius.

Enter POLONIUS and REYNALDO.

Pol. Give him this money and these notes, Reynaldo.
 Rey. I will, my lord.
 Pol. You shall do marvellous wisely, good Reynaldo,
 Before you visit him, to make inquire Of his behaviour.
 Rey. My lord, I did intend it. 5
 Pol. Marry, well said; very well said. Look you, sir, Enquire me first what Danskers are in Paris;
 And how, and who, what means, and where they keep,
 What company, at what expense; and finding
 By this encompassment and drift of question 10
 That they do know my son, come you more nearer Than your particular demands will touch it. Take you, as 'twere, some distant knowledge of him;
 As thus: 'I know his father and his friends, And in part him'. Do you mark this, Reynaldo? 15
 Rey. Ay, very well, my lord.
 Pol. 'And in part him—but' you may say 'not well;
 But if't be he I mean, he's very wild;
 Addicted to so and so'; and there put on him
 What forgeries you please; marry, none so rank 20
 As may dishonour him; take heed of that;
 But, sir, such wanton, wild, and usual slips
 As are companions noted and most known To youth and liberty.
 Rey. As gaming, my lord.
 Pol. Ay, or drinking, fencing, swearing, quarrelling, 25
 Drabbing—you may go so far.
 Rey. My lord, that would dishonour him.
 Pol. Faith, no; as you may season it in the charge.
 You must not put another scandal on him, That he is open to incontinency; 30
 That's not my meaning. But breathe his faults so quaintly
 That they may seem the taints of liberty;
 The flash and outbreak of a fiery mind,
 A savageness in unreclaimed blood,
 Of general assault.

Rey. But, my good lord— 35
 Pol. Wherefore should you do this ?
 Rey. Ay, my lord,
 I would know that.

Pol. Marry, sir, here's my drift,
 And I believe it is a fetch of warrant :
 You laying these slight sullies on my son,
 As 'twere a thing a little soil'd wi' th' working, 40

Mark you,
 Your party in converse, him you would sound,

Having ever seen in the prenominate crimes
 The youth you breathe of guilty, be assur'd
 He closes with you in this consequence—
 ' Good sir ' or so, or ' friend ' or ' gentleman ' 46

According to the phrase or the addition
 Of man and country.

Rey. Very good, my lord.

Pol. And then, sir, does 'a this—'a does—
 What was I about to say ? By the mass,
 I was about to say something ; where did I
 leave ? 51

Rey. At ' closes in the consequence ', at
 ' friend or so ' and ' gentleman '.

Pol. At ' closes in the consequence '—
 ay, marry,
 He closes thus : ' I know the gentleman ;
 I saw him yesterday, or t'other day, ' 56
 Or then, or then ; with such, or such ; and,
 as you say,

There was 'a gaming ; there o'ertook in's rouse ;

There falling out at tennis ' ; or perchance
 ' I saw him enter such a house of sale ' 60
 Videlicet, a brothel, or so forth. See you now Your bait of falsehood take this carp of
 truth ;

And thus do we of wisdom and of reach,
 With windlasses and with assays of bias, 65
 By indirections find directions out ;
 So, by my former lecture and advice,
 Shall you my son. You have me, have you
 not ?

Rey. My lord, I have.

Pol. God buy ye ; fare ye well.

Rey. Good my lord ! 70

Pol. Observe his inclination in yourself.

Rey. I shall, my lord.

Pol. And let him ply his music.

Rey. Well, my lord.

Pol. Farewell ! [Exit Reyna'do.

Enter OPHELIA.

How now, Ophelia ! What's the matter ?

Oph. O my lord, my lord, I have been so affrighted ! 75

Pol. With what, i' th' name of God ?

Oph. My lord, as I was sewing in my closet,

Lord Hamlet, with his doublet all unbrac'd,
 No hat upon his head, his stockings fouled,
 Ungart' red and down-gyved to his ankle ;

Pale as his shirt, his knees knocking each
 other, 81

And with a look so piteous in purport
 As if he had been loosed out of hell
 To speak of horrors—he comes before me.

Pol. Mad for thy love ?

Oph. My lord, I do not know,
 But truly I do fear it.

Pol. What said he ? 86

Oph. He took me by the wrist, and held me hard ;

Then goes he to the length of all his arm,
 And, with his other hand thus o'er his
 brow,

He falls to such perusal of my face 90
 As 'a would draw it. Long stay'd he so.

At last, a little shaking of mine arm,
 And thrice his head thus waving up and
 down,

He rais'd a sigh so piteous and profound
 As it did seem to shatter all his bulk 95

And end his being. That done, he lets me go,

And, with his head over his shoulder turn'd,
 He seem'd to find his way without his eyes ;
 For out adooors he went without their helps
 And to the last bended their light on me.

Pol. Come, go with me. I will go seek
 the King. 101

This is the very ecstasy of love,
 Whose violent property fordoes itself,
 And leads the will to desperate undertakings

As oft as any passion under heaven 105
 That does afflict our natures. I am sorry—
 What, have you given him any hard words of late ?

Oph. No, my good lord ; but, as you did command,

I did repel his letters, and denied
 His access to me.

Pol. That hath made him mad. 110
 I am sorry that with better heed and judgment

I had not quoted him. I fear'd he did but trifle,

And meant to wreck thee ; but beshrew my jealousy !

By heaven, it is as proper to our age 114
 To cast beyond ourselves in our opinions
 As it is common for the younger sort

To lack discretion. Come, go we to the King.

This must be known ; which, being kept close, might move

More grief to hide than hate to utter love.
 Come. [Exeunt. 120

SCENE II. Elsinore. The Castle.

Flourish. Enter KING, QUEEN, ROSEN-CRANTZ, GUILDENSTERN, and Attendants.

King. Welcome, dear Rosencrantz and Guildenstern !

Moreover that we much did long to see you,
The need we have to use you did provoke
Our hasty sending. Something have you heard

Of Hamlet's transformation ; so I call it, 5
Sith nor th' exterior nor the inward man Resembles that it was. What it should be,
More than his father's death, that thus hath put him

So much from th' understanding of himself,
I cannot deem of. I entreat you both 10
That, being of so young days brought up
with him,

And sith so neighboured to his youth and haviour,

That you vouchsafe your rest here in our court 13

Some little time ; so by your companies
To draw him on to pleasures, and to gather,
So much as from occasion you may glean,
Whether aught to us unknown afflicts him
thus

That, open'd, lies within our remedy.

Queen. Good gentlemen, he hath much talk'd of you ; 19

And sure I am two men there is not living To whom he more adheres. If it will please
you

To show us so much gentry and good will
As to expend your time with us awhile
For the supply and profit of our hope,
Your visitation shall receive such thanks 25
As fits a king's remembrance.

Ros. Both your Majesties Might, by the sovereign power you have of us,

Put your dread pleasures more into command

Than to entreaty.

Guil. But we both obey, 29
And here give up ourselves, in the full bent,
To lay our service freely at your feet,
To be commanded.

King. Thanks, Rosencrantz and gentle
Guildenstern.

Queen. Thanks, Guildenstern and gentle Rosencrantz.

And I beseech you instantly to visit 35
My too much changed son. Go, some of you,
And bring these gentlemen where Hamlet is.

Guil. Heavens make our presence and our practices
Pleasant and helpful to him !

Queen. Aye amen !

[Exeunt Rosencrantz, Guildenstern, and some Attendants.]

Enter POLONIUS.

Pol. Th' ambassadors from Norway, my good lord, 40
Are joyfully return'd.

King. Thou still hast been the father of good news.

Pol. Have I, my lord ? I assure you, my good liege,

I hold my duty, as I hold my soul, 44
Both to my God and to my gracious King ;
And I do think—or else this brain of mine
Hunts not the trail of policy so sure
As it hath us'd to do—that I have found
The very cause of Hamlet's lunacy.

King. O, speak of that ; that do I long to hear. 50

Pol. Give first admittance to th' ambassadors ;

My news shall be the fruit to that great
feast.

King. Thyself do grace to them, and bring them in. [Exit Polonius.]

He tells me, my dear Gertrude, he hath found

The head and source of all your son's distemper. 55

Queen. I doubt it is no other but the main,
His father's death and our o'erhasty
marriage.

King. Well, we shall sift him.

Re-enter POLONIUS, with VOLTEMAND and CORNELIUS.

Welcome, my good friends !

Say, Voltemand, what from our brother Norway ?

Volt. Most fair return of greetings and desires. 60

Upon our first, he sent out to suppress
His nephew's levies ; which to him appear'd
To be a preparation 'gainst the Polack ;
But, better look'd into, he truly found
It was against your Highness. Whereat griev'd, 65

That so his sickness, age, and impotence,
Was falsely borne in hand, sends out arrests

On Fortinbras ; which he, in brief, obeys ; Receives rebuke from Norway ; and, in fine,

Makes vow before his uncle never more 70
To give th' assay of arms against your Majesty.

Whereon old Norway, overcome with joy, Gives him threescore thousand crowns in annual fee,

And his commission to employ those soldiers,

So levied as before, against the Polack ; 75
With an entreaty, herein further shown,

[Gives a paper.]

That it might please you to give quiet pass
Through your dominions for this enterprise,
On such regards of safety and allowance
As therein are set down.

King. It likes us well ; 80

And at our more considered time we'll read,
Answer, and think upon this business.

Meantime we thank you for your well-took labour.

Go to your rest; at night we'll feast together.

Most welcome home!

[Exeunt Ambassadors and Attendants.]

Pol. This business is well ended. 85
My liege, and madam, to expostulate
What majesty should be, what duty is,
Why day is day, night night, and time is
time,
Were nothing, but to waste night, day, and
time.

Therefore, since brevity is the soul of wit, 90
And tediousness the limbs and outward flourishes,

I will be brief. Your noble son is mad.
Mad call I it; for, to define true madness,
What is't but to be nothing else but mad?
But let that go.

Queen. More matter with less art. 95

Pol. Madam, I swear I use no art at all.
That he's mad, 'tis true: 'tis true 'tis pity;
And pity 'tis 'tis true. A foolish figure!
But farewell it, for I will use no art.

Mad let us grant him, then; and now remains 100

That we find out the cause of this effect;
Or rather say the cause of this defect,
For this effect defective comes by cause.
Thus it remains, and the remainder thus.
Pepend. 105

I have a daughter—have while she is
mine—

Who in her duty and obedience, mark, Hath given me this. Now gather, and surmise.

[Reads. 'To the celestial, and my soul's idol, the most beautified Ophelia.' That's an ill phrase, a vile phrase; 'beautified' is a vile phrase. But you shall hear. Thus: [Reads.
'In her excellent white bosom, these, &c.']

Queen. Came this from Hamlet to her?

Pol. Good madam, stay awhile; I will be faithful. [Reads.]

'Doubt thou the stars are fire; 115

Doubt that the sun doth move;

Doubt truth to be a liar;

But never doubt I love.

O dear Ophelia, I am ill at these numbers.
I have not art to reckon my groans; but that I love thee best, O most best, believe it. Adieu. 121

Thine evermore, most dear lady, whilst this machine is to him, HAMLET.
This, in obedience, hath my daughter shown me;

And more above, hath his solicitings, 125
As they fell out by time, by means, and
place,

All given to mine ear.

King. But how hath she Receiv'd his love?

Pol. What do you think of me?

King. As of a man faithful and honourable.

Pol. I would fain prove so. But what might you think, 130

When I had seen this hot love on the wing,
As I perceiv'd it, I must tell you that,
Before my daughter told me—what might
you,

Or my dear Majesty your queen here,
think,

If I had play'd the desk or table-book; 135
Or given my heart a winking, mute and dumb;

Or look'd upon this love with idle sight—
What might you think? No, I went round to work,

And my young mistress thus I did bespeak:
'Lord Hamlet is a prince out of thy star;

This must not be'. And then I prescripts gave her, 141

That she should lock herself from his resort,
Admit no messengers, receive no tokens.
Which done, she took the fruits of my advice;

And he repelled, a short tale to make, 145
Fell into a sadness, then into a fast,
Thence to a watch, thence into a weakness,
Thence to a lightness, and, by this declension, 148

Into the madness wherein now he raves

And all we mourn for.

King. Do you think 'tis this?

Queen. It may be, very like.

Pol. Hath there been such a time—I would fain know that—

That I have positively said 'Tis so',
When it prov'd otherwise?

King. Not that I know.

Pol. Take this from this, if this be otherwise. 155

If circumstances lead me, I will find

Where truth is hid, though it were hid indeed

Within the centre.

King. How may we try it further?

Pol. You know sometimes he walks four hours together,
Here in the lobby.

Queen. So he does, indeed. 160

Pol. At such a time I'll loose my daughter to him.

Be you and I behind an arras then;
Mark the encounter: if he love her not,
And be not from his reason fall'n thereon,
Let me be no assistant for a state, 165
But keep a farm and carters.

King. We will try it.

Enter HAMLET, reading on a book.

Queen. But look where sadly the poor wretch comes reading.

Pol. Away, I do beseech you, both away:
I'll board him presently. O, give me leave.

[Exeunt King and Queen.]

How does my good Lord Hamlet? 170

Ham. Well, God-a-mercy.

Pol. Do you know me, my lord ?

Ham. Excellent well ; you are a fish-monger.

Pol. Not I, my lord.

Ham. Then I would you were so honest a man. 175

Pol. Honest, my lord !

Ham. Ay, sir ; to be honest, as this world goes, is to be one man pick'd out of ten thousand.

Pol. That's very true, my lord. 179

Ham. For if the sun breed maggots in a dead dog, being a good kissing carrion—Have you a daughter ?

Pol. I have, my lord.

Ham. Let her not walk i' th' sun. Conception is a blessing. But as your daughter may conceive—friend, look to't.

Pol. How say you by that ? [Aside] Still harping on my daughter. Yet he knew me not at first ; 'a said I was a fishmonger. 'A is far gone, far gone. And truly in my youth I suff'red much extremity for love. Very near this. I'll speak to him again.—What do you read, my lord ? 190

Ham. Words, words, words.

Pol. What is the matter, my lord ?

Ham. Between who ?

Pol. I mean, the matter that you read, my lord. 194

Ham. Slanders, sir ; for the satirical rogue says here that old men have grey beards ; that their faces are wrinkled ; their eyes purging thick amber and plum-tree gum ; and that they have a plentiful lack of wit, together with most weak hams—all which, sir, though I most powerfully and potentially believe, yet I hold it not honesty to have it thus set down ; for you yourself, sir, shall grow old as I am, if, like a crab, you could go backward.

Pol. [Aside] Though this be madness, yet there is method in't.—Will you walk out of the air, my lord ? 205

Ham. Into my grave ?

Pol. Indeed, that's out of the air. [Aside] How pregnant sometimes his replies are ! a happiness that often madness hits on, which reason and sanity could not so prosperously be delivered of. I will leave him, and suddenly contrive the means of meeting between him and my daughter.—My lord, I will take my leave of you. 213

Ham. You cannot, sir, take from me anything that I will more willingly part withal—except my life, except my life, except my life. 216

Enter ROSENCRANTZ and GUILDENSTERN.

Pol. Fare you well, my lord.

Ham. These tedious old fools !

Pol. You go to seek the Lord Hamlet ; there he is.

Ros. [To Polonius] God save you, sir !

[Exit Polonius. 221

Guil. My honour'd lord !

Ros. My most dear lord !

Ham. My excellent good friends ! How dost thou, Guildenstern ? Ah, Rosen- crantz ! Good lads, how do you both ? 225

Ros. As the indifferent children of the earth.

Guil. Happy in that we are not over- happy ;

On fortune's cap we are not the very button.

Ham. Nor the soles of her shoe ?

Ros. Neither, my lord. 230

Ham. Then you live about her waist, or in the middle of her favours ?

Guil. Faith, her privates we.

Ham. In the secret parts of Fortune ? O, most true ; she is a strumpet. What news ?

Ros. None, my lord, but that the world's grown honest. 236

Ham. Then is doomsday near. But your news is not true. Let me question more in particular. What have you, my good friends, deserved at the hands of Fortune, that she sends you to prison hither ? 240

Guil. Prison, my lord !

Ham. Denmark's a prison.

Ros. Then is the world one.

Ham. A goodly one ; in which there are many confines, wards, and dungeons, Den- mark being one o' th' worst. 246

Ros. We think not so, my lord.

Ham. Why, then, 'tis none to you ; for there is nothing either good or bad, but thinking makes it so. To me it is a prison.

Ros. Why, then your ambition makes it one ; 'tis too narrow for your mind. 252

Ham. O God, I could be bounded in a nutshell and count myself a king of infinite space, were it not that I have bad dreams.

Guil. Which dreams indeed are ambition ; for the very substance of the ambitious is merely the shadow of a dream. 258

Ham. A dream itself is but a shadow.

Ros. Truly, and I hold ambition of so airy and light a quality that it is but a shadow's shadow. 261

Ham. Then are our beggars bodies, and our monarchs and outstretch'd heroes the beggars' shadows. Shall we to th' court ? for, by my fay, I cannot reason.

Both. We'll wait upon you. 265

Ham. No such matter. I will not sort you with the rest of my servants ; for, to speak to you like an honest man, I am most dreadfully attended. But, in the beaten way of friendship, what make you at Elsinore ?

Ros. To visit you, my lord ; no other occasion. 270

Ham. Beggar that I am, I am even poor in thanks ; but I thank you ; and sure,

dear friends, my thanks are too dear a half-penny. Were you not sent for? Is it your own inclining? Is it a free visitation? Come, come, deal justly with me. Come, come; nay, speak. 275

Guil. What should we say, my lord?

Ham. Why any thing. But to th' purpose: you were sent for; and there is a kind of confession in your looks, which your modesties have not craft enough to colour; I know the good King and Queen have sent for you. 280

Ros. To what end, my lord?

Ham. That you must teach me. But let me conjure you by the rights of our fellowship, by the consonancy of our youth, by the obligation of our ever-preserved love, and by what more dear a better proposer can charge you withal, be even and direct with me, whether you were sent for or no?

Ros. [Aside to Guildenstern] What say you?

Ham. [Aside] Nay, then, I have an eye of you.—If you love me, hold not off. 290

Guil. My lord, we were sent for.

Ham. I will tell you why; so shall my anticipation prevent your discovery, and your secrecy to the King and Queen moults no feather. I have of late—but wherefore I know not—lost all my mirth, forgone all custom of exercises; and indeed it goes so heavily with my disposition that this goodly frame, the earth, seems to me a sterile promontory; this most excellent canopy the air, look you, this brave o'erhanging firmament, this majestic roof fretted with golden fire—why, it appeareth no other thing to me than a foul and pestilent congregation of vapours. What a piece of work is a man! How noble in reason! how infinite in faculties! in form and moving, how express and admirable! in action, how like an angel! in apprehension, how like a god! the beauty of the world! the paragon of animals! And yet, to me, what is this quintessence of dust? Man delights not me—no, nor woman neither, though by your smiling you seem to say so. 309

Ros. My lord, there was no such stuff in my thoughts.

Ham. Why did ye laugh, then, when I said 'Man delights not me'?

Ros. To think, my lord, if you delight not in man, what lenten entertainment the players shall receive from you. We coted them on the way; and hither are they coming to offer you service. 316

Ham. He that plays the king shall be welcome—his Majesty shall have tribute on me; the adventurous knight shall use his foil and target; the lover shall not sigh gratis; the humorous man shall end his part in peace; the clown shall make those laugh whose lungs are tickle a' th' sere; and the lady shall say her mind freely, or the blank verse shall halt for't. What players are they? 323

Ros. Even those you were wont to take such delight in—the tragedians of the city.

Ham. How chances it they travel? Their residence, both in reputation and profit, was better both ways.

Ros. I think their inhibition comes by the means of the late innovation. 329

Ham. Do they hold the same estimation they did when I was in the city? Are they so followed?

Ros. No, indeed, are they not.

Ham. How comes it? Do they grow rusty? 333

Ros. Nay, their endeavour keeps in the wonted pace; but there is, sir, an eyrie of children, little eyases, that cry out on the top of question, and are most tyrannically clapp'd for't. These are now the fashion, and so berattle the common stages—so they call them—that many wearing rapiers are afraid of goose quills and dare scarce come thither. 340

Ham. What, are they children? Who maintains 'em? How are they escoted? Will they pursue the quality no longer than they can sing? Will they not say afterwards, if they should grow themselves to common players—as it is most like, if their means are no better—their writers do them wrong to make them exclaim against their own succession? 347

Ros. Faith, there has been much to-do on both sides; and the nation holds it no sin to tarre them to controversy. There was for a while no money bid for argument, unless the poet and the player went to cuffs in the question. 352

Ham. Is't possible?

Guil. O, there has been much throwing about of brains. 355

Ham. Do the boys carry it away?

Ros. Ay, that they do, my lord—Hercules and his load too.

Ham. It is not very strange; for my uncle is King of Denmark, and those that would make mows at him while my father lived give twenty, forty, fifty, a hundred ducats apiece for his picture in little. 'Sblood, there is something in this more than natural, if philosophy could find it out.

[A flourish.]

Guil. There are the players. 365

Ham. Gentlemen, you are welcome to Elsinore. Your hands, come then; th' appurtenance of welcome is fashion and ceremony. Let me comply with you in this garb; lest my extent to the players, which, I tell you, must show fairly outwards, should more appear like entertainment than yours. You are welcome. But my uncle-father and aunt-mother are deceived. 372

Guil. In what, my dear lord ?

Ham. I am but mad north-north-west ; when the wind is southerly I know a hawk from a handsaw. 375

Re-enter POLONIUS.

Pol. Well be with you, gentlemen !

Ham. Hark you, Guildenstern, and you too—at each ear a hearer : that great baby you see there is not yet out of his swaddling clouts.

Ros. Happily he is the second time come to them ; for they say an old man is twice a child. 381

Ham. I will prophesy he comes to tell me of the players ; mark it. You say right, sir : a Monday morning ; 'twas then indeed.

Pol. My lord, I have news to tell you. 385

Ham. My lord, I have news to tell you. When Roscius was an actor in Rome—

Pol. The actors are come hither, my lord.

Ham. Buzz, buzz !

Pol. Upon my honour— 390

Ham. Then came each actor on his ass—

Pol. The best actors in the world, either for tragedy, comedy, history, pastoral, pastoral-comical, historical-pastoral, tragical-historical, tragical-comical-historical-pastoral, scene individable, or poem unlimited. Seneca cannot be too heavy nor Plautus too light. For the law of writ and the liberty, these are the only men. 397

Ham. O Jephthah, judge of Israel, what a treasure hadst thou !

Pol. What a treasure had he, my lord ?

Ham. Why— 401

'One fair daughter, and no more,
The which he loved passing well'.

Pol. [Aside] Still on my daughter.

Ham. Am I not i' th' right, old Jephthah ?

Pol. If you call me Jephthah, my lord, I have a daughter that I love passing well.

Ham. Nay, that follows not.

Pol. What follows then, my lord ?

Ham. Why— 410

'As by lot, God wot'

and then, you know,

'It came to pass, as most like it was'.

The first row of the pious chanson will show you more ; for look where my abridgement comes. 415

Enter the Players.

You are welcome, masters ; welcome, all.—I am glad to see thee well.—Welcome, good friends.—O, my old friend ! Why thy face is valanc'd since I saw thee last ; com'st thou to beard me in Denmark ?—What, my young lady and mistress ! By'r lady, your ladyship is nearer to heaven than when I saw you last by the altitude of a chopine.

Pray God, your voice, like a piece of uncurrent gold, be not crack'd within the ring.—Masters, you are all welcome. We'll e'en to't like French falconers, fly at anything we see. We'll have a speech straight. Come, give us a taste of your quality ; come, a passionate speech.

1 Play. What speech, my good lord ? 427

Ham. I heard thee speak me a speech once, but it was never acted ; or, if it was, not above once ; for the play, I remember, pleas'd not the million ; 'twas caviary to the general. But it was—as I received it, and others whose judgments in such matters cried in the top of mine—an excellent play, well digested in the scenes, set down with as much modesty as cunning. I remember one said there were no sallets in the lines to make the matter savoury, nor no matter in the phrase that might indict the author of affectation ; but call'd it an honest method, as wholesome as sweet, and by very much more handsome than fine. One speech in it I chiefly lov'd : 'twas Æneas' tale to Dido ; and thereabout of it especially where he speaks of Priam's slaughter. If it live in your memory, begin at this line—let me see, let me see : 443

'The rugged Pyrrhus, like th' Hyrcanian beast,'

'Tis not so ; it begins with Pyrrhus. 445

'The rugged Pyrrhus, he whose sable arms,
Black as his purpose, did the night resemble

When he lay couched in the ominous
horse,

Hath now this dread and black complexion smear'd

With heraldry more dismal ; head to foot 450

Now is he total gules, horridly trick'd

With blood of fathers, mothers, daughters,
sons,

Bak'd and impasted with the parching
streets,

That lend a tyrannous and damned light
To their lord's murder. Roasted in wrath and fire, 455

And thus o'er-sized with coagulate gore,
With eyes like carbuncles, the hellish
Pyrrhus

Old grandsire Priam seeks.'

So proceed you.

Pol. Fore God, my lord, well spoken, with good accent and good discretion. 461

1 Play. 'Anon he finds him Striking too short at Greeks ; his antique
sword,

Rebellious to his arm, lies where it falls,
Repugnant to command. Unequal match'd, Pyrrhus at Priam drives, in rage strikes wide ; 466

But with the whiff and wind of his fell sword

Th' unnerv'd father falls. Then senseless Ilium, 468

Seeming to feel this blow, with flaming top Stoops to his base, and with a hideous crash
Takes prisoner Pyrrhus' ear. For, lo! his sword, 471

Which was declining on the milky head
Of reverend Priam, seem'd i' th' air to stick.
So, as a painted tyrant, Pyrrhus stood
And, like a neutral to his will and matter,
Did nothing. 476

But as we often see, against some storm,
A silence in the heavens, the rack stand still,

The bold winds speechless, and the orb below

As hush as death, anon the dreadful thunder 480

Doth rend the region; so, after Pyrrhus' pause,

A roused vengeance sets him new a-work;
And never did the Cyclops' hammers fall
On Mars's armour, forg'd for proof eterne,
With less remorse than Pyrrhus' bleeding sword 485

Now falls on Priam.

Out, out, thou strumpet, Fortune! All you gods,

In general synod, take away her power;
Break all the spokes and fellies from her wheel,

And bowl the round nave down the hill of heaven, 490

As low as to the fiends.'

Pol. This is too long.

Ham. It shall to the barber's, with your beard. Prithee say on. He's for a jig, or a tale of bawdry, or he sleeps. Say on; come to Hecuba. 495

1 Play. 'But who, ah, who had seen the mobled queen—'

Ham. 'The mobled queen'?

Pol. That's good; 'mobled queen' is good.

1 Play. 'Run barefoot up and down, threat'ning the flames 499

With bisson rheum; a clout upon that head
Where late the diadem stood, and for a robe,
About her lank and all o'er-teemed loins,
A blanket, in the alarm of fear caught up—
Who this had seen, with tongue in venom steep'd,

'Gainst Fortune's state would treason have pronounc'd. 505

But if the gods themselves did see her then,
When she saw Pyrrhus make malicious sport

In mincing with his sword her husband's limbs,

The instant burst of clamour that she made— 509

Unless things mortal move them not at all—

Would have made milch the burning eyes of heaven,

And passion in the gods.'

Pol. Look whe'er he has not turn'd his colour, and has tears in 's eyes. Prithee no more. 514

Ham. 'Tis well; I'll have thee speak out the rest of this soon.—Good my lord, will you see the players well bestowed? Do you hear: let them be well used; for they are the abstract and brief chronicles of the time; after your death you were better have a bad epitaph than their ill report while you live. 520

Pol. My lord, I will use them according to their desert.

Ham. God's bodykins, man, much better. Use every man after his desert, and who shall scape whipping? Use them after your own honour and dignity: the less they deserve, the more merit is in your bounty. Take them in. 527

Pol. Come, sirs.

Ham. Follow him, friends. We'll hear a play to-morrow. Dost thou hear me, old friend; can you play 'The Murder of Gonzago'?

1 Play. Ay, my lord. 533

Ham. We'll ha't to-morrow night. You could, for a need, study a speech of some dozen or sixteen lines which I would set down and insert in't, could you not?

1 Play. Ay, my lord. 537

Ham. Very well. Follow that lord; and look you mock him not. [Exeunt Polonius and Players] My good friends, I'll leave you till night. You are welcome to Elsinore. 540

Ros. Good my lord!

[Exeunt Rosencrantz and Guildenstern.]

Ham. Ay, so God buy to you! Now I am alone.

O, what a rogue and peasant slave am I! Is it not monstrous that this player here, But in a fiction, in a dream of passion, 545

Could force his soul so to his own conceit That from her working all his visage wann'd;

Tears in his eyes, distraction in's aspect, A broken voice, and his whole function suiting

With forms to his conceit? And all for nothing! 550

For Hecuba!

What's Hecuba to him or he to Hecuba, That he should weep for her? What would he do,

Had he the motive and the cue for passion That I have? He would drown the stage with tears, 555

And cleave the general ear with horrid speech;

Make mad the guilty, and appal the free, Confound the ignorant, and amaze indeed The very faculties of eyes and ears.

Yet I, 560
A dull and muddy-mettl'd rascal, peak, Like John-a-dreams, unpregnant of my
cause,

And can say nothing ; no, not for a king
Upon whose property and most dear life
A damn'd defeat was made. Am I a coward ? 565

Who calls me villain, breaks my pate across,
Plucks off my beard and blows it in my face,
Tweaks me by the nose, gives me the lie i'
th' throat

As deep as to the lungs ? Who does me this ?

Ha ! 570
'Swounds, I should take it ; for it cannot be
But I am pigeon-liver'd and lack gall
To make oppression bitter, or ere this
I should 'a fatt'd all the region kites
With this slave's offal. Bloody, bawdy
villain ! 575

Remorseless, treacherous, lecherous, kind-less villain !
O, vengeance !

Why, what an ass am I ! This is most brave,

That I, the son of a dear father murder'd, Prompted to my revenge by heaven and hell, 580

Must, like a whore, unpack my heart with words,

And fall a-cursing like a very drab,
A scullion ! Fie upon't ! foh !
About, my brains. Hum—I have heard That guilty creatures, sitting at a play, 585
Have by the very cunning of the scene
Been struck so to the soul that presently
They have proclaim'd their malefactions ;
For murder, though it have no tongue, will
speak

With most miraculous organ. I'll have these players 590

Play something like the murder of my father

Before mine uncle. I'll observe his looks ;
I'll tent him to the quick. If 'a do blench, I know my course. The spirit that I have seen 594

May be a devil ; and the devil hath power T' assume a pleasing shape ; yea, and perhaps

Out of my weakness and my melancholy,
As he is very potent with such spirits,
Abuses me to damn me. I'll have grounds More relative than this. The play's the
thing 600

Wherein I'll catch the conscience of the King. [Exit.

ACT THREE

SCENE I. Elsinore. The Castle.

Enter KING, QUEEN, POLONIUS, OPHELIA, ROSENCRANTZ, and GUILDENSTERN.

King. And can you by no drift of conference

Get from him why he puts on this confusion,
Grating so harshly all his days of quiet
With turbulent and dangerous lunacy ?

Ros. He does confess he feels himself
distracted, 5

But from what cause 'a will by no means
speak.

Guil. Nor do we find him forward to be sounded ;

But, with a crafty madness, keeps aloof
When we would bring him on to some confession

Of his true state.

Queen. Did he receive you well ? 10

Ros. Most like a gentleman.

Guil. But with much forcing of his disposition.

Ros. Niggard of question ; but of our demands

Most free in his reply.

Queen. Did you assay him

To any pastime ? 15

Ros. Madam, it so fell out that certain players

We o'er-raught on the way. Of these we told him ;

And there did seem in him a kind of joy
To hear of it. They are here about the court,

And, as I think, they have already order 20
This night to play before him.

Pol. 'Tis most true ;
And he beseech'd me to entreat your Majesties

To hear and see the matter.

King. With all my heart ; and it doth much content me

To hear him so inclin'd. 25
Good gentlemen, give him a further edge,
And drive his purpose into these delights.

Ros. We shall, my lord.

[Exeunt Rosencrantz and Guildenstern.

King. Sweet Gertrude, leave us too ;
For we have closely sent for Hamlet hither,
That he, as 'twere by accident, may here 30
Affront Ophelia.

Her father and myself—lawful espials—
Will so bestow ourselves that, seeing un-
seen,

We may of their encounter frankly judge,
And gather by him, as he is behav'd, 35
If't be th' affliction of his love or no
That thus he suffers for.

Queen. I shall obey you ;

And for your part, Ophelia, I do wish
That your good beauties be the happy cause Of Hamlet's wildness ; so shall I hope your virtues 40

Will bring him to his wonted way again,
To both your honours.

Oph. Madam, I wish it may.

[Exit Queen.

Pol. Ophelia, walk you here.—Gracious,
so please you,
We will bestow ourselves.—Read on this book ;

That show of such an exercise may colour
Your loneliness.—We are oft to blame in
this :

'Tis too much prov'd, that with devotion's visage

And pious action we do sugar o'er
The devil himself.

King. [Aside] O, 'tis too true !

How smart a lash that speech doth give my conscience !

The harlot's cheek, beautied with plast'ring
art,

Is not more ugly to the thing that helps it
Than is my deed to my most painted word.
O heavy burden !

Pol. I hear him coming ; let's withdraw, my lord. [Exeunt King and Polonius.]

Enter HAMLET.

Ham. To be, or not to be—that is the question ;

Whether 'tis nobler in the mind to suffer
The slings and arrows of outrageous fortune,
Or to take arms against a sea of troubles,
And by opposing end them ? To die, to
sleep—

No more ; and by a sleep to say we end
The heart-ache and the thousand natural shocks

That flesh is heir to. 'Tis a consummation
Devoutly to be wish'd. To die, to sleep ;
To sleep, perchance to dream. Ay, there's the rub ;

For in that sleep of death what dreams may
come,

When we have shuffled off this mortal coil,
Must give us pause. There's the respect
That makes calamity of so long life ;
For who would bear the whips and scorns
of time,

Th' oppressor's wrong, the proud man's contumely,

The pangs of despis'd love, the law's delay,
The insolence of office, and the spurns
That patient merit of th' unworthy takes,
When he himself might his quietus make With a bare bodkin ? Who would these fardels bear,

To grunt and sweat under a weary life,
But that the dread of something after
death—

The undiscover'd country, from whose bourn

No traveller returns—puzzles the will,
And makes us rather bear those ills we have

Than fly to others that we know not of ?
Thus conscience does make cowards of us
all ;

And thus the native hue of resolution

Is sicklied o'er with the pale cast of
thought,

And enterprises of great pitch and moment,
With this regard, their currents turn awry
And lose the name of action.—Soft you
now !

The fair Ophelia.—Nymph, in thy orisons
Be all my sins rememb'ed.

Oph. Good my lord, 90
How does your honour for this many a day ?

Ham. I humbly thank you ; well, well,
well.

Oph. My lord, I have remembrances of
yours

That I have longed long to re-deliver.

I pray you now receive them.

Ham. No, not I ; 95
I never gave you aught.

Oph. My honour'd lord, you know right well you did,

And with them words of so sweet breath
compos'd

As made the things more rich ; their perfume lost,

Take these again ; for to the noble mind
Rich gifts wax poor when givers prove unkind.

There, my lord.

Ham. Ha, ha ! Are you honest ?

Oph. My lord ?

Ham. Are you fair ? 105

Oph. What means your lordship ?

Ham. That if you be honest and fair, your honesty should admit no discourse to your beauty.

Oph. Could beauty, my lord, have better commerce than with honesty ? 110

Ham. Ay, truly ; for the power of beauty will sooner transform honesty from what it is to a bawd than the force of honesty can translate beauty into his likeness. This was sometime a paradox, but now the time gives it proof. I did love you once. 115

Oph. Indeed, my lord, you made me believe so.

Ham. You should not have believ'd me ;
for virtue cannot so inoculate our old stock
but we shall relish of it. I loved you not.

Oph. I was the more deceived. 120

Ham. Get thee to a nunnery. Why wouldst thou be a breeder of sinners ? I am myself indifferent honest, but yet I could accuse me of such things that it were better my mother had not borne me : I am very proud, revengeful, ambitious ; with more offences at my beck than I have thoughts to put them in, imagination to give them shape, or time to act them in. What should such fellows as I do crawling between earth and heaven ? We are arrant knaves, all ; believe none of us. Go thy ways to a nunnery. Where's your father ? 130

Oph. At home, my lord.

Ham. Let the doors be shut upon him, that he may play the fool nowhere but in's own house. Farewell.

Oph. O, help him, you sweet heavens ! 134

Ham. If thou dost marry, I'll give thee this plague for thy dowry : be thou as chaste as ice, as pure as snow, thou shalt not escape calumny. Get thee to a nunnery, go, farewell. Or, if thou wilt needs marry, marry a fool ; for wise men know well enough what monsters you make of them. To a nunnery, go ; and quickly too. Farewell. 140

Oph. O heavenly powers, restore him !

Ham. I have heard of your paintings too, well enough ; God hath given you one face, and you make yourselves another. You jig and amble, and you lisp, and nickname God's creatures, and make your wantonness your ignorance. Go to, I'll no more on't ; it hath made me mad. I say we will have no moe marriage : those that are married already, all but one, shall live ; the rest shall keep as they are. To a nunnery, go. [Exit. 150

Oph. O, what a noble mind is here o'er-thrown ! 150

The courtier's, soldier's, scholar's, eye, tongue, sword ;

Th' expectancy and rose of the fair state,
The glass of fashion and the mould of form,

Th' observ'd of all observers—quite, quite down ! 154

And I, of ladies most deject and wretched,
That suck'd the honey of his music vows,
Now see that noble and most sovereign reason,

Like sweet bells jangled, out of time and harsh ;

That unmatch'd form and feature of blown youth

Blasted with ecstasy. O, woe is me 160
T' have seen what I have seen, see what I see !

Re-enter KING and POLONIUS.

King. Love ! His affections do not that way tend ;

Nor what he spake, though it lack'd form a little,

Was not like madness. There's something in his soul 164

O'er which his melancholy sits on brood ;
And I do doubt the hatch and the disclose
Will be some danger ; which to prevent
I have in quick determination

Thus set it down : he shall with speed to England 169

For the demand of our neglected tribute.
Haply the seas and countries different,
With variable objects, shall expel
This something-settled matter in his heart Whereon his brains still beating puts him thus

From fashion of himself. What think you on't ? 175

Pol. It shall do well. But yet do I believe
The origin and commencement of his grief Sprung from neglected love. How now,
Ophelia !

You need not tell us what Lord Hamlet said ;

We heard it all. My lord, do as you please ;
But if you hold it fit, after the play 181

Let his queen mother all alone entreat him
To show his grief. Let her be round with him ;

And I'll be plac'd, so please you, in the ear
Of all their conference. If she find him not,
To England send him ; or confine him where 186

Your wisdom best shall think.

King. It shall be so.
Madness in great ones must not unwatch'd go. [Exeunt. 186

SCENE II. Elsinore. The Castle.

Enter HAMLET and three of the Players.

Ham. Speak the speech, I pray you, as I pronounc'd it to you, trippingly on the tongue ; but if you mouth it, as many of our players do, I had as lief the town-crier spoke my lines. Nor do not saw the air too much with your hand, thus, but use all gently ; for in the very torrent, tempest, and, as I may say, whirlwind of your passion, you must acquire and beget a temperance that may give it smoothness. O, it offends me to the soul to hear a robustious periwig-pated fellow tear a passion to tatters, to very rags, to split the ears of the groundlings, who, for the most part, are capable of nothing but inexplicable dumb shows and noise. I would have such a fellow whipp'd for o'erdoing Termagant ; it out-herods Herod. Pray you avoid it. 14
1 Play. I warrant your honour.

Ham. Be not too tame neither, but let your own discretion be your tutor. Suit the action to the word, the word to the action ; with this special observance, that you o'erstep not the modesty of nature ; for anything so o'erdone is from the purpose of playing, whose end, both at the first and now, was and is to hold, as 'twere, the mirror up to nature ; to show virtue her own feature, scorn her own image, and the very age and body of the time his form and pressure. Now, this overdone or come tardy off, though it makes the unskilful laugh, cannot but make the judicious grieve ; the censure of the which one must, in your allowance, o'erweigh a whole theatre of others. O, there be players that I have seen play—and heard others praise, and that highly—not to speak it profanely, that, neither having th' accent of Christians, nor the gait of Christian, pagan, nor man, have so strutted and bellowed that I have thought some of Nature's journeymen had made men, and not made them well, they imitated humanity so abominably. 34

1 Play. I hope we have reform'd that indifferently with us, sir.

Ham. O, reform it altogether. And let those that play your clowns speak no more than is set down for them; for there be of them that will themselves laugh, to set on some quantity of barren spectators to laugh too, though in the meantime some necessary question of the play be then to be considered. That's villainous, and shows a most pitiful ambition in the fool that uses it. Go, make you ready. [Exeunt Players.]

Enter POLONIUS, ROSENCRANTZ, and GUILDENSTERN.

How now, my lord! Will the King hear this piece of work? 45

Pol. And the Queen too, and that presently.

Ham. Bid the players make haste.

[Exit Polonius.]

Will you two help to hasten them?

Ros. Ay, my lord. [Exeunt they two.]

Ham. What, ho, Horatio! 50

Enter HORATIO.

Hor. Here, sweet lord, at your service.

Ham. Horatio, thou art e'en as just a man

As e'er my conversation cop'd withal.

Hor. O my dear lord!

Ham. Nay, do not think I flatter; For what advancement may I hope from thee, 55

That no revenue hast but thy good spirits To feed and clothe thee? Why should the poor be flatter'd?

No, let the candied tongue lick absurd pomp,

And crook the pregnant hinges of the knee Where thrift may follow fawning. Dost thou hear? 60

Since my dear soul was mistress of her choice

And could of men distinguish her election, Sh'hath seal'd thee for herself; for thou hast been

As one, in suff'ring all, that suffers nothing; A man that Fortune's buffets and rewards 65 Hast ta'en with equal thanks; and blest are those Whose blood and judgment are so well comeddled

That they are not a pipe for Fortune's finger To sound what stop she please. Give me that man

That is not passion's slave, and I will wear him 70

In my heart's core, ay, in my heart of heart,

As I do thee. Something too much of this. There is a play to-night before the King; One scene of it comes near the circumstance Which I have told thee of my father's death. I prithee, when thou seest that act afoot, Even with the very comment of thy soul Observe my uncle. If his occulted guilt Do not itself unkennel in one speech, It is a damned ghost that we have seen, 80 And my imaginations are as foul As Vulcan's stithy. Give him heedful note; For I mine eyes will rivet to his face; And, after, we will both our judgments join In censure of his seeming.

Hor. Well, my lord. 85 If 'a steal aught the whilst this play is playing,

And scape detecting, I will pay the theft.

Enter trumpets and kettledrums. Danish march. Sound a flourish. Enter KING, QUEEN, POLONIUS, OPHELIA, ROSENCRANTZ, GUILDENSTERN, and other Lords attendant, with the Guard carrying torches.

Ham. They are coming to the play; I must be idle.

Get you a place.

King. How fares our cousin Hamlet? 90

Ham. Excellent, i' faith; of the chameleon's dish. I eat the air, promise-cramm'd; you cannot feed capons so.

King. I have nothing with this answer, Hamlet; these words are not mine. 94

Ham. No, nor mine now. [To Polonius] My lord, you play'd once i' th' university, you say?

Pol. That did I, my lord, and was accounted a good actor.

Ham. What did you enact? 99

Pol. I did enact Julius Cæsar; I was kill'd i' th' Capitol; Brutus kill'd me.

Ham. It was a brute part of him to kill so capital a calf there. Be the players ready?

Ros. Ay, my lord; they stay upon your patience.

Queen. Come hither, my dear Hamlet, sit by me. 105

Ham. No, good mother; here's metal more attractive.

Pol. [To the King] O, ho! do you mark that?

Ham. Lady, shall I lie in your lap?

[Lying down at Ophelia's feet.]

Oph. No, my lord. 109

Ham. I mean, my head upon your lap?

Oph. Ay, my lord.

Ham. Do you think I meant country matters?

Oph. I think nothing, my lord.

Ham. That's a fair thought to lie between maids' legs.

Oph. What is, my lord? 115

Ham. Nothing.

Oph. You are merry, my lord.

Ham. Who, I ?

Oph. Ay, my lord.

Ham. O God, your only jig-maker ! What should a man do but be merry ? For look you how cheerfully my mother looks, and my father died within's two hours.

Oph. Nay, 'tis twice two months, my lord.

Ham. So long ? Nay then, let the devil wear black, for I'll have a suit of sables. O heavens ! die two months ago, and not forgotten yet ? Then there's hope a great man's memory may outlive his life half a year ; but, by'r lady, 'a must build churches, then ; or else shall 'a suffer not thinking on, with the hobby-horse, whose epitaph is ' For O, for O, the hobby-horse is forgot ! '

The trumpet sounds. Hautboys play. The Dumb Show enters.

Enter a King and a Queen, very lovingly ; the Queen embracing him and he her. She kneels, and makes show of protestation unto him. He takes her up, and declines his head upon her neck. He lies him down upon a bank of flowers ; she, seeing him asleep, leaves him. Anon comes in a Fellow, takes off his crown, kisses it, pours poison in the sleeper's ears, and leaves him. The Queen returns ; finds the King dead, and makes passionate action. The Poisoner, with some two or three Mutes, comes in again, seeming to condole with her. The dead body is carried away. The Poisoner woos the Queen with gifts : she seems harsh awhile, but in the end accepts his love. [Exeunt.

Oph. What means this, my lord ?

Ham. Marry, this is miching mallecho ; it means mischief.

Oph. Belike this show imports the argument of the play.

Enter Prologue.

Ham. We shall know by this fellow : the players cannot keep counsel ; they'll tell all.

Oph. Will 'a tell us what this show meant ?

Ham. Ay, or any show that you will show him. Be not you asham'd to show, he'll not shame to tell you what it means.

Oph. You are naught, you are naught. I'll mark the play.

Pro. For us, and for our tragedy,

Here stooping to your clemency,

We beg your hearing patiently. [Exit.

Ham. Is this a prologue, or the posy of a ring ?

Oph. 'Tis brief, my lord.

Ham. As woman's love.

Enter the Player King and Queen.

P. King. Full thirty times hath Phæbus' cart gone round
Neptune's salt wash and Tellus' orb'd ground,

And thirty dozen moons with borrowed sheen
About the world have times twelve thirties been,

Since love our hearts and Hymen did our hands

Unite comutual in most sacred bands.

P. Queen. So many journeys may the sun and moon

Make us again count o'er ere love be done !
But, woe is me, you are so sick of late,

So far from cheer and from your former state,
That I distrust you. Yet, though I distrust, Discomfort you, my lord, it nothing must ;
For women fear too much even as they love,
And women's fear and love hold quantity,
In neither aught, or in extremity.

Now, what my love is, proof hath made you know ;

And as my love is siz'd, my fear is so.
Where love is great, the littlest doubts are fear ;
Where little fears grow great, great love grows there.

P. King. Faith, I must leave thee, love, and shortly too :

My operant powers their functions leave to do ;
And thou shalt live in this fair world behind,
Honour'd, below'd ; and haply one as kind
For husband shalt thou—

P. Queen. O, confound the rest !
Such love must needs be treason in my breast.

In second husband let me be accurst !
None wed the second but who kill'd the first.

Ham. That's wormwood, wormwood.

P. Queen. The instances that second marriage move

Are base respects of thrift, but none of love.
A second time I kill my husband dead,

When second husband kisses me in bed.

P. King. I do believe you think what now you speak ;

But what we do determine oft we break.
Purpose is but the slave to memory,

Of violent birth, but poor validity ;
Which now, the fruit unripe, sticks on the tree ;

But fall unshaken when they mellow be.
Most necessary 'tis that we forget

To pay ourselves what to ourselves is debt.
What to ourselves in passion we propose,

The passion ending, doth the purpose lose.
The violence of either grief or joy

Their own enactions with themselves destroy.
Where joy most revels grief doth most lament ;
Grief joys, joy grieves, on slender accident.

This world is not for aye ; nor 'tis not strange That even our loves should with our fortunes

change ;

For 'tis a question left us yet to prove,

Whether love lead fortune or else fortune love.
The great man down, you mark his favourite flies ; 199

The poor advanc'd makes friends of enemies.
And hitherto doth love on fortune tend ;
For who not needs shall never lack a friend,
And who in want a hollow friend doth try,
Directly seasons him his enemy.

But, orderly to end where I begun, 205
Our wills and fates do so contrary run
That our devices still are overthrown ;
Our thoughts are ours, their ends none of our own.

So think thou wilt no second husband wed ;
But die thy thoughts when thy first lord is
dead. 210

P. Queen. Nor earth to me give food, nor heaven light,
Sport and repose lock from me day and
night,

To desperation turn my trust and hope,
An anchor's cheer in prison be my scope,
Each opposite that blanks the face of joy 215
Meet what I would have well, and it destroy,
Both here and hence pursue me lasting strife,
If, once a widow, ever I be wife !

Ham. If she should break it now !

P. King. 'Tis deeply sworn. Sweet, leave me here awhile ; 220
My spirits grow dull, and fain I would beguile

The tedious day with sleep. [Sleeps.

P. Queen. Sleep rock thy brain,
And never come mischance between us twain !
[Exit.

Ham. Madam, how like you this play ?

Queen. The lady doth protest too much,
methinks. 225

Ham. O, but she'll keep her word.

King. Have you heard the argument? Is there no offence in't ?

Ham. No, no ; they do but jest, poison in jest ; no offence i' th' world. 230

King. What do you call the play ?

Ham. 'The Mouse-trap.' Marry, how ?
Tropically. This play is the image of a murder done in Vienna : Gonzago is the duke's name ; his wife, Baptista. You shall see anon. 'Tis a knavish piece of work ; but what of that ? Your Majesty, and we that have free souls, it touches us not. Let the galled jade wince, our withers are unwrung.

Enter LUCIANUS.

This is one Lucianus, nephew to the King.
Oph. You are as good as a chorus, my lord. 239

Ham. I could interpret between you and your love, if I could see the puppets dallying.

Oph. You are keen, my lord, you are keen.

Ham. It would cost you a groaning to take off mine edge.

Oph. Still better, and worse. 245

Ham. So you mis-take your husbands.—
Begin, murderer ; pox, leave thy damnable faces and begin. Come ; the croaking raven doth bellow for revenge.

Luc. Thoughts black, hands apt, drugs fit, and time agreeing ; 249

Confederate season, else no creature seeing ;
Thou mixture rank, of midnight weeds collected,

With Hecat's ban thrice blasted, thrice
infected,

Thy natural magic and dire property
On wholesome life usurps immediately. 254 [Pours the poison in his ears.

Ham. 'A poisons him i' th' garden for his estate. His name's Gonzago. The story is extant, and written in very choice Italian.
You shall see anon how the murderer gets the love of Gonzago's wife.

Oph. The King rises.

Ham. What, frightened with false fire ! 260

Queen. How fares my lord ?

Pol. Give o'er the play.

King. Give me some light. Away !

Pol. Lights, lights, lights !

[Exeunt all but Hamlet and Horatio.

Ham. Why, let the stricken deer go weep, 265

The hart ungalled play ;

For some must watch, while some must sleep ;

Thus runs the world away. 268

Would not this, sir, and a forest of feathers
—if the rest of my fortunes turn Turk with me—with two Provincial roses on my raz'd shoes, get me a fellowship in a cry of players,
sir ?

Hor. Half a share.

Ham. A whole one, I. 274

For thou dost know, O Damon dear,
This realm dismantled was

Of Jove himself ; and now reigns
here

A very, very—paiock.

Hor. You might have rhym'd.

Ham. O good Horatio, I'll take the ghost's word for a thousand pound. Didst perceive ? 281

Hor. Very well, my lord.

Ham. Upon the talk of the poisoning.

Hor. I did very well note him.

Ham. Ah, ha ! Come, some music. Come,
the recorders. 286

For if the King like not the comedy,

Why, then, belike he likes it not, perdy.
Come, some music.

Re-enter ROSENCRANTZ and GUILDENSTERN.

Guil. Good my lord, vouchsafe me a word with you. 290

Ham. Sir, a whole history.

Guil. The King, sir—

Ham. Ay, sir, what of him ?

Guil. Is, in his retirement, marvellous distemp'ed.

Ham. With drink, sir? 295

Guil. No, my lord, rather with choler.

Ham. Your wisdom should show itself more richer to signify this to his doctor; for for me to put him to his purgation would perhaps plunge him into far more choler.

Guil. Good my lord, put your discourse into some frame, and start not so wildly from my affair. 301

Ham. I am tame, sir. Pronounce.

Guil. The Queen, your mother, in most great affliction of spirit, hath sent me to you.

Ham. You are welcome. 305

Guil. Nay, good my lord, this courtesy is not of the right breed. If it shall please you to make me a wholesome answer, I will do your mother's commandment; if not, your pardon and my return shall be the end of my business. 310

Ham. Sir, I cannot.

Ros. What, my lord?

Ham. Make you a wholesome answer; my wit's diseas'd. But, sir, such answer as I can make, you shall command; or rather, as you say, my mother. Therefore no more, but to the matter: my mother, you say— 316

Ros. Then thus she says: your behaviour hath struck her into amazement and admiration.

Ham. O wonderful son, that can so stonish a mother! But is there no sequel at the heels of this mother's admiration? Impart. 321

Ros. She desires to speak with you in her closet ere you go to bed.

Ham. We shall obey, were she ten times our mother. Have you any further trade with us? 325

Ros. My lord, you once did love me.

Ham. And do still, by these pickers and stealers.

Ros. Good my lord, what is your cause of distemper? You do surely bar the door upon your own liberty, if you deny your griefs to your friend. 330

Ham. Sir, I lack advancement.

Ros. How can that be, when you have the voice of the King himself for your succession in Denmark? 333

Ham. Ay, sir, but 'While the grass grows'—the proverb is something musty.

Re-enter the Players, with recorders.

O, the recorders! Let me see one. To withdraw with you—why do you go about to recover the wind of me, as if you would drive me into a toil?

Guil. O my lord, if my duty be too bold, my love is too unmannerly. 340

Ham. I do not well understand that. Will you play upon this pipe?

Guil. My lord, I cannot.

Ham. I pray you.

Guil. Believe me, I cannot. 345

Ham. I do beseech you.

Guil. I know no touch of it, my lord.

Ham. It is as easy as lying: govern these ventages with your fingers and thumb, give it breath with your mouth, and it will discourse most eloquent music. Look you, these are the stops. 351

Guil. But these cannot I command to any utterance of harmony; I have not the skill. 353

Ham. Why, look you now, how unworthy a thing you make of me! You would play upon me; you would seem to know my stops; you would pluck out the heart of my mystery; you would sound me from my lowest note to the top of my compass; and there is much music, excellent voice, in this little organ, yet cannot you make it speak. 'Sblood, do you think I am easier to be play'd on than a pipe? Call me what instrument you will, though you can fret me, yet you cannot play upon me.

Re-enter POLONIUS.

God bless you, sir!

Pol. My lord, the Queen would speak with you, and presently. 365

Ham. Do you see yonder cloud that's almost in shape of a camel?

Pol. By th' mass, and 'tis like a camel indeed.

Ham. Methinks it is like a weasel.

Pol. It is back'd like a weasel. 370

Ham. Or like a whale?

Pol. Very like a whale.

Ham. Then I will come to my mother by and by. [Aside] They fool me to the top of my bent.—I will come by and by. 375

Pol. I will say so. [Exit Polonius.]

Ham. 'By and by' is easily said. Leave me, friends. [Exeunt all but Hamlet.]

'Tis now the very witching time of night, When churchyards yawn, and hell itself breathes out

Contagion to this world. Now could I drink hot blood, 380

And do such bitter business as the day Would quake to look on. Soft! now to my mother.

O heart, lose not thy nature; let not ever

The soul of Nero enter this firm bosom. Let me be cruel, not unnatural: 385

I will speak daggers to her, but use none. My tongue and soul in this be hypocrites—

How in my words somever she be shent, To give them seals never, my soul, consent! [Exit.]

SCENE III. Elsinore. The Castle.

Enter KING, ROSENCRANTZ, and GUILDENSTERN.

King. I like him not ; nor stands it safe with us
To let his madness range. Therefore prepare you ;
I your commission will forthwith dispatch,
And he to England shall along with you.
The terms of our estate may not endure
Hazard so near's as doth hourly grow
Out of his brows.

Guil. We will ourselves provide.
Most holy and religious fear it is To keep those many many bodies safe
That live and feed upon your Majesty. ¹⁰

Ros. The single and peculiar life is bound With all the strength and armour of the mind

To keep itself from noyance ; but much
more
That spirit upon whose weal depends and rests ¹⁴

The lives of many. The cease of majesty
Dies not alone, but like a gulf doth draw What's near it with it. It is a massy wheel,
Fix'd on the summit of the highest mount,
To whose huge spokes ten thousand lesser things

Are mortis'd and adjoin'd ; which when it falls, ²⁰

Each small annexment, petty consequence, Attends the boist'rous ruin. Never alone
Did the king sigh, but with a general groan.

King. Arm you, I pray you, to this speedy voyage ;

For we will fetters put about this fear, ²⁵
Which now goes too free-footed.

Ros. We will haste us.

[Exeunt Rosencrantz and Guildenstern.]

Enter POLONIUS.

Pol. My lord, he's going to his mother's closet.

Behind the arras I'll convey myself
To hear the process. I'll warrant she'll tax him home ;

And, as you said, and wisely was it said, ³⁰
'Tis meet that some more audience than a
mother,

Since nature makes them partial, should o'erhear

The speech, of vantage. Fare you well, my liege.

I'll call upon you ere you go to bed, ³⁴
And tell you what I know.

King. Thanks, dear my lord.

[Exit Polonius.]

O, my offence is rank, it smells to heaven ;
It hath the primal eldest curse upon't—

A brother's murder ! Pray can I not,
Though inclination be as sharp as will. ³⁹

My stronger guilt defeats my strong intent,
And, like a man to double business bound,
I stand in pause where I shall first begin,
And both neglect. What if this cursed hand Were thicker than itself with brother's
blood,

Is there not rain enough in the sweet heavens ⁴⁵

To wash it white as snow ? Whereto serves mercy

But to confront the visage of offence ?
And what's in prayer but this twofold
force,

To be forestalled ere we come to fall,
Or pardon'd being down ? Then I'll look up ; ⁵⁰

My fault is past. But, O, what form of prayer

Can serve my turn ? ' Forgive me my foul murder ' !

That cannot be ; since I am still possess'd
Of those effects for which I did the murder—

My crown, mine own ambition, and my queen. ⁵⁵

May one be pardon'd and retain th' offence?
In the corrupted currents of this world
Offence's gilded hand may shove by justice;
And oft 'tis seen the wicked prize itself

Buys out the law. But 'tis not so above ; ⁶⁰
There is no shuffling ; there the action lies
In his true nature ; and we ourselves com-

pell'd,

Even to the teeth and forehead of our faults,

To give in evidence. What then ? What rests ? ⁶⁴

Try what repentance can. What can it not ?
Yet what can it when one can not repent ?

O wretched state ! O bosom black as
death !

O limed soul, that, struggling to be free,
Art more engag'd ! Help, angels. Make assay:
Bow, stubborn knees ; and, heart, with strings of steel, ⁷⁰

Be soft as sinews of the new-born babe.
All may be well. [Retires and kneels.]

Enter HAMLET.

Ham. Now might I do it pat, now 'a is a-praying ;

And now I'll do't—and so 'a goes to
heaven,

And so am I reveng'd. That would be scann'd : ⁷⁵

A villain kills my father ; and for that,
I, his sole son, do this same villain send
To heaven.

Why, this is hire and salary, not revenge.
'A took my father grossly, full of bread, ⁸⁰

With all his crimes broad blown, as flush as May ;

And how his audit stands who knows save
heaven ?

But in our circumstance and course of
thought
'Tis heavy with him; and am I then reveng'd

To take him in the purging of his soul, ⁸⁵
When he is fit and season'd for his passage ?
No.

Up, sword, and know thou a more horrid
hent.

When he is drunk asleep, or in his rage ;
Or in th' incestuous pleasure of his bed ; ⁹⁰
At game, a-swearing, or about some act
That has no relish of salvation in't—
Then trip him, that his heels may kick at
heaven,

And that his soul may be as damn'd and black ⁹⁴

As hell, whereto it goes. My mother stays.
This physic but prolongs thy sickly days.

[Exit.

King. [Rising] My words fly up, my thoughts remain below.
Words without thoughts never to heaven
go. [Exit.

SCENE IV. The Queen's closet.

Enter QUEEN and POLONIUS.

Pol. 'A will come straight. Look you lay home to him ;
Tell him his pranks have been too broad to bear with,
And that your Grace hath screen'd and stood between Much heat and him. I'll silence me even here. ⁴
Pray you be round with him.

Ham. [Within] Mother, mother, mother !

Queen. I'll warrant you. Fear me not.
Withdraw, I hear him coming.

[Polonius goes behind the arras.

Enter HAMLET.

Ham. Now, mother, what's the matter ?

Queen. Hamlet, thou hast thy father much offended.

Ham. Mother, you have my father much offended. ¹⁰

Queen. Come, come, you answer with an idle tongue.

Ham. Go, go, you question with a wicked
tongue.

Queen. Why, how now, Hamlet !

Ham. What's the matter now ?

Queen. Have you forgot me ?

Ham. No, by the rood, not so :
You are the Queen, your husband's brother's wife ; ¹⁵
And—would it were not so !—you are my mother.

Queen. Nay then, I'll set those to you that can speak.

Ham. Come, come, and sit you down ;
you shall not budge.

You go not till I set you up a glass
Where you may see the inmost part of you.

Queen. What wilt thou do ? Thou wilt not murder me ?

Help, help, ho !

Pol. [Behind] What, ho! help, help, help!

Ham. [Draws] How now ! a rat ?

Dead, for a ducat, dead ! [Kills Polonius with a pass through the arras.

Pol. [Behind] O, I am slain !

Queen. O me, what hast thou done ?

Ham. Nay, I know not :

Is it the King ? ²⁶

Queen. O, what a rash and bloody deed is this !

Ham. A bloody deed !—almost as bad,
good mother,

As kill a king and marry with his brother.

Queen. As kill a king !

Ham. Ay, lady, it was my word. ³⁰ [Parting the arras.

Thou wretched, rash, intruding fool, fare-
well !

I took thee for thy better. Take thy fortune ;

Thou find'st to be too busy is some danger.
Leave wringing of your hands. Peace ; sit you down, ³⁴

And let me wring your heart ; for so I shall,
If it be made of penetrable stuff ;

If damned custom have not braz'd it so
That it be proof and bulwark against sense.

Queen. What have I done that thou dar'st wag thy tongue

In noise so rude against me ?

Ham. Such an act ⁴⁰

That blurs the grace and blush of modesty ;
Calls virtue hypocrite ; takes off the rose
From the fair forehead of an innocent love,
And sets a blister there ; makes marriage-vows

As false as dicers' oaths. O, such a deed ⁴⁵
As from the body of contraction plucks

The very soul, and sweet religion makes A rhapsody of words. Heaven's face does glow

O'er this solidity and compound mass ⁴⁹
With heated visage, as against the doom—

Is thought-sick at the act.

Queen. Ay me, what act,

That roars so loud and thunders in the index ?

Ham. Look here upon this picture and on
this,

The counterfeit presentment of two brothers. ⁵⁴

See what a grace was seated on this brow ;
Hyperion's curls ; the front of Jove
himself ;

An eye like Mars, to threaten and command ;
A station like the herald Mercury

New lighted on a heaven-kissing hill—
A combination and a form indeed ⁶⁰

Where every god did seem to set his seal,

To give the world assurance of a man.
This was your husband. Look you now what follows :

Here is your husband, like a mildew'd ear Blasting his wholesome brother. Have you
eyes ? 65

Could you on this fair mountain leave to feed,

And batten on this moor ? Ha ! have you
eyes ?

You cannot call it love ; for at your age
The heyday in the blood is tame, it's humble,

And waits upon the judgment ; and what
judgment 70

Would step from this to this ? Sense, sure, you have,

Else could you not have motion ; but sure that sense

Is apoplex'd ; for madness would not err,
Nor sense to ecstasy was ne'er so thrall'd
But it reserv'd some quantity of choice 75
To serve in such a difference. What devil
was't

That thus hath cozen'd you at hoodman-blind ?

Eyes without feeling, feeling without sight,
Ears without hands or eyes, smelling sans
all,

Or but a sickly part of one true sense 80 Could not so mope. O shame ! where is thy blush ?

Rebellious hell,
If thou canst mutine in a matron's bones,
To flaming youth let virtue be as wax
And melt in her own fire ; proclaim no
shame 85

When the compulsive ardour gives the charge,

Since frost itself as actively doth burn,
And reason panders will.

Queen. O Hamlet, speak no more !
Thou turn'st my eyes into my very soul ;
And there I see such black and grained spots 90

As will not leave their tinct.

Ham. Nay, but to live
In the rank sweat of an enseamed bed, Stew'd in corruption, honeying and making
love

Over the nasty sty !

Queen. O, speak to me no more !
These words like daggers enter in my ears ;
No more, sweet Hamlet.

Ham. A murderer and a villain !
A slave that is not twentieth part the tithe
Of your precedent lord ; a vice of kings ;
A cutpurse of the empire and the rule, 99
That from a shelf the precious diadem stole
And put it in his pocket !

Queen. No more !

Enter Ghost.

Ham. A king of shreds and patches—

Save me, and hover o'er me with your wings,

You heavenly guards ! What would your gracious figure ?

Queen. Alas, he's mad ! 105

Ham. Do you not come your tardy son to chide,

That, laps'd in time and passion, lets go by Th' important acting of your dread command ?

O, say !

Ghost. Do not forget ; this visitation 110
Is but to whet thy almost blunted purpose.

But look, amazement on thy mother sits.

O, step between her and her fighting soul !

Conceit in weakest bodies strongest works.

Speak to her, Hamlet. 115

Ham. How is it with you, lady ?

Queen. Alas, how is't with you,
That you do bend your eye on vacancy,
And with th' incorporal air do hold discourse ?

Forth at your eyes your spirits wildly peep ;
And, as the sleeping soldiers in th' alarm,
Your bedded hairs like life in excrements
Start up and stand an end. O gentle son,
Upon the heat and flame of thy distemper Sprinkle cool patience ! Whereon do you look ?

Ham. On him, on him ! Look you how pale he glares. 125

His form and cause conjoin'd, preaching to stones,

Would make them capable.—Do not look upon me,

Lest with this piteous action you convert
My stern effects ; then what I have to do Will want true colour—tears perchance for
blood. 130

Queen. To whom do you speak this ?

Ham. Do you see nothing there ?

Queen. Nothing at all ; yet all that is
I see.

Ham. Nor did you nothing hear ?

Queen. No, nothing but ourselves.

Ham. Why, look you there. Look how it steals away.

My father, in his habit as he liv'd ! 135 Look where he goes even now out at the portal. [Exit Ghost.]

Queen. This is the very coinage of your brain.

This bodiless creation ecstasy

Is very cunning in.

Ham. Ecstasy !

My pulse as yours doth temperately keep
time, 140

And makes as healthful music. It is not madness

That I have utt'ed. Bring me to the test,
And I the matter will re-word which
madness

Would gambol from. Mother, for love of grace,

Lay not that flattering unction to your soul, 145

That not your trespass but my madness speaks :

It will but skin and film the ulcerous place,
Whiles rank corruption, mining all within,
Infects unseen. Confess yourself to heaven ;
Repent what's past ; avoid what is to come ;
And do not spread the compost on the weeds, 151

To make them ranker. Forgive me this my virtue ;

For in the fatness of these pursy times
Virtue itself of vice must pardon beg,
Yea, curb and woo for leave to do him good.

Queen. O Hamlet, thou hast cleft my heart in twain. 156

Ham. O, throw away the worser part of it,

And live the purer with the other half.
Good night—but go not to my uncle's bed ;

Assume a virtue, if you have it not. 160

That monster custom, who all sense doth eat,

Of habits devil, is angel yet in this,
That to the use of actions fair and good
He likewise gives a frock or livery
That aptly is put on. Refrain to-night ; 165

And that shall lend a kind of easiness
To the next abstinence ; the next more easy ;

For use almost can change the stamp of nature,

And either curb the devil, or throw him out,

With wondrous potency. Once more, good night ; 170

And when you are desirous to be blest,
I'll blessing beg of you. For this same lord
I do repent ; but Heaven hath pleas'd it so,

To punish me with this, and this with me,
That I must be their scourge and minister.
I will bestow him, and will answer well
The death I gave him. So, again, good night.

I must be cruel only to be kind ;
Thus bad begins and worse remains behind.
One word more, good lady.

Queen. What shall I do ? 180

Ham. Not this, by no means, that I bid you do :

Let the bloat King tempt you again to bed ;
Pinch wanton on your cheek ; call you his mouse ;

And let him, for a pair of reechy kisses,
Or paddling in your neck with his damn'd fingers, 185

Make you to ravel all this matter out,
That I essentially am not in madness,
But mad in craft. 'Twere good you let him know ;

For who that's but a queen, fair, sober, wise,

Would from a paddock, from a bat, a gib,
Such dear concernings hide ? Who would do so ? 191

No, in despite of sense and secrecy,
Unpeg the basket on the house's top,
Let the birds fly, and, like the famous ape,
To try conclusions, in the basket creep 195
And break your own neck down.

Queen. Be thou assur'd, if words be made of breath

And breath of life, I have no life to breathe
What thou hast said to me.

Ham. I must to England ; you know that ?

Queen. Alack, 200
I had forgot. 'Tis so concluded on.

Ham. There's letters seal'd ; and my two school-fellows,

Whom I will trust as I will adders fang'd—
They bear the mandate ; they must sweep my way 204

And marshal me to knavery. Let it work ;
For 'tis the sport to have the engineer
Hoist with his own petar ; and't shall go hard

But I will delve one yard below their mines
And blow them at the moon. O, 'tis most sweet 209

When in one line two crafts directly meet.
This man shall set me packing.

I'll lug the guts into the neighbour room.
Mother, good night. Indeed, this counsellor

Is now most still, most secret, and most grave,

Who was in life a foolish prating knave. 215

Come, sir, to draw toward an end with you.

Good night, mother. [Exeunt severally ;

Hamlet tugging in Polonius.

ACT FOUR

SCENE I. Elsinore. The Castle.

Enter KING, QUEEN, ROSENCRANTZ, and GUILDENSTERN.

King. There's matter in these sighs, these profound heaves,
You must translate ; 'tis fit we understand them.

Where is your son ?

Queen. Bestow this place on us a little while.

[Exeunt Rosencrantz and Guildenstern.
Ah, mine own lord, what have I seen to-night ! 5

King. What, Gertrude ? How does Hamlet ?

Queen. Mad as the sea and wind, when both contend

Which is the mightier. In his lawless fit,
Behind the arras hearing something stir,
Whips out his rapier, cries 'A rat, a rat !'
And in this brainish apprehension kills 11

The unseen good old man.

King. O heavy deed !
It had been so with us had we been there.
His liberty is full of threats to all—
To you yourself, to us, to every one. 15
Alas, how shall this bloody deed be answer'd ?

It will be laid to us, whose providence
Should have kept short, restrain'd, and out of haunt,

This mad young man. But so much was our
love,

We would not understand what was most fit ; 20

But, like the owner of a foul disease,
To keep it from divulging, let it feed
Even on the pith of life. Where is he gone ?

Queen. To draw apart the body he hath kill'd ; 24

O'er whom his very madness, like some ore
Among a mineral of metals base, Shows itself pure : 'a weeps for what is done.

King. O Gertrude, come away !
The sun no sooner shall the mountains
touch

But we will ship him hence ; and this vile deed 30

We must with all our majesty and skill
Both countenance and excuse. Ho,
Guildenstern !

Re-enter ROSENCRANTZ and GUILDENSTERN.

Friends, both go join you with some further aid :

Hamlet in madness hath Polonius slain,
And from his mother's closet hath he dragg'd him ; 35

Go seek him out ; speak fair, and bring the
body

Into the chapel. I pray you haste in this.
[Exeunt Rosencrantz and Guildenstern.

Come, Gertrude, we'll call up our wisest
friends

And let them know both what we mean to do

And what's untimely done ; so haply
slander— 40

Whose whisper o'er the world's diameter,
As level as the cannon to his blank,

Transports his pois'ned shot—may miss our
name,

And hit the woundless air. O, come away !
My soul is full of discord and dismay. 45

[Exeunt.]

SCENE II. Elsinore. The Castle.

Enter HAMLET.

Ham. Safely stow'd.

Gentlemen. [Within] Hamlet ! Lord Hamlet !

Ham. But soft ! What noise ? Who calls on Hamlet ? O, here they come !

Enter ROSENCRANTZ and GUILDENSTERN.

Ros. What have you done, my lord, with the dead body ? 5

Ham. Compounded it with dust, whereto
'tis kin.

Ros. Tell us where 'tis, that we may take it thence

And bear it to the chapel.

Ham. Do not believe it.

Ros. Believe what ? 10

Ham. That I can keep your counsel, and not mine own. Besides, to be demanded of a sponge—what replication should be made by the son of a king ? 13

Ros. Take you me for a sponge, my lord ?

Ham. Ay, sir ; that soaks up the King's countenance, his rewards, his authorities.
But such officers do the King best service in the end : he keeps them, like an ape an apple in the corner of his jaw ; first mouth'd, to be last swallowed ; when he needs what you have glean'd, it is but squeezing you and, sponge, you shall be dry again. 20

Ros. I understand you not, my lord.

Ham. I am glad of it ; a knavish speech sleeps in a foolish ear.

Ros. My lord, you must tell us where the body is, and go with us to the King. 25

Ham. The body is with the King, but the King is not with the body. The King is a thing—

Guil. A thing, my lord !

Ham. Of nothing. Bring me to him.
Hide fox, and all after. [Exeunt. 30

SCENE III. Elsinore. The Castle.

Enter KING, attended.

King. I have sent to seek him, and to find the body.

How dangerous is it that this man goes loose !

Yet must not we put the strong law on
him :

He's lov'd of the distracted multitude,
Who like not in their judgment but their
eyes ; 5

And where 'tis so, th' offender's scourge is
weigh'd,

But never the offence. To bear all smooth and even,

This sudden sending him away must seem Deliberate pause. Diseases desperate grown

By desperate appliance are reliev'd, 10
Or not at all.

Enter ROSENCRANTZ.

How now ! what hath befall'n ?

Ros. Where the dead body is bestow'd,
my lord,

We cannot get from him.

King.

But where is he ?

Ros. Without, my lord; guarded, to know your pleasure.

King. Bring him before us. 15

Ros. Ho, Guildenstern! bring in the lord.

Enter HAMLET and GUILDENSTERN.

King. Now, Hamlet, where's Polonius?

Ham. At supper.

King. At supper! Where? 19

Ham. Not where he eats, but where 'a is eaten; a certain convocation of politic worms are e'en at him. Your worm is your only emperor for diet: we fat all creatures else to fat us, and we fat ourselves for maggots; your fat king and your lean beggar is but variable service—two dishes, but to one table. That's the end. 25

King. Alas, alas!

Ham. A man may fish with the worm that hath eat of a king, and eat of the fish that hath fed of that worm.

King. What dost thou mean by this?

Ham. Nothing but to show you how a king may go a progress through the guts of a beggar. 31

King. Where is Polonius?

Ham. In heaven; send thither to see; if your messenger find him not there, seek him i' th' other place yourself. But if, indeed, you find him not within this month, you shall nose him as you go up the stairs into the lobby. 37

King [To Attendants] Go seek him there.

Ham. 'A will stay till you come.

[Exeunt Attendants.]

King. Hamlet, this deed, for thine especial safety— 40

Which we do tender, as we dearly grieve For that which thou hast done—must send thee hence

With fiery quickness. Therefore prepare thyself;

The bark is ready, and the wind at help, 44 Th' associates tend, and everything is bent For England.

Ham. For England!

King. Ay, Hamlet.

Ham. Good!

King. So is it, if thou knew'st our purposes.

Ham. I see a cherub that sees them. But, come; for England! Farewell, dear mother.

King. Thy loving father, Hamlet. 50

Ham. My mother: father and mother is man and wife; man and wife is one flesh; and so, my mother. Come, for England. [Exit.]

King. Follow him at foot; tempt him with speed aboard; 54

Delay it not; I'll have him hence to-night. Away! for everything is seal'd and done That else leans on th' affair. Pray you make haste.

[Exeunt all but the King.]

And, England, if my love thou hold'st at aught—

As my great power thereof may give thee sense,

Since yet thy cicatrice looks raw and red 60 After the Danish sword, and thy free awe Pays homage to us—thou mayst not coldly set

Our sovereign process; which imports at full,

By letters congruing to that effect, The present death of Hamlet. Do it, England: 65

For like the hectic in my blood he rages, And thou must cure me. Till I know 'tis done,

Howe'er my haps, my joys were ne'er begun. [Exit.]

SCENE IV. A plain in Denmark.

Enter FORTINBRAS with his Army over the stage.

Fort. Go, Captain, from me greet the Danish king.

Tell him that by his licence Fortinbras Craves the conveyance of a promis'd march Over his kingdom. You know the rendezvous.

If that his Majesty would aught with us, 5 We shall express our duty in his eye;

And let him know so.

Cap. I will do't, my lord.

Fort. Go softly on.

[Exeunt all but the Captain.]

Enter HAMLET, ROSENCRANTZ, GUILDENSTERN, and Others.

Ham. Good sir, whose powers are these?

Cap. They are of Norway, sir. 10

Ham. How purpos'd, sir, I pray you?

Cap. Against some part of Poland.

Ham. Who commands them, sir?

Cap. The nephew to old Norway, Fortinbras.

Ham. Goes it against the main of Poland sir, 15

Or for some frontier?

Cap. Truly to speak, and with no addition,

We go to gain a little patch of ground That hath in it no profit but the name.

To pay five ducats, five, I would not farm it; 20

Nor will it yield to Norway or the Pole A ranker rate should it be sold in fee.

Ham. Why, then the Polack never will defend it.

Cap. Yes, it is already garrison'd.

Ham. Two thousand souls and twenty thousand ducats 25

Will not debate the question of this straw. This is th' imposthume of much wealth and peace,

That inward breaks, and shows no cause without Why the man dies. I humbly thank you, sir. 28
Cap. God buy you, sir. [Exit.
Ros. Will't please you go, my lord?
Ham. I'll be with you straight. Go a little before. [Exeunt all but Hamlet.
 How all occasions do inform against me,
 And spur my dull revenge! What is a man,
 If his chief good and market of his time
 Be but to sleep and feed? A beast, no more! 35
 Sure he that made us with such large discourse, Looking before and after, gave us not
 That capability and godlike reason To fust in us unus'd. Now, whether it be Bestial oblivion, or some craven scruple 40
 Of thinking too precisely on th' event—
 A thought which, quarter'd, hath but one part wisdom
 And ever three parts coward—I do not know
 Why yet I live to say 'This thing's to do', Sith I have cause, and will, and strength, and means, 45
 To do't. Examples gross as earth exhort me:
 Witness this army, of such mass and charge,
 Led by a delicate and tender prince,
 Whose spirit, with divine ambition puff'd,
 Makes mouths at the invisible event, 50
 Exposing what is mortal and unsure
 To all that fortune, death, and danger, dare, Even for an egg-shell. Rightly to be great
 Is not to stir without great argument,
 But greatly to find quarrel in a straw, 55
 When honour's at the stake. How stand I, then,
 That have a father kill'd, a mother stain'd,
 Excitements of my reason and my blood,
 And let all sleep, while to my shame I see
 The imminent death of twenty thousand men 60
 That, for a fantasy and trick of fame,
 Go to their graves like beds, fight for a plot
 Whereon the numbers cannot try the cause,
 Which is not tomb enough and continent
 To hide the slain? O, from this time forth,
 My thoughts be bloody, or be nothing worth! [Exit.

SCENE V. Elsinore. The Castle.

Enter QUEEN, HORATIO, and a Gentleman.

Queen. I will not speak with her.
Gent. She is importunate, indeed distract.
 Her mood will needs be pitied.
Queen. What would she have?
Gent. She speaks much of her father;
 says she hears
 There's tricks i' th' world, and hems, and beats her heart; 5

Spurns enviously at straws; speaks things
 in doubt,
 That carry but half sense. Her speech is nothing,
 Yet the unshaped use of it doth move
 The hearers to collection; they yawn
 at it,
 And botch the words up fit to their own
 thoughts; 10
 Which, as her winks and nods and gestures yield them,
 Indeed would make one think there might be thought,
 Though nothing sure, yet much unhappily.
Hor. 'Twere good she were spoken with;
 for she may strew
 Dangerous conjectures in ill-breeding minds. 15
Queen. Let her come in. [Exit Gentleman.
 [Aside] To my sick soul, as sin's true nature
 is,
 Each toy seems prologue to some great amiss.
 So full of artless jealousy is guilt,
 It spills itself in fearing to be spilt. 20
 Enter OPHELIA distracted.
Oph. Where is the beauteous Majesty of Denmark?
Queen. How now, Ophelia!
Oph. [Sings]
 How should I your true love know
 From another one?
 By his cockle hat and staff, 25
 And his sandal shoon.
Queen. Alas, sweet lady, what imports this song?
Oph. Say you? Nay, pray you mark.
 [Sings] He is dead and gone, lady,
 He is dead and gone; 30
 At his head a grass-green turf,
 At his heels a stone.
 O, ho!
Queen. Nay, but, Ophelia—Oph. Pray you mark.
 [Sings] White his shroud as the mountain snow—
 Enter KING.
Queen. Alas, look here, my lord. 35
Oph. Larded with sweet flowers;
 Which bewept to the grave did not go
 With true-love showers.
King. How do you, pretty lady? 39 Oph. Well, God dild you! They say the owl was a baker's daughter. Lord, we know what we are, but know not what we may be. God be at your table!
King. Conceit upon her father.
Oph. Pray let's have no words of this;
 but when they ask you what it means, say you this: 45

[Sings] To-morrow is Saint Valentine's day,
All in the morning betime,
And I a maid at your window,
To be your Valentine.

Then up he rose, and donn'd his clothes, ⁵⁰
And dupp'd the chamber-door;
Let in the maid, that out a maid
Never departed more.

King. Pretty Ophelia!

Oph. Indeed, la, without an oath, I'll make an end on't. ⁵⁵

[Sings] By Gis and by Saint Charity,
Alack, and fie for shame!
Young men will do't, if they come
to't;
By Cock, they are to blame.
Quoth she 'Before you tumbled me, ⁶⁰
You promis'd me to wed'.

He answers:

'So would I 'a done, by yonder
sun,
An thou hadst not come to my bed'.

King. How long hath she been thus? ⁶⁵

Oph. I hope all will be well. We must be patient; but I cannot choose but weep to think they would lay him i' th' cold ground.
My brother shall know of it; and so I thank you for your good counsel. Come, my coach! Good night, ladies; good night, sweet ladies, good night, good night. [Exit.

King. Follow her close; give her good watch, I pray you.

[Exeunt Horatio and Gentleman.

O, this is the poison of deep grief; it springs
All from her father's death. And now behold—

O Gertrude, Gertrude!

When sorrows come, they come not single spies, ⁷⁵

But in battalions! First, her father slain;
Next, your son gone, and he most violent author

Of his own just remove; the people
muddied,

Thick and unwholesome in their thoughts and whispers

For good Polonius' death; and we have done but greenly ⁸⁰

In hugger-mugger to inter him; poor
Ophelia

Divided from herself and her fair judgment,

Without the which we are pictures, or mere beasts;

Last, and as much containing as all these,
Her brother is in secret come from France; Feeds on his wonder, keeps himself in clouds, ⁸⁶

And wants not buzzers to infect his ear

1060

With pestilent speeches of his father's
death;

Wherein necessity, of matter beggar'd,
Will nothing stick our person to arraign ⁹⁰
In ear and ear. O my dear Gertrude, this,
Like to a murd'ring piece, in many places
Gives me superfluous death. [A noise within.

Queen. Alack, what noise is this?

King. Attend!—

Enter a Gentleman.

Where are my Switzers? Let them guard the door.

What is the matter?

Gent. Save yourself, my lord: ⁹⁵
The ocean, overpeering of his list, Eats not the flats with more impitious
haste

Than young Laertes, in a riotous head, O'erbears your officers. The rabble call him lord; ⁹⁹

And, as the world were now but to begin,
Antiquity forgot, custom not known,
The ratifiers and props of every word,
They cry 'Choose we; Laertes shall be
king'.

Caps, hands, and tongues, applaud it to the clouds,

'Laertes shall be king, Laertes king'. ¹⁰⁵

Queen. How cheerfully on the false trail they cry! [Noise within.

O, this is counter, you false Danish dogs!
King. The doors are broke.

Enter LAERTES, with Others, in arms.

Laer. Where is this king?—Sirs, stand you all without.

All. No, let's come in.

Laer. I pray you give me leave.

All. We will, we will. [Exeunt. ¹¹¹

Laer. I thank you. Keep the door.—O thou vile king,

Give me my father!

Queen. Calmly, good Laertes.

Laer. That drop of blood that's calm proclaims me bastard;

Cries cuckold to my father; brands the harlot ¹¹⁵

Even here, between the chaste unsmirched
brow

Of my true mother.

King. What is the cause, Laertes,
That thy rebellion looks so giant-like?

Let him go, Gertrude; do not fear our
person:

There's such divinity doth hedge a king ¹²⁰
That treason can but peep to what it would,

Acts little of his will. Tell me, Laertes,
Why thou art thus incens'd. Let him go,
Gertrude.

Speak, man.

Laer. Where is my father?

King. Dead.

Queen. But not by him.
King. Let him demand his fill. 126
Laer. How came he dead? I'll not be juggled with.
 To hell, allegiance! Vows, to the blackest devil!
 Conscience and grace, to the profoundest pit!
 I dare damnation. To this point I stand, 130
 That both the worlds I give to negligence,
 Let come what comes; only I'll be reveng'd
 Most thoroughly for my father.
King. Who shall stay you?
Laer. My will, not all the world's.
 And for my means, I'll husband them so well 135
 They shall go far with little.
King. Good Laertes,
 If you desire to know the certainty
 Of your dear father, is't writ in your revenge
 That, swoopstake, you will draw both friend and foe,
 Winner and loser?
Laer. None but his enemies.
King. Will you know them, then? 141
Laer. To his good friends thus wide I'll ope my arms
 And, like the kind life-rend'ring pelican,
 Repast them with my blood.
King. Why, now you speak
 Like a good child and a true gentleman. 145
 That I am guiltless of your father's death,
 And am most sensibly in grief for it,
 It shall as level to your judgment 'pear
 As day does to your eye.
 [A noise within: 'Let her come in.'
Laer. How now! What noise is that?
 Re-enter OPHELIA.
 O, heat dry up my brains! tears seven times salt 151
 Burn out the sense and virtue of mine eye!
 By heaven, thy madness shall be paid with weight Till our scale turn the beam. O rose of May!
 Dear maid, kind sister, sweet Ophelia! 155
 O heavens! is't possible a young maid's wits
 Should be as mortal as an old man's life?
 Nature is fine in love; and where 'tis fine
 It sends some precious instance of itself
 After the thing it loves. 160
Oph. [Sings] They bore him barefac'd on the bier;
 Hey non nonny, nonny, hey nonny;
 And in his grave rain'd many a tear—
 Fare you well, my dove!
Laer. Hadst thou thy wits, and didst persuade revenge, 165
 It could not move thus.
Oph. You must sing 'A-down, a-down', an you call him a-down-a. O, how the wheel becomes it! It is the false steward, that stole his master's daughter. 170

Laer. This nothing's more than matter.
Oph. There's the rosemary, that's for remembrance; pray you, love, remember. And there is pansies, that's for thoughts. 174
Laer. A document in madness—thoughts and remembrance fitted.
Oph. There's fennel for you, and columbines. There's rue for you; and here's some for me. We may call it herb of grace a Sundays. O, you must wear your rue with a difference. There's a daisy. I would give you some violets, but they wither'd all when my father died. They say 'a made a good end. 182 [Sings] For bonny sweet Robin is all my joy.
Laer. Thought and affliction, passion, hell itself,
 She turns to favour and to prettiness. 185
Oph. [Sings] And will 'a not come again?
 And will 'a not come again?
 No, no, he is dead,
 Go to thy death-bed,
 He never will come again. 190
 His beard was as white as snow,
 All flaxen was his poll;
 He is gone, he is gone,
 And we cast away moan:
 God-a-mercy on his soul! 195
 And of all Christian souls, I pray God. God buy you. [Exit.]
Laer. Do you see this, O God?
King. Laertes, I must commune with your grief,
 Or you deny me right. Go but apart,
 Make choice of whom your wisest friends you will, 200
 And they shall hear and judge 'twixt you and me.
 If by direct or by collateral hand
 They find us touch'd, we will our kingdom give,
 Our crown, our life, and all that we call ours,
 To you in satisfaction; but if not, 205
 Be you content to lend your patience to us,
 And we shall jointly labour with your soul
 To give it due content.
Laer. Let this be so.
 His means of death, his obscure funeral—
 No trophy, sword, nor hatchment, o'er his bones, 210
 No noble rite nor formal ostentation—
 Cry to be heard, as 'twere from heaven to earth,
 That I must call't in question.
King. So you shall;
 And where th' offence is, let the great axe fall. 214
 I pray you go with me. [Exeunt.]

SCENE VI. Elsinore. The Castle.Enter HORATIO with an Attendant.

Hor. What are they that would speak with me ?

Att. Sea-faring men, sir ; they say they have letters for you.

Hor. Let them come in. [Exit Attendant.]
I do not know from what part of the world I should be greeted, if not from Lord Hamlet.

Enter Sailors.

Sail. God bless you, sir.

Hor. Let Him bless thee too.

Sail. 'A shall, sir, an't please Him. There's a letter for you, sir ; it came from th' ambassador that was bound for England—if your name be Horatio, as I am let to know it is.

Hor. [Reads] 'Horatio, when thou shalt have overlook'd this, give these fellows some means to the King : they have letters for him. Ere we two days old at sea, a pirate of very warlike appointment gave us chase. Finding ourselves too slow of sail, we put on a compelled valour ; and in the grapple I boarded them. On the instant they got clear of our ship ; so I alone became their prisoner. They have dealt with me like thieves of mercy ; but they knew what they did : I am to do a good turn for them. Let the King have the letters I have sent ; and repair thou to me with as much speed as thou wouldest fly death. I have words to speak in thine ear will make thee dumb ; yet are they much too light for the bore of the matter. These good fellows will bring thee where I am. Rosencrantz and Guildenstern hold their course for England ; of them I have much to tell thee. Farewell.

He that thou knowest thine, HAMLET.'

Come, I will give you way for these your letters,

And do't the speedier that you may direct me

To him from whom you brought them.

[Exeunt.]SCENE VII. Elsinore. The Castle.Enter KING and LAERTES.

King. Now must your conscience my acquittance seal,

And you must put me in your heart for friend,

Sith you have heard, and with a knowing ear,

That he which hath your noble father slain Pursu'd my life.

Laer. It well appears. But tell me
Why you proceeded not against these feats,

So crimeful and so capital in nature,
As by your safety, wisdom, all things else,
You mainly were stirr'd up.

King. O, for two special reasons,
Which may to you, perhaps, seem much unsinew'd,

But yet to me th'are strong. The Queen his mother

Lives almost by his looks ; and for myself,
My virtue or my plague, be it either which—

She is so conjunctive to my life and soul
That, as the star moves not but in his sphere,

I could not but by her. The other motive,
Why to a public count I might not go,
Is the great love the general gender bear
him ;

Who, dipping all his faults in their affection,
Work like the spring that turneth wood
to stone,

Convert his gyves to graces ; so that my arrows,

Too slightly timber'd for so loud a wind,
Would have reverted to my bow again,
But not where I have aim'd them.

Laer. And so have I a noble father lost ;
A sister driven into desp'rate terms,
Whose worth, if praises may go back again,
Stood challenger on mount of all the age
For her perfections. But my revenge will
come.

King. Break not your sleeps for that.

You must not think

That we are made of stuff so flat and dull
That we can let our beard be shook with danger,

And think it pastime. You shortly shall hear more.

I lov'd your father, and we love our self ;
And that, I hope, will teach you to imagine—

Enter a Messenger with letters.

How now ! What news ?

Mess. Letters, my lord, from Hamlet :

These to your Majesty ; this to the Queen.

King. From Hamlet ! Who brought
them ?

Mess. Sailors, my lord, they say ; I saw them not.

They were given me by Claudio ; he receiv'd them

Of him that brought them.

King. Laertes, you shall hear them.
Leave us.

[Exit Messenger.]

[Reads] 'High and Mighty. You shall know I am set naked on your kingdom. Tomorrow shall I beg leave to see your kingly eyes ; when I shall, first asking your pardon thereunto, recount the occasion of my sudden and more strange return. HAMLET.'

What should this mean ? Are all the rest come back ?

Or is it some abuse, and no such thing ?

Laer. Know you the hand ? 50

King. 'Tis Hamlet's character. 'Naked' !
And in a postscript here, he says 'alone' .
Can you devise me ?

Laer. I am lost in it, my lord. But let him come ;

It warms the very sickness in my heart 55
That I shall live and tell him to his teeth
' Thus didest thou ' .

King. If it be so, Laertes—

As how should it be so, how otherwise ?—
Will you be rul'd by me ?

Laer. Ay, my lord ;

So you will not o'errule me to a peace. 60

King. To thine own peace. If he be now return'd,

As checking at his voyage, and that he means

No more to undertake it, I will work him
To an exploit now ripe in my device,
Under the which he shall not choose but fall ; 65

And for his death, no wind of blame shall breathe ;

But even his mother shall uncharge the practice

And call it accident.

Laer. My lord, I will be rul'd

The rather, if you could devise it so

That I might be the organ.

King. It falls right. 70

You have been talk'd of since your travel much,

And that in Hamlet's hearing, for a quality
Wherein they say you shine. Your sum of parts

Did not together pluck such envy from him
As did that one ; and that, in my regard, 75
Of the unworriest siege.

Laer. What part is that, my lord ?

King. A very riband in the cap of youth,
Yet needful too ; for youth no less becomes

The light and careless livery that it wears
Than settled age his sables and his weeds,

Importing health and graveness. Two months since 81

Here was a gentleman of Normandy—

I have seen myself, and serv'd against, the French,

And they can well on horseback ; but this gallant

Had witchcraft in't ; he grew unto his seat,
And to such wondrous doing brought his horse, 86

As had he been incorp'd and demi-natur'd
With the brave beast. So far he topp'd my thought,

That I, in forgery of shapes and tricks,
Come short of what he did.

Laer. A Norman was't ? 90

King. A Norman.

Laer. Upon my life, Lamord.

King. The very same.

Laer. I know him well. He is the brooch indeed

And gem of all the nation.

King. He made confession of you ; 95

And gave you such a masterly report
For art and exercise in your defence,

And for your rapier most especial,
That he cried out 'twould be a sight indeed

If one could match you. The scrimers of their nation 100

He swore had neither motion, guard, nor eye,

If you oppos'd them. Sir, this report of his

Did Hamlet so envenom with his envy
That he could nothing do but wish and beg

Your sudden coming o'er, to play with you.
Now, out of this—

Laer. What out of this, my lord ?

King. Laertes, was your father dear to you ?

Or are you like the painting of a sorrow,
A face without a heart ?

Laer. Why ask you this ? 106

King. Not that I think you did not love your father ;

But that I know love is begun by time,
And that I see, in passages of proof,

Time qualifies the spark and fire of it.
There lives within the very flame of love

A kind of wick or snuff that will abate it ;
And nothing is at a like goodness still ;

For goodness, growing to a pleurisy, 117 Dies in his own too much. That we would

do,

We should do when we would ; for this 'would' changes,

And hath abatements and delays as many
As there are tongues, are hands, are accidents ; 121

And then this 'should' is like a spend-thrift's sigh

That hurts by easing. But to the quick of th' ulcer :

Hamlet comes back ; what would you undertake 124

To show yourself in deed your father's son
More than in words ?

Laer. To cut his throat i' th' church.

King. No place, indeed, should murder sanctuarize ;

Revenge should have no bounds. But, good Laertes,

Will you do this ? Keep close within your chamber.

Hamlet return'd shall know you are come home. 130

We'll put on those shall praise your excellence,

And set a double varnish on the fame
The Frenchman gave you ; bring you, in fine, together,

And wager on your heads. He, being remiss, 134

Most generous, and free from all contriving,

Will not peruse the foils ; so that with ease
Or with a little shuffling, you may choose
A sword unbated, and, in a pass of practice,
Requite him for your father.

Laer. I will do't ;

And for that purpose I'll anoint my sword.
I bought an unction of a mountebank, ¹⁴¹
So mortal that but dip a knife in it,
Where it draws blood no cataplasm so rare,
Collected from all simples that have virtue Under the moon, can save the thing from death ¹⁴⁵

That is but scratch'd withal. I'll touch my point

With this contagion, that, if I gall him slightly,

It may be death.

King. Let's further think of this ;

Weigh what convenience both of time and means

May fit us to our shape. If this should fail, ¹⁵⁰

And that our drift look through our bad performance,

'Twere better not assay'd, therefore this project

Should have a back or second, that might hold

If this did blast in proof. Soft ! let me
see.

We'll make a solemn wager on your cun-
nings— ¹⁵⁵

I ha't.

When in your motion you are hot and dry—
As make your bouts more violent to that end—

And that he calls for drink, I'll have pre-ferr'd him ¹⁵⁹

A chalice for the nonce ; whereon but sipping,
If he by chance escape your venom'd stuck,
Our purpose may hold there. But stay ;
what noise ?

Enter QUEEN.

Queen. One woe doth tread upon another's heel,

So fast they follow. Your sister's drown'd,
Laertes. ¹⁶⁵

Laer. Drown'd ! 'O, where ?

Queen. There is a willow grows aslant the brook

That shows his hoar leaves in the glassy
stream ;

Therewith fantastic garlands did she make
Of crowflowers, nettles, daisies, and long purples ¹⁷⁰

That liberal shepherds give a grosser name,
But our cold maids do dead men's fingers
call them.

There, on the pendent boughs her coronet
weeds

Clamb'ring to hang, an envious sliver broke ; ¹⁷⁴

When down her weedy trophies and herself

1064

Fell in the weeping brook. Her clothes spread wide ¹⁷⁶

And, mermaid-like, awhile they bore her up ;
Which time she chanted snatches of old lauds,

As one incapable of her own distress,
Or like a creature native and indued ¹⁸⁰

Unto that element ; but long it could not be

Till that her garments, heavy with their drink,

Pull'd the poor wretch from her melodious lay

To muddy death.

Laer. Alas, then she is drown'd !

Queen. Drown'd, drown'd. ¹⁸⁵

Laer. Too much of water hast thou, poor

Ophelia,

And therefore I forbid my tears ; but yet
It is our trick ; nature her custom holds,

Let shame say what it will. When these are gone,

The woman will be out. Adieu, my lord. ¹⁹⁰

I have a speech o' fire that fain would blaze
But that this folly douts it. [Exit.]

King. Let's follow, Gertrude.

How much I had to do to calm his rage !
Now fear I this will give it start again ; ¹⁹⁴

Therefore let's follow. [Exeunt.]

ACT FIVE

SCENE I. Elsinore. A churchyard.

Enter two Clowns with spades and picks.

1 Clo. Is she to be buried in Christian burial when she wilfully seeks her own salvation ?

2 Clo. I tell thee she is ; therefore make her grave straight. The crowner hath sat on her, and finds it Christian burial. ⁵

1 Clo. How can that be, unless she drown'd herself in her own defence ?

2 Clo. Why, 'tis found so.

1 Clo. It must be 'se offendendo' ; it cannot be else. For here lies the point : if I drown myself wittingly, it argues an act and an act hath three branches—it is to act, to do, to perform ; argal, she drown'd herself wittingly. ¹³

2 Clo. Nay, but hear you, Goodman Delver.

1 Clo. Give me leave. Here lies the water ; good. Here stands the man ; good. If the man go to this water and drown himself, it is, will he, nill he, he goes—mark you that ; but if the water come to him and drown him, he drowns not himself. Argal, he that is not guilty of his own death shortens not his own life.

2 Clo. But is this law ? ²¹

1 Clo. Ay, marry, is't ; crowner's quest law.

2 Clo. Will you ha the truth an't ? If this had not been a gentlewoman, she should have been buried out a Christian burial. 25

1 Clo. Why, there thou say'st; and the more pity that great folk should have count'nance in this world to drown or hang themselves more than their even Christen. Come, my spade. There is no ancient gentlemen but gard'ners, ditchers, and grave-makers; they hold up Adam's profession. 31

2 Clo. Was he a gentleman?

1 Clo. 'A was the first that ever bore arms.

2 Clo. Why, he had none. 34

1 Clo. What, art a heathen? How dost thou understand the Scripture? The Scripture says Adam digg'd. Could he dig without arms? I'll put another question to thee. If thou answerest me not to the purpose, confess thyself—

2 Clo. Go to. 40

1 Clo. What is he that builds stronger than either the mason, the shipwright, or the carpenter?

2 Clo. The gallows-maker; for that frame outlives a thousand tenants. 44

1 Clo. I like thy wit well; in good faith the gallows does well; but how does it well? It does well to those that do ill. Now thou dost ill to say the gallows is built stronger than the church; argal, the gallows may do well to thee. To 't again, come. 49

2 Clo. Who builds stronger than a mason, a shipwright, or a carpenter?

1 Clo. Ay, tell me that, and unyoke.

2 Clo. Marry, now I can tell.

1 Clo. To 't.

2 Clo. Mass, I cannot tell. 55

Enter HAMLET and HORATIO, afar off.

1 Clo. Cudgel thy brains no more about it, for your dull ass will not mend his pace with beating; and when you are ask'd this question next, say 'a grave-maker': the houses he makes lasts till doomsday. Go, get thee to Yaughan; fetch me a stoup of liquor. [Exit Second Clown.]

[Digs and sings] In youth, when I did love, did love, 61

Methought it was very sweet,
To contract-o-the time for-a my bebove,

O, methought there-a-was nothing-a meet.

Ham. Has this fellow no feeling of his business, that 'a sings in grave-making? 66

Hor. Custom hath made it in him a property of easiness.

Ham. 'Tis e'en so; the hand of little employment hath the daintier sense. 70

1 Clo. [Sings] But age, with his stealing steps,

Hath clawed me in his clutch,
And hath shipped me intil the land,
As if I had never been such. 74

[Throws up a skull.]

Ham. That skull had a tongue in it, and could sing once. How the knave jowls it to the ground, as if 'twere Cain's jawbone, that did the first murder! This might be the pate of a politician, which this ass now o'erreaches; one that would circumvent God, might it not? 80

Hor. It might, my lord.

Ham. Or of a courtier; which could say 'Good morrow, sweet lord! How dost thou, sweet lord?' This might be my Lord Such-a-one, that praised my Lord Such-a-one's horse, when 'a meant to beg it—might it not?

Hor. Ay, my lord. 85

Ham. Why, e'en so; and now my Lady Worm's, chapless, and knock'd about the mazard with a sexton's spade. Here's fine revolution, an we had the trick to see't. Did these bones cost no more the breeding but to play at loggats with them? Mine ache to think on't. 90

1 Clo. [Sings] A pick-axe and a spade, a spade,

For and a shrouding sheet:

O, a pit of clay for to be made

For such a guest is meet.

[Throws up another skull.]

Ham. There's another. Why may not that be the skull of a lawyer? Where be his quiddities now, his quillets, his cases, his tenures, and his tricks? Why does he suffer this rude knave now to knock him about the sconce with a dirty shovel, and will not tell him of his action of battery? Hum! This fellow might be in's time a great buyer of land, with his statutes, his recognizances, his fines, his double vouchers, his recoveries. Is this the fine of his fines, and the recovery of his recoveries, to have his fine pate full of fine dirt? Will his vouchers vouch him no more of his purchases, and double ones too, than the length and breadth of a pair of indentures? The very conveyances of his lands will scarcely lie in this box; and must th' inheritor himself have no more, ha?

Hor. Not a jot more, my lord.

Ham. Is not parchment made of sheep-skins? 110

Hor. Ay, my lord, and of calves' skins too.

Ham. They are sheep and calves which seek out assurance in that. I will speak to this fellow. Whose grave's this, sirrah?

1 Clo. Mine, sir. 115

[Sings] O, a pit of clay for to be made

For such a guest is meet.

Ham. I think it be thine indeed, for thou liest in't.

1 Clo. You lie out on't, sir, and therefore 'tis not yours. For my part, I do not lie in't, yet it is mine. ¹²⁰

Ham. Thou dost lie in't, to be in't and say it is thine; 'tis for the dead, not for the quick; therefore thou liest.

1 Clo. 'Tis a quick lie, sir; 'twill away again from me to you. ¹²⁵

Ham. What man dost thou dig it for?

1 Clo. For no man, sir.

Ham. What woman, then?

1 Clo. For none neither.

Ham. Who is to be buried in't? ¹³⁰

1 Clo. One that was a woman, sir; but, rest her soul, she's dead.

Ham. How absolute the knave is! We must speak by the card, or equivocation will undo us. By the Lord, Horatio, this three years I have took note of it: the age is grown so picked that the toe of the peasant comes so near the heel of the courtier, he galls his kibe. How long hast thou been a grave-maker?

1 Clo. Of all the days i' th' year, I came to't that day that our last King Hamlet overcame Fortinbras. ¹⁴⁰

Ham. How long is that since?

1 Clo. Cannot you tell that? Every fool can tell that: it was that very day that young Hamlet was born—he that is mad, and sent into England.

Ham. Ay, marry, why was he sent into England? ¹⁴⁵

1 Clo. Why, because 'a was mad: 'a shall recover his wits there; or, if 'a do not, 'tis no great matter there.

Ham. Why?

1 Clo. 'Twill not be seen in him there: there the men are as mad as he. ¹⁵⁰

Ham. How came he mad?

1 Clo. Very strangely, they say.

Ham. How strangely?

1 Clo. Faith, e'en with losing his wits.

Ham. Upon what ground? ¹⁵⁵

1 Clo. Why, here in Denmark. I have been sexton here, man and boy, thirty years.

Ham. How long will a man lie i' th' earth ere he rot?

1 Clo. Faith, if 'a be not rotten before 'a die—as we have many pocky corses now—a-days that will scarce hold the laying in—'a will last you some eight year or nine year. A tanner will last you nine year. ¹⁶³

Ham. Why he more than another?

1 Clo. Why, sir, his hide is so tann'd with his trade that 'a will keep out water a great while; and your water is a sore decayer of your whoreson dead body. Here's a skull now; this skull has lien you i' th' earth three and twenty years.

Ham. Whose was it? ¹⁷⁰

1 Clo. A whoreson mad fellow's it was. Whose do you think it was?

Ham. Nay, I know not.

1 Clo. A pestilence on him for a mad rogue! 'A poured a flagon of Rhenish on my head once. This same skull, sir, was, sir, Yorick's skull, the King's jester. ¹⁷⁶

Ham. This?

1 Clo. E'en that.

Ham. Let me see. [Takes the skull] Alas, poor Yorick! I knew him, Horatio: a fellow of infinite jest, of most excellent fancy; he hath borne me on his back a thousand times. And now how abhorred in my imagination it is! My gorge rises at it. Here hung those lips that I have kiss'd I know not how oft. Where be your gibes now, your gambols, your songs, your flashes of merriment that were wont to set the table on a roar? Not one now to mock your own grinning—quite chap-fall'n? Now get you to my lady's chamber, and tell her, let her paint an inch thick, to this favour she must come; make her laugh at that. Prithee, Horatio, tell me one thing.

Hor. What's that, my lord? ¹⁹¹

Ham. Dost thou think Alexander look'd a this fashion i' th' earth?

Hor. E'en so.

Ham. And smelt so? Pah! ¹⁹⁵

[Throws down the skull.]

Hor. E'en so, my lord.

Ham. To what base uses we may return, Horatio! Why may not imagination trace the noble dust of Alexander till 'a find it stopping a bung-hole? ¹⁹⁹

Hor. 'Twere to consider too curiously to consider so.

Ham. No, faith, not a jot; but to follow him thither with modesty enough, and likelihood to lead it, as thus: Alexander died, Alexander was buried, Alexander returneth to dust; the dust is earth; of earth we make loam; and why of that loam whereto he was converted might they not stop a beer-barrel? ²⁰⁶

Imperious Cæsar, dead and turn'd to clay,

Might stop a hole to keep the wind away. O, that that earth which kept the world in awe

Should patch a wall t' expel the winter's flaw! ²¹⁰

But soft! but soft! awhile. Here comes the King.

Enter the KING, QUEEN, LAERTES, in funeral procession after the coffin, with Priest and Lords attendant.

The Queen, the courtiers. Who is this they follow?

And with such maimed rites? This doth betoken

The corse they follow did with desperate hand

For do it own life. 'Twas of some estate. ²¹⁵

Couch we awhile and mark.

[Retiring with Horatio.]

Laer. What ceremony else ?

Ham. That is Laertes, a very noble youth. Mark.

Laer. What ceremony else ?

Priest. Her obsequies have been as far enlarg'd 220

As we have warrantise. Her death was doubtful ;

And, but that great command o'ersways
the order,

She should in ground unsanctified have lodg'd

Till the last trumpet ; for charitable prayers,

Shards, flints, and pebbles, should be thrown on her ; 225

Yet here she is allow'd her virgin crants,
Her maiden strewments, and the bringing home

Of bell and burial.

Laer. Must there no more be done ?

Priest. No more be done.

We should profane the service of the dead
To sing sage requiem and such rest to her
As to peace-parted souls.

Laer. Lay her i' th' earth ;
And from her fair and unpolluted flesh
May violets spring ! I tell thee, churlish priest,

A minist'ring angel shall my sister be 235
When thou liest howling.

Ham. What, the fair Ophelia !

Queen. Sweets to the sweet ; farewell !

[Scattering flowers.]

I hop'd thou shouldst have been my Hamlet's wife ;

I thought thy bride-bed to have deck'd,
sweet maid,

And not have strew'd thy grave.

Laer. O, treble woe 240

Fail ten times treble on that cursed head
Whose wicked deed thy most ingenious sense

Depriv'd thee of ! Hold off the earth awhile, Till I have caught her once more in mine arms. [Leaps into the grave.]

Now pile your dust upon the quick and
dead, 245

Till of this flat a mountain you have made
T' o'er-top old Pelion or the skyish head
Of blue Olympus.

Ham. [Advancing] What is he whose grief Bears such an emphasis, whose phrase of sorrow

Conjures the wand'ring stars, and makes them stand 250

Like wonder-wounded hearers ? This is I,
Hamlet the Dane. [Leaps into the grave.]

Laer. The devil take thy soul !

[Grappling with him.]

Ham. Thou pray'st not well.

I prithee take thy fingers from my throat ;
For, though I am not sp'ientive and rash,

Yet have I in me something dangerous, 256 Which let thy wiseness fear. Hold off thy
hand.

King. Pluck them asunder.

Queen. Hamlet ! Hamlet !

All. Gentlemen !

Hor. Good my lord, be quiet.

[The Attendants part them, and they come out of the grave.]

Ham. Why, I will fight with him upon this theme 260

Until my eyelids will no longer wag.

Queen. O my son, what theme ?

Ham. I lov'd Ophelia : forty thousand brothers

Could not, with all their quantity of love, Make up my sum. What wilt thou do for
her ? 265

King. O, he is mad, Laertes.

Queen. For love of God, forbear him.

Ham. 'Swounds, show me what th'owt
do :

Woo't weep, woo't fight, woo't fast, woo't tear thyself,

Woo't drink up eisel, eat a crocodile ? 270

I'll do't. Dost come here to whine ?

To outface me with leaping in her grave ?

Be buried quick with her, and so will I ;

And, if thou prate of mountains, let them throw

Millions of acres on us, till our ground, 275

Singeing his pate against the burning zone,

Make Ossa like a wart ! Nay, an thou'lt mouth,

I'll rant as well as thou.

Queen. This is mere madness ;

And thus awhile the fit will work on him ;

Anon, as patient as the female dove 280

When that her golden couplets are dis-clos'd,

His silence will sit drooping.

Ham. Hear you, sir :

What is the reason that you use me thus ?

I lov'd you ever. But it is no matter.

Let Hercules himself do what he may, 285

The cat will mew, and dog will have his day.

[Exit.]

King. I pray thee, good Horatio, wait upon him. [Exit Horatio.]

[To Laertes] Strengthen your patience in our last night's speech ;

We'll put the matter to the present push.—

Good Gertrude, set some watch over your
son.— 290

This grave shall have a living monument.

An hour of quiet shortly shall we see ;

Till then in patience our proceeding be.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE II. Elsinore. The Castle.

Enter HAMLET and HORATIO.

Ham. So much for this, sir ; now shall you see the other.

You do remember all the circumstance ?

Hor. Remember it, my lord !

Ham. Sir, in my heart there was a kind of fighting

That would not let me sleep. Methought I lay

Worse than the mutines in the bilboes. Rashly,

And prais'd be rashness for it—let us know, Our indiscretion sometime serves us well, When our deep plots do pall ; and that should learn us

There's a divinity that shapes our ends, 10 Rough-hew them how we will.

Hor. That is most certain.

Ham. Up from my cabin,

My sea-gown scarf'd about me, in the dark Grop'd I to find out them ; had my desire ; Finger'd their packet, and in fine withdrew To mine own room again, making so bold, My fears forgetting manners, to unseal 17 Their great commission ; where I found,

Horatio,

Ah, royal knavery ! an exact command, Larded with many several sorts of reasons, Importing Denmark's health and England's too, 21

With, ho ! such bugs and goblins in my life—

That, on the supervise, no leisure bated, No, not to stay the grinding of the axe, My head should be struck off.

Hor. Is't possible ? 25

Ham. Here's the commission ; read it at more leisure.

But wilt thou hear now how I did proceed ?

Hor. I beseech you.

Ham. Being thus benetted round with villainies—

Ere I could make a prologue to my brains, 30 They had begun the play—I sat me down ; Devis'd a new commission ; wrote it fair. I once did hold it, as our statists do, A baseness to write fair, and labour'd much How to forget that learning ; but, sir, now It did me yeoman's service. Wilt thou know 36

Th' effect of what I wrote ?

Hor. Ay, good my lord.

Ham. An earnest conjuration from the King,

As England was his faithful tributary, As love between them like the palm might flourish, 40

As peace should still her wheaten garland wear

And stand a comma 'tween their amities, And many such like as-es of great charge, That, on the view and knowing of these contents, 44

Without debatement further more or less, He should those bearers put to sudden death, Not shriving-time allow'd.

Hor. How was this seal'd ?

1068

Ham. Why, even in that was heaven ordinant.

I had my father's signet in my purse, 49 Which was the model of that Danish seal ; Folded the writ up in the form of th' other ; Subscrib'd it, gave't th' impression, plac'd it safely,

The changeling never known. Now, the next day

Was our sea-fight ; and what to this was sequent

Thou knowest already. 55

Hor. So Guildenstern and Rosencrantz go to't.

Ham. Why, man, they did make love to this employment ;

They are not near my conscience ; their defeat

Does by their own insinuation grow : 59 'Tis dangerous when the baser nature comes Between the pass and fell incensed points Of mighty opposites.

Hor. Why, what a king is this !

Ham. Does it not, think thee, stand me now upon—

He that hath kill'd my king and whor'd my mother ;

Popp'd in between th' election and my hopes ; 65

Thrown out his angle for my proper life, And with such coz'nage—is't not perfect conscience

To quit him with this arm ? And is't not to be damn'd

To let this canker of our nature come In further evil ? 70

Hor. It must be shortly known to him from England

What is the issue of the business there.

Ham. It will be short ; the interim is mine,

And a man's life's no more than to say 'one'.

But I am very sorry, good Horatio, 75 That to Laertes I forgot myself ;

For by the image of my cause I see The portraiture of his. I'll court his favours.

But sure the bravery of his grief did put me Into a tow'ring passion.

Hor. Peace ; who comes here ? 80

Enter young OSRIC.

Os. Your lordship is right welcome back to Denmark.

Ham. I humbly thank you, sir. [Aside to Horatio] Dost know this water-fly ? 83

Hor. [Aside to Hamlet] No, my good lord.

Ham. [Aside to Horatio] Thy state is the more gracious ; for 'tis a vice to know him. He hath much land, and fertile. Let a beast be lord of beasts, and his crib shall stand at the king's mess. 'Tis a chough ; but, as I say, spacious in the possession of dirt.

Osr. Sweet lord, if your lordship were at leisure, I should impart a thing to you from his Majesty.

Ham. I will receive it, sir, with all diligence of spirit. Put your bonnet to his right use; 'tis for the head.

Osr. I thank your lordship; it is very hot.

Ham. No, believe me, 'tis very cold; the wind is northerly.

Osr. It is indifferent cold, my lord, indeed.

Ham. But yet methinks it is very sultry and hot for my complexion.

Osr. Exceedingly, my lord; it is very sultry, as 'twere—I cannot tell how. But, my lord, his Majesty bade me signify to you that 'a has laid a great wager on your head. Sir, this is the matter—

Ham. I beseech you, remember.

[Hamlet moves him to put on his hat.]

Osr. Nay, good my lord; for my ease, in good faith. Sir, here is newly come to court Laertes; believe me, an absolute gentleman, full of most excellent differences, of very soft society and great showing. Indeed, to speak feelingly of him, he is the card or calendar of gentry, for you shall find in him the continent of what part a gentleman would see.

Ham. Sir, his definement suffers no perdition in you; though, I know, to divide him inventorially would dozy th' arithmetic of memory, and yet but yaw neither in respect of his quick sail. But, in the verity of extolment, I take him to be a soul of great article, and his infusion of such dearth and rareness as, to make true diction of him, his semblable is his mirror, and who else would trace him, his umbrage, nothing more.

Osr. Your lordship speaks most infallibly of him.

Ham. The concernancy, sir? Why do we wrap the gentleman in our more rawer breath?

Osr. Sir?

Hor. [Aside to Hamlet] Is't not possible to understand in another tongue? You will to't, sir, really.

Ham. What imports the nomination of this gentleman?

Osr. Of Laertes?

Hor. [Aside] His purse is empty already; all's golden words are spent.

Ham. Of him, sir.

Osr. I know you are not ignorant—

Ham. I would you did, sir; yet, in faith, if you did, it would not much approve me. Well, sir.

Osr. You are not ignorant of what excellence Laertes is—

Ham. I dare not confess that, lest I should compare with him in excellence; but to know a man well were to know himself.

Osr. I mean, sir, for his weapon; but in the imputation laid on him by them, in his meed he's unfellowed.

Ham. What's his weapon?

Osr. Rapier and dagger.

Ham. That's two of his weapons—but well.

Osr. The King, sir, hath wager'd with him six Barbary horses; against the which he has impon'd, as I take it, six French rapiers and poniards, with their assigns, as girdle, hangers, and so—three of the carriages, in faith, are very dear to fancy, very responsive to the hilts, most delicate carriages, and of very liberal conceit.

Ham. What call you the carriages?

Hor. [Aside to Hamlet] I knew you must be edified by the margent ere you had done.

Osr. The carriages, sir, are the hangers.

Ham. The phrase would be more germane to the matter if we could carry a cannon by our sides. I would it might be hangers till then. But on: six Barbary horses against six French swords, their assigns, and three liberal conceited carriages; that's the French bet against the Danish. Why is this all impon'd, as you call it?

Osr. The King, sir, hath laid, sir, that in a dozen passes between yourself and him he shall not exceed you three hits; he hath laid on twelve for nine, and it would come to immediate trial if your lordship would vouchsafe the answer.

Ham. How if I answer no?

Osr. I mean, my lord, the opposition of your person in trial.

Ham. Sir, I will walk here in the hall. If it please his Majesty, it is the breathing time of day with me; let the foils be brought, the gentleman willing, and the King hold his purpose, I will win for him an I can; if not, I will gain nothing but my shame and the odd hits.

Osr. Shall I redeliver you e'en so?

Ham. To this effect, sir, after what flourish your nature will.

Osr. I commend my duty to your lordship.

Ham. Yours, yours. [Exit Osr.] He does well to commend it himself; there are no tongues else for's turn.

Hor. This lapwing runs away with the shell on his head.

Ham. 'A did comply, sir, with his dug before 'a suck'd it. Thus has he, and many more of the same bevy, that I know the drossy age dotes on, only got the tune of the time and outward habit of encounter—a kind of yesty collection, which carries them through and through the most fann'd and winnowed opinions; and do but blow them to their trial, the bubbles are out.

Enter a Lord.

Lord. My lord, his Majesty commended him to you by young Osric, who brings back to him that you attend him in the hall. He sends to know if your pleasure hold to play with Laertes, or that you will take longer time.

Ham. I am constant to my purposes ; they follow the king's pleasure : if his fitness speaks, mine is ready now—or whenever, provided I be so able as now. ¹⁹⁵

Lord. The King and Queen and all are coming down.

Ham. In happy time.

Lord. The Queen desires you to use some gentle entertainment to Laertes before you fall to play. ¹⁹⁹

Ham. She well instructs me. [Exit Lord.]

Hor. You will lose this wager, my lord.

Ham. I do not think so ; since he went into France I have been in continual practice. I shall win at the odds. But thou wouldst not think how ill all's here about my heart ; but it is no matter. ²⁰⁵

Hor. Nay, good my lord—

Ham. It is but foolery ; but it is such a kind of gain-giving as would perhaps trouble a woman.

Hor. If your mind dislike anything, obey it. I will forestall their repair hither, and say you are not fit. ²¹⁰

Ham. Not a whit, we defy augury : there is a special providence in the fall of a sparrow. If it be now, 'tis not to come ; if it be not to come, it will be now ; if it be not now, yet it will come—the readiness is all. Since no man owes of aught he leaves, what is't to leave betimes ? Let be.

A table prepared. Trumpets, Drums, and Officers with cushions, foils and daggers. Enter KING, QUEEN, LAERTES, and all the State.

King. Come, Hamlet, come, and take this hand from me. [The King puts Laertes's hand into Hamlet's.]

Ham. Give me your pardon, sir. I have done you wrong ;

But pardon 't, as you are a gentleman.

This presence knows, ²²⁰
And you must needs have heard how I am punish'd

With a sore distraction. What I have done That might your nature, honour, and exception, Roughly awake, I here proclaim was madness.

Was 't Hamlet wrong'd Laertes ? Never Hamlet. ²²⁵

If Hamlet from himself be ta'en away, And when he's not himself does wrong Laertes,

Then Hamlet does it not, Hamlet denies it. Who does it, then ? His madness. If't be so, Hamlet is of the faction that is wrong'd ; His madness is poor Hamlet's enemy. ²³¹

1070

Sir, in this audience,
Let my disclaiming from a purpos'd evil
Free me so far in your most generous thoughts ²³⁴

That I have shot my arrow o'er the house
And hurt my brother.

Laer. I am satisfied in nature, Whose motive in this case should stir me most

To my revenge ; but in my terms of honour
I stand aloof, and will no reconciliation Till by some elder masters of known honour ²⁴⁰

I have a voice and precedent of peace
To keep my name ungor'd—but till that
time

I do receive your offer'd love like love,
And will not wrong it.

Ham. I embrace it freely ;
And will this brother's wager frankly play.
Give us the foils. Come on.

Laer. Come, one for me.

Ham. I'll be your foil, Laertes ; in mine ignorance ²⁴⁷
Your skill shall, like a star i' th' darkest
night,

Stick fiery off indeed.

Laer. You mock me, sir.

Ham. No, by this hand. ²⁵⁰

King. Give them the foils, young Osric.
Cousin Hamlet,

You know the wager ?

Ham. Very well, my lord ;
Your Grace has laid the odds a' th' weaker side.

King. I do not fear it : I have seen you
both ;
But since he's better'd, we have therefore odds. ²⁵⁵

Laer. This is too heavy ; let me see another.

Ham. This likes me well. These foils have all a length ?

[They prepare to play.]

Os. Ay, my good lord.

King. Set me the stoups of wine upon that table.

If Hamlet give the first or second hit, ²⁶⁰
Or quit in answer of the third exchange,
Let all the battlements their ordnance fire ;
The King shall drink to Hamlet's better
breath,

And in the cup an union shall he throw,
Richer than that which four successive kings ²⁶⁵

In Denmark's crown have worn. Give me the cups ;

And let the kettle to the trumpet speak,
The trumpet to the cannoneer without,
The cannons to the heavens, the heaven to
earth,

'Now the King drinks to Hamlet'. Come, begin— ²⁷⁰

And you, the judges, bear a wary eye.

Ham. Come on, sir.

Laer. Come, my lord.

[They play.

Ham. One.

Laer. No.

Ham. Judgment?

Osr. A hit, a very palpable hit.

Laer. Well, again.

King. Stay, give me drink. Hamlet, this pearl is thine;

Here's to thy health.

[Drum, trumpets, and shot.

Give him the cup. 275

Ham. I'll play this bout first; set it by awhile.

Come.

[They play.

Another hit; what say you?

Laer. A touch, a touch, I do confess't.

King. Our son shall win.

Queen. He's fat, and scant of breath. Here, Hamlet, take my napkin, rub thy brows. 280

The Queen carouses to thy fortune, Hamlet.

Ham. Good madam!

King. Gertrude, do not drink.

Queen. I will, my lord; I pray you pardon me.

King. [Aside] It is the poison'd cup; it is too late.

Ham. I dare not drink yet, madam; by and by. 285

Queen. Come, let me wipe thy face.

Laer. My lord, I'll hit him now.

King. I do not think't.

Laer. [Aside] And yet it is almost against my conscience.

Ham. Come, for the third. Laertes, you do but dally; 289

I pray you pass with your best violence; I am afeard you make a wanton of me.

Laer. Say you so? Come on. [They play.

Osr. Nothing, neither way.

Laer. Have at you now! [Laertes wounds Hamlet: then, in scuffling, they change rapiers, and Hamlet wounds Laertes.

King. Part them; they are incens'd.

Ham. Nay, come again. [The Queen falls.

Osr. Look to the Queen there, ho!

Hor. They bleed on both sides. How is it, my lord?

Osr. How is't, Laertes? 297

Laer. Why, as a woodcock, to mine own springe, Osrice;

I am justly kill'd with mine own treachery.

Ham. How does the Queen?

King. She swoons to see them bleed.

Queen. No, no, the drink, the drink! O my dear Hamlet! 301

The drink, the drink! I am poison'd. [Dies.

Ham. O, villainy! Ho! let the door be lock'd.

Treachery! seek it out. [Laertes falls.

Laer. It is here, Hamlet. Hamlet, thou art slain; 305

No med'cine in the world can do thee good;

In thee there is not half an hour's life; The treacherous instrument is in thy hand, Unbated and evenom'd. The foul practice Hath turn'd itself on me; lo, here I lie, 310 Never to rise again. Thy mother's poison'd. I can no more. The King, the King's to blame.

Ham. The point evenom'd too!

Then, venom, to thy work. [Stabs the King.

All. Treason! treason! 315

King. O, yet defend me, friends; I am but hurt.

Ham. Here, thou incestuous, murd'rous, damned Dane,

Drink off this potion. Is thy union here?

Follow my mother. [King dies.

Laer. He is justly serv'd:

It is a poison temper'd by himself. 320 Exchange forgiveness with me, noble Hamlet.

Mine and my father's death come not upon thee,

Nor thine on me! [Dies.

Ham. Heaven make thee free of it! I follow thee.

I am dead, Horatio. Wretched queen, adieu! 325

You that look pale and tremble at this chance,

That are but mutes or audience to this act,

Had I but time, as this fell sergeant Death Is strict in his arrest, O, I could tell you—

But let it be. Horatio, I am dead: 330

Thou livest; report me and my cause aright

To the unsatisfied.

Hor. Never believe it.

I am more an antique Roman than a Dane; Here's yet some liquor left.

Ham. As th'art a man,

Give me the cup. Let go. By heaven, I'll ha't. 335

O God! Horatio, what a wounded name, Things standing thus unknown, shall live behind me!

If thou didst ever hold me in thy heart, Absent thee from felicity awhile,

And in this harsh world draw thy breath in pain, 340

To tell my story.

[March afar off, and shot within.

What warlike noise is this?

Osr. Young Fortinbras, with conquest come from Poland,

To th' ambassadors of England gives

This warlike volley.

Ham. O, I die, Horatio!

The potent poison quite o'er-crows my spirit. 345

I cannot live to hear the news from England,

But I do prophesy th' election lights

On Fortinbras; he has my dying voice.

So tell him, with th' occurrents, more and less, ³⁴⁹
Which have solicited—the rest is silence.

[Dies.

Hor. Now cracks a noble heart. Good night, sweet prince,
And flights of angels sing thee to thy rest!

[March within.

Why does the drum come hither?

Enter FORTINBRAS and English Ambassadors, with drum, colours, and Attendants.

Fort. Where is this sight?

Hor. What is it you would see?
If aught of woe or wonder, cease your search. ³⁵⁵

Fort. This quarry cries on havoc. O proud death,
What feast is toward in thine eternal cell
That thou so many princes at a shot
So bloodily hast struck?

1 Amb. The sight is dismal;
And our affairs from England come too late: ³⁶⁰

The ears are senseless that should give us hearing

To tell him his commandment is fulfill'd, That Rosencrantz and Guildenstern are
dead.

Where should we have our thanks?

Hor. Not from his mouth,
Had it th' ability of life to thank you: ³⁶⁵
He never gave commandment for their
death.

But since, so jump upon this bloody
question,

You from the Polack wars, and you from England,

Are here arrived, give order that these bodies

High on a stage be placed to the view; ³⁷⁰
And let me speak to th' yet unknowing
world

How these things came about. So shall you hear

Of carnal, bloody, and unnatural acts;
Of accidental judgments, casual slaughters;
Of deaths put on by cunning and forc'd cause; ³⁷⁵

And, in this upshot, purposes mistook Fall'n on th' inventors' heads—all this can I

Truly deliver.

Fort. Let us haste to hear it,
And call the noblest to the audience.
For me, with sorrow I embrace my fortune; ³⁸⁰

I have some rights of memory in this
kingdom,
Which now to claim my vantage doth invite
me.

Hor. Of that I shall have also cause to
speak,

And from his mouth whose voice will draw on more. ³⁸⁴

But let this same be presently perform'd, Even while men's minds are wild, lest more mischance

On plots and errors happen.

Fort. Let four captains
Bear Hamlet like a soldier to the stage;
For he was likely, had he been put on,
To have prov'd most royal; and for his passage ³⁹⁰

The soldier's music and the rite of war
Speak loudly for him.

Take up the bodies. Such a sight as this Becomes the field, but here shows much amiss. ³⁹⁴

Go, bid the soldiers shoot. [Exeunt marching.
A peal of ordnance shot off.

KING LEAR

 EDMUND, bastard son to Gloucester.
 CURAN, a courtier.
 Old Man, tenant to Gloucester.
 Doctor.

Fool.
 OSWALD, steward to Goneril.
 A Captain, employed by Edmund.
 Gentleman attendant on Cordelia.
 A Herald.
 Servants to Cornwall.
 GONERIL, }
 REGAN, } daughters to Lear.
 CORDELIA, }
 Knights attending on Lear, Officers, Messengers, Soldiers, and Attendants.

THE SCENE: Britain.

ACT ONE

SCENE I. King Lear's palace.

Enter KENT, GLOUCESTER, and EDMUND.

Kent. I thought the King had more affected the Duke of Albany than Cornwall.

Glo. It did always seem so to us; but now, in the division of the kingdom, it appears not which of the Dukes he values most; for equalities are so weigh'd that curiosity in neither can make choice of either's moiety. 6

Kent. Is not this your son, my lord?

Glo. His breeding, sir, hath been at my charge. I have so often blush'd to acknowledge him that now I am braz'd to't. 10

Kent. I cannot conceive you.

Glo. Sir, this young fellow's mother could; whereupon she grew round-womb'd, and had indeed, sir, a son for her cradle ere she had a husband for her bed. Do you smell a fault? 15

Kent. I cannot wish the fault undone, the issue of it being so proper.

Glo. But I have a son, sir, by order of law, some year elder than this, who yet is no dearer in my account. Though this knave came something saucily to the world before he was sent for, yet was his mother fair; there was good sport at his making, and the whoreson must be acknowledged.—Do you know this noble gentleman, Edmund?

Edm. No, my lord. 25

Glo. My Lord of Kent. Remember him hereafter as my honourable friend.

Edm. My services to your lordship.

Kent. I must love you, and sue to know you better.

Edm. Sir, I shall study deserving. 30

Glo. He hath been out nine years, and away he shall again. [Sennet] The King is coming.

Enter One bearing a coronet; then LEAR, then the DUKES OF ALBANY and CORNWALL, next GONERIL, REGAN, CORDELIA, with Followers.

Lear. Attend the Lords of France and Burgundy, Gloucester.

Glo. I shall, my liege.

[Exeunt Gloucester and Edmund.]

Lear. Meantime we shall express our darker purpose. 35

Give me the map there. Know that we have divided

In three our kingdom; and 'tis our fast intent

To shake all cares and business from our age,

Conferring them on younger strengths, while we Unburden'd crawl toward death. Our son of Cornwall, 40

And you, our no less loving son of Albany, We have this hour a constant will to publish

Our daughters' several dowers, that future strife

May be prevented now. The Princes, France and Burgundy,

Great rivals in our youngest daughter's love, 45

Long in our court have made their amorous sojourn,

And here are to be answer'd. Tell me, my daughters—

Since now we will divest us both of rule, Interest of territory, cares of state—

Which of you shall we say doth love us most? 50

That we our largest bounty may extend
Where nature doth with merit challenge.

Goneril,

Our eldest-born, speak first.

Gon. Sir, I love you more than word can wield the matter ;

Dearer than eyesight, space, and liberty ; 55
Beyond what can be valued, rich or rare ;
No less than life, with grace, health, beauty,
honour ;

As much as child e'er lov'd, or father
found ;

A love that makes breath poor and speech unable : 59

Beyond all manner of so much I love you.

Cor. [Aside] What shall Cordelia speak ?
Love, and be silent.

Lear. Of all these bounds, even from this line to this,

With shadowy forests and with champains
rich'd,

With plenteous rivers and wide-skirted
meads,

We make thee lady : to thine and Albany's issues 65

Be this perpetual.—What says our second
daughter,

Our dearest Regan, wife of Cornwall ?
Speak.

Reg. I am made of that self metal as my sister,

And prize me at her worth. In my true
heart

I find she names my very deed of love ; 70
Only she comes too short, that I profess

Myself an enemy to all other joys
Which the most precious square of sense possesses,

And find I am alone felicitate 74

In your dear Highness' love.

Cor. [Aside] Then poor Cordelia !
And yet not so ; since I am sure my love's

More ponderous than my tongue.

Lear. To thee and thine hereditary ever Remain this ample third of our fair
kingdom ;

No less in space, validity, and pleasure, 80
Than that conferr'd on Goneril.—Now, our joy,

Although our last and least ; to whose young love

The vines of France and milk of Burgundy Strive to be interest'd ; what can you say to draw

A third more opulent than your sisters ?
Speak. 85

Cor. Nothing, my lord.

Lear. Nothing !

Cor. Nothing.

Lear. Nothing will come of nothing.
Speak again.

Cor. Unhappy that I am, I cannot heave
My heart into my mouth. I love your Majesty 91

According to my bond ; no more nor less.

Lear. How, how, Cordelia ! Mend your speech a little, 93

Lest you may mar your fortunes.

Cor. Good my lord,

You have begot me, bred me, lov'd me ; I Return those duties back as are right fit,

Obeys you, loves you, and most honour you.
Why have my sisters husbands, if they say

They love you all ? Haply, when I shall wed,

That lord whose hand must take my plight shall carry 100

Half my love with him, half my care and duty.

Sure I shall never marry like my sisters,
To love my father all.

Lear. But goes thy heart with this ?

Cor. Ay, my good lord.

Lear. So young and so untender ? 105

Cor. So young, my lord, and true.

Lear. Let it be so ! Thy truth, then, be thy dower !

For, by the scared radiance of the sun,
The mysteries of Hecat and the night ;

By all the operation of the orbs 110
From whom we do exist and cease to be ;

Here I disclaim all my paternal care,
Propinquity and property of blood,

And as a stranger to my heart and me
Hold thee from this for ever. The barbarous

Scythian, 115

Or he that makes his generation messes
To gorge his appetite, shall to my bosom

Be as well neighbour'd, pitied, and reliev'd,
As thou my sometime daughter.

Kent. Good my liege—

Lear. Peace, Kent ! 120

Come not between the dragon and his wrath.

I lov'd her most, and thought to set my rest

On her kind nursery. [To Cordelia] Hence, and avoid my sight !—

So be my grave my peace as here I give Her father's heart from her ! Call France—
Who stirs ? 125

Call Burgundy. Cornwall and Albany,
With my two daughters' dowers digest this third.

Let pride, which she calls plainness, marry
her.

I do invest you jointly with my power,
Pre-eminence, and all the large effects 130

That troop with majesty. Ourself, by monthly course,

With reservation of an hundred knights,
By you to be sustain'd, shall our abode

Make with you by due turn. Only we shall retain 134

The name, and all th' addition to a king :
The sway, revenue, execution of the rest,

Beloved sons, be yours ; which to confirm,
This coronet part between you.

Kent. Royal Lear,
Whom I have ever honour'd as my king,
Lov'd as my father, as my master follow'd,
As my great patron thought on in my prayers—¹⁴¹

Lear. The bow is bent and drawn ; make from the shaft.

Kent. Let it fall rather, though the fork invade

The region of my heart. Be Kent unmannerly

When Lear is mad. What wouldst thou do, old man ?¹⁴⁵

Think'st thou that duty shall have dread
to speak

When power to flattery bows ? To plain-ness honour's bound

When majesty falls to folly. Reserve thy
state ;

And in thy best consideration check This hideous rashness. Answer my life my judgment :¹⁵⁰

Thy youngest daughter does not love thee least ;

Nor are those empty-hearted whose low sounds

Reverb no hollowness.

Lear. Kent, on thy life, no more !
Kent. My life I never held but as a pawn

To wage against thine enemies ; nor fear to lose it,¹⁵⁵

Thy safety being motive.
Lear. Out of my sight !

Kent. See better, Lear ; and let me still remain

The true blank of thine eye.
Lear. Now by Apollo—

Kent. Now, by Apollo, King,
Thou swear'st thy gods in vain.

Lear. O, vassal ! miscreant !
[Laying his hand on his sword.]

Alb. and Corn. Dear sir, forbear.¹⁶¹
Kent. Do ;

Kill thy physician, and the fee bestow
Upon the foul disease. Revoke thy gift,

Or, whilst I can vent clamour from my throat,¹⁶⁵

I'll tell thee thou dost evil.
Lear. Hear me, recreant ;

On thine allegiance, hear me.
That thou hast sought to make us break

our vows—
Which we durst never yet—and with

strain'd pride
To come betwixt our sentence and our power—¹⁷⁰

Which nor our nature nor our place can

bear ;
Our potency made good, take thy reward.

Five days we do allot thee for provision
To shield thee from disasters of the world,

And on the sixth to turn thy hated back¹⁷⁵
Upon our kingdom ; if, on the tenth day

following,

Thy banish'd trunk be found in our dominions,

The moment is thy death. Away ! by Jupiter,

This shall not be revok'd.
Kent. Fare thee well, King. Sith thus thou wilt appear,¹⁸⁰

Freedom lives hence, and banishment is

here.
[To Cordelia] The gods to their dear shelter take thee, maid,

That justly think'st, and hast most rightly

said !
[To Regan and Goneril] And your large speeches may your deeds approve,

That good effects may spring from words of love !¹⁸⁵

Thus Kent, O princes, bids you all adieu ;
He'll shape his old course in a country rew.

[Exit.]

Flourish. Re-enter GLOUCESTER, with FRANCE, BURGUNDY, and Attendants.

Glo. Here's France and Burgundy, my noble lord.

Lear. My Lord of Burgundy,
We first address toward you, who with this king¹⁹⁰

Hath rivall'd for our daughter. What in the least

Will you require in present dower with her,
Or cease your quest of love ?

Bur. Most royal Majesty,
I crave no more than hath your Highness

offer'd,
Nor will you tender less.

Lear. Right noble Burgundy,¹⁹⁵
When she was dear to us, we did hold her

so ;
But now her price is fallen. Sir, there she

stands :
If aught within that little seeming substance,

Or all of it, with our displeasure piec'd,

And nothing more, may fitly like your Grace,²⁰⁰

She's there, and she is yours.
Bur. I know no answer.

Lear. Will you, with those infirmities she owes,

Unfriended, new-adopted to our hate,
Dower'd with our curse, and stranger'd with our oath,²⁰⁴

Take her or leave her ?

Bur. Pardon me, royal sir ;
Election makes not up in such conditions.

Lear. Then leave her, sir ; for, by the pow'r that made me,²⁰⁷

I tell you all her wealth. [To France] For you, great King,

I would not from your love make such a stray

To match you where I hate ; therefore beseech you²¹⁰

T' avert your liking a more worthier way,
Than on a wretch whom nature is asham'd
Almost t' acknowledge hers.

France. This is most strange,
That she, whom even but now was your best object,

The argument of your praise, balm of your age, ²¹⁵

The best, the dearest, should in this trice
of time

Commit a thing so monstrous to dismantle
So many folds of favour. Sure her offence Must be of such unnatural degree

That monsters it, or your fore-vouch'd affection ²²⁰

Fall into taint—which to believe of her Must be a faith that reason without miracle
Should never plant in me.

Cor. I yet beseech your Majesty—
If for I want that glib and oily art

To speak and purpose not, since what I well intend ²²⁵

I'll do't before I speak—that you make known

It is no vicious blot, murder, or foulness,
No unchaste action or dishonoured step,
That hath depriv'd me of your grace and
favour;

But even for want of that for which I am richer— ²³⁰

A still-soliciting eye, and such a tongue
That I am glad I have not, though not to have it

Hath lost me in your liking.

Lear. Better thou Hadst not been born than not t' have pleas'd me better.

France. Is it but this? A tardiness in nature, ²³⁵

Which often-leaves the history unspoke
That it intends to do! My Lord of Burgundy,

What say you to the lady? Love's not
love

When it is mingled with regards that stands

Aloof from th' entire point. Will you have her? ²⁴⁰

She is herself a dowry.

Bur. Royal king,
Give but that portion which yourself
propos'd,

And here I take Cordelia by the hand,
Duchess of Burgundy.

Lear. Nothing! I have sworn; I am firm. ²⁴⁵

Bur. I am sorry, then, you have so lost a father

That you must lose a husband.

Cor. Peace be with Burgundy!
Since that respects of fortune are his love
I shall not be his wife.

France. Fairest Cordelia, that art most rich, being poor; ²⁵⁰

Most choice, forsaken; and most lov'd, despis'd!

Thee and thy virtues here I seize upon,
Be it lawful I take up what's cast away.
Gods, gods! 'tis strange that from their cold'st neglect ²⁵⁴

My love should kindle to inflam'd respect.
Thy dow'rless daughter, King, thrown to my chance,

Is queen of us, of ours, and our fair France.
Not all the dukes of wat'rish Burgundy
Can buy this unpriz'd precious maid of me.
Bid them farewell, Cordelia, though unkind; ²⁶⁰

Thou lovest here, a better where to find.

Lear. Thou hast her, France; let her be thine; for we

Have no such daughter, nor shall ever see That face of hers again. [To Cordelia] Therefore be gone

Without our grace, our love, our benison.
Come, noble Burgundy. ²⁶⁶

[Flourish. Exeunt Lear, Burgundy, Cornwall, Albany, Gloucester, and Attendants.
France. Bid farewell to your sisters.

Cor. The jewels of our father, with wash'd
eyes

Cordelia leaves you. I know you what you
are;

And, like a sister, am most loath to call ²⁷⁰
Your faults as they are named. Love well our father.

To your professed bosoms I commit him;
But yet, alas, stood I within his grace,
I would prefer him to a better place.

So, farewell to you both. ²⁷⁵

Reg. Prescribe not us our duty.

Gon. Let your study
Be to content your lord, who hath receiv'd
you

At fortune's alms. You have obedience
scanted,

And well are worth the want that you have wanted.

Cor. Time shall unfold what plighted cunning hides, ²⁸⁰

Who covers faults, at last with shame derides.

Well may you prosper!

France. Come, my fair Cordelia.
[Exeunt France and Cordelia.

Gon. Sister, it is not little I have to say of what most nearly appertains to us both.
I think our father will hence to-night. ²⁸⁵

Reg. That's most certain, and with you;
next month with us.

Gon. You see how full of changes his age is; the observation we have made of it hath not been little. He always lov'd our sister most; and with what poor judgment he hath now cast her off appears too grossly.

Reg. 'Tis the infirmity of his age; yet he hath ever but slenderly known himself. ²⁹³

Gon. The best and soundest of his time hath been but rash ; then must we look from his age to receive not alone the imperfections of long-engrafted condition, but therewithal the unruly waywardness that infirm and choleric years bring with them.

Reg. Such unconstant starts are we like to have from him as this of Kent's banishment. 300

Gon. There is further compliment of leave-taking between France and him. Pray you, let us hit together ; if our father carry authority with such disposition as he bears, this last surrender of his will but offend us.

Reg. We shall further think of it. 305

Gon. We must do something, and i' th' heat. [Exeunt.

SCENE II. Gloucester's castle.

Enter EDMUND with a letter.

Edm. Thou, Nature, art my goddess ; to thy law

My services are bound. Wherefore should I Stand in the plague of custom, and permit The curiosity of nations to deprive me, For that I am some twelve or fourteen moonshines 5

Lag of a brother ? Why bastard ? Wherefore base ?

When my dimensions are as well compact, My mind as generous, and my shape as true,

As honest madam's issue ? Why brand they us

With base ? with baseness ? bastardy ? base, base ? 10

Who, in the lusty stealth of nature, take More composition and fierce quality Than doth, within a dull, stale, tired bed, Go to th' creating a whole tribe of fops Got 'tween asleep and wake ? Well then, 15 Legitimate Edgar, I must have your land. Our father's love is to the bastard Edmund As to th' legitimate. Fine word 'legitimate' !

Well, my legitimate, if this letter speed, 19 And my invention thrive, Edmund the base Shall top th' legitimate. I grow ; I prosper. Now, gods, stand up for bastards.

Enter GLOUCESTER.

Glo. Kent banish'd thus ! and France in choler parted !

And the King gone to-night ! Prescrib'd his pow'r !

Confin'd to exhibition ! All this done 25 Upon the gad ! Edmund, how now ! What news ?

Edm. So please your lordship, none.

[Putting up the letter.

Glo. Why so earnestly seek you to put up that letter ?

Edm. I know no news, my lord.

Glo. What paper were you reading ? 30

Edm. Nothing, my lord.

Glo. No ? What needed then that terrible dispatch of it into your pocket ? The quality of nothing hath not such need to hide itself. Let's see. Come, if it be nothing, I shall not need spectacles. 35

Edm. I beseech you, sir, pardon me. It is a letter from my brother that I have not all o'er-read ; and for so much as I have perus'd, I find it not fit for your o'er-looking.

Glo. Give me the letter, sir. 39

Edm. I shall offend either to detain or give it. The contents, as in part I understand them, are to blame.

Glo. Let's see, let's see.

Edm. I hope, for my brother's justification, he wrote this but as an essay or taste of my virtue. 44

Glo. [Reads] ' This policy and reverence of age makes the world bitter to the best of our times ; keeps our fortunes from us till our oldness cannot relish them. I begin to find an idle and fond bondage in the oppression of aged tyranny, who sways, not as it hath power, but as it is suffer'd. Come to me, that of this I may speak more. If our father would sleep till I wak'd him, you should enjoy half his revenue for ever, and live the beloved of your brother.

EDGAR.' 51

Hum—Conspiracy ! ' Sleep till-I wak'd him, you should enjoy half his revenue.' My son Edgar ! Had he a hand to write this ? a heart and a brain to breed it in ? When came this to you ? Who brought it ?

Edm. It was not brought me, my lord ; there's the cunning of it. I found it thrown in at the casement of my closet. 58

Glo. You know the character to be your brother's ?

Edm. If the matter were good, my lord, I durst swear it were his ; but in respect of that, I would fain think it were not. 62

Glo. It is his.

Edm. It is his hand, my lord ; but I hope his heart is not in the contents. 65

Glo. Has he never before sounded you in this business ?

Edm. Never, my lord ; but I have heard him oft maintain it to be fit that, sons at perfect age and fathers declin'd, the father should be as ward to the son, and the son manage his revenue. 71

Glo. O villain, villain ! His very opinion in the letter ! Abhorred villain ! Unnatural, detested, brutish villain ! Worse than brutish ! Go, sirrah, seek him ; I'll apprehend him. Abominable villain ! Where is he ? 75

Edm. I do not well know, my lord. If it shall please you to suspend your indignation against my brother till you can derive from him better testimony of his intent, you should run a certain course; where, if you violently proceed against him, mistaking his purpose, it would make a great gap in your own honour, and shake in pieces the heart of his obedience. I dare pawn down my life for him that he hath writ this to feel my affection to your honour, and to no other pretence of danger.

Glo. Think you so? 85

Edm. If your honour judge it meet, I will place you where you shall hear us confer of this, and by an auricular assurance have your satisfaction; and that without any further delay than this very evening.

Glo. He cannot be such a monster. 90

Edm. Nor is not, sure.

Glo. To his father, that so tenderly and entirely loves him. Heaven and earth! Edmund, seek him out; wind me into him, I pray you. Frame the business after your own wisdom. I would unstate myself to be in a due resolution. 96

Edm. I will seek him, sir, presently; convey the business as I shall find means, and acquaint you withal.

Glo. These late eclipses in the sun and moon portend no good to us. Though the wisdom of nature can reason it thus and thus, yet nature finds itself scourg'd by the sequent effects: love cools, friendship falls off, brothers divide; in cities, mutinies; in countries, discord; in palaces, treason; and the bond crack'd 'twixt son and father. This villain of mine comes under the prediction: there's son against father. The King falls from bias of nature: there's father against child. We have seen the best of our time: machinations, hollownness, treachery, and all ruinous disorders, follow us disquietly to our graves. Find out this villain, Edmund; it shall lose thee nothing; do it carefully. And the noble and true-hearted Kent banish'd! His offence, honesty! 'Tis strange. [Exit.]

Edm. This is the excellent foppery of the world, that, when we are sick in fortune, often the surfeits of our own behaviour, we make guilty of our disasters the sun, the moon, and stars; as if we were villains on necessity; fools by heavenly compulsion; knaves, thieves, and treachers, by spherical predominance; drunkards, liars, and adulterers, by an enforc'd obedience of planetary influence; and all that we are evil in, by a divine thrusting on—an admirable evasion of whoremaster man, to lay his goatish disposition on the charge of a star! My father compounded with my mother under the Dragon's tail, and my nativity was under Ursa Major, so that it follows I am rough and lecherous. Fut, I should have been that I am, had the maidenliest star in the firmament twinkled on my bastardizing. Edgar! 127

Enter EDGAR.

Pat! He comes like the catastrophe of the old comedy. My cue is villainous melancholy, with a sigh like Tom o' Bedlam.—O, these eclipses do portend these divisions! fa, sol, la, mi. 131

Edg. How now, brother Edmund! What serious contemplation are you in?

Edm. I am thinking, brother, of a prediction I read this other day what should follow these eclipses. 135

Edg. Do you busy yourself with that?

Edm. I promise you, the effects he writes of succeed unhappily; as of unnaturalness between the child and the parent; death, dearth, dissolutions of ancient amities; divisions in state, menaces and maledictions against king and nobles; needless diffidences, banishment of friends, dissipation of cohorts, nuptial breaches, and I know not what. 142

Edg. How long have you been a sectary astronomical?

Edm. Come, come! When saw you my father last? 145

Edg. The night gone by.

Edm. Spake you with him?

Edg. Ay, two hours together.

Edm. Parted you in good terms? Found you no displeasure in him by word nor countenance?

Edg. None at all. 150

Edm. Bethink yourself wherein you may have offended him; and at my entreaty forbear his presence, until some little time hath qualified the heat of his displeasure, which at this instant so rageth in him that with the mischief of your person it would scarcely allay. 155

Edg. Some villain hath done me wrong.

Edm. That's my fear. I pray you have a continent forbearance till the speed of his rage goes slower; and, as I say, retire with me to my lodging, from whence I will fitly bring you to hear my lord speak. Pray ye go; there's my key. If you do stir abroad, go arm'd. 161

Edg. Arm'd, brother!

Edm. Brother, I advise you to the best. I am no honest man if there be any good meaning toward you. I have told you what I have seen and heard—but faintly; nothing like the image and horror of it. Pray you, away. 167

Edg. Shall I hear from you anon?

Edm. I do serve you in this business.

[Exit Edgar.]

A credulous father! and a brother noble, Whose nature is so far from doing harms

That he suspects none ; on whose foolish honesty
My practices ride easy ! I see the business.
Let me, if not by birth, have lands by wit :
All with me's meet that I can fashion fit. 175
[Exit.]

SCENE III. The Duke of Albany's palace.

Enter GONERIL and OSWALD, her steward.

Gon. Did my father strike my gentleman for chiding of his fool ?

Osw. Ay, madam.

Gon. By day and night, he wrongs me ;
every hour

He flashes into one gross crime or other 5
That sets us all at odds. I'll not endure it.
His knights grow riotous, and himself up-braids us

On every trifle. When he returns from hunting,

I will not speak with him ; say I am sick.
If you come slack of former services, 10

You shall do well ; the fault of it I'll answer. [Horns within.]

Osw. He's coming, madam ; I hear him.

Gon. Put on what weary negligence you
please,

You and your fellows ; I'd have it come to question.

If he distaste it, let him to my sister, 15
Whose mind and mine, I know, in that are one,

Not to be overrul'd. Idle old man,
That still would manage those authorities That he hath given away ! Now, by my life,

Old fools are babes again, and must be us'd With checks as flatteries, when they are seen abus'd. 21

Remember what I have said.

Osw. Well, madam.

Gon. And let his knights have colder looks among you ;

What grows of it, no matter. Advise your fellows so.

I would breed from hence occasions, and I shall, 25

That I may speak. I'll write straight to my sister

To hold my very course. Prepare for dinner. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV. A hall in Albany's palace.

Enter KENT, disguised.

Kent. If but as well I other accents borrow

That can my speech defuse, my good intent
May carry through itself to that full issue
For which I raz'd my likeness. Now, banish'd Kent,

If thou canst serve where thou dost stand condemn'd, 5

So may it come thy master whom thou lov'st

Shall find thee full of labours.

Horns within. Enter LEAR, Knights, and Attendants.

Lear. Let me not stay a jot for dinner ; go get it ready. [Exit an Attendant] How now ! What art thou ?

Kent. A man, sir. 10

Lear. What dost thou profess ? What wouldst thou with us ?

Kent. I do profess to be no less than I seem, to serve him truly that will put me in trust, to love him that is honest, to converse with him that is wise and says little, to fear judgment, to fight when I cannot choose, and to eat no fish. 17

Lear. What art thou ?

Kent. A very honest-hearted fellow, and as poor as the King. 20

Lear. If thou be'st as poor for a subject as he's for a king, thou art poor enough.
What wouldst thou ?

Kent. Service.

Lear. Who wouldst thou serve ?

Kent. You. 25

Lear. Dost thou know me, fellow ?

Kent. No, sir ; but you have that in your countenance which I would fain call master.

Lear. What's that ?

Kent. Authority. 30

Lear. What services canst thou do ?

Kent. I can keep honest counsel, ride, run, mar a curious tale in telling it, and deliver a plain message bluntly. That which ordinary men are fit for, I am qualified in ; and the best of me is diligence. 35

Lear. How old art thou ?

Kent. Not so young, sir, to love a woman for singing, nor so old to dote on her for anything : I have years on my back forty-eight. 39

Lear. Follow me ; thou shalt serve me.
If I like thee no worse after dinner, I will not part from thee yet. Dinner, ho, dinner !
Where's my knave ? my fool ?—Go you and call my fool hither. [Exit an Attendant.]

Enter OSWALD.

You, you, sirrah, where's my daughter ? 44

Osw. So please you— [Exit.]

Lear. What says the fellow there ? Call the clotpoll back. [Exit a Knight] Where's my fool, ho ? I think the world's asleep.

Re-enter Knight.

How now ! Where's that mongrel ?

Knight. He says, my lord, your daughter is not well. 50

Lear. Why came not the slave back to me when I call'd him ?

Knight. Sir, he answered me in the roundest manner he would not.

Lear. He would not ! 55

Knight. My lord, I know not what the matter is ; but, to my judgment, your Highness is not entertain'd with that ceremonious affection as you were wont ; there's a great abatement of kindness appears as well in the general dependants as in the Duke himself also and your daughter. 61

Lear. Ha ! say'st thou so ?

Knight. I beseech you pardon me, my lord, if I be mistaken ; for my duty cannot be silent when I think your Highness wrong'd. 65

Lear. Thou but rememb'rest me of mine own conception. I have perceived a most faint neglect of late, which I have rather blamed as mine own jealous curiosity than as a very pretence and purpose of unkindness. I will look further into't. But where's my fool ? I have not seen him this two days. 71

Knight. Since my young lady's going into France, sir, the fool hath much pined away.

Lear. No more of that ; I have noted it well. Go you and tell my daughter I would speak with her. [Exit an Attendant] Go you, call hither my fool. [Exit another Attendant.]

Re-enter OSWALD.

O, you sir, you ! Come you hither, sir. Who am I, sir ? 77

Osw. My lady's father.

Lear. 'My lady's father' ! my lord's knave ! you whoreson dog ! you slave ! you cur ! 80

Osw. I am none of these, my lord ; I beseech your pardon.

Lear. Do you bandy looks with me, you rascal ! [Striking him.]

Osw. I'll not be stricken, my lord. 84

Kent. Nor tripp'd neither, you base football player. [Tripping up his heels.]

Lear. I thank thee, fellow ; thou serv'st me, and I'll love thee. 87

Kent. Come, sir, arise, away ! I'll teach you differences. Away, away ! If you will measure your lubber's length again, tarry ; but away ! Go to ! Have you wisdom ? So. [Pushes Oswald out.]

Lear. Now, my friendly knave, I thank thee ; there's earnest of thy service. 93

[Giving Kent money.]

Enter FOOL.

Fool. Let me hire him too ; here's my coxcomb. [Offering Kent his cap.]

Lear. How now, my pretty knave ! How dost thou ? 95

Fool. Sirrah, you were best take my coxcomb.

1080

Kent. Why, fool ?

Fool. Why ? For taking one's part that's out of favour. Nay, an thou canst not smile as the wind sits, thou'lt catch cold shortly. There, take my coxcomb. Why, this fellow has banish'd two on's daughters, and did the third a blessing against his will ; if thou follow him, thou must needs wear my coxcomb.—How now, nuncle ! Would I had two coxcombs and two daughters !

Lear. Why, my boy ? 105

Fool. If I gave them all my living, I'd keep my coxcombs myself. There's mine ; beg another of thy daughters.

Lear. Take heed, sirrah—the whip. 109

Fool. Truth's a dog must to kennel ; he must be whipp'd out, when Lady the brach may stand by th' fire and stink.

Lear. A pestilent gall to me !

Fool. Sirrah, I'll teach thee a speech.

Lear. Do. 115

Fool. Mark it, nuncle :

Have more than thou showest,
Speak less than thou knowest,
Lend less than thou owest,
Ride more than thou goest, 120
Learn more than thou trowest,
Set less than thou throwest ;
Leave thy drink and thy whore,
And keep in-a-door,
And thou shalt have more 125
Than two tens to a score.

Kent. This is nothing, fool.

Fool. Then 'tis like the breath of an unfeeling lawyer—you gave me nothing for't. Can you make no use of nothing, nuncle ?

Lear. Why, no, boy ; nothing can be made out of nothing. 132

Fool. [To Kent] Prithee tell him, so much the rent of his land comes to ; he will not believe a fool.

Lear. A bitter fool ! 135

Fool. Dost thou know the difference, my boy, between a bitter fool and a sweet one ?

Lear. No, lad ; teach me.

Fool. That lord that counsell'd thee
To give away thy land, 140
Come place him here by me—
Do thou for him stand.
The sweet and bitter fool
Will presently appear ;
The one in motley here, 145
The other found out there.

Lear. Dost thou call me fool, boy ?

Fool. All thy other titles thou hast given away ; that thou wast born with. 149

Kent. This is not altogether fool, my lord.

Fool. No, faith, lords and great men will not let me ; if I had a monopoly out, they would have part on't. And ladies too—they will not let me have all the fool to myself ; they'll be snatching. Nuncle, give me an egg, and I'll give thee two crowns. 155

Lear. What two crowns shall they be ?

Fool. Why, after I have cut the egg i' th' middle and eat up the meat, the two crowns of the egg. When thou clovest thy crown i' th' middle, and gav'st away both parts, thou bor'st thine ass on thy back o'er the dirt. Thou hadst little wit in thy bald crown when thou gav'st thy golden one away. If I speak like myself in this, let him be whipp'd that first finds it so. 163

[Sings] Fools had ne'er less grace in a year ;
For wise men are grown foppish,
And know not how their wits to wear,
Their manners are so apish.

Lear. When were you wont to be so full of songs, sirrah ? 169

Fool. I have us'd it, nuncle, e'er since thou mad'st thy daughters thy mothers ; for when thou gav'st them the rod, and put'st down thine own breeches

[Sings] Then they for sudden joy did weep,
And I for sorrow sung,
That such a king should play bo-peep 175

And go the fools among.

Prithee, nuncle, keep a schoolmaster that can teach thy fool to lie. I would fain learn to lie.

Lear. An you lie, sirrah, we'll have you whipp'd. 179

Fool. I marvel what kin thou and thy daughters are. They'll have me whipp'd for speaking true : thou'lt have me whipp'd for lying ; and sometimes I am whipp'd for holding my peace. I had rather be any kind o' thing than a fool ; and yet I would not be thee, nuncle ; thou hast pared thy wit o' both sides, and left nothing i' th' middle. Here comes one o' th' parings. 186

Enter GONERIL.

Lear. How now, daughter ! What makes that frontlet on ? You are too much of late i' th' frown. 189

Fool. Thou wast a pretty fellow when thou hadst no need to care for her frowning ; now thou art an O without a figure. I am better than thou art now : I am a fool, thou art nothing. [To Goneril] Yes, forsooth, I will hold my tongue ; so your face bids me, though you say nothing. Mum, mum !

He that keeps nor crust nor crumb,

Weary of all, shall want some. 197

[Pointing to Lear] That's a sheal'd peascod.

Gon. Not only, sir, this your all-licens'd fool,

But other of your insolent retinue 200
Do hourly carp and quarrel, breaking forth

In rank and not-to-be-endured riots. Sir, I had thought, by making this well known unto you,

To have found a safe redress ; but now grow fearful,

By what yourself too late have spoke and done, 205

That you protect this course, and put it on By your allowance ; which if you should, the fault

Would not scape censure, nor the redresses sleep, 208

Which, in the tender of a wholesome weal, Might in their working do you that offence Which else were shame, that then necessity Will call discreet proceeding.

Fool. For, you know, nuncle,
The hedge-sparrow fed the cuckoo so long
That it's had it head bit off by it young. 215
So, out went the candle, and we were left darkling.

Lear. Are you our daughter ?

Gon. I would you would make use of your good wisdom,

Whereof I know you are fraught, and put away 220

These dispositions which of late transport you

From what you rightly are.

Fool. May not an ass know when the cart draws the horse ? Whoop, Jug ! I love thee.

Lear. Does any here know me ? This is not Lear. 225

Does Lear walk thus ? speak thus ? Where are his eyes ?

Either his notion weakens, or his discernings

Are lethargied.—Ha ! waking ? 'Tis not so.—

Who is it that can tell me who I am ?

Fool. Lear's shadow. 230

Lear. I would learn that ; for, by the marks of sovereignty, knowledge, and reason, I should be false persuaded I had daughters.

Fool. Which they will make an obedient father.

Lear. Your name, fair gentlewoman ? 235

Gon. This admiration, sir, is much o' th' savour

Of other your new pranks. I do beseech you To understand my purposes aright.

As you are old and reverend, should be wise. Here do you keep a hundred knights and squires ; 240

Men so disorder'd, so debosh'd and bold, That this our court, infected with their manners,

Shows like a riotous inn. Epicurism and lust

Makes it more like a tavern or a brothel Than a grac'd palace. The shame itself doth speak 245

For instant remedy. Be then desir'd By her that else will take the thing she begs

A little to disquantity your train ; And the remainders that shall still depend

To be such men as may besort your age, 250 Which know themselves and you.

Lear. Darkness and devils !
Saddle my horses ; call my train together.
Degenerate bastard ! I'll not trouble thee ;
Yet have I left a daughter.

Gon. You strike my people ; and your disorder'd rabble ²⁵⁵
Make servants of their betters.

Enter ALBANY.

Lear. Woe that too late repents !—O, sir, are you come ?
Is it your will ? Speak, sir.—Prepare my horses.
Ingratitude, thou marble-hearted fiend,
More hideous when thou show'st thee in a child ²⁶⁰

Than the sea-monster !

Alb. Pray, sir, be patient.

Lear. [To Goneril] Detested kite ! thou
liest :

My train are men of choice and rarest parts,
That all particulars of duty know ;
And in the most exact regard support ²⁶⁵
The worships of their name.—O most small fault,

How ugly didst thou in Cordelia show !
Which, like an engine, wrench'd my frame of nature

From the fix'd place ; drew from my heart
all love ²⁶⁹

And added to the gall. O Lear, Lear, Lear !
Beat at this gate that let thy folly in [Striking his head.

And thy dear judgment out ! Go, go, my people. [Exeunt Kent and Knights.

Alb. My lord, I am guiltless, as I am ignorant

Of what hath moved you.

Lear. It may be so, my lord.
Hear, Nature, hear ; dear goddess, hear. ²⁷⁵
Suspend thy purpose, if thou didst intend
To make this creature fruitful.

Into her womb convey sterility ;
Dry up in her the organs of increase ; ²⁷⁹
And from her derogate body never spring
A babe to honour her ! If she must teem,

Create her child of spleen, that it may live
And be a thwart disnatur'd torment to her.
Let it stamp wrinkles in her brow of youth,
With cadent tears fret channels in her cheeks, ²⁸⁵

Turn all her mother's pains and benefits
To laughter and contempt, that she may feel

How sharper than a serpent's tooth it is To have a thankless child. Away, away !

[Exit.

Alb. Now, gods that we adore, whereof comes this ? ²⁹⁰

Gon. Never afflict yourself to know more
of it ;

But let his disposition have that scope
As dotage gives it.

Re-enter LEAR.

Lear. What, fifty of my followers at a clap !

Within a fortnight !

Alb. What's the matter, sir ?

Lear. I'll tell thee. [To Goneril] Life and death ! I am asham'd ²⁹⁶

That thou hast power to shake my manhood thus ;

That these hot tears, which break from me
perforce,

Should make thee worth them. Blasts and fogs upon thee !

Th' untented woundings of a father's curse Pierce every sense about thee !—Old fond eyes, ³⁰¹

BewEEP this cause again, I'll pluck ye
out,

And cast you, with the waters that you
loose,

To temper clay. Ha ! Is't come to this ?
Let it be so. I have another daughter, ³⁰⁵

Who, I am sure, is kind and comfortable.
When she shall hear this of thee, with her nails

She'll flay thy wolfish visage. Thou shalt find

That I'll resume the shape which thou dost
think

I have cast off for ever. ³¹⁰

[Exit Lear.

Gon. Do you mark that ?

Alb. I cannot be so partial, Goneril,
To the great love I bear you—

Gon. Pray you, content.—What, Oswald, ho !

[To the Fool] You, sir, more knave than fool, after your master. ³¹⁵

Fool. Nuncle Lear, nuncle Lear, tarry—take the fool with thee.

A fox, when one has caught her,
And such a daughter,

Should sure to the slaughter, ³²⁰
If my cap would buy a halter.

So the fool follows after. [Exit.

Gon. This man hath had good counsel. A hundred knights !

'Tis politic and safe to let him keep At point a hundred knights—yes, that on every dream, ³²⁵

Each buzz, each fancy, each complaint,
dislike,

He may enguard his dotage with their
pow'rs,

And hold our lives in mercy. Oswald, I say !
Alb. Well, you may fear too far.

Gon. Safer than trust too far.
Let me still take away the harms I fear, ³³⁰

Not fear still to be taken. I know his heart.
What he hath utter'd I have writ my sister.

If she sustain him and his hundred knights,
When I have show'd th' unfitness—

Re-enter OSWALD.

How now, Oswald!

What, have you writ that letter to my sister?

335

Osw. Ay, madam.

Gon. Take you some company, and away to horse;

Inform her full of my particular fear,
And thereto add such reasons of your own
As may compact it more. Get you gone; 340
And hasten your return. [Exit Oswald] No,
no, my lord,

This milky gentleness and course of yours,
Though I condemn not, yet, under pardon,
You are much more ataxt for want of wisdom

Than prais'd for harmful mildness. 345

Alb. How far your eyes may pierce I cannot tell.

Striving to better, oft we mar what's well.

Gon. Nay, then—

Alb. Well, well; th' event. [Exeunt.]

SCENE V. Court before the Duke of Albany's
palace.

Enter LEAR, KENT, and FOOL.

Lear. Go you before to Gloucester with these letters. Acquaint my daughter no further with anything you know than comes from her demand out of the letter. If your diligence be not speedy, I shall be there afore you. 4

Kent. I will not sleep, my lord, till I have delivered your letter. [Exit.]

Fool. If a man's brains were in's heels, weren't not in danger of kibes?

Lear. Ay, boy.

Fool. Then, I prithee, be merry; thy wit shall not go slipshod. 11

Lear. Ha, ha, ha!

Fool. Shalt see thy other daughter will use thee kindly; for though she's as like this as a crab's like an apple, yet I can tell what I can tell. 15

Lear. What canst tell, boy?

Fool. She will taste as like this as a crab does to a crab. Thou canst tell why one's nose stands i' th' middle on's face?

Lear. No. 20

Fool. Why to keep one's eyes of either side's nose, that what a man cannot smell out, he may spy into.

Lear. I did her wrong.

Fool. Canst tell how an oyster makes his shell?

Lear. No. 25

Fool. Nor I neither; but I can tell why a snail has a house.

Lear. Why?

Fool. Why, to put's head in; not to give it away to his daughters, and leave his horns without a case. 30

Lear. I will forget my nature. So kind a father!—Be my horses ready?

Fool. Thy asses are gone about 'em. The reason why the seven stars are no more than seven is a pretty reason.

Lear. Because they are not eight? 35

Fool. Yes, indeed. Thou wouldst make a good fool.

Lear. To take't again perforce! Monster ingratitude!

Fool. If thou wert my fool, nuncle, I'd have thee beaten for being old before thy
time.

Lear. How's that? 40

Fool. Thou shouldst not have been old till thou hadst been wise.

Lear. O, let me not be mad, not mad, sweet heaven!

Keep me in temper; I would not be mad!

Enter Gentleman.

How now! are the horses ready? 45

Gent. Ready, my lord.

Lear. Come, boy.

Fool. She that's a maid now, and laughs at my departure,

Shall not be a maid long, unless things be cut shorter. [Exeunt.]

ACT TWO

SCENE I. A court-yard in the Earl of Gloucester's castle.

Enter EDMUND and CURAN, meeting.

Edm. Save thee, Curan.

Cur. And you, sir. I have been with your father, and given him notice that the Duke of Cornwall and Regan his Duchess will be here with him this night.

Edm. How comes that? 5

Cur. Nay, I know not. You have heard of the news abroad; I mean the whisper'd one, for they are yet but ear-bussing arguments?

Edm. Not I. Pray you, what are they? 10

Cur. Have you heard of no likely wars toward 'twixt the Dukes of Cornwall and Albany? 11

Edm. Not a word.

Cur. You may do, then, in time. Fare you well, sir. [Exit.]

Edm. The Duke be here to-night? The better! best!

This weaves itself perforce into my business. 15

My father hath set guard to take my
brother;

And I have one thing, of a queasy question,
Which I must act. Briefness and fortune work!

Brother, a word! Descend. Brother, I say!

Enter EDGAR.

My father watches. O sir, fly this place; 20

Intelligence is given where you are hid ;
You have now the good advantage of the
night.

Have you not spoken 'gainst the Duke of Cornwall ?

He's coming hither, now, i' th' night, i' th'
haste,

And Regan with him. Have you nothing said ²⁵

Upon his party 'gainst the Duke of Albany ?
Advise yourself.

Edg. I am sure on't, not a word.

Edm. I hear my father coming. Pardon
me,

In cunning I must draw my sword upon
you.

Draw ; seem to defend yourself ; now quit
you well.— ³⁰

Yield ; come before my father. Light, ho,
here !—

Fly, brother.—Torches, torches !—So, farewell. [Exit Edgar.]

Some blood drawn on me would beget opinion [Wounds his arm.]

Of my more fierce endeavour. I have seen drunkards

Do more than this in sport.—Father, father ! ³⁵

Stop, stop ! No help ?

Enter GLOUCESTER, and Servants with torches.

Glo. Now, Edmund, where's the villain ?

Edm. Here stood he in the dark, his sharp sword out,

Mumbling of wicked charms, conjuring the moon

To stand's auspicious mistress.

Glo. But where is he ? ⁴⁰

Edm. Look, sir, I bleed.

Glo. Where is the villain, Edmund ?

Edm. Fled this way, sir. When by no means he could—

Glo. Pursue him, ho ! Go after. [Exeunt Servants]—By no means what ?

Edm. Persuade me to the murder of your lordship ;

But that I told him the revenging gods ⁴⁵
'Gainst parricides did all their thunders bend ;

Spoke with how manifold and strong a bond
The child was bound to th' father. Sir, in fine,

Seeing how loathly opposite I stood
To his unnatural purpose, in fell motion, ⁵⁰
With his prepared sword, he charges home
My unprovided body, latch'd mine arm ;
But when he saw my best alarm'd spirits,
Bold in the quarrel's right, rous'd to th'
encounter,

Or whether gasted by the noise I made, ⁵⁵
Full suddenly he fled.

Glo. Let him fly far.

Not in this land shall he remain uncaught ;

And found—dispatch. The noble Duke my
master,

My worthy arch and patron, comes to-
night ;

By his authority I will proclaim it, ⁶⁰
That he which finds him shall deserve our thanks,

Bringing the murderous coward to the stake ;

He that conceals him, death.

Edm. When I dissuaded him from his intent,

And found him pight to do it, with curst speech ⁶⁵

I threaten'd to discover him ; he replied,
'Thou unpossessing bastard ! dost thou
think,

If I would stand against thee, would the reposure

Of any trust, virtue, or worth, in thee

Make thy words faith'd ? No. What I should deny— ⁷⁰

As this I would ; ay, though thou didst produce

My very character—I'd turn it all
To thy suggestion, plot, and damned
practice ;

And thou must make a dullard of the world,
If they not thought the profits of my death

Were very pregnant and potential spurs ⁷⁶
To make thee seek it'.

Glo. O strong and fast'ned villain !
Would he deny his letter ?—I never got him. [Tucket within.]

Hark, the Duke's trumpets ! I know not why he comes.

All ports I'll bar ; the villain shall not scape ; ⁸⁰

The Duke must grant me that. Besides, his picture

I will send far and near, that all the kingdom

May have due note of him ; and of my land,
Loyal and natural boy, I'll work the means

To make thee capable. ⁸⁵

Enter CORNWALL, REGAN, and Attendants.

Corn. How now, my noble friend ! since
I came hither,

Which I can call but now, I have heard strange news.

Reg. If it be true, all vengeance comes too short

Which can pursue th' offender. How dost,
my lord ?

Glo. O, madam, my old heart is crack'd,
it's crack'd ! ⁹⁰

Reg. What, did my father's godson seek your life ?

He whom my father nam'd ? your Edgar ?

Glo. O lady, lady, shame would have it hid !

Reg. Was he not companion with the riotous knights

That tend upon my father ? 95

Glo. I know not, madam. 'Tis too bad, too bad.

Edm. Yes, madam, he was of that consort.

Reg. No marvel, then, though he were ill affected.

'Tis they have put him on the old man's death,

To have th' expense and waste of his revenues. 100

I have this present evening from my sister Been well inform'd of them ; and with such cautions

That, if they come to sojourn at my house, I'll not be there.

Corn. Nor I, assure thee, Regan. Edmund, I hear that you have shown your father

A child-like office. 105

Edm. It was my duty, sir.

Glo. He did bewray his practice, and receiv'd

This hurt you see, striving to apprehend him.

Corn. Is he pursued ?

Glo. Ay, my good lord.

Corn. If he be taken, he shall never more Be fear'd of doing harm. Make your own purpose, 111

How in my strength you please. For you, Edmund,

Whose virtue and obedience doth this instant

So much commend itself, you shall be ours. Natures of such deep trust we shall much need ; 115

You we first seize on.

Edm. I shall serve you, sir, Truly, however else.

Glo. For him I thank your Grace.

Corn. You know not why we came to visit you—

Reg. Thus out of season, threading dark-ey'd night : 119

Occasions, noble Gloucester, of some poise, Wherein we must have use of your advice.

Our father he hath writ, so hath our sister, Of differences, which I best thought it fit To answer from our home ; the several messengers

From hence attend dispatch. Our good old friend, 125

Lay comforts to your bosom, and bestow Your needful counsel to our businesses, Which craves the instant use.

Glo. I serve you, madam. Your Graces are right welcome. [Exeunt.

SCENE II. Before Gloucester's castle.

Enter KENT and OSWALD severally.

Osw. Good dawning to thee, friend. Art of this house ?

Kent. Ay.

Osw. Where may we set our horses ?

Kent. I' th' mire.

Osw. Prithee, if thou lov'st me, tell me. 5

Kent. I love thee not.

Osw. Why then, I care not for thee.

Kent. If I had thee in Lipsbury pinfold, I would make thee care for me.

Osw. Why dost thou use me thus ? I know thee not. 10

Kent. Fellow, I know thee.

Osw. What dost thou know me for ?

Kent. A knave, a rascal, an eater of broken meats ; a base, proud, shallow, beggarly, three-suited, hundred-pound, filthy, worsted-stocking knave ; a lily-liver'd, action-taking, whoreson, glass-gazing, superserviceable, finical rogue ; one-trunk-inheriting slave ; one that wouldst be a bawd in way of good service, and art nothing but the composition of a knave, beggar, coward, pander, and the son and heir of a mongrel bitch ; one whom I will beat into clamorous whining, if thou deny'st the least syllable of thy addition.

Osw. Why, what a monstrous fellow art thou, thus to rail on one that is neither known of thee nor knows thee ? 24

Kent. What a brazen-fac'd varlet art thou, to deny thou knowest me ! Is it two days since I tripp'd up thy heels and beat thee before the King ? Draw, you rogue ; for, though it be night, yet the moon shines ; I'll make a sop o' th' moonshine of you ; you whoreson cullionly barber-monger, draw. [Drawing his sword.

Osw. Away ! I have nothing to do with thee. 31

Kent. Draw, you rascal. You come with letters against the King, and take Vanity the puppet's part against the royalty of her father. Draw, you rogue, or I'll so carbonado your shanks. Draw, you rascal ; come your ways.

Osw. Help, ho ! murder ! help. 36

Kent. Strike, you slave ; stand, rogue, stand ; you neat slave, strike.

[Beating him.

Osw. Help, ho ! murder ! murder !

Enter EDMUND with his rapier drawn, GLOUCESTER, CORNWALL, REGAN, and Servants.

Edm. How now ! What's the matter ? Part ! 40

Kent. With you, goodman boy, an you please. Come, I'll flesh ye ; come on, young master.

Glo. Weapons ! arms ! What's the matter here ?

Corn. Keep peace, upon your lives ; He dies that strikes again. What is the matter ? 45

Reg. The messengers from our sister and the King.

Corn. What is your difference ? Speak.

Osw. I am scarce in breath, my lord.

Kent. No marvel, you have so bestirr'd your valour. You cowardly rascal, nature disclaims in thee : a tailor made thee. 51

Corn. Thou art a strange fellow. A tailor make a man ?

Kent. Ay, a tailor, sir. A stone-cutter or a painter could not have made him so ill, though they had been but two years o' th' trade. 55

Corn. Speak yet, how grew your quarrel ?

Osw. This ancient ruffian, sir, whose life I have spar'd at suit of his grey beard—

Kent. Thou whoreson zed ! thou unnecessary letter ! My lord, if you will give me leave, I will tread this unbolted villain into mortar, and daub the wall of a jakes with him.—Spare my grey beard, you wagtail ? 62

Corn. Peace, sirrah !

You beastly knave, know you no reverence ?

Kent. Yes, sir ; but anger hath a privilege. 65

Corn. Why art thou angry ?

Kent. That such a slave as this should wear a sword,

Who wears no honesty. Such smiling rogues as these,

Like rats, oft bite the holy cords a-twain
Which are too intrinse t' unloose ; smooth every passion 70

That in the natures of their lords rebel ;
Bring oil to fire, snow to their colder moods ;
Renege, affirm, and turn their halcyon beaks

With every gale and vary of their masters,
Knowing nought, like dogs, but following.
A plague upon your epileptic visage ! 76

Smile you my speeches, as I were a fool ?

Goose, if I had you upon Sarum plain,
I'd drive ye cackling home to Camelot.

Corn. What, are thou mad, old fellow ?

Glo. How fell you out ? Say that. 81

Kent. No contraries hold more antipathy
Than I and such a knave.

Corn. Why dost thou call him knave ?
What is his fault ?

Kent. His countenance likes me not. 85

Corn. No more, perchance, does mine, nor his, nor hers.

Kent. Sir, 'tis my occupation to be plain :
I have seen better faces in my time
Than stands on any shoulder that I see
Before me at this instant.

Corn. This is some fellow 90
Who, having been prais'd for bluntness, doth affect

A saucy roughness, and constrains the garb Quite from his nature. He cannot flatter,
he,

An honest mind and plain—he must speak
truth.

An they will take it, so ; if not, he's plain.

These kind of knaves I know, which in this plainness 96

Harbour more craft and more corrupter
ends

Than twenty silly ducking observants

That stretch their duties nicely. 99

Kent. Sir, in good faith, in sincere verity,
Under th' allowance of your great aspect,
Whose influence, like the wreath of radiant fire

On flickering Phœbus' front—

Corn. What mean'st by this ?

Kent. To go out of my dialect, which you discommend so much. I know, sir, I am no flatterer. He that beguil'd you in a plain accent was a plain knave ; which, for my part, I will not be, though I should win your displeasure to entreat me to't.

Corn. What was th' offence you gave
him ?

Osw. I never gave him any. 110

It pleas'd the King his master very late
To strike at me, upon his misconstruction ;
When he, compact, and flattering his dis-
pleasure,

Tripp'd me behind ; being down, insulted,
rail'd,

And put upon him such a deal of man 115
That worthied him, got praises of the
King

For him attempting who was self-subdu'd ;
And in the fleshment of this dread exploit,
Drew on me here again.

Kent. None of these rogues and cowards
But Ajax is their fool.

Corn. Fetch forth the stocks. 120

You stubborn ancient knave, you reverend braggart,

We'll teach you.

Kent. Sir, I am too old to learn.
Call not your stocks for me ; I serve the
King,

On whose employment I was sent to you.
You shall do small respect, show too bold malice 125

Against the grace and person of my master,
Stocking his messenger.

Corn. Fetch forth the stocks. As I have life and honour,

There shall he sit till noon.

Reg. Till noon ! Till night, my lord ; and all night too. 130

Kent. Why, madam, if I were your father's dog,

You should not use me so.

Reg. Sir, being his knave, I will.

Corn. This is a fellow of the self-same colour

Our sister speaks of. Come, bring away the stocks. [Stocks brought out.]

Glo. Let me beseech your Grace not to do
so. 135

His fault is much, and the good King his master

Will check him for't ; your purpos'd low correction

Is such as basest and contemn'd st wretches
For pilf'rings and most common trespasses Are punish'd with. The King must take it ill 140

That he, so slightly valued in his messenger,
Should have him thus restrained.

Corn. I'll answer that.

Reg. My sister may receive it much more worse

To have her gentleman abus'd, assaulted,
For following her affairs. Put in his legs. 145

[Kent is put in the stocks.]
Come, my good lord, away.

[Exeunt all but Gloucester and Kent.]

Glo. I am sorry for thee, friend ; 'tis the Duke's pleasure

Whose disposition, all the world well knows,
Will not be rubb'd nor stopp'd. I'll entreat for thee.

Kent. Pray, do not, sir. I have watch'd and travell'd hard ; 150

Some time I shall sleep out, the rest I'll whistle.

A good man's fortune may grow out at heels.

Give you good morrow !

Glo. The Duke's to blame in this ;
'Twill be ill taken. [Exit.]

Kent. Good King, that must approve the common saw, 155

Thou out of heaven's benediction com'st
To the warm sun !

Approach, thou beacon to this under globe,
That by thy comfortable beams I may Peruse this letter. Nothing almost sees miracles 160

But misery. I know 'tis from Cordelia,
Who hath most fortunately been inform'd Of my obscured course. [Reads] '—and shall find time

From this enormous state—seeking to give Losses their remedies.' All weary and o'erwatch'd, 165

Take vantage, heavy eyes, not to behold
This shameful lodging.

Fortune, good night ; smile once more ;
turn thy wheel. [He sleeps.]

SCENE III. The open country.

Enter EDGAR.

Edg. I heard myself proclaim'd,
And by the happy hollow of a tree
Escap'd the hunt. No port is free ; no place
That guard and most unusual vigilance Does not attend my taking. Whiles I may scape 5

I will preserve myself ; and am bethought
To take the basest and most poorest shape
That ever penury in contempt of man Brought near to beast. My face I'll grime with filth,

Blanket my loins, elf all my hairs in knots,
And with presented nakedness outface 11
The winds and persecutions of the sky.
The country gives me proof and precedent
Of Bedlam beggars, who, with roaring voices,

Strike in their numb'd and mortified bare arms 15

Pins, wooden pricks, nails, sprigs of rosemary ;

And with this horrible object, from low farms,

Poor pelting villages, sheep-cotes, and mills,
Sometimes with lunatic bans, sometime with prayers,

Enforce their charity. Poor Turlygod !
poor Tom ! 20

That's something yet. Edgar I nothing am.
[Exit.]

SCENE IV. Before Gloucester's castle.

Enter LEAR, Fool, and Gentleman, to KENT in the stocks.

Lear. 'Tis strange that they should so depart from home,
And not send back my messenger.

Gent. As I learn'd,
The night before there was no purpose in
them

Of this remove.

Kent. Hail to thee, noble master !

Lear. Ha ! 5
Mak'st thou this shame thy pastime ?

Kent. No, my lord.

Fool. Ha, ha ! he wears cruel garters.
Horses are tied by the heads, dogs and bears by th' neck, monkeys by th' loins, and men by th' legs. When a man's over-lusty at legs, then he wears wooden netherstocks. 10

Lear. What's he that hath so much thy place mistook

To set thee here ?

Kent. It is both he and she,
Your son and daughter.

Lear. No.

Kent. Yes. 15

Lear. No, I say.

Kent. I say, yea.

Lear. No, no ; they would not.

Kent. Yes, they have.

Lear. By Jupiter, I swear, no. 20

Kent. By Juno, I swear, ay.

Lear. They durst not do't ;
They could not, would not do't ; 'tis worse than murder

To do upon respect such violent outrage.
Resolve me with all modest haste which
way

Thou might'st deserve or they impose this usage, 25

Coming from us.

Kent. My lord, when at their home

I did commend your Highness' letters to them,
 Ere I was risen from the place that show'd
 My duty kneeling, came there a reeking
 post,
 Stew'd in his haste, half breathless, panting
 forth 30
 From Goneril his mistress salutations ;
 Deliver'd letters, spite of intermission,
 Which presently they read ; on whose contents
 They summon'd up their meiny, straight took horse,
 Commanded me to follow and attend 35
 The leisure of their answer, gave me cold
 looks ;
 And meeting here the other messenger,
 Whose welcome I perceiv'd had poison'd
 mine,
 Being the very fellow which of late 39
 Display'd so saucily against your Highness,
 Having more man than wit about me, drew.
 He rais'd the house with loud and coward cries.
 Your son and daughter found this trespass
 worth
 The shame which here it suffers.
 Fool. Winter's not gone yet, if the wild geese fly that way. 46
 Fathers that wear rags
 Do make their children blind ;
 But fathers that bear bags
 Shall see their children kind. 50
 Fortune, that arrant whore,
 Ne'er turns the key to th' poor.
 But, for all this, thou shalt have as many dolours for thy daughters as thou canst tell in a year.
 Lear. O, how this mother swells up toward my heart ! 55
 Hysterica passio—down, thou climbing
 sorrow,
 Thy element's below. Where is this
 daughter ?
 Kent. With the earl, sir, here within.
 Lear. Follow me not ;
 Stay here. [Exit. 60
 Gent. Made you no more offence but what you speak of ?
 Kent. None.
 How chance the King comes with so small a number ?
 Fool. An thou hadst been set i' th' stocks for that question, thou'dst well deserv'd it.
 Kent. Why, fool ? 65
 Fool. We'll set thee to school to an ant, to teach thee there's no labouring i' th' winter. All that follow their noses are led by their eyes but blind men ; and there's not a nose among twenty but can smell him that's stinking. Let go thy hold when a great wheel runs down a hill, lest it break thy neck with following ; but the great one that goes upward, let him draw thee

after. When a wise man gives thee better counsel, give me mine again. I would have none but knaves follow it, since a fool gives it. 75
 That sir which serves and seeks for gain,
 And follows but for form,
 Will pack when it begins to rain,
 And leave thee in the storm.
 But I will tarry ; the fool will stay 80
 And let the wise man fly.
 The knave turns fool that runs away ;
 The fool no knave, perdy.
 Kent. Where learn'd you this, fool ?
 Fool. Not i' th' stocks, fool. 85
 Re-enter LEAR and GLOUCESTER.
 Lear. Deny to speak with me ! They are sick ! They are weary !
 They have travell'd all the night ! Mere fetches ;
 The images of revolt and flying off.
 Fetch me a better answer.
 Glo. My dear lord,
 You know the fiery quality of the Duke ; 90
 How unremovable and fix'd he is
 In his own course.
 Lear. Vengeance ! plague ! death ! confusion !
 Fiery ? What quality ? Why Gloucester,
 Gloucester,
 I'd speak with the Duke of Cornwall and his wife. 95
 Glo. Well, my good lord, I have inform'd them so.
 Lear. Inform'd them ! Dost thou understand me, man ?
 Glo. Ay, my good lord.
 Lear. The King would speak with Cornwall ; the dear father Would with his daughter speak ; commands their service. 100
 Are they inform'd of this ? My breath and
 blood !
 Fiery ? the fiery Duke ? Tell the hot Duke
 that—
 No, but not yet. May be he is not well.
 Infirmary doth still neglect all office Whereto our health is bound ; we are not ourselves 105
 When nature, being oppress'd, commands
 the mind
 To suffer with the body. I'll forbear ;
 And am fallen out with my more headier
 will
 To take the indispos'd and sickly fit
 For the sound man. Death on my state !
 Wherefore 110
 Should he sit here ? This act persuades me
 That this remotion of the Duke and her
 Is practice only. Give me my servant forth.
 Go tell the Duke and's wife I'd speak with
 them—
 Now, presently. Bid them come forth and hear me, 115

Or at their chamber door I'll beat the drum
Till it cry sleep to death.

Glo. I would have all well betwixt you.

[Exit.

Lear. O me, my heart, my rising heart !
But, down.

Fool. Cry to it, nuncle, as the cockney did to the eels when she put 'em i' th' paste alive ; she knapp'd 'em o' th' coxcombs with a stick, and cried 'Down, wantons, down'. 'Twas her brother that, in pure kindness to his horse, butter'd his hay.

Enter CORNWALL, REGAN, GLOUCESTER, and Servants.

Lear. Good morrow to you both.

Corn. Hail to your Grace !

[Kent here set at liberty.

Reg. I am glad to see your Highness.

Lear. Regan, I think you are ; I know what reason

I have to think so. If thou shouldst not be glad,

I would divorce me from thy mother's tomb,

Sepulchring an adultriss. [To Kent] O, are you free ?

Some other time for that.—Beloved Regan, Thy sister's naught. O Regan, she hath tied

Sharp-tooth'd unkindness, like a vulture,
here.

I can scarce speak to thee ; thou'lt not believe

With how deprav'd a quality—O Regan !

Reg. I pray you, sir, take patience. I have hope

You less know how to value her desert
Than she to scant her duty.

Lear. Say, how is that ?

Reg. I cannot think my sister in the least
Would fail her obligation. If, sir, perchance She have restrain'd the riots of your followers,

'Tis on such ground, and to such wholesome
end,

As clears her from all blame.

Lear. My curses on her !

Reg. O, sir, you are old ;
Nature in you stands on the very verge
Of her confine. You should be rul'd and led By some discretion that discerns your state Better than you yourself. Therefore I pray
you

That to our sister you do make return ;
Say you have wrong'd her, sir.

Lear. Ask her forgiveness ?
Do you but mark how this becomes the
house :

'Dear daughter, I confess that I am old ; [Kneeling.

Age is unnecessary ; on my knees I beg That you'll vouchsafe me raiment, bed, and food'.

Reg. Good sir, no more ; these are unsightly tricks.

155

Return you to my sister.

Lear. [Rising] Never, Regan.

She hath abated me of half my train ;
Look'd black upon me ; struck me with her
tongue,

Most serpent-like, upon the very heart.
All the stor'd vengeance of heaven fall

On her ingrateful top ! Strike her young bones,

You taking airs, with lameness.

Corn. Fie, sir, fie !

Lear. You nimble lightnings, dart your blinding flames

Into her scornful eyes. Infect her beauty,
You fen-suck'd fogs, drawn by the pow'rful
sun

To fall and blast her pride.

Reg. O the blest gods !

So will you wish on me when the rash mood is on.

Lear. No, Regan, thou shalt never have my curse :

Thy tender-hefted nature shall not give

Thee o'er to harshness. Her eyes are fierce, but thine

Do comfort and not burn. 'Tis not in thee
To grudge my pleasures, to cut off my train,

To bandy hasty words, to scant my sizes,
And, in conclusion, to oppose the bolt

Against my coming in ; thou better know'st
The offices of nature, bond of childhood,

Effects of courtesy, dues of gratitude ;
Thy half o' th' kingdom hast thou not forgot,

Wherein I thee endow'd.

Reg. Good sir, to th' purpose.

Lear. Who put my man i' th' stocks ?

[Tucket within.

Corn. What trumpet's that ?

Reg. I know't—my sister's. This approves her letter,

That she would soon be here.

Enter OSWALD.

Is your lady come ?

Lear. This is a slave whose easy-borrow'd
pride

Dwells in the fickle grace of her he follows.
Out, varlet, from my sight !

Corn. What means your Grace ?

Enter GONERIL.

Lear. Who stock'd my servant ? Regan,
I have good hope

Thou didst not know on't.—Who comes here ? O heavens,

If you do love old men, if your sweet sway
Allow obedience, if you yourselves are old,

Make it your cause ; send down, and take my part.

[To Goneril] Art not ashamed to look upon this beard ?—

O Regan, will you take her by the hand ?

Gon. Why not by th' hand, sir? How have I offended?

All's not offence that indiscretion finds, 195
And dotage terms so.

Lear. O sides, you are too tough!
Will you yet hold?—How came my man
i' th' stocks?

Corn. I set him there, sir; but his own disorders

Deserv'd much less advancement.

Lear. You! did you?

Reg. I pray you, father, being weak,
seem so. 200

If, till the expiration of your month,
You will return and sojourn with my sister,
Dismissing half your train, come then to me.

I am now from home, and out of that provision

Which shall be needful for your entertainment. 205

Lear. Return to her, and fifty men dismiss'd?

No, rather I abjure all roofs, and choose
To wage against the enmity o' th' air,
To be a comrade with the wolf and owl—
Necessity's sharp pinch! Return with her?
Why, the hot-blooded France, that dowerless took 211

Our youngest born—I could as well be brought To kneel this throne, and, squire-like, pension beg

To keep base life afoot. Return with her?
Persuade me rather to be slave and sumpter

To this detested groom. [Pointing to Oswald.]
Gon. At your choice, sir.

Lear. I prithee, daughter, do not make me mad. 217

I will not trouble thee, my child; farewell.
We'll no more meet, no more see one another.

But yet thou art my flesh, my blood, my daughter; 220

Or rather a disease that's in my flesh,
Which I must needs call mine; thou art a boil,

A plague-sore, or embossed carbuncle
In my corrupted blood. But I'll not chide thee;

Let shame come when it will, I do not call it; 225

I do not bid the Thunder-bearer shoot,
Nor tell tales of thee to high-judging Jove.
Mend when thou canst; be better at thy leisure;

I can be patient; I can stay with Regan,
I and my hundred knights.

Reg. Not altogether so. 230
I look'd not for you yet, nor am provided
For your fit welcome. Give ear, sir, to my sister;

For those that mingle reason with your passion

Must be content to think you old, and so—
But she knows what she does.

Lear. Is this well spoken? 235

Reg. I dare avouch it, sir. What, fifty followers?

Is it not well? What should you need of more?

Yea, or so many, sith that both charge and danger

Speak 'gainst so great a number? How in one house 239

Should many people under two commands
Hold amity? 'Tis hard; almost impossible.

Gon. Why might not you, my lord, receive attendance

From those that she calls servants, or from mine?

Reg. Why not, my lord? If then they chanc'd to slack ye,

We could control them. If you will come to me— 245

For now I spy a danger—I entreat you
To bring but five and twenty. To no more

Will I give place or notice.

Lear. I gave you all.

Reg. And in good time you gave it.

Lear. Made you my guardians, my depositaries; 250

But kept a reservation to be followed With such a number. What, must I come to you

With five and twenty, Regan? Said you so?

Reg. And speak't again, my lord. No more with me.

Lear. Those wicked creatures yet do look well-favour'd 255

When others are more wicked; not being the worst

Stands in some rank of praise. [To Goneril]
I'll go with thee.

Thy fifty yet doth double five and twenty,
And thou art twice her love.

Gon. Hear me, my lord:
What need you five and twenty, ten, or five, 260

To follow in a house where twice so many
Have a command to tend you?

Reg. What need one?
Lear. O, reason not the need! Our basest beggars

Are in the poorest thing superfluous.
Allow not nature more than nature needs,

Man's life is cheap as beast's. Thou art a lady; 266

If only to go warm were gorgeous,
Why, nature needs not what thou gorgeous wear'st,

Which scarcely keeps thee warm. But, for true need—

You heavens, give me that patience, patience I need. 270

You see me here, you gods, a poor old man,

ACT THREE

SCENE I. A heath.

Storm still. Enter KENT and a Gentleman, severally.

Kent. Who's there, besides foul weather ?
Gent. One minded like the weather, most unquietly.

Kent. I know you. Where's the King ?

Gent. Contending with the fretful elements ;

Bids the wind blow the earth into the sea, 5
Or swell the curled waters 'bove the main,
That things might change or cease ; tears
his white hair,

Which the impetuous blasts, with eyeless
rage,

Catch in their fury, and make nothing of ;
Strives in his little world of man to out-
scorn 10

The to-and-fro conflicting wind and rain.
This night, wherein the cub-drawn bear would couch,

The lion and the belly-pinched wolf
Keep their fur dry, unbonneted he runs,
And bids what will take all.

Kent. But who is with him ? 15

Gent. None but the fool ; who labours to out-jest

His heart-struck injuries.

Kent. Sir, I do know you,
And dare, upon the warrant of my note, Commend a dear thing to you. There is division,

Although as yet the face of it be cover'd 20
With mutual cunning, 'twixt Albany and Cornwall ;

Who have—as who have not that their great stars

Thron'd and set high ?—servants, who seem no less,

Which are to France the spies and speculations

Intelligent of our state. What hath been seen, 25

Either in snuffs and packings of the Dukes ;
Or the hard rein which both of them hath borne

Against the old kind King ; or something deeper,

Whereof perchance these are but furnishings—

But true it is from France there comes a power 30

Into this scatter'd kingdom, who already,
Wise in our negligence, have secret feet

In some of our best ports, and are at point
To show their open banner. Now to you :

If on my credit you dare build so far 35
To make your speed to Dover, you shall find Some that will thank you making just report

Of how unnatural and bemadding sorrow

As full of grief as age ; wretched in both.
If it be you that stirs these daughters'
hearts

Against their father, fool me not so much

To bear it tamely ; touch me with noble anger, 275

And let not women's weapons, water-drops, Stain my man's cheeks ! No, you unnatural hags,

I will have such revenges on you both
That all the world shall—I will do such things—

What they are yet I know not ; but they shall be 280

The terrors of the earth. You think I'll weep.

No, I'll not weep. [Storm and tempest.
I have full cause of weeping ; but this
heart

Shall break into a hundred thousand flaws
Or ere I'll weep. O fool, I shall go mad ! 285

[Exeunt Lear, Gloucester, Kent, and Fool.

Corn. Let us withdraw ; 'twill be a storm.

Reg. This house is little : the old man and's people

Cannot be well bestow'd.

Gon. 'Tis his own blame ; hath put himself from rest,

And must needs taste his folly. 290

Reg. For his particular, I'll receive him gladly,

But not one follower.

Gon. So am I purpos'd.

Where is my Lord of Gloucester ? 293

Corn. Followed the old man forth.

Re-enter GLOUCESTER.

He is return'd.

Glo. The King is in high rage.

Corn. Whither is he going ?

Glo. He calls to horse ; but will I know not whither.

Corn. 'Tis best to give him way ; he leads himself.

Gon. My lord, entreat him by no means to stay.

Glo. Alack, the night comes on, and the high winds

Do sorely ruffle ; for many miles about 300
There's scarce a bush.

Reg. O sir, to wilful men
The injuries that they themselves procure Must be their schoolmasters. Shut up your doors.

He is attended with a desperate train ;
And what they may incense him to, being apt 305

To have his ear abus'd, wisdom bids fear.

Corn. Shut up your doors, my lord ; 'tis a wild night.

My Regan counsels well. Come out o' th' storm. [Exeunt.

The King hath cause to plain. 39
I am a gentleman of blood and breeding;
And from some knowledge and assurance offer

This office to you.

Gent. I will talk further with you.

Kent. No, do not.

For confirmation that I am much more 44
Than my out-wall, open this purse and take
What it contains. If you shall see Cordelia,
As fear not but you shall, show her this ring;
And she will tell you who your fellow is That yet you do not know. Fie on this storm! 49

I will go seek the King.

Gent. Give me your hand. Have you no more to say?

Kent. Few words, but, to effect, more than all yet;

That when we have found the King—in which your pain

That way, I'll this—he that first lights on
him 54

Holla the other. [Exeunt severally.]

SCENE II. Another part of the heath.

Storm still. Enter LEAR and Fool.

Lear. Blow, winds, and crack your cheeks; rage, blow.

You cataracts and hurricanoes, spout
Till you have drench'd our steeples, drown'd the cocks.

You sulph'rous and thought-executing
fires,

Vaunt-couriers of oak-cleaving thunderbolts, 5

Singe my white head. And thou, all-shaking thunder,

Strike flat the thick rotundity o' th' world;
Crack nature's moulds, all germens spill at
once,

That makes ingrateful man. 9

Fool. O nuncle, court holy water in a dry house is better than this rain-water out o' door. Good nuncle, in; ask thy daughters' blessing. Here's a night pities neither wise men nor fools.

Lear. Rumble thy bellyful. Spit, fire;
spout, rain.

Nor rain, wind, thunder, fire, are my daughters. 15

I tax not you, you elements, with unkind-
ness;

I never gave you kingdom, call'd you
children;

You owe me no subscription. Then let fall Your horrible pleasure. Here I stand, your slave,

A poor, infirm, weak and despis'd old man;
But yet I call you servile ministers 21

That will with two pernicious daughters join

Your high-engender'd battles 'gainst a head

1092

So old and white as this. O, ho! 'tis foul!

Fool. He that has a house to put's head in has a good head-piece. 26

The cod-piece that will house

Before the head has any,

The head and he shall louse;

So beggars marry many. 30

The man that makes his toe

What he his heart should make

Shall of a corn cry woe,

And turn his sleep to wake.

For there was never yet fair woman but she made mouths in a glass. 36

Enter KENT.

Lear. No, I will be the pattern of all patience;

I will say nothing.

Kent. Who's there?

Fool. Marry, here's grace and a cod-piece;
that's a wise man and a fool. 41

Kent. Alas, sir, are you here? Things that love night

Love not such nights as these; the wrathful skies

Gallow the very wanderers of the dark And make them keep their caves. Since I was man 45

Such sheets of fire, such bursts of horrid
thunder,

Such groans of roaring wind and rain, I never Remember to have heard. Man's nature cannot carry

Th' affliction nor the fear.

Lear. Let the great gods,
That keep this dreadful pudder o'er our heads, 50

Find out their enemies now. Tremble, thou wretch,

That hast within thee undivulged crimes Unwhipp'd of justice. Hide thee, thou bloody hand;

Thou perjur'd, and thou simular man of virtue

That art incestuous; caitiff, to pieces
shake, 55

That under covert and convenient seeming Hast practis'd on man's life. Close pent-up guilts,

Rive your concealing continents, and cry
These dreadful summoners grace. I am a man 59

More sinn'd against than sinning.

Kent. Alack, bare-headed!
Gracious my lord, hard by here is a hovel;
Some friendship will it lend you 'gainst the tempest.

Repose you there, while I to this hard
house—

More harder than the stones whereof 'tis rais'd; 64

Which even but now, demanding after you,
Denied me to come in—return, and force

Their scanted courtesy.

Lear. My wits begin to turn.
Come on, my boy. How dost, my boy? Art
cold?

I am cold myself. Where is this straw, my fellow?

The art of our necessities is strange ⁷⁰
That can make vile things precious. Come, your hovel.

Poor fool and knave, I have one part in my
heart

That's sorry yet for thee.

Fool. [Sings] He that has and a little tiny wit

With heigh-ho, the wind and the rain— ⁷⁵
Must make content with his fortunes fit,
Though the rain it raineth every day.

Lear. True, my good boy. Come, bring us to this hovel.

[Exeunt Lear and Kent.]

Fool. This is a brave night to cool a courtezan. I'll speak a prophecy ere I go.
When priests are more in word than matter; ⁸¹

When brewers mar their malt with water;

When nobles are their tailors' tutors;
No heretics burn'd, but wenches' suitors;
When every case in law is right; ⁸⁵

No squire in debt, nor no poor knight;
When slanderers do not live in tongues;

Nor cutpurses come not to throngs;
When usurers tell their gold i' th' field;

And bawds and whores do churches build— ⁹⁰

Then shall the realm of Albion
Come to great confusion.

Then comes the time, who lives to see't,
That going shall be us'd with feet. ⁹⁴

This prophecy Merlin shall make, for I live before his time. [Exit.]

SCENE III. Gloucester's castle.

Enter GLOUCESTER and EDMUND.

Glo. Alack, alack, Edmund, I like not this unnatural dealing. When I desired their leave that I might pity him, they took from me the use of mine own house, charg'd me, on pain of perpetual displeasure, neither to speak of him, entreat for him, or any way sustain him. ⁶

Edm. Most savage and unnatural!

Glo. Go to; say you nothing. There is division between the Dukes; and a worse matter than that. I have received a letter this night—'tis dangerous to be spoken; I have lock'd the letter in my closet. These injuries the King now bears will be revenged home; there is part of a power already footed. We must incline to the King. I will look him, and privily relieve him. Go you and maintain talk with the Duke, that my charity be not of him perceived; if he ask for me, I am ill, and gone to bed. If I die for it, as no less is threatened me, the King my old master must be relieved. There is strange things toward, Edmund; pray you be careful. [Exit.]

Edm. This courtesy forbid thee shall the Duke ²¹

Instantly know, and of that letter too.
This seems a fair deserving, and must draw
me

That which my father loses—no less than
all.

The younger rises, when the old doth fall.
[Exit.]

SCENE IV. Before a hovel on the heath.

Storm still. Enter LEAR, KENT, and Fool.

Kent. Here is the place, my lord; good my lord, enter.

The tyranny of the open night's too rough
For nature to endure.

Lear. Let me alone.

Kent. Good my lord, enter here.

Lear. Wilt break my heart?

Kent. I had rather break mine own.
Good my lord, enter. ⁵

Lear. Thou think'st 'tis much that this contentious storm

Invades us to the skin; so 'tis to thee,
But where the greater malady is fix'd,

The lesser is scarce felt. Thou'dst shun a
bear;

But if thy flight lay toward the roaring sea, Thou'dst meet the bear i' th' mouth. When the mind's free ¹¹

The body's delicate; this tempest in my
mind

Doth from my senses take all feeling else,
Save what beats there. Filial ingratitude!

Is it not as this mouth should tear this hand For lifting food to't? But I will punish home. ¹⁶

No, I will weep no more. In such a night,
To shut me out! Pour on; I will endure.

In such a night as this! O Regan, Goneril!
Your old kind father, whose frank heart

gave all! ²⁰

O, that way madness lies; let me shun
that;

No more of that.

Kent. Good my lord, enter here.
Lear. Prithee go in thyself; seek thine own ease.

This tempest will not give me leave to ponder

On things would hurt me more. But I'll go in. ²⁵

[To the Fool] In, boy; go first.—You houseless poverty—

Nay, get thee in. I'll pray, and then I'll sleep. [Exit Fool.]

Poor naked wretches, wheresoe'er you are,
That bide the pelting of this pitiless storm,

How shall your houseless heads and unfed sides,³⁰
Your loop'd and window'd raggedness, defend you
From seasons such as these? O, I have ta'en Too little care of this! Take physic, pomp;
Expose thyself to feel what wretches feel,
That thou mayst shake the superflux to them,³⁵
And show the heavens more just.
Edg. [Within] Fathom and half, fathom and half! Poor Tom!

Enter Fool from the hovel.

Fool. Come not in here, nuncle, here's a spirit. Help me, help me!⁴⁰
Kent. Give me thy hand. Who's there?
Fool. A spirit, a spirit. He says his name's poor Tom.
Kent. What art thou that dost grumble there i' th' straw?
Come forth.

Enter EDGAR, disguised as a madman.

Edg. Away! the foul fiend follows me.⁴⁵
Through the sharp hawthorn blows the cold wind.
Humh! go to thy cold bed and warm thee.
Lear. Didst thou give all to thy daughters? And art thou come to this?⁴⁹
Edg. Who gives anything to poor Tom? whom the foul fiend hath led through fire and through flame, through ford and whirlpool, o'er bog and quagmire; that hath laid knives under his pillow and halters in his pew, set ratsbane by his porridge; made him proud of heart, to ride on a bay trotting-horse over four-inched bridges, to course his own shadow for a traitor. Bless thy five wits! Tom's a-cold. O, do de, do de, do de. Bless thee from whirlwinds, star-blasting, and taking! Do poor Tom some charity, whom the foul fiend vexes. There could I have him now—and there—and there again—and there. [Storm still.]

Lear. What, has his daughters brought him to this pass?
Could'st thou save nothing? Would'st thou give 'em all?

Fool. Nay, he reserv'd a blanket, else we had been all sham'd.⁶⁵

Lear. Now all the plagues that in the pendulous air
Hang fated o'er men's faults light on thy daughters!

Kent. He hath no daughters, sir.

Lear. Death, traitor! Nothing could have subdu'd nature
To such a lowness but his unkind daughters.

Is it the fashion that discarded fathers⁷¹
Should have thus little mercy on their flesh?

1094

Judicious punishment! 'twas this flesh begot
Those pelican daughters.
Edg. Pillicock sat on Pillicock-hill.⁷⁵
Alow, alow, loo, loo!
Fool. This cold night will turn us all to fools and madmen.
Edg. Take heed o' th' foul fiend; obey thy parents; keep thy words justly; swear not; commit not with man's sworn spouse; set not thy sweet heart on proud array
Tom's a-cold.⁸²

Lear. What hast thou been?

Edg. A serving-man, proud in heart and mind; that curl'd my hair; wore gloves in my cap; serv'd the lust of my mistress' heart, and did the act of darkness with her; swore as many oaths as I spake words, and broke them in the sweet face of heaven; one that slept in the contriving of lust, and wak'd to do it. Wine lov'd I deeply, dice dearly; and in woman out-paramour'd the Turk. False of heart, light of ear, bloody of hand; hog in sloth, fox in stealth, wolf in greediness, dog in madness, lion in prey. Let not the creaking of shoes nor the rustling of silks betray thy poor heart to woman. Keep thy foot out of brothels, thy hand out of plackets, thy pen from lenders' books, and defy the foul fiend.⁹⁶
Still through the hawthorn blows the cold wind.

Says suum, mun, nonny.

Dolphin my boy, boy, sessa! let him trot by. [Storm still.]

Lear. Why, thou wert better in a grave than to answer with thy uncover'd body this extremity of the skies. Is man no more than this? Consider him well. Thou ow'st the worm no silk, the beast no hide, the sheep no wool, the cat no perfume. Ha! here's three on's are sophisticated! Thou art the thing itself: unaccommodated man is no more but such a poor, bare, forked animal as thou art. Off, off, you lendings! Come, unbutton here.¹⁰⁸

[Tearing off his clothes.]

Enter GLOUCESTER with a torch.

Fool. Prithee, nuncle, be contented; 'tis a naughty night to swim in. Now a little fire in a wild field were like an old lecher's heart—a small spark, all the rest on's body cold. Look, here comes a walking fire.¹¹²

Edg. This is the foul fiend Flibbertigibbet: he begins at curfew, and walks till the first cock; he gives the web and the pin, squeezes the eye, and makes the hare-lip; mildews the white wheat, and hurts the poor creature of earth.¹¹⁷

Swithold footed thrice the 'old;

He met the nightmare and her nine-fold;

Bid her alight

120

And her troth plight,
 And aroint thee, witch, aroint thee !
Kent. How fares your Grace ?
Lear. What's he ? 124
Kent. Who's there ? What is't you seek ?
Glo. What are you there ? Your names ?
Edg. Poor Tom ; that eats the swimming frog, the toad, the tadpole, the wall-newt, and the water ; that in the fury of his heart, when the foul fiend rages, eats cow-dung for sallets, swallows the old rat and the ditch-dog, drinks the green mantle of the standing pool ; who is whipp'd from tithing to tithing, and stock-punish'd, and imprison'd ; who hath had three suits to his back, six shirts to his body—
 Horse to ride, and weapon to wear ;
 But mice and rats, and such small deer,
 Have been Tom's food for seven long year. 135
Beware my follower. Peace, Smulkin ;
peace, thou fiend !
Glo. What, hath your Grace no better company ?
Edg. The prince of darkness is a gentleman ; Modo he's call'd, and Mahu. 140 Glo. Our flesh and blood, my lord, is grown so vile
 That it doth hate what gets it.
Edg. Poor Tom's a-cold.
Glo. Go in with me : my duty cannot suffer
 T' obey in all your daughters' hard commands. 145
 Though their injunction be to bar my
 doors,
 And let this tyrannous night take hold upon
 you,
 Yet have I ventur'd to come seek you
 out,
 And bring you where both fire and food is ready.
Lear. First let me talk with this philosopher. 150
 What is the cause of thunder ?
Kent. Good my lord, take his offer ; go into th' house.
Lear. I'll talk a word with this same learned Theban.
 What is your study ?
Edg. How to prevent the fiend and to kill vermin. 155
Lear. Let me ask you one word in private.
Kent. Importune him once more to go,
 my lord ;
 His wits begin t' unsettle. [Storm still.]
Glo. Canst thou blame him ?
 His daughters seek his death. Ah, that good Kent !—
 He said it would be thus—poor, banish'd
 man ! 160
 Thou sayest the King grows mad ; I'll tell thee, friend,
 I am almost mad myself. I had a son,

Now outlaw'd from my blood ; he sought my life
 But lately, very late. I lov'd him, friend—
 No father his son dearer. True to tell
 thee,
 The grief hath craz'd my wits. What a night's this ! 166
 I do beseech your Grace—
Lear. O, cry you mercy, sir.
 Noble philosopher, your company.
Edg. Tom's a-cold.
Glo. In, fellow, there, into th' hovel ;
 keep thee warm. 170
Lear. Come, let's in all.
Kent. This way, my lord.
Lear. With him ;
 I will keep still with my philosopher.
Kent. Good my lord, soothe him ; let him take the fellow.
Glo. Take him you on. 174
Kent. Sirrah, come on ; go along with us.
Lear. Come, good Athenian.
Glo. No words, no words ! Hush.
Edg. Child Rowland to the dark tower
 came,
 His word was still ' Fie, foh, and fum, 179
 I smell the blood of a British man'.
[Exeunt.]

SCENE V. Gloucester's castle.

Enter CORNWALL and EDMUND.

Corn. I will have my revenge ere I depart his house.

Edm. How, my lord, I may be censured, that nature thus gives way to loyalty,
 something fears me to think of.

Corn. I now perceive it was not altogether your brother's evil disposition made him seek his death ; but a provoking merit, set a-work by a reprovable badness in himself. 7

Edm. How malicious is my fortune, that I must repent to be just ! This is the letter he spoke of, which approves him an intelligent party to the advantages of France. O heavens ! that this treason were not, or not I the detector ! 12

Corn. Go with me to the Duchess.

Edm. If the matter of this paper be certain, you have mighty business in hand.

Corn. True or false, it hath made thee Earl of Gloucester. Seek out where thy father is, that he may be ready for our apprehension. 18

Edm. [Aside] If I find him comforting the King, it will stuff his suspicion more fully.
 —I will persevere in my course of loyalty, though the conflict be sore between that and my blood. 22

Corn. I will lay trust upon thee ; and thou shalt find a dearer father in my love.
[Exeunt.]

SCENE VI. An outhouse of Gloucester's castle.

Enter KENT and GLOUCESTER.

Glo. Here is better than the open air ; take it thankfully. I will piece out the comfort with what addition I can. I will not be long from you.

Kent. All the pow'r of his wits have given way to his impatience. The gods reward your kindness ! [Exit Gloucester.]

Enter LEAR, EDGAR, and Fool.

Edg. Frateretto calls me, and tells me Nero is an angler in the lake of darkness. Pray, innocent, and beware the foul fiend.

Fool. Prithee, nuncle, tell me whether a madman be a gentleman or a yeoman ?

Lear. A king, a king !

Fool. No ; he's a yeoman that has a gentleman to his son ; for he's a mad yeoman that sees his son a gentleman before him.

Lear. To have a thousand with red burning spits Come hizzing in upon 'em—

Edg. The foul fiend bites my back.

Fool. He's mad that trusts in the tameness of a wolf, a horse's health, a boy's love, or a whore's oath.

Lear. It shall be done ; I will arraign them straight.

[To Edgar] Come, sit thou here, most learned justicer.

[To the Fool] Thou, sapient sir, sit here.—Now, you she-foxes !

Edg. Look where he stands and glares ! Want'st thou eyes at trial, madam ?

Come o'er the bourn, Bessy, to me.

Fool. Her boat hath a leak,

And she must not speak,

Why she dares not come over to thee.

Edg. The foul fiend haunts poor Tom in the voice of a nightingale. Hoppedance cries in Tom's belly for two white herring. Croak not, black angel ; I have no food for thee.

Kent. How do you, sir ? Stand you not so amaz'd.

Will you lie down and rest upon the cushions ?

Lear. I'll see their trial first. Bring in their evidence.

[To Edgar] Thou robed man of justice, take thy place.

[To the Fool] And thou, his yoke-fellow of equity,

Bench by his side. [To Kent] You are o' th' commission,

Sit you too.

Edg. Let us deal justly.

Sleepest or wakest thou, jolly shepherd ?

Thy sheep be in the corn ;

And for one blast of thy minikin mouth,

Thy sheep shall take no harm.

Pur ! the cat is grey.

Lear. Arraign her first ; 'tis Goneril. I here take my oath before this honourable assembly she kick'd the poor King her father.

Fool. Come hither, mistress. Is your name Goneril ?

Lear. She cannot deny it.

Fool. Cry you mercy, I took you for a joint-stool.

Lear. And here's another, whose warp'd looks proclaim

What store her heart is made on. Stop her there !

Arms, arms, sword, fire ! Corruption in the place !

False justicer, why hast thou let her scape ?

Edg. Bless thy five wits !

Kent. O pity ! Sir, where is the patience now

That you so oft have boasted to retain ?

Edg. [Aside] My tears begin to take his part so much

They mar my counterfeiting.

Lear. The little dogs and all,

Tray, Blanch, and Sweetheart, see, they bark at me.

Edg. Tom will throw his head at them.

Avaunt, you curs !

Be thy mouth or black or white,

Tooth that poisons if it bite ;

Mastiff, greyhound, mongrel grim,

Hound or spaniel, brach or lym,

Or bobtail tike or trundle-tail—

Tom will make him weep and wail ;

For, with throwing thus my head,

Dogs leapt the hatch, and all are fled.

Do de, de, de. Sessa ! Come, march to wakes and fairs and market-towns. Poor

Tom, thy horn is dry.

Lear. Then let them anatomize Regan ; see what breeds about her heart. Is there any cause in nature that make these hard hearts ? [To Edgar] You, sir, I entertain for one of my hundred ; only I do not like the fashion of your garments. You will say they are Persian, but let them be chang'd.

Kent. Now, good my lord, lie here and rest awhile.

Lear. Make no noise, make no noise draw the curtains. So, so. We'll go to supper i' th' morning.

Fool. And I'll go to bed at noon.

Re-enter GLOUCESTER.

Glo. Come hither, friend. Where is the King my master ?

Kent. Here, sir ; but trouble him not—his wits are gone.

Glo. Good friend, I prithee, take him in thy arms ;

I have o'erheard a plot of death upon him.
There is a litter ready ; lay him in't ⁹⁰
And drive toward Dover, friend, where thou shalt meet

Both welcome and protection. Take up thy
master ;

If thou shouldst dally half an hour, his life,
With thine, and all that offer to defend
him,

Stand in assured loss. Take up, take up ; ⁹⁵
And follow me, that will to some provision Give thee quick conduct.

Kent. Oppressed nature sleeps.
This rest might yet have balm'd thy broken sinews,

Which, if convenience will not allow,
Stand in hard cure. [To the Fool] Come, help to bear thy master ; ¹⁰⁰

Thou must not stay behind.

Glo. Come, come, away.
[Exeunt all but Edgar.]

Edg. When we our betters see bearing our woes,

We scarcely think our miseries our foes.
Who alone suffers suffers most i' th' mind,
Leaving free things and happy shows behind ; ¹⁰⁵

But then the mind much sufferance doth o'erskip

When grief hath mates, and bearing fellowship.

How light and portable my pain seems now,
When that which makes me bend makes the King bow—

He childed as I father'd ! Tom, away ! ¹¹⁰
Mark the high noises ; and thyself bewray,
When false opinion, whose wrong thoughts
defile thee,

In thy just proof repeals and reconciles
thee.

What will hap more to-night, safe scape the King ! ¹¹⁴

Lurk, lurk. [Exit.]

SCENE VII. Gloucester's castle.

Enter CORNWALL, REGAN, GONERIL, EDMUND, and Servants.

Corn. [To Goneril] Post speedily to my lord your husband ; show him this letter.
The army of France is landed.—Seek out the traitor Gloucester.

[Exeunt some of the Servants.]

Reg. Hang him instantly.

Gon. Pluck out his eyes. ⁵

Corn. Leave him to my displeasure.
Edmund, keep you our sister company.
The revenges we are bound to take upon your traitorous father are not fit for your beholding. Advise the Duke, where you are going, to a most festinate preparation ;
we are bound to the like. Our posts shall be swift and intelligent betwixt us. Farewell, dear sister ; farewell, my Lord of Gloucester.

Enter OSWALD.

How now ! where's the King ?

Osw. My Lord of Gloucester hath con-vey'd him hence.

Some five or six and thirty of his knights, ¹⁵
Hot questrists after him, met him at gate ;

Who, with some other of the lord's dependants,

Are gone with him toward Dover, where they boast

To have well-armed friends.

Corn. Get horses for your mistress.

Gon. Farewell, sweet lord, and sister. ²⁰

Corn. Edmund, farewell. [*Exeunt Goneril,
Edmund, and Oswald.*]

Go seek the traitor Gloucester,
Pinion him like a thief, bring him before us.
[Exeunt other Servants.]

Though well we may not pass upon his life
Without the form of justice, yet our power Shall do a court'sy to our wrath, which men
May blame, but not control.

Enter GLOUCESTER, brought in by two or three.

Who's there ? the traitor ?

Reg. Ingrateful fox ! 'tis he. ²⁷

Corn. Bind fast his corky arms.

Glo. What means your Graces ? Good my friends, consider

You are my guests ; do me no foul play, friends. ³⁰

Corn. Bind him, I say. [Servants bind him.]

Reg. Hard, hard. O filthy traitor !

Glo. Unmerciful lady as you are, I'm none.

Corn. To this chair bind him. Villain, thou shalt find—

[Regan plucks his beard.]

Glo. By the kind gods, 'tis most ignobly
done

To pluck me by the beard. ³⁵

Reg. So white, and such a traitor !

Glo. Naughty lady,
These hairs which thou dost ravish from my chin

Will quicken and accuse thee. I am your host.

With robbers' hands my hospitable favours
You should not ruffle thus. What will you do ? ⁴⁰

Corn. Come, sir, what letters had you late from France ?

Reg. Be simple-answer'd, for we know the truth.

Corn. And what confederacy have you with the traitors
Late footed in the kingdom ?

Reg. To whose hands you have sent the lunatic King :

Speak. ⁴⁶

Glo. I have a letter guessingly set down,

Which came from one that's of a neutral heart,
And not from one oppos'd.

Corn.

Cunning.

Reg.

And false.

Corn. Where hast thou sent the King ?

Glo.

To Dover. ⁵⁰

Reg. Wherefore to Dover ? Wast thou not charg'd at peril—

Corn. Wherefore to Dover ? Let him first answer that.

Glo. I am tied to the stake, and I must stand the course.

Reg. Wherefore to Dover ?

Glo. Because I would not see thy cruel nails ⁵⁵

Pluck out his poor old eyes ; nor thy fierce sister

In his anointed flesh rash boarish fangs.

The sea, with such a storm as his bare head

In hell-black night endur'd, would have buoy'd up

And quench'd the stelled fires. ⁶⁰

Yet, poor old heart, he help the heavens to rain.

If wolves had at thy gate howl'd that durn time,

Thou shouldst have said ' Good porter, turn the key '.

All cruels else subscribe, but I shall see

The winged vengeance overtake such children. ⁶⁵

Corn. See't shalt thou never. Fellows, hold the chair.

Upon these eyes of thine I'll set my foot.

Glo. He that will think to live till he be old,

Give me some help !—O cruel ! O you gods !

Reg. One side will mock another ; th' other too. ⁷⁰

Corn. If you see vengeance—

1 Serv. Hold your hand, my lord.

I have serv'd you ever since I was a child ; But better service have I never done you,

Than now to bid you hold.

Reg.

How now, you dog !

1 Serv. If you did wear a beard upon your chin ⁷⁵

I'd shake it on this quarrel. What do you mean ?

Corn. My villain ! [They draw and fight.]

1 Serv. Nay, then come on, and take the chance of anger.

[Cornwall is wounded.]

Reg. Give me thy sword. A peasant stand up thus ! [She takes a sword and stabs him from behind.]

1 Serv. O, I am slain ! My lord, you have one eye left ⁸⁰

To see some mischief on him. O ! [Dies.]

Corn. Lest it see more, prevent it. Out vile jelly !

Where is thy lustre now ?

Glo. All dark and comfortless ! Where's my son Edmund ? ⁸⁴

Edmund, enkindle all the sparks of nature To quit this horrid act.

Reg.

Out, treacherous villain !

Thou call'st on him that hates thee. It was he

That made the overture of thy treasons to us ;

Who is too good to pity thee.

Glo. O my follies ! Then Edgar was abus'd. ⁹⁰

Kind gods, forgive me that, and prosper him.

Reg. Go thrust him out at gates and let him smell

His way to Dover.

[Gloucester led out.]

How is't my lord ? How look you ?

Corn. I have receiv'd a hurt. Follow me, lady.

Turn out that eyeless villain ; throw this slave ⁹⁵

Upon the dunghill. Regan, I bleed apace.

Untimely comes this hurt. Give me your arm. [Exit Cornwall, led by Regan.]

2 Serv. I'll never care what wickedness I do,

If this man come to good.

3 Serv.

If she live long,

And in the end meet the old course of death, Women will all turn monsters. ¹⁰¹

2 Serv. Let's follow the old Earl and get the Bedlam

To lead him where he would. His roguish madness

Allows itself to anything.

3 Serv.

Go thou. I'll fetch some flax and whites of eggs ¹⁰⁵

To apply to his bleeding face. Now heaven help him ! [Exeunt.]

ACT FOUR

SCENE I. The Heath.

Enter EDGAR.

Edg. Yet better thus and known to be contemn'd,

Than still contemn'd and flatter'd. To be worst,

The lowest and most dejected thing of fortune,

Stands still in esperance, lives not in fear. The lamentable change is from the best ; ⁵

The worst returns to laughter. Welcome, then,

Thou unsubstantial air that I embrace ! The wretch that thou hast blown unto the worst Owes nothing to thy blasts.

Enter GLOUCESTER, led by an Old Man.

But who comes here ? My father, poorly led ? World, world, O world ! ¹⁰

But that thy strange mutations make us hate thee,

Life would not yield to age.

Old Man. O my good lord, I have been your tenant, and your father's tenant, these fourscore years.

Glo. Away, get thee away ; good friend,
be gone. 15

Thy comforts can do me no good at all ;
Thee they may hurt.

Old Man. You cannot see your way.

Glo. I have no way, and therefore want no eyes ;

I stumbled when I saw : full oft 'tis seen 20
Our means secure us, and our mere defects Prove our commodities. O dear son Edgar,
The food of thy abused father's wrath !
Might I but live to see thee in my touch,
I'd say I had eyes again !

Old Man. How now ! Who's there ? 25

Edg. [Aside] O gods ! Who is't can say
'I am at the worst' ?

I am worse than e'er I was.

Old Man. 'Tis poor mad Tom.

Edg. [Aside] And worse I may be yet.
The worst is not

So long as we can say 'This is the worst'.

Old Man. Fellow, where goest ?

Glo. Is it a beggar-man ? 30

Old Man. Madman and beggar too.

Glo. He has some reason, else he could not beg.

I' th' last night's storm I such a fellow saw ;
Which made me think a man a worm. My
son

Came then into my mind ; and yet my
mind 35

Was then scarce friends with him. I have heard more since.

As flies to wanton boys are we to th' gods—
They kill us for their sport.

Edg. [Aside] How should this be ?

Bad is the trade that must play fool to
sorrow,

Ang'ring itself and others.—Bless thee,
master ! 40

Glo. Is that the naked fellow ?

Old Man. Ay, my lord.

Glo. Then, prithee, get thee away. If for my sake

Thou wilt o'ertake us hence a mile or twain
I' th' way toward Dover, do it for ancient
love ;

And bring some covering for this naked
soul, 45

Which I'll entreat to lead me.

Old Man. Alack, sir, he is mad.

Glo. 'Tis the times' plague when madmen lead the blind.

Do as I bid thee, or rather do thy pleasure ;
Above the rest, be gone.

Old Man. I'll bring him the best 'parel that I have, 50

Come on't what will.

[Exit.]

Glo. Sirrah, naked fellow !

Edg. Poor Tom's a-cold. [Aside] I cannot daub it further.

Glo. Come hither, fellow.

Edg. [Aside] And yet I must.—Bless thy sweet eyes, they bleed. 55

Glo. Know'st thou the way to Dover ?

Edg. Both stile and gate, horse-way and footpath. Poor Tom hath been scar'd cut of his good wits. Bless thee, good man's son, from the foul fiend ! Five fiends have been in poor Tom at once : of lust, as Obidicut ; Hobbididence, prince of dumbness ; Mahu, of stealing ; Modo, of murder ; Flibberti-gibbet, of mopping and mowing, who since possesses chambermaids and waiting-women. So, bless thee, master !

Glo. Here, take this purse, thou whom the heavens' plagues 65

Have humbled to all strokes. That I am wretched

Makes thee the happier. Heavens, deal so still !

Let the superfluous and lust-dieted man
That slaves your ordinance, that will not see

Because he does not feel, feel your power quickly ; 70

So distribution should undo excess,
And each man have enough. Dost thou know Dover ?

Edg. Ay, master.

Glo. There is a cliff whose high and bending head

Looks fearfully in the confined deep : 75
Bring me but to the very brim of it

And I'll repair the misery thou dost bear With something rich about me. From that place

I shall no leading need.

Edg. Give me thy arm ; 79

Poor Tom shall lead thee. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II. *Before the Duke of Albany's
palace.*

Enter GONERIL and EDMUND.

Gon. Welcome, my lord. I marvel our mild husband
Not met us on the way.

Enter OSWALD.

Now, where's your master ?

Osw. Madam, within, but never man so chang'd.

I told him of the army that was landed ;
He smil'd at it. I told him you were coming ; 5

His answer was 'The worse'. Of Gloucester's treachery,

And of the loyal service of his son,
When I inform'd him, then he call'd me sot,
And told me I had turn'd the wrong side
out.

What most he should dislike seems pleasant
to him ; 10

What like, offensive.

Gon. [To Edmund] Then shall you go no
further.

It is the cowish terror of his spirit
That dares not undertake ; he'll not feel wrongs

Which tie him to an answer. Our wishes on the way

May prove effects. Back, Edmund, to my brother ; 15

Hasten his musters and conduct his pow'rs.
I must change arms at home, and give the distaff

Into my husband's hands. This trusty servant

Shall pass between us. Ere long you are like to hear,

If you dare venture in your own behalf, 20
A mistress's command. Wear this ; spare speech. [Giving a favour.

Decline your head ; this kiss, if it durst
speak,

Would stretch thy spirits up into the air.

Conceive, and fare thee well.

Edm. Yours in the ranks of death.

Gon. My most dear Gloucester.
[Exit Edmund.

O, the difference of man and man ! 26

To thee a woman's services are due.

My fool usurps my body.

Osw. Madam, here comes my lord.
[Exit.

Enter ALBANY.

Gon. I have been worth the whistle.

Alb. O Goneril !

You are not worth the dust which the rude
wind 30

Blows in your face. I fear your disposition :
That nature which contemns its origin

Cannot be border'd certain in itself ;

She that herself will sliver and disbranch
From her material sap perforce must wither

And come to deadly use. 36

Gon. No more ; the text is foolish.

Alb. Wisdom and goodness to the vile seem vile ;

Filth's savour but themselves. What have you done ?

Tigers, not daughters, what have you
perform'd ? 40

A father, and a gracious aged man, Whose reverence even the head-lugg'd bear
would lick,

Most barbarous, most degenerate, have you maddened.

Could my good brother suffer you to do it ?
A man, a Prince, by him so benefited ! 45

If that the heavens do not their visible
spirits

Send quickly down to tame these vile offences,

It will come

Humanity must perforce prey on itself,
Like monsters of the deep.

Gon. Milk-liver'd man ! 50

That bear'st a cheek for blows, a head for
wrongs ;

Who hast not in thy brows an eye discern-
ing

Thine honour from thy suffering ; that not know'st

Fools do those villains pity who are punish'd

Ere they have done their mischief. Where's thy drum ? 55

France spreads his banners in our noiseless
land,

With plumed helm thy state begins to threat,

Whil'st thou, a moral fool, sits still, and cries

' Alack, why does he so ? '

Alb. See thyself, devil !
Proper deformity shows not in the fiend

So horrid as in woman.

Gon. O vain fool ! 61

Alb. Thou changed and self-cover'd thing, for shame !

Be-monster not thy feature. Were't my fitness

To let these hands obey my blood,
They are apt enough to dislocate and tear

Thy flesh and bones. Howe'er thou art a fiend, 66

A woman's shape doth shield thee.

Gon. Marry, your manhood—mew !

Enter a Messenger.

Alb. What news ?

Mess. O, my good lord, the Duke of Cornwall's dead, 70

Slain by his servant, going to put out
The other eye of Gloucester.

Alb. Gloucester's eyes !

Mess. A servant that he bred, thrill'd with remorse,

Oppos'd against the act, bending his sword
To his great master ; who, thereat enrag'd,

Flew on him, and amongst them fell'd him
dead ; 76

But not without that harmful stroke which since

Hath pluck'd him after.

Alb. This shows you are above,
You justicers, that these our nether crimes

So speedily can venge ! But, O poor
Gloucester ! 80

Lost he his other eye ?

Mess. Both, both, my lord.

This letter, madam, craves a speedy
answer ;

'Tis from your sister.

Gon. [Aside] One way I like this well ;
But being widow, and my Gloucester with
her,

May all the building in my fancy pluck 85
Upon my hateful life. Another way
The news is not so tart.—I'll read, and answer. [Exit.

Alb. Where was his son, when they did take his eyes?

Mess. Come with my lady hither.

Alb. He is not here.

Mess. No, my good lord; I met him back
again. 90

Alb. Knows he the wickedness?

Mess. Ay, my good lord; 'twas he in-form'd against him

And quit the house on purpose that their punishment

Might have the freer course.

Alb. Gloucester, I live
To thank thee for the love thou show'dst
the King, 95

And to revenge thine eyes. Come hither,
friend:

Tell me what more thou know'st. [Exeunt.

SCENE III. The French camp near Dover.

Enter KENT and a Gentleman.

Kent. Why the King of France is so suddenly gone back know you no reason?

Gent. Something he left imperfect in the state, which since his coming forth is thought of, which imports to the kingdom so much fear and danger that his personal return was most required and necessary. 6

Kent. Who hath he left behind him
general?

Gent. The Marshal of France, Monsieur
La Far.

Kent. Did your letters pierce the Queen to any demonstration of grief? 10

Gent. Ay, sir; she took them, read them in my presence,

And now and then an ample tear trill'd
down

Her delicate cheek. It seem'd she was a queen

Over her passion, who, most rebel-like,
Sought to be king o'er her.

Kent. O, then it mov'd her. 15

Gent. Not to a rage; patience and sorrow strove

Who should express her goodliest. You have seen

Sunshine and rain at once: her smiles and tears

Were like a better way. Those happy smilets That play'd on her ripe lip seem'd not to
know 20

What guests were in her eyes, which parted
thence

As pearls from diamonds dropp'd. In brief,

Sorrow would be a rarity most beloved
If all could so become it.

Kent. Made she no verbal question?

Gent. Faith, once or twice she heav'd the name of father 25

Pantingly forth, as if it press'd her heart;
Cried 'Sisters! sisters! Shame of ladies!
Sisters!

Kent! father! sisters! What i' th' storm?
i' th' night?

Let pity not be believ'd! There she shook
The holy water from her heavenly eyes, 30

And clamour moisten'd; then away she started

To deal with grief alone.

Kent. It is the stars,
The stars above us, govern our conditions;
Else one self mate and make could not beget Such different issues. You spoke not with her since? 35

Gent. No.

Kent. Was this before the King return'd?

Gent. No, since.

Kent. Well, sir, the poor distressed Lear's
i' th' town;

Who sometime in his better tune remembers 39

What we are come about, and by no means
Will yield to see his daughter.

Gent. Why, good sir?

Kent. A sovereign shame so elbows him;
his own unkindness,

That stripp'd her from his benediction, turn'd her

To foreign casualties, gave her dear rights
To his dog-hearted daughters—these things sting 45

His mind so venomously that burning
shame

Detains him from Cordelia.

Gent. Alack, poor gentleman!

Kent. Of Albany's and Cornwall's powers you heard not?

Gent. 'Tis so; they are afoot.

Kent. Well, sir, I'll bring you to our master Lear, 50

And leave you to attend him. Some dear
cause

Will in concealment wrap me up awhile;
When I am known aright, you shall not grieve

Lending me this acquaintance. I pray you go 54

Along with me. [Exeunt.

SCENE IV. The French camp. A tent.

Enter with drum and colours, CORDELIA, Doctor, and Soldiers.

Cor. Alack, 'tis he! Why, he was met even now

As mad as the vex'd sea, singing aloud, Crown'd with rank fumiter and furrow
weeds,

With hardocks, hemlock, nettles, cuckoo-flow'rs,

Darnel, and all the idle weeds that grow 5

In our sustaining corn. A century send forth ;

Search every acre in the high-grown field,
And bring him to our eye. [Exit an Officer.

What can man's wisdom,
In the restoring his bereaved sense ?
He that helps him, take all my outward worth. 10

Doc. There is means, madam.
Our foster-nurse of nature is repose,
The which he lacks ; that to provoke in him

Are many simples operative, whose power
Will close the eye of anguish.

Cor. All blest secrets, 15
All you unpublish'd virtues of the earth, Spring with my tears ; be aidant and remediate,

In the good man's distress. Seek, seek for him ;

Lest his ungovern'd rage dissolve the life
That wants the means to lead it.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. News, madam : 20
The British pow'rs are marching hither-
ward.

Cor. 'Tis known before ; our preparation
stands

In expectation of them. O dear father !
It is thy business that I go about ;
Therefore great France 25
My mourning and importun'd tears hath pitied.

No blown ambition doth our arms incite,
But love, dear love, and our ag'd father's right.

Soon may I hear and see him ! [Exeunt.

SCENE V. Gloucester's castle.

Enter REGAN and OSWALD.

Reg. But are my brother's pow'rs set forth ?

Osw. Ay madam.

Reg. Himself in person there ?

Osw. Madam, with much ado.
Your sister is the better soldier.

Reg. Lord Edmund spake not with your lord at home ?

Osw. No, madam. 5

Reg. What might import my sister's letter
to him ?

Osw. I know not, lady.

Reg. Faith, he is posted hence on serious matter.

It was great ignorance, Gloucester's eyes
being out,

To let him live ; where he arrives he moves All hearts against us. Edmund, I think, is gone 11

In pity of his misery, to dispatch
His nighted life ; moreover, to descry
The strength o' th' enemy.

Osw. I must needs after him, madam, with my letter. 13

Reg. Our troops set forth to-morrow ;
stay with us ;

The ways are dangerous.

Osw. I may not, madam :
My lady charg'd my duty in this business.

Reg. Why should she write to Edmund ?
Might not you

Transport her purposes by word ? Belike Some things—I know not what. I'll love thee much— 21

Let me unseal the letter.

Osw. Madam, I had rather—

Reg. I know your lady does not love her husband ;

I am sure of that ; and at her late being
here

She gave strange œillades and most speaking looks 25

To noble Edmund. I know you are of her bosom.

Osw. I, madam ?

Reg. I speak in understanding ; y'are,
I know't.

Therefore I do advise you take this note.
My lord is dead ; Edmund and I have talk'd ; 30

And more convenient is he for my hand
Than for your lady's. You may gather
more.

If you do find him, pray you give him
this ;

And when your mistress hears thus much,
from you,

I pray desire her call her wisdom to her. 35
So fare you well.

If you do chance to hear of that blind
traitor,

Preferment falls on him that cuts him off.
Osw. Would I could meet him, madam !
I should show

What party I do follow.

Reg. Fare thee well. 40
[Exeunt.]

SCENE VI. The country near Dover.

Enter GLOUCESTER, and EDGAR dressed like a peasant.

Glo. When shall I come to th' top of that same hill ?

Edg. You do climb up it now ; look how we labour.

Glo. Methinks the ground is even.

Edg. Horrible steep.

Hark, do you hear the sea ?

Glo. No, truly.

Edg. Why then, your other senses grow imperfect 5

By your eyes' anguish.

Glo. So may it be indeed.

Methinks thy voice is alter'd, and thou speak'st

In better phrase and matter than thou didst.

Edg. Y'are much deceiv'd: in nothing am I chang'd

But in my garments.

Glo. Methinks y'are better spoken.

Edg. Come on, sir; here's the place. Stand still. How fearful

And dizzy 'tis to cast one's eyes so low!

The crows and choughs that wing the mid-way air

Show scarce so gross as beetles. Half-way down

Hangs one that gathers samphire—dreadful trade!

Methinks he seems no bigger than his head.

The fishermen that walk upon the beach Appear like mice; and yond tall anchoring bark Diminish'd to her cock; her cock, a buoy Almost too small for sight. The murmuring surge

That on th' unnumb' red idle pebble chafes Cannot be heard so high. I'll look no more;

Lest my brain turn, and the deficient sight Topple down headlong.

Glo. Set me where you stand.

Edg. Give me your hand. You are now within a foot

Of th' extreme verge. For all beneath the moon

Would I not leap upright.

Glo. Let go my hand.

Here, friend, 's another purse; in it a jewel

Well worth a poor man's taking. Fairies and gods

Prosper it with thee! Go thou further off; Bid me farewell, and let me hear thee going.

Edg. Now fare ye well, good sir.

Glo. With all my heart.

Edg. Why I do trifle thus with his despair Is done to cure it.

Glo. [Kneeling] O you mighty gods! This world I do renounce, and in your sights

Shake patiently my great affliction off. If I could bear it longer, and not fall

To quarrel with your great opposeless wills, My snuff and loathed part of nature should Burn itself out. If Edgar live, O, bless him! [Rising] Now, fellow, fare thee well.

Edg. Gone, sir; farewell.

[Gloucester casts himself down.] And yet I know not how conceit may rob

The treasury of life, when life itself Yields to the theft. Had he been where he thought, By this had thought been past.—Alive or dead?

Ho, you sir! friend! Hear you, sir! Speak!—

Thus might he pass indeed. Yet he revives— What are you, sir?

Glo. Away, and let me die.

Edg. Hadst thou been aught but gossamer, feathers, air,

So many fathom down precipitating, Thou'dst shiver'd like an egg; but thou dost breathe, Hast heavy substance, blced'st not, speak'st, art sound.

Ten masts at each make not the altitude Which thou hast perpendicularly fell.

Thy life's a miracle. Speak yet again.

Glo. But have I fall'n, or no?

Edg. From the dread summit of this chalky bourn.

Look up a-height; the shrill-gorg'd lark so far

Cannot be seen or heard. Do but look up. Glo. Alack, I have no eyes.

Is wretchedness depriv'd that benefit, To end itself by death? 'Twas yet some comfort,

When misery could beguile the tyrant's rage And frustrate his proud will.

Edg. Give me your arm. Up—so. How is't? Feel you your legs?

You stand.

Glo. Too well, too well.

Edg. This is above all strangeness. Upon the crown o' th' cliff what thing was that

Which parted from you? Glo. A poor unfortunate beggar.

Edg. As I stood here below, methought his eyes

Were two full moons; he had a thousand noses,

Horns whelk'd and waved like the enridged sea.

It was some fiend; therefore, thou happy father,

Think that the clearest gods, who make them honours

Of men's impossibilities, have preserved thee.

Glo. I do remember now. Henceforth I'll bear

Affliction till it do cry out itself 'Enough, enough' and die. That thing you speak of I took it for a man; often 'twould say, 'The fiend, the fiend'. He led me to that place.

Edg. Bear free and patient thoughts.

Enter LEAR, fantastically dressed with weeds.

But who comes here? The safer sense will ne'er accommodate His master thus.

Lear. No, they cannot touch me for coining; I am the King himself.

Edg. O thou side-piercing sight!

Lear. Nature's above art in that respect. There's your press-money. That fellow handles his bow like a crow-keeper; draw me a clothier's yard. Look, look, a mouse !

Peace, peace ; this piece of toasted cheese will do't. There's my gauntlet ; I'll prove it on a giant. Bring up the brown bills.
O, well flown, bird ! i' the clout, i' the clout
—hewgh ! Give the word. 92

Edg. Sweet marjoram.

Lear. Pass.

Glo. I know that voice. 95

Lear. Ha ! Goneril, with a white beard !
They flatter'd me like a dog, and told me I had white hairs in my beard ere the black ones were there. To say 'ay' and 'no' to everything that I said ! 'Ay' and 'no' too was no good divinity. When the rain came to wet me once, and the wind to make me chatter ; when the thunder would not peace at my bidding ; there I found 'em, there I smelt 'em out. Go to, they are not men o' their words. They told me I was everything ; 'tis a lie—I am not agueproof. 105

Glo. The trick of that voice I do well remember.

Is't not the King ?

Lear. Ay, every inch a king.

When I do stare, see how the subject quakes.

I pardon that man's life. What was thy cause ?

Adultery ? 110

Thou shalt not die. Die for adultery ? No.
The wren goes to't, and the small gilded fly
Does lecher in my sight.

Let copulation thrive ; for Gloucester's bastard son 114

Was kinder to his father than my daughters Got 'tween the lawful sheets.

To't, luxury, pell-mell, for I lack soldiers.
Behold yond simp'ring dame

Whose face between her forks presages
snow,

That minces virtue and does shake the
head 120

To hear of pleasure's name—

The fitchew nor the soiled horse goes to't
With a more riotous appetite.

Down from the waist they are centaurs,
Though women all above ; 125

But to the girdle do the gods inherit,

Beneath is all the fiends' ;

There's hell, there's darkness, there is the sulphurous pit—

Burning, scalding, stench, consumption.
Fie, fie, fie ! pah, pah ! Give me an ounce of civet, good apothecary, to sweeten my imagination. There's money for thee. 131

Glo. O, let me kiss that hand !

Lear. Let me wipe it first ; it smells of mortality.

Glo. O ruin'd piece of nature ! This great
world

Shall so wear out to nought. Dost thou know me ? 135

Lear. I remember thine eyes well enough.
Dost thou squiny at me ? No, do thy worst, blind Cupid ; I'll not love. Read thou this challenge ; mark but the penning
of it.

Glo. Were all thy letters suns, I could not see one. 140

Edg. [Aside] I would not take this from report. It is,

And my heart breaks at it.

Lear. Read.

Glo. What, with the case of eyes ? 144

Lear. O, ho, are you there with me ?
No eyes in your head nor no money in your purse ? Your eyes are in a heavy case, your purse in a light ; yet you see how this world goes.

Glo. I see it feelingly. 149

Lear. What, art mad ? A man may see how this world goes with no eyes. Look with thine ears. See how yond justice rails upon yond simple thief. Hark, in thine ear :
change places and, handy-dandy, which is the justice, which is the thief ? Thou hast seen a farmer's dog bark at a beggar ? 155

Glo. Ay, sir.

Lear. And the creature run from the cur ?
There thou mightst behold the great image of authority : a dog's obey'd in office.

Thou rascal beadle, hold thy bloody
hand.

Why dost thou lash that whore ? Strip thy own back ; 161

Thou hotly lusts to use her in that kind
For which thou whip'st her. The usurer hangs the cozeners.

Through tatter'd clothes small vices do appear ;

Robes and furr'd gowns hide all. Plate sin with gold, 165

And the strong lance of justice hurtless
breaks ;

Arm it in rags, a pigmy's straw does pierce
it.

None does offend, none—I say none ; I'll able 'em.

Take that of me, my friend, who have the power

To seal th' accuser's lips. Get thee glass
eyes, 170

And, like a scurvy politician, seem
To see the things thou dost not. Now, now, now, now !

Pull off my boots. Harder, harder—so.

Edg. O, matter and impertinency mix'd !
Reason in madness ! 176

Lear. If thou wilt weep my fortunes, take my eyes.

I know thee well enough ; thy name is Gloucester.

Thou must be patient ; we came crying
hither.

Thou know'st the first time that we smell
the air 180

We wawl and cry. I will preach to thee.
Mark.

Glo. Alack, alack the day!

Lear. When we are born, we cry that we are come

To this great stage of fools. This a good block!

It were a delicate stratagem to shoe 185
A troop of horse with felt; I'll put't in
proof;

And when I have stol'n upon these son-in-
laws,

Then kill, kill, kill, kill, kill, kill!

Enter a Gentleman, with Attendants.

Gent. O, here he is: lay hand upon him.—Sir,

Your most dear daughter— 190

Lear. No rescue? What, a prisoner? I am even

The natural fool of fortune. Use me well;
You shall have ransom. Let me have surgeons;

I am cut to th' brains.

Gent. You shall have any thing.

Lear. No seconds? All myself? 195

Why, this would make a man a man of salt,

To use his eyes for garden water-pots,
Ay, and laying Autumn's dust.

Gent. Good sir—

Lear. I will die bravely, like a smug bridegroom. What! 200

I will be jovial. Come, come; I am a king,
My masters, know you that.

Gent. You are a royal one, and we obey
you.

Lear. Then there's life in't. Nay, an you get it, you shall get it by running. Sa, sa, sa, sa. [Exit running; Attendants follow.]

Gent. A sight most pitiful in the meanest
wretch, 206

Past speaking of in a king! Thou hast one daughter

Who redeems nature from the general curse
Which twain have brought her to.

Edg. Hail, gentle sir.

Gent. Sir, speed you; what's your will?

Edg. Do you hear aught, sir, of a battle toward? 211

Gent. Most sure and vulgar; every one hears that

Which can distinguish sound.

Edg. But, by your favour,
How near's the other army?

Gent. Near and on speedy foot; the main descry 215

Stands on the hourly thought.

Edg. I thank you, sir; that's all.

Gent. Though that the Queen on special cause is here,

Her army is mov'd on.

Edg. I thank you, sir. [Exit Gentleman.]

Glo. You ever-gentle gods, take my breath from me;

Let not my worse spirit tempt me again 220
To die before you please.

Edg. Well pray you, father.

Glo. Now, good sir, what are you?

Edg. A most poor man, made tame to fortune's blows,

Who, by the art of known and feeling
sorrows,

Am pregnant to good pity. Give me your
hand; 225

I'll lead you to some biding.

Glo. Hearty thanks;

The bounty and the benison of heaven
To boot, and boot!

Enter OSWALD.

Osw. A proclaim'd prize! Most happy!
That eyeless head of thine was first fram'd flesh

To raise my fortunes. Thou old unhappy
traitor, 230

Briefly thyself remember. The sword is out
That must destroy thee.

Glo. Now let thy friendly hand
Put strength enough to't. [Edgar interposes.]

Osw. Wherefore, bold peasant,
Dar'st thou support a publish'd traitor?

Hence;

Lest that th' infection of his fortune take
Like hold on thee. Let go his arm. 236

Edg. Chill not let go, zir, without vurther
'casion.

Osw. Let go, slave, or thou diest.

Edg. Good gentleman, go your gait, and let poor volk pass. An chud ha' bin zwagger'd out of my life, 'twould not ha' bin zo long as 'tis by a vortnight. Nay, come not near th' old man; keep out, che vor ye, or Ice try whether your costard or my bellow be the harder. Chill be plain with you.

Osw. Out, dunghill! 245

Edg. Chill pick your teeth, zir. Cerre;
no matter vor your foins. [They fight.]

Osw. Slave, thou hast slain me. Villain, take my purse;

If ever thou wilt thrive, bury my body,
And give the letters which thou find'st about me 250

To Edmund Earl of Gloucester. Seek him
out

Upon the English party. O, untimely
death!

Death! [He dies.]

Edg. I know thee well; a serviceable
villain,

As duteous to the vices of thy mistress 255
As badness would desire.

Glo. What, is he dead?

Edg. Sit you down, father; rest you.

Let's see these pockets; the letters that he speaks of

May be my friends. He's dead ; I am only sorry ²⁵⁹
 He had no other death's-man. Let us see.
 Leave, gentle wax ; and, manners, blame us not :
 To know our enemies' minds we'd rip their hearts ;
 Their papers is more lawful.

[Reads] 'Let our reciprocal vows be rememb' red. You have many opportunities to cut him off ; if your will want not, time and place will be fruitfully offer'd. There is nothing done if he return the conqueror :
 then am I the prisoner, and his bed my gaol ; from the loathed warmth whereof deliver me, and supply the place for your labour. ²⁶⁸

Your (wife, so I would say) affectionate servant, GONERIL.'

O indistinguish'd space of woman's will !
 A plot upon her virtuous husband's life ;
 And the exchange my brother ! Here, in the sands
 Thence I'll rake up, the post unsanctified
 Of murderous lechers ; and in the mature time ²⁷⁵
 With this ungracious paper strike the sight Of the death-practis'd duke. For him 'tis
 well

That of thy death and business I can tell.
Glo. The King is mad ; how stiff is my vile sense,

That I stand up, and have ingenious feeling ²⁸⁰
 Of my huge sorrows ! Better I were distract ;

So should my thoughts be sever'd from my griefs,
 And woes by wrong imaginations lose
 The knowledge of themselves.

[Drum afar off.

Edg. Give me your hand.
 Far off methinks I hear the beaten drum.
 Come, father, I'll bestow you with a friend.

[Exeunt.

SCENE VII. A tent in the French camp.

Mus. Enter CORDELIA, KENT, Doctor, and Gentleman.

Cor. O thou good Kent, how shall I live and work
 To match thy goodness ? My life will be too short,
 And every measure fail me.

Kent. To be acknowledg'd, madam, is o'erpaid.

All my reports go with the modest truth ;
 Nor more nor clipp'd, but so. ⁶

Cor. Be better suited.
 These weeds are memories of those worsen
 hours ;

I prithee put them off.

Kent. Pardon, dear madam ;

Yet to be known shortens my made intent :
 My boon I make it that you know me not Till time and I think meet. ¹¹

Cor. Then be't so, my good lord. [To the Doctor] How does the King ?

Doct. Madam, sleeps still.

Cor. O you kind gods,
 Cure this great breach in his abused nature !
 Th' untun'd and jarring senses, O, wind up ¹⁶

Of this child-changed father !

Doct. So please your Majesty
 That we may wake the King ; he hath slept long.

Cor. Be govern'd by your knowledge, and proceed

I' th' sway of your own will. [To the gentleman] Is he array'd ? ²⁰

Gent. Ay, madam ; in the heaviness of
 sleep

We put fresh garments on him.

Doct. Be by, good madam, when we do awake him ;

I doubt not of his temperance.

Cor. Very well.

Doct. Please you, draw near. Louder the music there ! ²⁵

He draws the curtains and discovers LEAR asleep in bed.

Cor. O my dear father ! Restoration hang Thy medicine on my lips, and let this kiss Repair those violent harms that my two sisters

Have in thy reverence made.

Kent. Kind and dear princess !

Cor. Had you not been their father, these white flakes ³⁰

Did challenge pity of them. Was this a face

To be oppos'd against the warring winds ?
 To stand against the deep dread bolted
 thunder ?

In the most terrible and nimble stroke

Of quick cross lightning ? to watch—poor perdu !— ³⁵

With this thin helm ? Mine enemy's dog, Though he had bit me, should have stood that night

Against my fire ; and wast thou fain, poor
 father,

To hovel thee with swine and rogues forlorn,
 In short and musty straw ? Alack, alack !

'Tis wonder that thy life and wits at once
 Had not concluded all.—He wakes ; speak to him. ⁴²

Doct. Madam, do you ; 'tis fittest.

Cor. How does my royal lord ? How fares your Majesty ?

Lear. You do me wrong to take me out o' th' grave.

Thou art a soul in bliss ; but I am bound ⁴⁶
 Upon a wheel of fire, that mine own tears
 Do scald like molten lead.

Cor. Sir, do you know me ?

Lear. You are a spirit, I know. Where did you die ?

Cor. Still, still far wide !

Doct. He's scarce awake ; let him alone awhile.

Lear. Where have I been ? Where am I ? Fair daylight ?

I am mightily abus'd. I should e'en die with pity

To see another thus. I know not what to say.

I will not swear these are my hands. Let's see.

I feel this pin prick. Would I were assur'd Of my condition !

Cor. O, look upon me, sir, And hold your hands in benediction o'er me.

No, sir, you must not kneel.

Lear. Pray, do not mock me : I am a very foolish fond old man,

Fourscore and upward, not an hour more nor less ;

And, to deal plainly,

I fear I am not in my perfect mind.

Methinks I should know you, and know this man ;

Yet I am doubtful ; for I am mainly ignorant

What place this is ; and all the skill I have Remembers not these garments ; nor I know not Where I did lodge last night. Do not laugh at me ;

For, as I am a man, I think this lady To be my child Cordelia.

Cor. And so I am, I am.

Lear. Be your tears wet ? Yes, faith. I pray weep not ;

If you have poison for me I will drink it. I know you do not love me ; for your sisters

Have, as I do remember, done me wrong : You have some cause, they have not.

Cor. No cause, no cause.

Lear. Am I in France ?

Kent. In your own kingdom, sir.

Lear. Do not abuse me.

Doct. Be comforted, good madam. The great rage,

You see, is kill'd in him ; and yet it is danger

To make him even o'er the time he has lost. Desire him to go in ; trouble him no more Till further settling.

Cor. Will't please your Highness walk ?

Lear. You must bear with me. Pray you now, forget and forgive ; I am old and foolish.

[Exeunt all but Kent and Gentleman.] Gent. Holds it true, sir, that the Duke of Cornwall was so slain ?

Kent. Most certain, sir.

Gent. Who is conductor of his people ?

Kent. As 'tis said, the bastard son of Gloucester.

Gent. They say Edgar, his banish'd son, is with the Earl of Kent in Germany.

Kent. Report is changeable. 'Tis time to look about ; the powers of the kingdom approach apace.

Gent. The arbitrement is like to be bloody. Fare you well, sir. [Exit.

Kent. My point and period will be thoroughly wrought,

Or well or ill, as this day's battle's fought. [Exit.

ACT FIVE

SCENE I. The British camp near Dover.

Enter, with drum and colours, EDMUND, REGAN, Gentlemen, and Soldiers.

Edm. Know of the Duke if his last purpose hold,

Or whether since he is advis'd by aught To change the course. He's full of alteration

And self-reproving—bring his constant pleasure. [Exit an Officer.

Reg. Our sister's man is certainly mis-carried.

Edm. 'Tis to be doubted, madam.

Reg. Now, sweet lord, You know the goodness I intend upon you.

Tell me—but truly—but then speak the truth—

Do you not love my sister ?

Edm. In honour'd love.

Reg. But have you never found my brother's way

To the forfended place ?

Edm. That thought abuses you.

Reg. I am doubtful that you have been conjunct

And bosom'd with her, as far as we call hers.

Edm. No, by mine honour, madam.

Reg. I never shall endure her. Dear my lord,

Be not familiar with her.

Edm. Fear me not. She and the Duke her husband !

Enter, with drum and colours, ALBANY, GONERIL, and Soldiers.

Gon. [Aside] I had rather lose the battle than that sister Should loosen him and me.

Alb. Our very loving sister, well be-met. Sir, this I heard : the King is come to his daughter

With others whom the rigour of our state Forc'd to cry out. Where I could not be honest

I never yet was valiant. For this business, It touches us as France invades our land,

Not holds the King, with others whom, I
fear,

Most just and heavy causes make oppose.

Edm. Sir, you speak nobly.

Reg. Why is this reason'd ?

Gon. Combine together 'gainst the enemy;
For these domestic-door particulars 30
Are not the question here.

Alb. Let's then determine
With th' ancient of war on our proceeding.

Edm. I shall attend you presently at your tent.

Reg. Sister, you'll go with us ?

Gon. No. 35

Reg. 'Tis most convenient ; pray you go
with us.

Gon. [Aside] O, ho, I know the riddle.—
I will go.

As they are going out, enter EDGAR, disguised.

Edg. If e'er your Grace had speech with man so poor,

Hear me one word.

Alb. I'll overtake you.—Speak.

[Exeunt all but Albany and Edgar.

Edg. Before you fight the battle, ope this letter. 40

If you have victory, let the trumpet sound
For him that brought it ; wretched though I seem

I can produce a champion that will prove
What is avouched there. If you miscarry,
Your business of the world hath so an end,
And I machination ceases. Fortune love you!

Alb. Stay till I have read the letter.

Edg. I was forbid it.
When time shall serve, let but the herald cry, 43

And I'll appear again.

Alb. Why, fare thee well. I will o'erlook thy paper. [Exit Edgar.

Re-enter EDMUND.

Edm. The enemy's in view ; draw up your powers. 51

Here is the guess of their true strength and forces

By diligent discovery ; but your haste
Is now urg'd on you.

Alb. We will greet the time. [Exit.

Edm. To both these sisters have I sworn my love ; 55

Each jealous of the other, as the stung
Are of the adder. Which of them shall I take ?

Both ? one ? or neither ? Neither can be enjoy'd,

If both remain alive : to take the widow,
Exasperates, makes mad her sister Goneril ;
And hardly shall I carry out my side, 61
Her husband being alive. Now then, we'll use

His countenance for the battle ; which being done,

Let her who would be rid of him devise
His speedy taking off. As for the mercy 65
Which he intends to Lear and to Cordelia—
The battle done, and they within our power,
Shall never see his pardon ; for my state
Stands on me to defend, not to debate.

[Exit.

SCENE II. A field between the two camps.

Alarum within. Enter, with drum and colours, the Powers of France over the stage, CORDELIA with her Father in her hand, and exeunt.

Enter EDGAR and GLOUCESTER.

Edg. Here, father, take the shadow of this tree

For your good host ; pray that the right may thrive.

If ever I return to you again

I'll bring you comfort.

Glo. Grace go with you, sir !
[Exit Edgar.

Alarum and retreat within. Re-enter EDGAR.

Edg. Away, old man ; give me thy hand ;
away ! 5

King Lear hath lost, he and his daughter ta'en.

Give me thy hand ; come on.

Glo. No further, sir ; a man may rot even
here.

Edg. What, in ill thoughts again ? Men must endure

Their going hence, even as their coming hither : 10

Ripeness is all. Come on.

Glo. And that's true too.
[Exeunt.

SCENE III. The British camp near Dover.

Enter, in conquest, with drum and colours,
EDMUND ; LEAR and CORDELIA prisoners ;
Soldiers, Captain.

Edm. Some officers take them away.

Good guard,

Until their greater pleasures first be known
That are to censure them.

Cor. We are not the first Who with best meaning have incurr'd the worst.

For thee, oppressed King, am I cast down ; Myself could else out-frown false Fortune's frown. 6

Shall we not see these daughters and these sisters ?

Lear. No, no, no, no ! Come, let's away to prison.

We two alone will sing like birds i' th' cage ;
When thou dost ask me blessing, I'll kneel
down 10

And ask of thee forgiveness ; so we'll live,
And pray, and sing, and tell old tales, and laugh

At gilded butterflies, and hear poor rogues Talk of court news; and we'll talk with them too—
Who loses and who wins; who's in, who's out—¹⁵
And take upon's the mystery of things
As if we were God's spies; and we'll wear
out
In a wall'd prison packs and sects of great ones
That ebb and flow by th' moon.
Edm. Take them away.
Lear. Upon such sacrifices, my Cordelia,
The gods themselves throw incense. Have I caught thee?²¹
He that parts us shall bring a brand from
heaven
And fire us hence like foxes. Wipe thine
eyes;
The good years shall devour them, flesh and
fell,
Ere they shall make us weep. We'll see 'em starv'd first.²⁵
Come. [Exeunt Lear and Cordelia, guarded.]
Edm. Come hither, Captain; hark.
[Giving a paper] Take thou this note; go follow them to prison.
One step I have advanc'd thee; if thou dost
As this instructs thee, thou dost make thy way³⁰
To noble fortunes. Know thou this, that men
Are as the time is; to be tender-minded Does not become a sword. Thy great employment
Will not bear question; either say thou'll
do't,
Or thrive by other means.
Capt. I'll do't, my lord.³⁵ Edm. About it; and write happy when
th' hast done.
Mark—I say, instantly; and carry it so
As I have set it down.
Capt. I cannot draw a cart nor eat dried oats;³⁹
If it be man's work, I'll do't. [Exit.] Flourish. Enter ALBANY, GONERIL, REGAN, and Soldiers.
Alb. Sir, you have show'd to-day your valiant strain,
And fortune led you well. You have the captives⁴²
Who were the opposites of this day's strife;
I do require them of you, so to use them
As we shall find their merits and our safety
May equally determine.
Edm. Sir, I thought it fit
To send the old and miserable king
To some retention and appointed guard;
Whose age has charms in it, whose title
more,
To pluck the common bosom on his side,⁵⁰
And turn our impress'd lances in our eyes

Which do command them. With him I sent the Queen,
My reason all the same; and they are ready
To-morrow, or at further space, t' appear Where you shall hold your session. At this time⁵⁵
We sweat and bleed; the friend hath lost his friend;
And the best quarrels, in the heat, are curs'd
By those that feel their sharpness.
The question of Cordelia and her father Requires a fitter place.
Alb. Sir, by your patience,⁶⁰
I hold you but a subject of this war,
Not as a brother.
Reg. That's as we list to grace him.
Methinks our pleasure might have been demanded
Ere you had spoke so far. He led our powers,
Bore the commission of my place and person,⁶⁵
The which immediacy may well stand up
And call itself your brother.
Gon. Not so hot.
In his own grace he doth exalt himself,
More than in your addition.
Reg. In my rights,
By me invested, he compeers the best.⁷⁰
Alb. That were the most, if he should husband you.
Reg. Jesters do oft prove prophets.
Gon. Holla, holla!
That eye that told you so look'd but asquint.
Reg. Lady, I am not well; else I should answer
From a full-flowing stomach. General,⁷⁵
Take thou my soldiers, prisoners, patri-mony;
Dispose of them, of me; the walls is
thine.
Witness the world that I create thee here
My lord and master.
Gon. Mean you to enjoy him?
Alb. The let-alone lies not in your good will.⁸⁰
Edm. Nor in thine, lord.
Alb. Half-blooded fellow, yes.
Reg. [To Edmund] Let the drum strike, and prove my title thine.
Alb. Stay yet; hear reason. Edmund, I arrest thee
On capital treason; and, in thy attaint, [Pointing to Goneril.]
This gilded serpent. For your claim, fair sister,⁸⁵
I bar it in the interest of my wife;
'Tis she is sub-contracted to this lord,
And I, her husband, contradict your barns.
If you will marry, make your loves to me—
My lady is bespoken.
Gon. An interlude!⁹⁰

Alb. Thou art arm'd, Gloster. Let the trumpet sound.

If none appear to prove upon thy person
Thy heinous, manifest, and many treasons,
There is my pledge; [Throwing down a glove.

I'll make it on thy heart,
Ere I taste bread, thou art in nothing less Than I have here proclaim'd thee.

Reg. Sick, O, sick!

Gon. [Aside] If not, I'll ne'er trust medicine. ⁹⁷

Edm. There's my exchange. [Throwing down a glove]. What in the world he is That names me traitor, villain-like he lies.
Call by thy trumpet: he that dares approach, ¹⁰⁰

On him, on you, who not, I will maintain
My truth and honour firmly.

Alb. A herald, ho!

Edm. A herald, ho, a herald!

Alb. Trust to thy single virtue; for thy soldiers,

All levied in my name, have in my name ¹⁰⁵
Took their discharge.

Reg. My sickness grows upon me.

Alb. She is not well; convey her to my tent. [Exit Regan, led.

Enter a Herald.

Come hither, herald. Let the trumpet
sound,

And read out this. ¹⁰⁹

Herald. [Reads] 'If any man of quality or degree within the lists of the army will maintain upon Edmund, supposed Earl of Gloucester, that he is a manifold traitor, let him appear by the third sound of the trumpet. He is bold in his defence.' ¹¹⁴

Sound, trumpet. [1 Trumpet.

Herald. Again! [2 Trumpet.

Herald. Again! [3 Trumpet.

[Trumpet answers within.

Enter EDGAR, armed, at the third sound, a trumpet before him.

Alb. Ask him his purposes, why he appears

Upon this call o' th' trumpet.

Herald. What are you?

Your name, your quality, and why you answer ¹²⁰

This present summons?

Edg. Know, my name is lost,

By treason's tooth bare-gnawn and canker-bit;

Yet am I noble as the adversary

I come to cope.

Alb. Which is that adversary?

Edg. What's he that speaks for Edmund
Earl of Gloucester? ¹²⁵

Edm. Himself. What say'st thou to him?

Edg. Draw thy sword,

That, if my speech offend a noble heart,
Thy arm may do thee justice; here is mine.

Behold, it is the privilege of mine honours,
My oath, and my profession. I protest—Maugre thy strength, youth, place, and eminence, ¹³¹

Despite thy victor sword and fire-new
fortune,

Thy valour and thy heart—thou art a
traitor;

False to thy gods, thy brother, and thy
father;

Conspirant 'gainst this high illustrious prince; ¹³⁵

And, from th' extremest upward of thy
head

To the descent and dust below thy foot,
A most toad-spotted traitor. Say thou

'No',

This sword, this arm, and my best spirits, are bent ¹³⁹

To prove upon thy heart, whereto I speak,
Thou liest.

Edm. In wisdom I should ask thy name;
But, since thy outside looks so fair and warlike,

And that thy tongue some say of breeding breathes, ¹⁴³

What safe and nicely I might well delay
By rule of knighthood, I disdain and spurn.

Back do I toss these treasons to thy head;
With the hell-hated lie o'erwhelm thy

heart;

Which—for they yet glance by and scarcely bruise—

This sword of mine shall give them instant
way

Where they shall rest for ever. Trumpets, speak. ¹⁵⁰

[Alarums. They fight. Edmund falls.

Alb. Save him, save him!

Gon. This is practice, Gloucester.

By th' law of war thou wast not bound to answer

An unknown opposite; thou art not vanquish'd,

But cozen'd and beguil'd,

Alb. Shut your mouth, dame,

Or with this paper shall I stopple it. Hold,
sir. ¹⁵⁵

Thou worse than any name, read thine own evil.

No tearing, lady; I perceive you know it.
Gon. Say, if I do—the laws are mine, not thine. ¹⁵⁸

Who can arraign me for't?

Alb. Most monstrous! O!

Know'st thou this paper?

Gon. Ask me not what I know. [Exit.

Alb. Go after her. She's desperate; govern her. [Exit an Officer.

Edm. What you have charg'd me with,
that have I done,

And more, much more; the time will bring it out.

'Tis past, and so am I. But what art thou

That hast this fortune on me? If thou'rt noble, 165

I do forgive thee.

Edg. Let's exchange charity.
I am no less in blood than thou art, Edmund;

If more, the more th' hast wrong'd me.
My name is Edgar, and thy father's son.
The gods are just, and of our pleasant vices
Make instruments to plague us: 171
The dark and vicious place where thee he got

Cost him his eyes.

Edm. Th' hast spoken right, 'tis true;
The wheel is come full circle; I am here.

Alb. Methought thy very gait did prophesy 175

A royal nobleness. I must embrace thee.

Let sorrow split my heart if ever I

Did hate thee or thy father!

Edg. Worthy prince,
I know't.

Alb. Where have you hid yourself?
How have you known the miseries of your father? 180

Edg. By nursing them, my lord. List a brief tale;

And when 'tis told, O that my heart would burst!

The bloody proclamation to escape
That follow'd me so near—O our lives' sweetness, 184

That we the pain of death would hourly die
Rather than die at once!—taught me to shift

Into a madman's rags, t' assume a semblance

That very dogs disdain'd; and in this habit
Met I my father with his bleeding rings,
Their precious stones new lost; became his guide, 190

Led him, begg'd for him, sav'd him from despair;

Never—O fault!—reveal'd myself unto him
Until some half-hour past, when I was arm'd;

Not sure, though hoping, of this good success,

I ask'd his blessing, and from first to last
Told him my pilgrimage. But his flaw'd heart— 195

Alack, too weak the conflict to support!—
'Twixt two extremes of passion, joy and grief,

Burst smilingly.

Edm. This speech of yours hath mov'd me,

And shall perchance do good; but speak you on; 200

You look as you had something more to say.

Alb. If there be more, more woeful, hold it in;

For I am almost ready to dissolve.

Hearing of this.

Edg. This would have seem'd a period
To such as love not sorrow; but another,
To amplify too much, would make much more, 206

And top extremity.

Whilst I was big in clamour, came there in a man

Who, having seen me in my worst estate,
Shunn'd my abhorr'd society; but then, finding 210

Who 'twas that so endur'd, with his strong arms

He fastened on my neck and bellowed out
As he'd burst heaven; threw him on my father;

Told the most piteous tale of Lear and him
That ever ear receiv'd; which in recounting
His grief grew puissant, and the strings of life 216

Began to crack. Twice then the trumpets sounded

And there I left him tranc'd.

Alb. But who was this?

Edg. Kent, sir, the banish'd Kent, who in disguise

Follow'd his enemy king, and did him service 220

Improper for a slave.

Enter a Gentleman with a bloody knife.

Gent. Help, help, O, help!

Edg. What kind of help?

Alb. Speak, man.

Edg. What means this bloody knife?

Gent. 'Tis hot, it smokes;
It came even from the heart of—O, she's dead!

Alb. Who dead? Speak, man. 225

Gent. Your lady, sir, your lady! and her sister

By her is poison'd; she confesses it.

Edm. I was contracted to them both. All three

Now marry in an instant.

Edg. Here comes Kent.

Enter KENT.

Alb. Produce the bodies, be they alive or dead. [Exit Gentleman. 230

This judgment of the heavens, that makes us tremble,

Touches us not with pity. O, is this he?
The time will not allow the compliment
Which very manners urges.

Kent. I am come

To bid my king and master aye good night.
Is he not here?

Alb. Great thing of us forgot!

Speak, Edmund, where's the King? and where's Cordelia? [The bodies of Goneril and Regan are brought in.

See'st thou this object, Kent?

Kent. Alack, why thus?

Edm. Yet Edmund was belov'd.

The one the other poison'd for my sake, ²⁴⁰
 And after slew herself.
Alb. Even so. Cover their faces.
Edm. I pant for life. Some good I mean
 to do,
 Despite of mine own nature. Quickly
 send—
 Be brief in it—to th' castle; for my writ
 Is on the life of Lear and on Cordelia. ²⁴⁶
 Nay, send in time.
Alb. Run, run, O, run!
Edg. To who, my lord? Who has the office? Send Thy token of reprieve. ²⁴⁹
Edm. Well thought on. Take my sword;
 Give it the Captain.
Alb. Haste thee, for thy life.
 [Exit Edgar.
Edm. He hath commission from thy wife
 and me
 To hang Cordelia in the prison, and
 To lay the blame upon her own despair,
 That she fordid herself. ²⁵⁵
Alb. The gods defend her! Bear him hence awhile. [Edmund is borne off.
*Enter LEAR, with CORDELIA dead in his arms; EDGAR, Captain, and Others
 following.*
Lear. Howl, howl, howl, howl! O, you are men of stones!
 Had I your tongues and eyes, I'd use them
 so That heaven's vault should crack. She's gone for ever.
 I know when one is dead and when one lives; ²⁶⁰
 She's dead as earth. Lend me a lookingglass;
 If that her breath will mist or stain the stone,
 Why, then she lives.
Kent. Is this the promis'd end?
Edg. Or image of that horror?
Alb. Fall and cease!
Lear. This feather stirs; she lives. If it be so, ²⁶⁵
 It is a chance which does redeem all sorrows
 That ever I have felt.
Kent. O my good master! [Kneeling.
Lear. Prithce away.
Edg. 'Tis noble Kent, your friend.
Lear. A plague upon you, murderers, traitors all!
 I might have sav'd her; now she's gone for ever. ²⁷⁰
 Cordelia, Cordelia! stay a little. Ha!
 What is't thou say'st? Her voice was ever soft,
 Gentle, and low—an excellent thing in woman.
 I kill'd the slave that was a-hanging thee.
Capt. 'Tis true, my lords, he did.
Lear. Did I not, fellow?

I have seen the day, with my good biting falchion, ²⁷⁶
 I would have made them skip: I am old
 now,
 And these same crosses spoil me. Who are
 you?
 Mine eyes are not o' th' best. I'll tell you straight.
Kent. If fortune brag of two she lov'd and hated, ²⁸⁰
 One of them we behold.
Lear. This is a dull sight. Are you not
 Kent?
Kent. The same—
 Your servant Kent. Where is your servant
 Caius?
Lear. He's a good fellow, I can tell you
 that;
 He'll strike, and quickly too. He's dead and rotten. ²⁸⁵
Kent. No, my good lord; I am the very
 man—
Lear. I'll see that straight.
Kent. That from your first of difference and decay
 Have follow'd your sad steps.
Lear. You are welcome hither.
Kent. Nor no man else! All's cheerless, dark, and deadly. ²⁹⁰
 Your eldest daughters have fordone themselves
 And desperately are dead.
Lear. Ay, so I think.
Alb. He knows not what he says; and vain is it
 That we present us to him.
Edg. Very bootless. ²⁹⁴
Enter a Messenger.
Mess. Edmund is dead, my lord.
Alb. That's but a trifle here.
 You lords and noble friends, know our intent.
 What comfort to this great decay may come Shall be applied. For us, we will resign
 During the life of this old Majesty,
 To him our absolute power. [To Edgar and Kent] You to your rights; ³⁰⁰
 With boot, and such addition as your honours
 Have more than merited. All friends shall taste
 The wages of their virtue, and all foes
 The cup of their deservings. O, see, see!
Lear. And my poor fool is hang'd! No, no, no life! ³⁰⁵
 Why should a dog, a horse, a rat have life,
 And thou no breath at all? Thou'lt come
 no more,
 Never, never, never, never, never.
 Pray you undo this button. Thank you, sir.
 Do you see this? Look on her. Look, her lips. ³¹⁰
 Look there, look there! [He dies.

Edg. He faints. My lord, my lord ! Kent. Break, heart ; I prithee break. Edg. Look up, my lord. Kent. Vex not his ghost. O, let him pass ! He hates him That would upon the rack of this tough world Stretch him out longer. Edg. He is gone indeed. 315 Kent. The wonder is he hath endur'd so long : He but usurp'd his life. Alb. Bear them from hence. Our present business	Is general woe. [To Kent and Edgar] Friends of my soul, you twain Rule in this realm and the gor'd state sustain. 320 Kent. I have a journey, sir, shortly to go. My master calls me ; I must not say no. Edg. The weight of this sad time we must obey ; Speak what we feel, not what we ought to say. The oldest hath borne most ; we that are young 325 Shall never see so much nor live so long. [Exeunt with a dead march.]

OTHELLO, THE MOOR OF VENICE

DRAMATIS PERSONÆ

DUKE OF VENICE.

BRABANTIO, a Senator, father to Desdemona.

Other Senators.

GRATIANO, brother to Brabantio, } two noble
LODOVICO, kinsman to } Venetians.
Brabantio, }

OTHELLO, the Moor, in the service of Venice.

CASSIO, his honourable Lieutenant.

IAGO, his Ancient, a villain.

RODERIGO, a gull'd Venetian gentleman.

MONTANO, Governor of Cyprus, before Othello.

Clown, servant to Othello.

DESDEMONA, daughter to Brabantio, and wife to Othello.

EMILIA, wife to Iago.

BIANCA, a courtesan, in love with Cassio.

Gentlemen of Cyprus, Sailors, Officers,
Messenger, Musicians, Herald, Attendants, &c.

THE SCENE : Venice ; Cyprus.

ACT ONE

SCENE I. Venice. A street.

Enter RODERIGO and IAGO.

Rod. Tush, never tell me ; I take it much unkindly

That you, Iago, who has had my purse
As if the strings were thine, shouldst know of this.

Iago. 'Sblood, but you will not hear me.
If ever I did dream of such a matter, 5
Abhor me.

Rod. Thou told'st me thou didst hold him in thy hate.

Iago. Despise me if I do not. Three great ones of the city,

In personal suit to make me his lieutenant,
Off-capp'd to him ; and, by the faith of
man, 10

I know my price, I am worth no worse a
place.

But he, as loving his own pride and purposes,

Evades them with a bombast circumstance
Horribly stuff'd with epithets of war ;

And, in conclusion, 15
Nonsuits my mediators ; 'For, certes,' says
he

'I have already chose my officer'.

And what was he ?

Forsooth, a great arithmetician,
One Michael Cassio, a Florentine, 20
A fellow almost damn'd in a fair wife,
That never set a squadron in the field,
Nor the division of a battle knows
More than a spinster ; unless the bookish
theoric,

Wherein the toged consuls can propose 25
As masterly as he—mere prattle, without
practice,

Is all his soldiership. But he, sir, had the election ;

And I, of whom his eyes had seen the proof
At Rhodes, at Cyprus, and on other grounds,

Christian and heathen, must be be-lee'd and calm'd 30

By debitor and creditor—this countercaster,

He, in good time, must his lieutenant be,
And I, God bless the mark ! his Moorship's ancient.

Rod. By heaven, I rather would have been his hangman !

Iago. Why, there's no remedy ; 'tis the curse of service : 35

Preferment goes by letter and affection,
Not by the old gradation, where each second

Stood heir to the first. Now, sir, be judge yourself

Whether I in any just term am affin'd

To love the Moor.

Rod. I would not follow him, then.

Iago. O, sir, content you. 41

I follow him to serve my turn upon him :

We cannot all be masters, nor all masters

Cannot be truly follow'd. You shall mark

Many a duteous and knee-crooking knave

That, doting on his own obsequious bondage, 46

Wears out his time, much like his master's ass,

For nought but provender ; and when he's old, cashier'd.

Whip me such honest knaves. Others there
are

Who, trimm'd in forms and visages of
duty,

Keep yet their hearts attending on themselves ; 51

And, throwing but shows of service on their lords,

Do well thrive by 'em and, when they have
lin'd their coats,

Do themselves homage—these fellows have some soul ;

And such a one do I profess myself. 55
For, sir,

It is as sure as you are Roderigo,
Were I the Moor, I would not be Iago.
In following him I follow but myself—Heaven is my judge, not I for love and duty, 60

But seeming so for my peculiar end.
For when my outward action doth demonstrate

The native act and figure of my heart
In compliment extern, 'tis not long after
But I will wear my heart upon my sleeve 65
For daws to peck at : I am not what I am.

Rod. What a full fortune does the thick-lips owe,
If he can carry't thus !

Iago. Call up her father.
Rouse him, make after him, poison his delight,

Proclaim him in the streets ; incense her kinsmen, 70

And, though he in a fertile climate dwell, Plague him with flies ; though that his joy
be joy,

Yet throw such changes of vexation on't
As it may lose some colour.

Rod. Here is her father's house. I'll call aloud. 75

Iago. Do, with like timorous accent and dire yell

As when, by night and negligence, the fire
Is spied in populous cities.

Rod. What, ho, Brabantio ! Signior Brabantio, ho !

Iago. Awake ! What, ho, Brabantio !
Thieves, thieves, thieves ! 80

Look to your house, your daughter, and your bags.

Thieves ! thieves !

Bra. What is the reason of this terrible summons ?

What is the matter there ? 84

Rod. Signior, is all your family within ?

Iago. Are your doors lock'd ?

Bra. Why, wherefore ask you this ?

Iago. Zounds, sir, you're robb'd ; for shame, put on your gown ;

Your heart is burst ; you have lost half your soul.

Even now, now, very now, an old black ram
Is tupping your white ewe. Arise, arise ; 90
Awake the snorting citizens with the bell,
Or else the devil will make a grandsire of
you.

Arise, I say.

Bra. What, have you lost your wits ?

Rod. Most reverend signior, do you know my voice ?

Bra. Not I ; what are you ? 95

Rod. My name is Roderigo.

Bra. The worser welcome !
I have charg'd thee not to haunt about my
doors ;

In honest plainness thou hast heard me say My daughter is not for thee ; and now, in
madness,

Being full of supper and distempering
draughts, 100

Upon malicious bravery dost thou come
To start my quiet.

Rod. Sir, sir—

Bra. But thou must needs be sure
My spirit and my place have in their power
To make this bitter to thee.

Rod. Patience, good sir.

Bra. What tell'st thou me of robbing ?
This is Venice ; 106

My house is not a grange.

Rod. Most grave Brabantio,
In simple and pure soul I come to you. 108

Iago. Zounds, sir, you are one of those that will not serve God if the devil bid you.
Because we come to do you service, and you think we are ruffians, you'll have your daughter cover'd with a Barbary horse ;
you'll have your nephews neigh to you ;
you'll have coursers for cousins and gennets for germans.

Bra. What profane wretch art thou ? 115

Iago. I am one, sir, that comes to tell you your daughter and the Moor are now making the beast with two backs.

Bra. Thou art a villain.

Iago. You are—a Senator.

Bra. This thou shalt answer ; I know thee, Roderigo. 120

Rod. Sir, I will answer anything. But I
beseech you,

If't be your pleasure and most wise consent—

As partly I find it is—that your fair
daughter,

At this odd-even and dull watch o' th'
night,

Transported with no worse nor better
guard 125

But with a knave of common hire, a gondolier,

To the gross clasps of a lascivious Moor—
If this be known to you, and your allowance,
We then have done you bold and saucy
wrongs ;

But if you know not this, my manners tell
me 130

We have your wrong rebuke. Do not believe

That, from the sense of all civility,
I thus would play and trifle with your reverence.

Your daughter, if you have not given her
leave,

I say again, hath made a gross revolt ; 135
Tying her duty, beauty, wit, and fortunes,

In an extravagant and wheeling stranger
Of here and everywhere. Straight satisfy yourself.

If she be in her chamber or your house,
Let loose on me the justice of the state ¹⁴⁰
For thus deluding you.

Bra. Strike on the tinder, ho !
Give me a taper ; call up all my people.
This accident is not unlike my dream.
Belief of it oppresses me already.
Light, I say ; light ! [Exit from above.]

Iago. Farewell ; for I must leave you.
It seems not meet nor wholesome to my place ¹⁴⁶

To be producted—as if I stay I shall—
Against the Moor ; for I do know the state, However this may gall him with some check,

Cannot with safety cast him ; for he's embark'd ¹⁵⁰

With such loud reason to the Cyprus wars, Which even now stands in act, that, for
their souls,

Another of his fathom they have none
To lead their business ; in which regard,
Though I do hate him as I do hell pains, ¹⁵⁵
Yet, for necessity of present life,
I must show out a flag and sign of love,
Which is indeed but sign. That you shall surely find him,

Lead to the Sagittary the raised search ; ¹⁵⁹
And there will I be with him. So, farewell.
[Exit.]

Enter below, BRABANTIO, in his night gown, and Servants with torches.

Bra. It is too true an evil. Gone she is ;
And what's to come of my despised time
Is nought but bitterness. Now, Roderigo, Where didst thou see her ?—O unhappy girl !—

With the Moor, say'st thou ?—Who would be a father ?— ¹⁶⁵

How didst thou know 'twas she ?—O, thou deceivest me

Past thought !—What said she to you ?— Get moe tapers ;

Raise all my kindred.—Are they married think you ?

Rod. Truly, I think they are.

Bra. O heaven ! How got she out ? O
treason of the blood ! ¹⁷⁰

Fathers, from hence trust not your daughters' minds

By what you see them act. Is there not charms

By which the property of youth and maid-hood

May be abus'd ? Have you not read,
Roderigo,

Of some such thing ?

Rod. Yes, sir, I have indeed. ¹⁷⁵

Bra. Call up my brother.—O that you had had her !—

Some one way, some another.—Do you
know

Where we may apprehend her and the Moor ?

Rod. I think I can discover him, if you please ¹⁷⁹

To get good guard, and go along with me.
Bra. Pray lead me on. At every house
I'll call ;

I may command at most.—Get weapons,
ho !

And raise some special officers of night.—
On, good Roderigo ; I'll deserve your pains.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE II. Venice. Another street.

Enter OTHELLO, IAGO, and Attendants with torches.

Iago. Though in the trade of war I have
slain men,

Yet do I hold it very stuff o' th' conscience
To do no contriv'd murder. I lack iniquity Sometime to do me service. Nine or ten times

I had thought to have yerk'd him here under the ribs. ⁵

Oth. 'Tis better as it is.

Iago. Nay, but he prated,
And spoke such scurvy and provoking terms
Against your honour

That, with the little godliness I have,
I did full hard forbear him. But I pray, sir, ¹⁰

Are you fast married ? For be assur'd of
this,

That the magnifico is much beloved,
And hath in his effect a voice potential
As double as the Duke's. He will divorce
you,

Or put upon you what restraint and grievance ¹⁵

That law, with all his might to enforce it on,
Will give him cable.

Oth. Let him do his spite.

My services which I have done the signiory Shall out-tongue his complaints. 'Tis yet
to know—

Which, when I know that boasting is an honour, ²⁰

I shall promulgate—I fetch my life and being

From men of royal siege ; and my demerits
May speak unbonneted to as proud a fortune

As this that I have reach'd. For know,
Iago,

But that I love the gentle Desdemona, ²⁵
I would not my unhoused free condition
Put into circumscription and confine
For the seas' worth.

Enter CASSIO and Officers with torches.

But look what lights come yonder.

Iago. Those are the raised father and his friends.
You were best go in.
Oth. Not I ; I must be found.
My parts, my title, and my perfect soul 31 Shall manifest me rightly. Is it they ?
Iago. By Janus, I think no.
Oth. The servants of the Duke and my lieutenant—
The goodness of the night upon you, friends ! 35
What is the news ?
Cas. The Duke does greet you, General ;
And he requires your haste-post-haste appearance
Even on the instant.
Oth. What is the matter, think you ?
Cas. Something from Cyprus, as I may divine.
It is a business of some heat : the galleys 40
Have sent a dozen sequent messengers
This very night at one another's heels ;
And many of the consuls, rais'd and met,
Are at the Duke's already. You have been hotly call'd for ;
When, being not at your lodging to be found, 45
The Senate hath sent about three several quests
To search you out.
Oth. 'Tis well I am found by you.
I will but spend a word here in the house,
And go with you. [Exit.
Cas. Ancient, what makes he here ?
Iago. Faith, he to-night hath boarded a land carrack. 50
If it prove lawful prize, he's made for ever.
Cas. I do not understand.
Iago. He's married.
Cas. To who ?

Re-enter OTHELLO.

Iago. Marry, to—Come, Captain, will you go ?
Oth. Have with you.
Enter BRABANTIO, RODERIGO, and Officers with torches and weapons.
Cas. Here comes another troop to seek for you.
Iago. It is Brabantio. General, be advis'd ; 55
He comes to bad intent.
Oth. Holla ! stand there.
Rod. Signior, it is the Moor.
Bra. Down with him, thief.
[They draw on both sides.
Iago. You, Roderigo ; come, sir, I am for you.
Oth. Keep up your bright swords, for the dew will rust them.
Good signior, you shall more command with years 60
Than with your weapons.

Bra. O thou foul thief, where hast thou stow'd my daughter ?
Damn'd as thou art, thou hast enchanted her ;
For I'll refer me to all things of sense,
If she in chains of magic were not bound, 65
Whether a maid so tender, fair, and happy,
So opposite to marriage that she shunn'd
The wealthy curled darlings of our nation,
Would ever have, to incur a general mock,
Run from her guardage to the sooty bosom
Of such a thing as thou—to fear, not to
delight. 71
Judge me the world, if 'tis not gross in sense
That thou hast practis'd on her with foul charms, Abus'd her delicate youth with drugs or minerals That weakens motion. I'll have't disputed on ; 75
'Tis probable, and palpable to thinking.
I therefore apprehend and do attach thee
For an abuser of the world, a practiser
Of arts inhibited and out of warrant.
Lay hold upon him. If he do resist, 80
Subdue him at his peril.
Oth. Hold your hands,
Both you of my inclining and the rest.
Were it my cue to fight, I should have known it Without a prompter. Where will you that I go To answer this your charge ?
Bra. To prison ; till fit time
Of law and course of direct session 86
Call thee to answer.
Oth. What if I do obey ?
How may the Duke be therewith satisfied,
Whose messengers are here about my side,
Upon some present business of the state, 90
To bring me to him.
1 Off. 'Tis true, most worthy signior ;
The Duke's in council, and your noble self,
I am sure, is sent for.
Bra. How ! The Duke in council !
In this time of the night ! Bring him away.
Mine's not an idle cause. The Duke himself,
Or any of my brothers of the state, 96
Cannot but feel this wrong as 'twere their own ;
For if such actions may have passage free,
Bond-slaves and pagans shall our statesmen be. [Exeunt.

SCENE III. Venice. A council-chamber.

Enter DUKE and Senators, set at a table with lights ; and Attendants.
Duke. There is no composition in these news
That gives them credit.
1 Sen. Indeed, they are disproportion'd ;
My letters say a hundred and seven galleys.

Duke. And mine a hundred and forty.
2 Sen. And mine two hundred.
But though they jump not on a just account— 5

As in these cases, where the aim reports,
'Tis oft with difference—yet do they all confirm

A Turkish fleet, and bearing up to Cyprus.
Duke. Nay, it is possible enough to judgment.

I do not so secure me in the error 10
But the main article I do approve
In fearful sense.

Sailor. [Within] What, ho! what, ho!
what, ho!

Enter Sailor.

Officer. A messenger from the galleys.

Duke. Now, what's the business?

Sail. The Turkish preparation makes for Rhodes;

So was I bid report here to the state 15
By Signior Angelo.

Duke. How say you by this change?

1 Sen. This cannot be,

By no assay of reason. 'Tis a pageant
To keep us in false gaze. When we consider
The importancy of Cyprus to the Turk, 20
And let ourselves again but understand That as it more concerns the Turk than Rhodes,

So may he with more facile question bear
it,

For that it stands not in such warlike brace,
But altogether lacks th' abilities 25
That Rhodes is dress'd in—if we make thought of this,

We must not think the Turk is so unskilful
To leave that latest which concerns him
first,

Neglecting an attempt of ease and gain
To wake and wage a danger profitless. 30

Duke. Nay, in all confidence, he's not for Rhodes.

Officer. Here is more news.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. The Ottomites, reverend and gracious,
Steering with due course toward the isle of Rhodes,

Have there enjoined them with an after fleet. 35

1 Sen. Ay, so I thought. How many, as you guess?

Mess. Of thirty sail; and now they do resem

Their backward course, bearing with frank appearance

Their purposes toward Cyprus. Signior Montano,

Your trusty and most valiant servitor, 40
With his free duty recommends you thus,
And prays you to believe him.

Duke. 'Tis certain, then, for Cyprus.
Marcus Lucchese, is not he in town?

1 Sen. He's now in Florence. 45

Duke. Write from us: wish him post-post-haste dispatch.

Enter BRABANTIO, OTHELLO, IAGO, RODERIGO, and Officers.

1 Sen. Here comes Brabantio and the valiant Moor.

Duke. Valiant Othello, we must straight employ you

Against the general enemy Ottoman.

[To Brabantio] I did not see you; welcome, gentle signior; 50

We lack'd your counsel and your help to-
night.

Bra. So did I yours. Good your Grace, pardon me:

Neither my place, nor aught I heard of business,

Hath rais'd me from my bed; nor doth the general care 54

Take hold on me; for my particular grief
Is of so flood-gate and o'erbearing nature

That it engulfs and swallows other sorrows,
And it is still itself.

Duke. Why, what's the matter?

Bra. My daughter! O, my daughter!

All. Dead?

Bra. Ay, to me.

She is abus'd, stol'n from me, and corrupted, 60

By spells and medicines bought of mountebanks;

For nature so preposterously to err,
Being not deficient, blind, or lame of sense,
Sans witchcraft could not.

Duke. Whoe'er he be that in this foul proceeding 65

Hath thus beguil'd your daughter of herself,
And you of her, the bloody book of law

You shall yourself read in the bitter letter After your own sense; yea, though our proper son Stood in your action.

Bra. Humbly I thank your Grace.

Here is the man—this Moor whom now, it seems, 71

Your special mandate for the state affairs
Hath hither brought.

All. We are very sorry for't.

Duke. [To Othello] What, in your own part, can you say to this?

Bra. Nothing, but this is so. 75

Oth. Most potent, grave, and reverend signiors,

My very noble and approv'd good masters:
That I have ta'en away this old man's

daughter,
It is most true; true, I have married her—

The very head and front of my offending 80 Hath this extent, no more. Rude am I in my speech,

And little blest with the soft phrase of
peace;
For since these arms of mine had seven years' pith,
Till now some nine moons wasted, they have us'd
Their dearest action in the tented field; 85
And little of this great world can I speak
More than pertains to feats of broil and battle;
And therefore little shall I grace my cause In speaking for myself. Yet, by your gracious patience,
I will a round unvarnish'd tale deliver 90
Of my whole course of love—what drugs,
what charms,
What conjuration, and what mighty magic,
For such proceedings am I charg'd withal,
I won his daughter.

Bra. A maiden never bold,
Of spirit so still and quiet that her motion Blush'd at herself; and she—in spite of nature, 96
Of years, of country, credit, every thing—
To fall in love with what she fear'd to look on!

It is a judgment maim'd and most imperfect

That will confess perfection so could err 100 Against all rules of nature, and must be driven

To find out practices of cunning hell, Why this should be. I therefore vouch
again

That with some mixtures powerful o'er the
blood, 104

Or with some dram conjur'd to this effect,
He wrought upon her.

Duke. To vouch this is no proof—
Without more wider and more overt test
Than these thin habits and poor likelihoods
Of modern seeming do prefer against him.

1 Sen. But, Othello, speak. 110

Did you by indirect and forced courses Subdue and poison this young maid's affections?

Or came it by request, and such fair
question

As soul to soul affordeth?

Oth. I do beseech you,
Send for the lady to the Sagittary, 115
And let her speak of me before her father.
If you do find me foul in her report,
The trust, the office, I do hold of you
Not only take away, but let your sentence
Even fall upon my life.

Duke. Fetch Desdemona hither. 120

Oth. Ancient, conduct them; you best know the place.

[Exeunt Iago and Attendants.]

And, till she come, as faithful as to heaven
I do confess the vices of my blood,
So justly to your grave ears I'll present
How I did thrive in this fair lady's love, 125

And she in mine.

Duke. Say it, Othello.

Oth. Her father lov'd me, oft invited me;
Still question'd me the story of my life
From year to year—the battles, sieges, fortunes, 130

That I have pass'd.

I ran it through, even from my boyish days
To th' very moment that he bade me tell it;
Wherein I spake of most disastrous chances,
Of moving accidents by flood and field; 135
Of hairbreadth scapes i' th' imminent deadly breach;

Of being taken by the insolent foe
And sold to slavery; of my redemption
thence,

And portance in my travel's history;
Wherein of antres vast and deserts idle, 140 Rough quarries, rocks, and hills whose heads touch heaven,

It was my hint to speak—such was the process;

And of the Cannibals that each other eat,
The Anthropophagi, and men whose heads Do grow beneath their shoulders. This to hear 145

Would Desdemona seriously incline;
But still the house affairs would draw her
thence;

Which ever as she could with haste
dispatch,

She'd come again, and with a greedy ear
Devour up my discourse. Which I observing, 150

Took once a pliant hour, and found good means

To draw from her a prayer of earnest heart
That I would all my pilgrimage dilate, Whereof by parcels she had something
heard,

But not intently. I did consent, 155
And often did beguile her of her tears,
When I did speak of some distressful stroke That my youth suffer'd. My story being
done,

She gave me for my pains a world of sighs;

She swore, in faith, 'twas strange, 'twas passing strange; 160

'Twas pitiful, 'twas wondrous pitiful.
She wish'd she had not heard it; yet she wish'd

That heaven had made her such a man. She thank'd me;

And bade me, if I had a friend that lov'd
her,

I should but teach him how to tell my story, 165

And that would woo her. Upon this hint
I spake;

She lov'd me for the dangers I had pass'd;
And I lov'd her that she did pity them.
This only is the witchcraft I have us'd.

Here comes the lady; let her witness it. 170

Enter DESDEMONA, IAGO, and Attendants.

Duke. I think this tale would win my daughter too.

Good Brabantio,
Take up this mangled matter at the best.
Men do their broken weapons rather use
Than their bare hands.

Bra. I pray you hear her speak.
If she confess that she was half the wooer,
Destruction on my head if my bad blame Light on the man! Come hither, gentle
mistress. 178

Do you perceive in all this noble company
Where most you owe obedience?

Des. My noble father,
I do perceive here a divided duty: 181
To you I am bound for life and education;
My life and education both do learn me How to respect you; you are the lord of duty—

I am hitherto your daughter; but here's my husband, 185

And so much duty as my mother show'd
To you, preferring you before her father,
So much I challenge that I may profess
Due to the Moor, my lord.

Bra. God bu'y, I ha done.
Please it your Grace, on to the state affairs— 190

I had rather to adopt a child than get it.
Come hither, Moor:

I here do give thee that with all my
heart

Which, but thou hast already, with all my
heart

I would keep from thee. For your sake, jewel, 195

I am glad at soul I have no other child;
For thy escape would teach me tyranny,
To hang clogs on them. I have done, my lord.

Duke. Let me speak like yourself, and lay a sentence

Which, as a grise or step, may help these lovers 200

Into your favour.

When remedies are past, the griefs are ended

By seeing the worst, which late on hopes depended.

To mourn a mischief that is past and gone
Is the next way to draw new mischief on.
What cannot be preserv'd when fortune takes, 206

Patience her injury a mockery makes.

The robb'd that smiles steals something from the thief;

He robs himself that spends a bootless
grief.

Bra. So let the Turk of Cyprus us beguile:
We lose it not so long as we can smile. 211
He bears the sentence well that nothing bears

But the free comfort which from thence he hears;

But he bears both the sentence and the
sorrow

That to pay grief must of poor patience
borrow. 215

These sentences, to sugar or to gall,
Being strong on both sides, are equivocal.
But words are words: I never yet did hear That the bruis'd heart was pierced through the ear.

I humbly beseech you proceed to th' affairs of state. 220

Duke. The Turk with a most mighty preparation makes for Cyprus. Othello, the fortitude of the place is best known to you; and though we have there a substitute of most allowed sufficiency, yet opinion, a sovereign mistress of effects, throws a more safer voice on you. You must therefore be content to slubber the gloss of your new fortunes with this more stubborn and boisterous expedition.

Oth. The tyrant custom, most grave senators,

Hath made the flinty and steel couch of war 230

My thrice-driven bed of down. I do agnize
A natural and prompt alacrity

I find in hardness; and would undertake
This present wars against the Ottomites.

Most humbly, therefore, bending to your
state, 235

I crave fit disposition for my wife;

Due reference of place and exhibition;

With such accommodation and besort

As levels with her breeding.

Duke. If you please,
Be't at her father's.

Bra. I'll not have it so. 240

Oth. Nor I.

Des. Nor I. I would not there reside,
To put my father in impatient thoughts

By being in his eye. Most gracious Duke,

To my unfolding lend your prosperous ear,

And let me find a charter in your voice 245

I' assist my simpleness.

Duke. What would you, Desdemona?

Des. That I did love the Moor to live
with him,

My downright violence and storm of fortunes

May trumpet to the world. My heart's subdu'd 250

Even to the very quality of my lord:

I saw Othello's visage in his mind;

And to his honours and his valiant parts

Did I my soul and fortunes consecrate.

So that, dear lords, if I be left behind, 255

A moth of peace, and he go to the war,

The rites for why I love him are bereft me,

And I a heavy interim shall support

By his dear absence. Let me go with him.

Oth. Let her have your voice. 260

Vouch with me, heaven, I therefore beg it not

To please the palate of my appetite ;
Nor to comply with heat—the young affects
In me defunct—and proper satisfaction ;
But to be free and bounteous to her
mind.

And heaven defend your good souls that you think 266

I will your serious and great business scant

For she is with me. No, when light-wing'd toys

Of feather'd Cupid seel with wanton dullness

My speculative and offic'd instruments, 270
That my disports corrupt and taint my business,

Let huswives make a skillet of my helm,
And all indign and base adversities
Make head against my estimation !

Duke. Be it as you shall privately determine, 275

Either for her stay or going. Th' affair cries
haste,

And speed must answer it. You must away
to-night.

Des. To-night, my lord !

Duke. This night.

Oth. With all my heart.

Duke. At nine i' th' morning here we'll meet again.

Othello, leave some officer behind, 280
And he shall our commission bring to
you ;

With such things else of quality and respect
As doth import you.

Oth. So please your Grace, my ancient ;
A man he is of honesty and trust.

To his conveyance I assign my wife, 285
With what else needful your good Grace shall think

To be sent after me.

Duke. Let it be so.

Good night to every one. [To Brabantio]
And, noble signior,

If virtue no delighted beauty lack, 289
Your son-in-law is far more fair than black.

1 Sen. Adieu, brave Moor ; use Desdemona well.

Bra. Look to her, Moor, if thou hast eyes to see :

She has deceiv'd her father, and may thee.
[Exeunt Duke, Senators, Officers, &c.]

Oth. My life upon her faith !—Honest
Iago,

My Desdemona must I leave to thee. 295
I prithee let thy wife attend on her ;

And bring them after in the best advantage.
Come, Desdemona, I have but an hour

Of love, of worldly matter and direction,
To spend with thee. We must obey the
time. 300

[Exeunt Othello and Desdemona.]

Rod. Iago !

Iago. What say'st thou, noble heart ?

Rod. What will I do, thinkest thou ?

Iago. Why, go to bed and sleep. 304

Rod. I will incontinently drown myself.

Iago. Well, if thou dost, I shall never love thee after it. Why, thou silly gentleman !

Rod. It is silliness to live when to live is torment ; and then have we a prescription to die when death is our physician. 310

Iago. O villainous ! I ha look'd upon the world for four times seven years ; and since I could distinguish betwixt a benefit and an injury, I never found a man that knew how to love himself. Ere I would say I would drown myself for the love of a guinea-hen, I would change my humanity with a baboon. 316

Rod. What should I do ? I confess it is my shame to be so fond, but it is not in my virtue to amend it.

Iago. Virtue ? A fig ! 'Tis in ourselves that we are thus or thus. Our bodies are our gardens to the which our wills are gardeners ; so that if we will plant nettles or sow lettuce, set hyssop and weed up thyme, supply it with one gender of herbs or distract it with many, either to have it sterile with idleness or manur'd with industry—why, the power and corrigible authority of this lies in our wills. If the balance of our lives had not one scale of reason to poise another of sensuality, the blood and baseness of our natures would conduct us to most preposterous conclusions. But we have reason to cool our raging motions, our carnal stings, our un-bitted lusts ; whereof I take this that you call love to be a sect or scion.

Rod. It cannot be. 332

Iago. It is merely a lust of the blood and a permission of the will. Come, be a man.
Drown thyself ? Drown cats and blind puppies ! I have profess'd me thy friend, and I confess me knit to thy deserving with cables of perdurable toughness. I could never better stead thee than now. Put money in thy purse ; follow thou the wars ;
defeat thy favour with an usurp'd beard.
I say, put money in thy purse. It cannot be long that Desdemona should continue her love to the Moor—put money in thy purse—nor he his to her : it was a violent commencement in her, and thou shalt see an answerable sequestration—put but money in thy purse. These Moors are changeable in their wills—fill thy purse with money.
The food that to him now is as luscious as locusts shall be to him shortly as acerb as the colocintida. She must change for youth ; when she is sated with his body, she will find the error of her choice. Therefore put money in thy purse. If thou wilt needs damn thyself, do it a more delicate way than drowning. Make all the money thou canst. If sanctimony and a frail vow betwixt an erring barbarian and a super-subtle Venetian be not too hard for my wits and all the tribe of hell, thou shalt enjoy her; therefore make money. A pox a drowning thyself! 'Tis clean out of the way. Seek thou rather to be hang'd in compassing thy joy than to be drown'd and go without her.

Rod. Wilt thou be fast to my hopes, if I depend on the issue? 360

Iago. Thou art sure of me—go make money. I have told thee often, and I retell thee again and again I hate the Moor. My cause is hearted: thine hath no less reason. Let us be conjunctive in our revenge against him. If thou canst cuckold him, thou dost thyself a pleasure, me a sport. There are many events in the womb of time which will be delivered. Traverse; go; provide thy money. We will have more of this to-morrow. Adieu. 369

Rod. Where shall we meet i' th' morning?

Iago. At my lodging.

Rod. I'll be with thee betimes.

Iago. Go to; farewell. Do you hear, Roderigo?

Rod. What say you? 374

Iago. No more of drowning, do you hear?

Rod. I am chang'd.

Iago. Go to; farewell. Put money enough in your purse.

Rod. I'll sell all my land. [Exit Roderigo.]

Iago. Thus do I ever make my fool my purse;

For I mine own gain'd knowledge should profane

If I would time expend with such a snipe But for my sport and profit. I hate the

Moor; 380

And it is thought abroad that 'twixt my sheets

'Has done my office. I know not if't be true;

Yet I, for mere suspicion in that kind, 383

Will do as if for surety. He holds me well;

The better shall my purpose work on him.

Cassio's a proper man. Let me see now:

To get his place, and to plume up my will

In double knavery. How, how? Let's see:

After some time to abuse Othello's ear

That he is too familiar with his wife. 390

He hath a person and a smooth dispose

To be suspected—fram'd to make women

false.

The Moor is of a free and open nature

That thinks men honest that but seem to be so;

And will as tenderly be led by th' nose 395
As asses are.

I ha't—it is engender'd. Hell and night

Must bring this monstrous birth to the world's light.

[Exit.]

ACT TWO

SCENE I. Cyprus. A sea-port.

Enter MONTANO, Governor of Cyprus, with two other Gentlemen.

Mon. What from the cape can you discern at sea?

1 Gent. Nothing at all; it is a high-wrought flood.

I cannot 'twixt the heaven and the main Descry a sail.

Mon. Methinks the wind hath spoke aloud at land;

A fuller blast ne'er shook our battlements. If it ha' ruffian'd so upon the sea,

What ribs of oak, when mountains melt on them,

Can hold the mortise? What shall we hear of this? 9

2 Gent. A segregation of the Turkish fleet. For do but stand upon the banning shore,

The chidden billow seems to pelt the clouds;

The wind-shak'd surge, with high and monstrous mane,

Seems to cast water on the burning Bear, And quench the guards of th' ever-fired pole. 15

I never did like molestation view

On the enchain'd flood.

Mon. If that the Turkish fleet

Be not enshelter'd and embay'd, they are drown'd:

It is impossible they bear it out.

Enter a third Gentleman.

3 Gent. News, lads! Your wars are done. The desperate tempest hath so bang'd the

Turk 21

That their designment halts. A noble ship of Venice

Hath seen a grievous wreck and sufferance On most part of their fleet.

Mon. How! Is this true?

3 Gent. The ship is here put in. A Veronesa; Michael Cassio, Lieutenant to the warlike Moor Othello, Is come ashore: the Moor himself at sea,

And is in full commission here for Cyprus.

Mon. I am glad on't; 'tis a worthy governor. 30

3 Gent. But this same Cassio, though he speak of comfort

Touching the Turkish loss, yet he looks sadly

And prays the Moor be safe; for they were parted

With foul and violent tempest.

Mon. Pray heaven he be;

For I have serv'd him, and the man commands 35

Like a full soldier. Let's to the sea-side, ho!

As well to see the vessel that's come in

As to throw out our eyes for brave Othello, Even till we make the main and th' aerial blue

An indistinct regard.

3 Gent. Come, let's do so ; 40
For every minute is expectancy
Of more arrivance.

Enter CASSIO.

Cas. Thanks you, the valiant of this warlike isle,
That so approve the Moor. O, let the heavens
Give him defence against their elements, 45
For I have lost him on a dangerous sea !

Mon. Is he well shipp'd ?

Cas. His bark is stoutly timber'd, and his pilot
Of very expert and approv'd allowance ;
Therefore my hopes, not surfeited to death,
Stand in bold cure. 51

[Within : A sail, a sail, a sail !

Enter a Messenger.

Cas. What noise ?

Mess. The town is empty ; on the brow
o' th' sea
Stand ranks of people, and they cry ' A sail ! '

Cas. My hopes do shape him for the Governor. [A shot.

2 Gent. They do discharge the shot of courtesy : 56
Our friend at least.

Cas. I pray you, sir, go forth,
And give us truth who 'tis that is arriv'd.

2 Gent. I shall. [Exit.

Mon. But, good Lieutenant, is your general wiv'd ? 60

Cas. Most fortunately : he hath achiev'd a maid

That paragons description and wild fame ;
One that excels the quirks of blazoning pens,

And in th' essential vesture of creation
Does tire the ingener.

Re-enter second Gentleman.

Now, who has put in ?

2 Gent. 'Tis one Iago, ancient to the General. 66

Cas. 'Has had most favourable and happy speed.

Tempests themselves, high seas, and howling winds,

The gutter'd rocks, and congregated sands,
Traitors ensteep'd to enclog the guiltless keel,

As having sense of beauty, do omit 71
Their mortal natures, letting go safely by The divine Desdemona.

Mon. What is she ?

Cas. She that I spake of—our great Captain's Captain,

Left in the conduct of the bold Iago ; 75
Whose footing here anticipates our thoughts
A se'nnight's speed. Great Jove, Othello
guard,

And swell his sail with thine own powerful
breath,

That he may bless this bay with his tall
ship,

Make love's quick pants in Desdemona's
arms, 80

Give renew'd fire to our extincted spirits,
And bring all Cyprus comfort !

Enter DESDEMONA, IAGO, EMILIA, RODE-RIGO, and Attendants.

O, behold,

The riches of the ship is come ashore !
Ye men of Cyprus, let her have your knees.

Hail to thee, lady ! and the grace of
heaven, 85

Before, behind thee, and on every hand,
Enwheel thee round !

Des. I thank you, valiant Cassio.
What tidings can you tell me of my lord ?

Cas. He is not yet arriv'd ; nor know I aught 89

But that he's well, and will be shortly here.

Des. O, but I fear ! How lost you company ?

Cas. The great contention of the sea and skies

Parted our fellowship.

[Within : A sail, a sail !

But hark—' A sail ! ' [A shot.

2 Gent. They give their greeting to the citadel :

This likewise is a friend.

Cas. So speaks this voice.
See for the news. [Exit Gentleman.

Good ancient, you are welcome. [To Emilia] Welcome, mistress. 96

Let it not gall your patience, good Iago, That I extend my manners ; 'tis my breeding

That gives me this bold show of courtesy.
[Kissing her.

Iago. Sir, would she give you so much of her lips 100

As of her tongue she oft bestows on me,
You'd have enough.

Des. Alas, she has no speech !

Iago. I know too much
I find it aye when I ha list to sleep.

Marry, before your ladyship, I grant, 105
She puts her tongue a little in her heart

And chides with thinking.

Emil. You ha little cause to say so.

Iago. Come on, come on ; you are pictures out a-doors, bells in your parlours, wildcats in your kitchens, saints in your injuries, devils being offended, players in your huswifery, and huswives in your beds.

Des. O, fie upon thee, slanderer !

Iago. Nay, it is true, or else I am a Turk :

You rise to play, and go to bed to work. 115

Emil. You shall not write my praise.

Iago. No, let me not.

Des. What wouldst write of me if thou shouldst praise me?

Iago. O gentle lady, do not put me to't; For I am nothing if not critical.

Des. Come on, assay.—There's one gone to the harbour? 120

Iago. Ay, madam.

Des. I am not merry; but I do beguile The thing I am by seeming otherwise.

Come, how wouldst thou praise me? 124

Iago. I am about it; but, indeed, my invention comes from my pate as birdlime does from frieze—it plucks out brains and all. But my Muse labours, and thus she is deliver'd:

If she be fair and wise—fairness and wit, The one's for use, the other useth it. 130

Des. Well prais'd. How if she be black and witty?

Iago. If she be black, and thereto have a wit,

She'll find a white that shall her blackness hit.

Des. Worse and worse!

Emil. How if fair and foolish? 135

Iago. She never yet was foolish that was fair;

For even her folly help'd her to an heir.

Des. These are old fond paradoxes to make fools laugh i' th' alehouse. What miserable praise hast thou for her that's foul and foolish? 140

Iago. There's none so foul, and foolish thereunto,

But does foul pranks which fair and wise ones do.

Des. O heavy ignorance! that praises the worst best. But what praise couldst thou bestow on a deserving woman indeed—one that, in the authority of her merits, did justly put on the vouch of very malice itself? 146

Iago. She that was ever fair, and never proud;

Had tongue at will, and yet was never loud; Never lack'd gold, and yet went never gay;

Fled from her wish, and yet said 'Now I may'; 150

She that, being ang'red, her revenge being nigh,

Bade her wrong stay and her displeasure fly;

She that in wisdom never was so frail To change the cod's head for the salmon's tail;

She that could think, and ne'er disclose her mind; 155

See suitors following, and not look behind: She was a wight, if ever such wight were—

Des. To do what?

Iago. To suckle fools and chronicle small beer. 159

Des. O most lame and impotent conclusion! Do not learn of him, Emilia, though he be thy husband. How say you, Cassio? Is he not a most profane and liberal counsellor?

Cas. He speaks home, madam. You may relish him more in the soldier than in the scholar. 165

Iago. [Aside] He takes her by the palm. Ay, well said, whisper. With as little a web as this will I ensnare as great a fly as Cassio. Ay, smile upon her, do; I will gyve thee in thine own courtship. You say true; 'tis so, indeed. If such tricks as these strip you out of your lieutenantry, it had been better you had not kiss'd your three fingers so oft, which now again you are most apt to play the sir in. Very good; well kissed! and excellent courtesy! 'Tis so, indeed. Yet again your fingers to your lips? Would they were clyster-pipes for your sake! [Trumpet within.]

The Moor! I know his trumpet.

Cas. 'Tis truly so.

Des. Let's meet him, and receive him.

Cas. Lo, where he comes!

Enter OTHELLO and Attendants.

Oth. O my fair warrior!

Des. My dear Othello! 180

Oth. It gives me wonder great as my content

To see you here before me. O my soul's joy! If after every tempest come such calms, May the winds blow till they have waken'd death,

And let the labouring bark climb hills of seas 185

Olympus-high and duck again as low As hell's from heaven. If it were now to die, 'Twere now to be most happy; for I fear My soul hath her content so absolute That not another comfort like to this 190 Succeeds in unknown fate.

Des. The heavens forbid But that our loves and comforts should increase

Even as our days do grow!

Oth. Amen to that, sweet powers! I cannot speak enough of this content; It stops me here; it is too much of joy. 195 And this, and this, the greatest discords be [They kiss.]

That e'er our hearts shall make!

Iago. [Aside] O, you are well tun'd now! But I'll set down the pegs that make this music,

As honest as I am.

Oth. Come, let us to the castle.

News, friends: our wars are done; the Turks are drown'd. 200

How do our old acquaintance of the isle?

honey, you shall be well desir'd in Cyprus ;
 have found great love amongst them. O
 my sweet,
 prattle out of fashion, and I dote on mine own comforts. I prithee, good Iago, 205
 go to the bay, and disembark my coffers ;
 bring thou the Master to the Citadel ;
 he is a good one, and his worthiness does challenge much respect. Come, Desdemona,
 hence more well met at Cyprus. 210

[Exeunt all but Iago and Roderigo.]

Iago. [To one leaving] Do thou meet me presently at the harbour. [To Roderigo] Come hither. If thou be'st valiant—as they say base men being in love have then a nobility in their natures more than is native to them—list me. The lieutenant to-night watches on the court guard. First, I must tell thee this :
 Desdemona is directly in love with him. 216
 Rod. With him ! Why, 'tis not possible.
 Iago. Lay thy finger thus, and let thy ul be instructed. Mark me with what violence she first lov'd the Moor, but for ragging and telling her fantastical lies.
 O love him still for prating ?—let not thy discreet heart think it. Her eye must be fed ; and what delight shall she have to look on the devil ? When the food is made dull by the act of sport, there should be—again to inflame it, and give satiety a fresh appetite—loveliness of favour, sympathy in years, manners, and beauties—all which the Moor is defective in. Now for want of these requir'd conveniences, her delicate tenderness will find itself abus'd, begin to heave the gorge, disrelish and abhor the Moor ;
 every nature will instruct her in it, and compel her to some second choice. Now, is this granted—as it is a most pregnant and unforc'd position—who stands so eminent in the degree of this fortune as Cassio does ? A knave very voluble ; no further conscionable than in putting on the mere form of civil and humane seeming, for the better compassing of his salt and most hidden loose affection ? Why, none ;
 nay, none. A slipper and subtle knave ;
 a finder-out of occasion ; that has an eye on stamp and counterfeit advantages, though true advantage never present itself ;
 a devilish knave ! Besides, the knave is handsome, young, and hath all those requisites in him that folly and green minds look after ; a pestilent complete knave, and the woman hath found him already. 244

Rod. I cannot believe that in her ; she's of most blest condition.

Iago. Blest fig's end ! The wine she drinks is made of grapes. If she had been best, she would never have lov'd the Moor. Blest pudding ! Didst thou not see her paddle with the palm of his hand ?

 Didst not mark that ?

Rod. Yes, that I did ; but that was but
 courtesy. 251

Iago. Lechery, by this hand ; an index and obscure prologue to the history of lust and foul thoughts. They met so near with their lips that their breaths embrac'd together. Villainous thoughts, Roderigo !
 When these mutualities so marshal the way, hard at hand comes the master and main exercise, th' incorporate conclusion.
 Pish ! But, sir, be you rul'd by me ; I have brought you from Venice. Watch you to-night ; for your command, I'll lay't upon you. Cassio knows you not ; I'll not be far from you. Do you find some occasion to anger Cassio, either by speaking too loud, or tainting his discipline, or from what other course you please, which the time shall more favourably minister.

Rod. Well. 265

Iago. Sir, he's rash, and very sudden in choler, and haply with his truncheon may strike at you ; provoke him that he may ;
 for even out of that will I cause these of Cyprus to mutiny, whose qualification shall come into no true taste again but by the displanting of Cassio. So shall you have a shorter journey to your desires by the means I shall then have to prefer them ;
 and the impediment most profitably remov'd, without the which there were no expectation of our prosperity. 274

Rod. I will do this, if you can bring it to any opportunity.

Iago. I warrant thee. Meet me by and by at the citadel. I must fetch his necessities ashore. Farewell.

Rod. Adieu. [Exit.]

Iago. That Cassio loves her, I do well believe it ; 280
 That she loves him, 'tis apt and of great credit.

The Moor, howbeit that I endure him not,
 Is of a constant, loving, noble nature ;
 And I dare think he'll prove to Desdemona
 A most dear husband. Now I do love her
 too ; 285

Not out of absolute lust, though peradventure

I stand accountant for as great a sin,
 But partly led to diet my revenge,
 For that I do suspect the lustful Moor Hath leap'd into my seat ; the thought whereof 290

Doth like a poisonous mineral gnaw my inwards ;

And nothing can nor shall content my
 soul

Till I am even'd with him, wife for wife ;
 Or failing so, yet that I put the Moor

At least into a jealousy so strong 295

That judgment cannot cure. Which thing
to do,

If this poor trash of Venice, whom I trash
For his quick hunting, stand the putting on,
I'll have our Michael Cassio on the hip, ²⁹⁹
Abuse him to the Moor in the rank garb—
For I fear Cassio with my night-cap too ; Make the Moor thank me, love me, and reward me,

For making him egregiously an ass,
And practising upon his peace and quiet
Even to madness. 'Tis here, but yet
confus'd :

Knavery's plain face is never seen till us'd. ³⁰⁵
[Exit.

SCENE II. Cyprus. A street.

Enter Othello's Herald with a proclamation ;
People following.

Her. It is Othello's pleasure, our noble and valiant general, that, upon certain tidings now arriv'd, importing the mere perdition of the Turkish fleet, every man put himself into triumph ; some to dance, some to make bonfires, each man to what sport and revels his addiction leads him ;
for, besides these beneficial news, it is the celebration of his nuptial. So much was his pleasure should be proclaimed. All offices are open ; and there is full liberty of feasting from this present hour of five till the bell have told eleven. Heaven bless the isle of Cyprus and our noble general Othello ! [Exeunt.

SCENE III Cyprus. The citadel.

Enter OTHELLO, DESDEMONA, CASSIO, and Attendants.

Oth. Good Michael, look you to the guard
to-night.

Let's teach ourselves that honourable stop,
Not to outpost discretion.

Cas. Iago hath direction what to do ;
But, notwithstanding, with my personal eye ⁵

Will I look to't.

Oth. Iago is most honest.

Michael, good night. To-morrow with your earliest

Let me have speech with you. [To Desdemona] Come, my dear love,

The purchase made, the fruits are to ensue ;
That profit's yet to come twixt me and you.— ¹⁰

Good night. [Exeunt Othello, Desdemona, and Attendants.

Enter IAGO.

Cas. Welcome, Iago ; we must to the watch.

Iago. Not this hour, Lieutenant ; 'tis not yet ten a clock. Our general cast us

thus early for the love of his Desdemona ; who let us not therefore blame. He hath not yet made wanton the night with her ;
and she is sport for Jove. ¹⁷

Cas. She is a most exquisite lady.

Iago. And, I'll warrant her, full of game.

Cas. Indeed, she is a most fresh and delicate creature.

Iago. What an eye she has ! Methinks it sounds a parley to provocation.

Cas. An inviting eye ; and yet methinks right modest.

Iago. And when she speaks, is it not an alarm to love ?

Cas. She is indeed perfection. ²⁵

Iago. Well, happiness to their sheets !
Come, Lieutenant, I have a stoup of wine and here without are a brace of Cyprus gallants that would fain have a measure to the health of the black Othello.

Cas. Not to-night, good Iago. I have very poor and unhappy brains for drinking.
I could well wish courtesy would invent some other custom of entertainment. ³⁰

Iago. O, they are our friends—but one cup ; I'll drink for you.

Cas. I have drunk but one cup to-night and that was craftily qualified too, and behold what innovation it makes here.
I am unfortunate in the infirmity, and dare not task my weakness with any more.

Iago. What, man ! 'Tis a night of revels
The gallants desire it.

Cas. Where are they ?

Iago. Here at the door ; I pray you call them in.

Cas. I'll do't ; but it dislikes me. [Exit.

Iago. If I can fasten but one cup upon
him,

With that which he hath drunk to-night
already, ⁴

He'll be as full of quarrel and offence
As my young mistress' dog. Now my sic-fool Roderigo,

Whom love hath turn'd almost the wronside outward,

To Desdemona hath to-night carous'd
Potations pottle deep ; and he's to watch
Three else of Cyprus—noble swellin
spirits,

That hold their honours in a wary distance
The very elements of this warlike isle—
Have I to-night fluster'd with flowing cups
And they watch too. Now, 'mongst th flock of drunkards

Am I to put our Cassio in some action That may offend the isle—but here the
come.

Re-enter CASSIO with MONTANO, and Gentl-men, followed by Servant with wine.

If consequence do but approve my dream
My boat sails freely, both with wind and stream.

Cas. Fore God, they have given me a rouse already. 60

Mon. Good faith, a little one ; not past a pint, as I am a soldier.

Iago. Some wine, ho !
[Sings] And let me the canakin clink, clink ;
And let me the canakin clink. 65

A souldier's a man ;
O, man's life's but a span ;
Why, then, let a soldier drink—
Some wine, boys.

Cas. Fore God, an excellent song ! 70

Iago. I learn'd it in England, where indeed they are most potent in potting : your Dane, your German, and your swag-bellied Hollander—Drink, ho !—are nothing to your English. 74

Cas. Is your Englishman so expert in his drinking ?

Iago. Why, he drinks you with facility your Dane dead drunk ; he sweats not to overthrow your Almain ; he gives your Hollander a vomit ere the next pottle can be fill'd.

Cas. To the health of our General ! 79

Mon. I am for it, Lieutenant ; and I'll do you justice.

Iago. O sweet England ! [Sings.

King Stephen was and a worthy peer,
His breeches cost him but a crown ;

He held 'em sixpence all too dear,
With that he call'd the tailor lown. 85

He was a wight of high renown,
And thou art but of low degree.

'Tis pride that pulls the country down ;
Then take thy auld cloak about thee—

Some wine, ho ! 90

Cas. Fore God, this is a more exquisite song than the other.

Iago. Will you hear't again ?

Cas. No ; for I hold him to be unworthy of his place that does those things. Well, God's above all ; and there be souls must be saved, and there be souls must not be saved. 96

Iago. It's true, good Lieutenant.

Cas. For mine own part—no offence to the General, nor any man of quality—I hope to be saved.

Iago. And so do I too, Lieutenant. 100

Cas. Ay, but, by your leave, not before me ; the Lieutenant is to be saved before the Ancient. Let's have no more of this ;
let's to our affairs. God forgive us our sins.
Gentlemen, let's look to our business. Do not think, gentlemen, I am drunk. This is my ancient ; this is my right hand, and this is my left hand. I am not drunk now ; I can stand well enough, and I speak well enough.

All. Excellent well. 108

Cas. Why, very well, then. You must not think, then, that I am drunk. [Exit.

Mon. To the platform, masters ; come,
let's set the watch.

Iago. You see this fellow that is gone
before :

He is a soldier fit to stand by Cæsar
And give direction ; and do but see his vice ; 115

'Tis to his virtue a just equinox,
The one as long as th' other. 'Tis pity of
him.

I fear the trust Othello puts him in,
On some odd time of his infirmity, 119
Will shake this island.

Mon. But is he often thus ?

Iago. 'Tis evermore the prologue to his
sleep :

He'll watch the horologe a double set,
If drink rock not his cradle.

Mon. It were well

The General were put in mind of it. 124

Perhaps he sees it not, or his good nature
Prizes the virtue that appears in Cassio,

And looks not on his evils. Is not this true ?

Enter RODERIGO.

Iago. [Aside to him] How, now, Roderigo!
I pray you, after the Lieutenant ; go.

[Exit Roderigo.

Mon. And 'tis great pity that the noble
Moor 130

Should hazard such a place as his own second

With one of an ingraft infirmity :
It were an honest action to say

So to the Moor.

Iago. Not I, for this fair island ;
I do love Cassio well ; and would do

much 135

To cure him of this evil.

[Within: Help, help !

But hark, what noise ?

Re-enter CASSIO, driving in RODERIGO.

Cas. Zounds, you rogue, you rascal !

Mon. What's the matter, Lieutenant ?

Cas. A knave teach me my duty ! But I'll beat the knave into a twiggen bottle.

Rod. Beat me ! 141

Cas. Dost thou prate, rogue ?

[Strikes him.

Mon. Nay, good Lieutenant ; I pray you, sir, hold your hand.

Cas. Let me go, sir, or I'll knock you o'er the mazard. 146

Mon. Come, come, you're drunk.

Cas. Drunk ! [They fight.

Iago. [Aside to Roderigo] Away, I say !
Go out and cry a mutiny. [Exit Roderigo.

Nay, good Lieutenant. God's will, gentle-
men ! 150

Help, ho !—Lieutenant—sir—Montano—
sir—

Help, masters ! Here's a goodly watch indeed ! [A bell rung.

Who's that which rings the bell ? Diablo,
ho !

The town will rise. God's will, Lieutenant,
hold. 154

You'll be a sham'd for ever.

Re-enter OTHELLO and Gentlemen, with weapons.

Oth. What is the matter here ?

Mon. Zounds, I bleed still ; I am hurt to the death—He dies.

Oth. Hold, for your lives !

Iago. Hold, ho ! Lieutenant—sir—Montano—gentlemen—

Have you forgot all sense of place and duty ?

Hold ! The General speaks to you ; hold, hold, for shame ! 160

Oth. Why, how now, ho ! From whence aristeth this ?

Are we turn'd Turks, and to ourselves do
that

Which Heaven hath forbid the Ottomites ?
For Christian shame, put by this barbarous brawl. 164

He that stirs next to carve for his own rage Holds his soul light : he dies upon his motion.

Silence that dreadful bell ; it frights the isle

From her propriety. What's the matter, masters ?

Honest Iago, that looks dead with grieving, Speak. Who began this ? On thy love, I charge thee. 170

Iago. I do not know. Friends all but now, even now,

In quarter, and in terms, like bride and groom

Divesting them for bed ; and then, but
now,

As if some planet had unwitting men, Swords out, and tilting one at other's breast 175

In opposition bloody. I cannot speak
Any beginning to this peevish odds ;
And would in action glorious I had lost
These legs that brought me to a part of it !

Oth. How comes it, Michael, you are thus forgot ? 180

Cas. I pray you, pardon me ; I cannot
speak.

Oth. Worthy Montano, you were wont be civil ;

The gravity and stillness of your youth
The world hath noted, and your name is great

In mouths of wisest censure—what's the
matter 185

That you unlace your reputation thus,
And spend your rich opinion for the name
Of a night-brawler ? Give me answer to't.

Mon. Worthy Othello, I am hurt to danger ;

Your officer Iago can inform you, 190
While I spare speech, which something now offends me.

Of all that I do know ; nor know I any
By me that's said or done amiss this night,
Unless self-charity be sometimes a vice,
And to defend ourselves it be a sin 195
When violence assails us.

Oth. Now, by heaven,
My blood begins my safer guides to rule ;
And passion, having my best judgment
collied,

Assays to lead the way. Zounds if I stir
Or do but lift this arm, the best of you 200
Shall sink in my rebuke. Give me to know How this foul rout began, who set it on ;
And he that is approv'd in this offence, Though he had twinn'd with me, both at a birth,

Shall lose me. What ! in a town of war, 205 Yet wild, the people's hearts brim full of
fear,

To manage private and domestic quarrel,
In night, and on the court and guard of safety !

'Tis monstrous. Iago, who began't ?

Mon. If partially affin'd, or leagu'd in office, 210

Thou dost deliver more or less than truth,
Thou art no soldier.

Iago. Touch me not so near.
I had rather ha this tongue cut from my mouth

Than it should do offence to Michael Cassio ; 214

Yet, I persuade myself, to speak the truth Shall nothing wrong him. This it is,
General.

Montano and myself being in speech,
There comes a fellow crying out for help,
And Cassio following him with determin'd
sword 217

To execute upon him. Sir, this gentleman
Steps in to Cassio and entreats his pause.
Myself the crying fellow did pursue,
Lest by his clamour, as it so fell out,
The town might fall in fright ; he, swift of foot,

Outran my purpose, and I return'd the rather 220

For that I heard the clink and fall of swords,

And Cassio high in oath ; which till to
night

I ne'er might see before. When I came back,

For this was brief, I found them close together

At blow and thrust, even as again they were 223

When you yourself did part them.
More of this matter can I not report ;
But men are men ; the best sometime forget.

Though Cassio did some little wrong to him
As men in rage strike those that wish them best, 226

Yet surely Cassio, I believe, receiv'd
From him that fled some strange indignity
Which patience could not pass.

Oth. I know, Iago,
Thy honesty and love doth mince this
matter,
Making it light to Cassio. Cassio, I love
thee ; 240

But never more be officer of mine.

Re-enter DESDEMONA, attended.

Look if my gentle love be not rais'd up.
I'll make thee an example.

Des. What is the matter, dear ?

Oth. All's well now, sweeting ; Come away to bed. [To Montano] Sir, for your hurts, 241

Myself will be your surgeon. Lead him off.
[Montano is led off.]

Iago, look with care about the town,
And silence those whom this vile brawl
distracted.

Come, Desdemona ; 'tis the soldiers' life
To have their balmy slumbers wak'd with strife. 25

[Exeunt all but Iago and Cassio.]

Iago. What, are you hurt, Lieutenant ?
Cas. Ay, past all surgery.

Iago. Marry, God forbid !

Cas. Reputation, reputation, reputation !
O, I have lost my reputation ! I have lost the immortal part of myself, and what remains is bestial. My reputation, Iago, my reputation ! 257

Iago. As I am an honest man, I had thought you had receiv'd some bodily wound ; there is more sense in that than in reputation.
Reputation is an idle and most false imposition ; oft got without merit, and lost without deserving. You have lost no reputation at all, unless you repute yourself such a loser. What, man ! there are more ways to recover the General again ; you are but now cast in his mood, a punishment more in policy than in malice ; even so as one would beat his offenceless dog to affright an imperious lion. Sue to him again, and he's yours. 267

Cas. I will rather sue to be despis'd than to deceive so good a commander with so slight, so drunken, and so indiscreet an officer. Drunk ! And speak parrot ! And squabble, swagger, swear ! And discourse fustian with one's own shadow ! O thou invisible spirit of wine, if thou hast no name to be known by, let us call thee devil !

Iago. What was he that you follow'd with your sword ? What had he done to
you ? 276

Cas. I know not.

Iago. Is't possible ?

Cas. I remember a mass of things, but nothing distinctly ; a quarrel, but nothing wherefore. O God, that men should put an enemy in their mouths to steal away their brains ! That we should with joy, pleasance, revel and applause, transform ourselves into beasts !

Iago. Why, but you are now well enough.
How come you thus recovered ? 285

Cas. It hath pleas'd the devil drunkenness to give place to the devil wrath. One unperfectness shows me another, to make me frankly despise myself.

Iago. Come, you are too severe a moraller. As the time, the place, and the condition of this country stands, I could heartily wish this had not so befall'n ; but since it is as it is, mend it for your own good. 292

Cas. I will ask him for my place again :
he shall tell me I am a drunkard. Had I as many mouths as Hydra, such an answer would stop them all. To be now a sensible man, by and by a fool, and presently a beast ! O strange ! Every inordinate cup is unblest, and the ingredier ce is a devil.

Iago. Come, come, good wine is a good familiar creature if it be well us'd ; exclaim no more against it. And, good Lieutenant,
I think you think I love you. 301

Cas. I have well approv'd it, sir. I drunk !

Iago. You or any man living may be drunk at a time, man. I'll tell you what you shall do. Our General's wife is now the General—I may say so in this respect, for that he hath devoted and given up himself to the contemplation, mark, and denotement, of her parts and graces—confess yourself freely to her ; importune her help to put you in your place again :
she is of so free, so kind, so apt, so blessed a disposition, she holds it a vice in her goodness not to do more than she is requested. This broken joint between you and her husband entreat her to splinter ;
and, my fortunes against any lay worth naming, this crack of your love shall grow stronger than it was before. 315

Cas. You advise me well.

Iago. I protest, in the sincerity of love and honest kindness.

Cas. I think it freely ; and betimes in the morning I will beseech the virtuous Desdemona to undertake for me. I am desperate of my fortunes if they check me
here.

Iago. You are in the right. Good night,
Lieutenant ; I must to the watch.

Cas. Good night, honest Iago. [Exit.]

Iago. And what's he, then, that says I play the villain ? 325

When this advice is free I give and honest,
Probal to thinking, and indeed the course
To win the Moor again ? For 'tis most easy
The inclining Desdemona to subdue 329
In any honest suit : she's fram'd as fruitful
As the free elements. And then for her

To win the Moor—were't to renounce his baptism,
All seals and symbols of redeemed sin—
His soul is so enfetter'd to her love
That she may make, unmake, do what she list, 335

Even as her appetite shall play the god
With his weak function. How am I, then,
a villain

To counsel Cassio to this parallel course, Directly to his good? Divinity of hell!
When devils will their blackest sins put on,
They do suggest at first with heavenly shows, 341

As I do now; for whiles this honest fool
Plies Desdemona to repair his fortunes,
And she for him pleads strongly to the Moor,

I'll pour this pestilence into his ear— 345
That she reveals him for her body's lust;
And by how much she strives to do him good

She shall undo her credit with the Moor.
So will I turn her virtue into pitch; 349
And out of her own goodness make the net
That shall enmesh them all.

Enter RODERIGO.

How now, Roderigo!

Rod. I do follow here in the chase, not like a hound that hunts, but one that fills up the cry. My money is almost spent;
I have been to-night exceedingly well cudgell'd; and I think the issue will be—I shall have so much experience for my pains as that comes to; and so, with no money at all, and a little more wit, return again to Venice. 357

Iago. How poor are they that have not patience!

What wound did ever heal but by degrees?
Thou know'st we work by wit, and not by witchcraft; 360

And wit depends on dilatory time.
Does't not go well? Cassio hath beaten
thee,

And thou, by that small hurt, hast cashier'd
Cassio.

Though other things grow fair against the
sun,

Yet fruits that blossom first will first be ripe. 365

Content thyself awhile. By th' mass, 'tis morning!

Pleasure and action make the hours seem
short.

Retire thee; go where thou art billeted.
Away, I say; thou shalt know more hereafter.

Nay, get thee gone. [Exit Roderigo.]

Two things are to be done:
My wife must move for Cassio to her
mistress; 371

I'll set her on;

Myself awhile to draw the Moor apart
And bring him jump when he may Cassio
find

Soliciting his wife. Ay, that's the way; 375
Dull not device by coldness and delay.

[Exit.]

ACT THREE

SCENE I. Cyprus. Before the citadel.

Enter CASSIO, with Musicians.

Cas. Masters, play here; I will content your pains.

Something that's brief; and bid 'Good morrow, General'. [Music.]

Enter Clown.

Clo. Why masters, ha your instruments been in Naples, that they speak i' th' nose thus?

1 Mus. How, sir, how? 5

Clo. Are these, I pray, call'd wind instruments?

1 Mus. Ay, marry, are they, sir.

Clo. O, thereby hangs a tail.

1 Mus. Whereby hangs a tale, sir? 9

Clo. Marry, sir, by many a wind instrument that I know. But, masters, here's money for you; and the General so likes your music that he desires you, of all loves, to make no more noise with it.

1 Mus. Well, sir, we will not. 14

Clo. If you have any music that may not be heard, to't again; but, as they say, to hear music the General does not greatly care.

1 Mus. We have none such, sir. 18

Clo. Then put up your pipes in your bag, for I'll away. Go; vanish into air; away.

[Exeunt Musicians.]

Cas. Dost thou hear, my honest friend?

Clo. No, I hear not your honest friend;
I hear you. 22

Cas. Prithee keep up thy quillets.
There's a poor piece of gold for thee. If the gentlewoman that attends the General's wife be stirring, tell her there's one Cassio entreats her a little favour of speech. Wilt thou do this? 26

Clo. She is stirring, sir; if she will stir hither, I shall seem to notify unto her.

Cas. Do, good my friend. [Exit Clown.]

Enter IAGO.

In happy time, Iago.

Iago. You have not been abed, then? 30

Cas. Why, no; the day had broke before we parted.

I have made bold, Iago,
To send in to your wife: my suit to her
Is that she will to virtuous Desdemona Procure me some access.

Iago. I'll send her to you presently;
And I'll devise a mean to draw the Moor 36

Out of the way, that your converse and business

May be more free.

Cas. I humbly thank you for't. [Exit Iago] I never knew

A Florentine more kind and honest. 40

Enter EMILIA.

Emil. Good morrow, good Lieutenant. I am sorry

For your displeasure; but all will sure be well.

The General and his wife are talking of it; And she speaks for you stoutly: the Moor replies 44

That he you hurt is of great fame in Cyprus And great affinity, and that in wholesome wisdom

He might not but refuse you; but he protests he loves you,

And needs no other suitor but his likings To take the safest occasion by the front To bring you in again.

Cas. Yet, I beseech you, If you think fit, or that it may be done, 51 Give me advantage of some brief discourse With Desdemona alone.

Emil. Pray you come in. I will bestow you where you shall have time

To speak your bosom freely.

Cas. I am much bound to you. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II. Cyprus. The citadel.

Enter OTHELLO, IAGO, and Gentlemen.

Oth. These letters give, Iago, to the plot; And by him do my duties to the Senate. That done, I will be walking on the works; Repair there to me.

Iago. Well, my good lord, I'll do't.

Oth. This fortification, gentlemen—shall we see't? 5

Genl. We'll wait upon your lordship. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III. Cyprus. The garden of the citadel.

Enter DESDEMONA, CASSIO, and EMILIA.

Des. Be thou assur'd, good Cassio, I will do

All my abilities in thy behalf.

Emil. Good madam, do. I warrant it grieves my husband

As if the case were his.

Des. O, that's an honest fellow. Do not doubt, Cassio, 5

But I will have my lord and you again As friendly as you were.

Cas. Bounteous madam, Whatever shall become of Michael Cassio, He's never any thing but your true servant.

Des. I know't—I thank you. You do love my lord; 10

You have known him long; and be you well assur'd

He shall in strangeness stand no farther off Than in a politic distance.

Cas. Ay, but, lady, That policy may either last so long,

Or feed upon such nice and waterish diet, Or breed itself so out of circumstances, 16

That, I being absent, and my place supplied,

My general will forget my love and service.

Des. Do not doubt that; before Emilia here

I give thee warrant of thy place. Assure thee, 20

If I do vow a friendship, I'll perform it To the last article. My lord shall never rest;

I'll watch him tame, and talk him out of patience;

His bed shall seem a school, his board a shrift;

I'll intermingle everything he does 25

With Cassio's suit. Therefore be merry, Cassio;

For thy solicitor shall rather die

Than give thy cause away.

Enter OTHELLO and IAGO.

Emil. Madam, here comes my lord.

Cas. Madam, I'll take my leave. 30

Des. Why, stay, and hear me speak.

Cas. Madam, not now. I am very ill at ease,

Unfit for mine own purposes.

Des. Well, do your discretion. 34

[Exit Cassio.]

Iago. Ha! I like not that.

Oth. What dost thou say?

Iago. Nothing, my lord; or if—I know not what.

Oth. Was not that Cassio parted from my wife?

Iago. Cassio, my lord! No, sure, I cannot think it,

That he would sneak away so guilty-like, 40 Seeing your coming.

Oth. I do believe 'twas he.

Des. How now, my lord!

I have been talking with a suitor here, A man that languishes in your displeasure.

Oth. Who is't you mean? 45

Des. Why, your lieutenant, Cassio. Good my lord,

If I have any grace or power to move you, His present reconciliation take;

For if he be not one that truly loves you, That errs in ignorance, and not in cunning,

I have no judgment in an honest face. 51 I prithee call him back.

Oth. Went he hence now?

Des. Yes, faith; so humbled

That he hath left part of his grief with me To suffer with him. Good love, call him
back. 55

Oth. Not now, sweet Desdemona; some other time.

Des. But shall't be shortly?

Oth. The sooner, sweet, for you.

Des. Shall't be to-night at supper?

Oth. No, not to-night.

Des. To-morrow dinner, then?

Oth. I shall not dine at home;
I meet the captains at the citadel. 60

Des. Why, then, to-morrow night, or Tuesday morn,

On Tuesday noon or night, on Wednesday
morn.

I prithee name the time; but let it not Exceed three days. I'faith, he's penitent;
And yet his trespass, in our common
reason— 65

Save that, they say, the wars must make example

Out of her best—is not almost a fault T' incur a private check. When shall he
come?

Tell me, Othello—I wonder in my soul 69
What you would ask me that I should deny,

Or stand so mamm'ring on. What!
Michael Cassio,

That came a-wooing with you, and so many a time,

When I have spoke of you dispraisingly,
Hath ta'en your part—to have so much
to do

To bring him in! By'r Lady, I could do
much— 75

Oth. Prithee, no more; let him come when he will;

I will deny thee nothing.

Des. Why, this is not a boon;
'Tis as I should entreat you wear your gloves,

Or feed on nourishing dishes, or keep you warm,

Or sue to you to do a peculiar profit 80
To your own person. Nay, when I have a suit

Wherein I mean to touch your love indeed,
It shall be full of poise and difficult weight,
And fearful to be granted.

Oth. I will deny thee nothing.
Whereon I do beseech thee grant me this,
To leave me but a little to myself. 86

Des. Shall I deny you? No; farewell,
my lord.

Oth. Farewell, my Desdemona. I'll come to thee straight.

Des. Emilia, come.—Be as your fancies teach you;

Whate'er you be, I am obedient. 90
[Exeunt Desdemona and Emilia.]

Oth. Excellent wretch! Perdition catch my soul

But I do love thee; and when I love thee
not

Chaos is come again.

Iago. My noble lord!

Oth. What dost thou say, Iago?

Iago. Did Michael Cassio, when you woo'd my lady, 95

Know of your love?

Oth. He did, from first to last. Why dost thou ask?

Iago. But for a satisfaction of my
thought—

No further harm.

Oth. Why of thy thought, Iago?

Iago. I did not think he had been acquainted with her. 100

Oth. O, yes; and went between us very often.

Iago. Indeed!

Oth. Indeed? Ay, indeed. Discern'st thou aught in that?

Is he not honest?

Iago. Honest, my lord? 105

Oth. Honest? Ay, honest.

Iago. My lord, for aught I know.

Oth. What dost thou think?

Iago. Think, my lord?

Oth. Think, my lord! By heaven, he echoes me, 110

As if there were some monster in his
thought

Too hideous to be shown. Thou dost mean something:

I heard thee say but now thou lik'st not
that,

When Cassio left my wife. What didst not like? 114

And when I told thee he was of my counsel
In my whole course of wooing, thou criest
'Indeed!'

And didst contract and purse thy brow
together,

As if thou then hadst shut up in thy brain
Some horrible conceit. If thou dost love
me,

Show me thy thought. 120

Iago. My lord, you know I love you.

Oth. I think thou dost;

And for I know thou art full of love and
honesty,

And weigh'st thy words before thou giv'st
them breath,

Therefore these stops of thine affright me
the more;

For such things in a false disloyal knave 125
Are tricks of custom; but in a man that's just

They are close delations, working from the
heart

That passion cannot rule.

Iago. For Michael Cassio,

I dare presume I think that he is honest.

Oth. I think so too.

Iago. Men should be that they seem;

Or those that be not, would they might seem none ! 131
Oth. Certain, men should be what they seem.
Iago. Why then, I think Cassio's an honest man.
Oth. Nay, yet there's more in this. 134
I prithee speak to me as to thy thinkings,
As thou dost ruminate; and give thy worst of thoughts
The worst of words.
Iago. Good my lord, pardon me.
Though I am bound to every act of duty,
I am not bound to that all slaves are free
 to—Utter my thoughts. Why, say they are vile and false, 140
As where's that palace whereinto foul things Sometimes intrude not? Who has that breast so pure
But some uncleanly apprehensions Keep leets and law-days, and in sessions sit
With meditations lawful? 145 Oth. Thou dost conspire against thy friend, Iago,
If thou but think'st him wrong'd, and mak'st his ear
A stranger to thy thoughts.
Iago. I do beseech you,
Though I perchance am vicious in my guess,
As, I confess, it is my nature's plague 150
To spy into abuses, and oft my jealousy Shapes faults that are not—that your wisdom
From one that so imperfectly conjects,
Would take no notice; nor build yourself
 a trouble
Out of his scattering and unsure observance. 155
It were not for your quiet nor your good,
Nor for my manhood, honesty, or wisdom,
To let you know my thoughts.
Oth. Zounds! What dost thou mean?
Iago. Good name in man and woman,
 dear my lord,
Is the immediate jewel of their souls: 160
Who steals my purse steals trash; 'tis something, nothing;
'Twas mine, 'tis his, and has been slave to thousands;
But he that filches from me my good
 name
Robs me of that which not enriches him
And makes me poor indeed. 165
Oth. By heaven, I'll know thy thoughts.
Iago. You cannot, if my heart were in your hand;
Nor shall not, whilst 'tis in my custody.
Oth. Ha!
Iago. O, beware, my lord, of jealousy;
It is the green-ey'd monster which doth mock 170
The meat it feeds on. That cuckold lives in bliss

Who, certain of his fate, loves not his
 wronger;
But, O, what damned minutes tells he o'er Who dotes, yet doubts, suspects, yet strongly loves!
Oth. O misery! 175
Iago. Poor and content is rich, and rich enough;
But riches fineless is as poor as winter
To him that ever fears he shall be poor.
Good God, the souls of all my tribe defend From jealousy!
Oth. Why, why is this? 180
Think'st thou I'd make a life of jealousy,
To follow still the changes of the moon
With fresh suspicions? No; to be once in doubt Is once to be resolv'd. Exchange me for a goat 184
When I shall turn the business of my soul
To such exsufflicate and blown surmises Matching thy inference. 'Tis not to make me jealous
To say my wife is fair, feeds well, loves company,
Is free of speech, sings, plays, and dances
 well; 189
Where virtue is, these are more virtuous.
Nor from mine own weak merits will I draw
The smallest fear or doubt of her revolt;
For she had eyes, and chose me. No, Iago;
I'll see before I doubt; when I doubt,
 prove;
And, on the proof, there is no more but
 this— 195
Away at once with love or jealousy!
Iago. I am glad of this; for now I shall have reason
To show the love and duty that I bear you With franker spirit. Therefore, as I am bound,
Receive it from me. I speak not yet of proof. 200
Look to your wife; observe her well with Cassio;
Wear your eyes thus, not jealous nor secure.
I would not have your free and noble
 nature
Out of self-bounty be abus'd; look to't.
I know our country disposition well: 205
In Venice they do let God see the pranks
They dare not show their husbands; their best conscience
Is not to leave't undone, but keep't unknown.
Oth. Dost thou say so?
Iago. She did deceive her father, marrying you; 210
And when she seem'd to shake and fear
 your looks,
She lov'd them most.
Oth. And so she did.
Iago. Why, go to then!

She that, so young, could give out such a seeming,
 To seel her father's eyes up close as oak—
 He thought 'twas witchcraft. But I am much to blame; 215
 I humbly do beseech you of your pardon
 For too much loving you.
Oth. I am bound to thee for ever.
Iago. I see this hath a little dash'd your spirits.
Oth. Not a jot, not a jot.
Iago. I'faith, I fear it has.
 I hope you will consider what is spoke 220 Comes from my love; but I do see you are mov'd.
 I am to pray you not to strain my speech
 To grosser issues nor to larger reach
 Than to suspicion.
Oth. I will not.
Iago. Should you do so, my lord, 225
 My speech should fall into such vile success
 Which my thoughts aim'd not. Cassio's my worthy friend—
 My lord, I see you are mov'd.
Oth. No, not much mov'd.
 I do not think but Desdemona's honest.
Iago. Long live she so! and long live you to think so! 230
Oth. And yet, how nature erring from itself—
Iago. Ay, there's the point: as—to be bold with you—
 Not to affect many proposed matches
 Of her own clime, complexion, and degree, Whereto we see in all things nature tends—Foh! one may smell in such a will most rank, 235
 Foul disproportion, thoughts unnatural.
 But pardon me—I do not in position
 Distinctly speak of her; though I may fear
 Her will, recoiling to her better judgment,
 May fall to match you with her country
 forms, 241
 And happily repent.
Oth. Farewell, farewell.
 If more thou dost perceive, let me know
 more;
 Set on thy wife to observe. Leave me,
Iago. 244
Iago. My lord, I take my leave. [Going.
Oth. Why did I marry? This honest creature doubtless Sees and knows more—much more than he unfolds.
Iago. [Returning] My lord, I would I might entreat your honour
 To scan this thing no further; leave it to
 time. 249
 Although 'tis fit that Cassio have his place,
 For, sure, he fills it up with great ability,
 Yet if you please to hold him off awhile,
 You shall by that perceive him and his
 means. 253
 Note if your lady strain his entertainment

With any strong or vehement importunity;
 Much will be seen in that. In the mean
 time
 Let me be thought too busy in my fears—
 As worthy cause I have to fear I am—
 And hold her free, I do beseech your honour.
Oth. Fear not my government. 260
Iago. I once more take my leave. [Exit.
Oth. This fellow's of exceeding honesty,
 And knows all qualities, with a learned spirit,
 Of human dealing. If I do prove her haggard,
 Though that her jesses were my dear heartstrings, 265
 I'd whistle her off and let her down the wind
 To prey at fortune. Haply, for I am black
 And have not those soft parts of conversation
 That chamberers have, or for I am declin'd Into the vale of years—yet that's not
 much— 270
 She's gone; I am abus'd; and my relief
 Must be to loathe her. O curse of marriage,
 That we can call these delicate creatures
 ours,
 And not their appetites! I had rather be a toad,
 And live upon the vapour of a dungeon, 275
 Than keep a corner in the thing I love For others' uses. Yet 'tis the plague of great ones;
 Prerogativ'd are they less than the base;
 'Tis destiny unshunnable, like death: 279
 Even then this forked plague is fated to us When we do quicken. Look where she comes.

Re-enter DESDEMONA and EMILIA.

If she be false, O, then heaven mocks itself!
 I'll not believe it.
Des. How now, my dear Othello?
 Your dinner, and the generous islanders
 By you invited, do attend your presence.
Oth. I am to blame.
Des. Why do you speak so faintly?
 Are you not well?
Oth. I have a pain upon my forehead
 here.
Des. Faith, that's with watching; 'twill away again. 289
 Let me but bind it hard, within this hour
 It will be well.
 [He puts the handkerchief from him,
 and she drops it.
Oth. Your napkin is too little.
 Let it alone. Come, I'll go in with you.
Des. I am very sorry that you are not
 well.
 [Exeunt Othello and Desdemona.
Emil. I am glad I have found this napkin.
 This was her first remembrance from the Moor. 295

My wayward husband hath a hundred times Woo'd me to steal it ; but she so loves the token—
For he conjur'd her she should ever keep
it—
That she reserves it evermore about her To kiss and talk to. I'll ha the work ta'en
out, 300
And give't Iago. What he'll do with it Heaven knows, not I ;
I nothing but to please his fantasy.

Re-enter IAGO.

Iago. How now ! What do you here alone ?
Emil. Do not you chide ; I have a thing for you. 305
Iago. You have a thing for me ?
It is a common thing !
Emil. Ha !
Iago. To have a foolish wife.
Emil. O, is that all ? What will you give me now

For that same handkerchief ?
Iago. What handkerchief ?
Emil. What handkerchief ! 311
Why that the Moor first gave to Desde-
mona ;
That which so often you did bid me steal.
Iago. Hast stole it from her ?
Emil. No, faith ; she let it drop by negligence, 315
And to the advantage, I, being here, took't up.
Look, here it is.

Iago. A good wench ! Give it me.
Emil. What will you do with't, that you have been so earnest
To have me filch it ?
Iago. Why, what's that to you ?

[Snatching it.
Emil. If it be not for some purpose of import, 320
Give me't again. Poor lady, she'll run mad
When she shall lack it.

Iago. Be not acknown on't ; I have use for it.

Go, leave me. [Exit Emilia.
I will in Cassio's lodging lose this napkin,
And let him find it. Trifles light as air 326
Are to the jealous confirmations strong As proofs of holy writ ; this may do something.

The Moor already changes with my poison.
Dangerous conceits are in their natures poisons 330
Which at the first are scarce found to distaste

But, with a little act upon the blood,
Burn like the mines of sulphur.

Re-enter OTHELLO.

I did say so.

Look where he comes ! Not poppy, nor mandragora,
Nor all the drowsy syrups of the world, 335
Shall ever medicine thee to that sweet sleep
Which thou owed'st yesterday.

Oth. Ha ! ha ! false to me, to me ?

Iago. Why, how now, General ? No more of that.

Oth. Avaunt ! be gone ! Thou hast set me on the rack.

I swear 'tis better to be much abus'd 340
Than but to know 't a little.

Iago. How now, my lord !

Oth. What sense had I in her stol'n hours of lust ?

I saw 't not, thought it not, it harm'd not
me.

I slept the next night well, fed well, was free and merry ;

I found not Cassio's kisses on her lips. 345
He that is robb'd, not wanting what is stol'n,

Let him not know't, and he's not robb'd at all.

Iago. I am sorry to hear this.

Oth. I had been happy if the general
camp, 349

Pioneers and all, had tasted her sweet body,
So I had nothing known. O, now for ever Farewell the tranquil mind ! farewell content !

Farewell the plumed troops, and the big wars

That makes ambition virtue ! O, farewell !
Farewell the neighing steed and the shrill trump, 355

The spirit-stirring drum, th' ear-piercing fife,

The royal banner, and all quality,
Pride, pomp, and circumstance, of glorious
war !

And O ye mortal engines whose rude throats

Th' immortal Jove's dread clamours counterfeit, 360

Farewell ! Othello's occupation's gone.

Iago. Is't possible, my lord ?

Oth. Villain, be sure thou prove my love a whore—

[Taking him by the throat.

Be sure of it ; give me the ocular proof ;
Or, by the worth of man's eternal soul, 365

Thou hadst been better have been born a dog

Than answer my wak'd wrath.

Iago. Is't come to this ?

Oth. Make me to see't ; or, at the least,
so prove it

That the probation bear no hinge nor loop
To hang a doubt on ; or woe upon thy life !

Iago. My noble lord— 371

Oth. If thou dost slander her and torture
me,

Never pray more ; abandon all remorse ,

On horror's head horrors accumulate ;
Do deeds to make heaven weep, all earth
amaz'd ; 375
For nothing canst thou to damnation add Greater than that.

Iago. O grace ! O heaven forgive me !
Are you a man ? Have you a soul or sense ?—

God buy you ; take mine office. O wretched fool, 379

That liv'st to make thine honesty a vice !
O monstrous world ! Take note, take note,
O world,

To be direct and honest is not safe.
I thank you for this profit ; and from hence I'll love no friend, sith love breeds such offence. 384

Oth. Nay, stay. Thou shouldst be honest.

Iago. I should be wise ; for honesty's a fool,

And loses that it works for.

Oth. By the world,
I think my wife be honest, and think she is not ;

I think that thou art just, and think thou art not.

I'll have some proof. Her name, that was as fresh 390

As Dian's visage, is now begrim'd and black As mine own face. If there be cords or knives,

Poison, or fire, or suffocating streams,
I'll not endure it. Would I were satisfied !

Iago. I see, sir, you are eaten up with passion ; 395

I do repent me that I put it to you.

You would be satisfied ?

Oth. Would ! Nay, and I will.

Iago. And may ; but how—how satisfied,
my lord ?

Would you, the supervisor, grossly gape
on— 399

Behold her topp'd ?

Oth. Death and damnation ! O !

Iago. It were a tedious difficulty, I think,
To bring them to that prospect. Damn them, then,

If ever mortal eyes do see them bolster More than their own ! What then ? How then ? 404

What shall I say ? Where's satisfaction ?
It is impossible you should see this,

Were they as prime as goats, as hot as monkeys,

As salt as wolves in pride, and fools as gross
As ignorance made drunk. But yet, I say,
If imputation and strong circumstances 410

Which lead directly to the door of truth Will give you satisfaction, you might have't.

Oth. Give me a living reason she's disloyal.

Iago. I do not like the office ; 414
But, sith I am enter'd in this cause so far,

Prick'd to't by foolish honesty and love,
I will go on. I lay with Cassio lately,
And, being troubled with a raging tooth,
I could not sleep.

There are a kind of men so loose of soul 420
That in their sleeps will mutter their affairs:
One of this kind is Cassio.

In sleep I heard him say ' Sweet Desde-
mona,

Let us be wary, let us hide our loves ',
And then, sir, would he gripe and wring my
hand, 425

Cry ' O sweet creature ! ' then kiss me hard,

As if he pluck'd up kisses by the roots,
That grew upon my lips—then laid his leg Over my thigh—and sigh'd, and kiss'd, and then

Cried ' Cursed fate that gave thee to the Moor ! ' 430

Oth. O monstrous ! monstrous !

Iago. Nay, this was but his dream.

Oth. But this denoted a foregone conclusion.

Iago. 'Tis a shrewd doubt, though it be but a dream,

And this may help to thicken other proofs
That do demonstrate thinly.

Oth. I'll tear her all to pieces.

Iago. Nay, but be wise ; yet we see nothing done ; 436

She may be honest yet. Tell me but this :
Have you not sometimes seen a handkerchief

Spotted with strawberries in your wife's
hand ?

Oth. I gave her such a one ; 'twas my first gift. 440

Iago. I know not that ; but such a handkerchief—

I am sure it was your wife's—did I to-day
See Cassio wipe his beard with.

Oth. If it be that—

Iago. If it be that, or any that was hers,
It speaks against her with the other proofs.

Oth. O that the slave had forty thousand lives ! 446

One is too poor, too weak for my revenge.
Now do I see 'tis true. Look here, Iago—

All my fond love thus do I blow to heaven.
'Tis gone. 450

Arise, black vengeance, from the hollow
hell.

Yield up, O love, thy crown and hearted throne

To tyrannous hate ! Swell, bosom, with thy fraught,

For 'tis of aspics' tongues.

Iago. Yet be content.

Oth. O, blood, blood, blood ! 455

Iago. Patience, I say ; your mind perhaps may change.

Oth. Never, Iago. Like to the Pontic sea,
Whose icy current and compulsive course

Ne'er feels retiring ebb, but keeps due on
To the Propontic and the Hellespont ; 460
Even so my bloody thoughts, with violent pace,
Shall ne'er look back, ne'er ebb to humble
love,

Till that a capable and wide revenge Swallow them up. [He kneels] Now, by yond marble heaven,
In the due reverence of a sacred vow 465
I here engage my words.

Iago. [Kneeling] Do not rise yet.
Witness, you ever-burning lights above,
You elements that clip us round about,
Witness that here Iago doth give up
The execution of his wit, hands, heart, 470
To wrong'd Othello's service! Let him
command,

And to obey shall be in me remorse,
What bloody business ever. [They rise.

Oth. I greet thy love,
Not with vain thanks, but with acceptance
bounteous,
And I will upon the instant put thee to't. 475
Within these three days let me hear thee
say

That Cassio's not alive.

Iago. My friend is dead ;
'Tis done at your request. But let her live.

Oth. Damn her, lewd minx ! O, damn her, damn her ! 479

Come, go with me apart ; I will withdraw To furnish me with some swift means of
death

For the fair devil. Now art thou my lieutenant.

Iago. I am your own for ever. [Exeunt.

SCENE IV. Cyprus. Before the citadel.

Enter DESDEMONA, EMILIA, and Clown.

Des. Do you know, sirrah, where the Lieutenant Cassio lies ?

Clo. I dare not say he lies anywhere.

Des. Why, man ?

Clo. He's a soldier ; and for one to say a soldier lies, 'tis stabbing. 5

Des. Go to. Where lodges he ?

Clo. To tell you where he lodges is to tell you where I lie.

Des. Can anything be made of this ? 9

Clo. I know not where he lodges ; and for me to devise a lodging, and say he lies here or he lies there, were to lie in mine own throat.

Des. Can you inquire him out, and be edified by report ?

Clo. I will catechize the world for him ;
that is, make questions, and by them
answer. 15

Des. Seek him ; bid him come hither :
tell him I have mov'd my lord on his behalf, and hope all will be well.

Clo. To do this is within the compass of man's wit ; and therefore I will attempt the doing it. [Exit.

Des. Where should I lose the handkerchief, Emilia ?

Emil. I know not, madam. 21

Des. Believe me, I had rather lose my purse

Full of crusadoes ; and but my noble Moor Is true of mind, and made of no such baseness

As jealous creatures are, it were enough 25
To put him to ill thinking.

Emil. Is he not jealous ?

Des. Who, he ? I think the sun where he was born

Drew all such humours from him.

Enter OTHELLO.

Emil. Look where he comes.

Des. I will not leave him now till Cassio Be call'd to him. How is't with you, my
lord ? 30

Oth. Well, my good lady. [Aside] O, hardness to dissemble !—

How do you, Desdemona ?

Des. Well, my good lord.

Oth. Give me your hand. This hand is moist, my lady.

Des. It yet hath felt no age nor known no sorrow.

Oth. This argues fruitfulness and liberal
heart : 35

Hot, hot, and moist. This hand of yours requires

A sequester from liberty, fasting and
prayer,

Much castigation, exercise devout ;
For here's a young and sweating devil here
That commonly rebels. 'Tis a good hand,
A frank one.

Des. You may indeed say so ; 41
For 'twas that hand that gave away my
heart.

Oth. A liberal hand. The hearts of old gave hands ;

But our new heraldry is hands, not hearts.

Des. I cannot speak of this. Come now, your promise. 45

Oth. What promise, chuck ?

Des. I have sent to bid Cassio come speak with you.

Oth. I have a salt and sorry rheum
offends me ;

Lend me thy handkerchief.

Des. Here, my lord. 50

Oth. That which I gave you.

Des. I have it not about me.

Oth. Not ?

Des. No, faith, my lord.

Oth. That's a fault. That handkerchief 55
Did an Egyptian to my mother give.

She was a charmer, and could almost read
The thoughts of people ; she told her, while she kept it,

'Twould make her amiable, and subdue my father
Entirely to her love ; but if she lost it, 60
Or made a gift of it, my father's eye
Should hold her loathely, and his spirits should hunt
After new fancies. She, dying, gave it me,
And bid me, when my fate would have me
wife, 64
To give it her. I did so ; and take heed on't ;
Make it a darling like your precious eye ;
To lose't or give't away were such perdition
As nothing else could match.

Des. Is't possible ?

Oth. 'Tis true. There's magic in the web
of it.

A sibyl that had numb' red in the world 70
The sun to course two hundred compasses
In her prophetic fury sew'd the work ;
The worms were hallowed that did breed
the silk ;
And it was dy'd in mummy which the skilful

Conserv'd of maidens' hearts.

Des. I'faith ! Is't true ? 75

Oth. Most veritable ; therefore look to't
well.

Des. Then would to God that I had never seen't !

Oth. Ha ! Wherefore ?

Des. Why do you speak so startlingly and rash ?

Oth. Is't lost ? Is't gone ? Speak. Is 't out o' th' way ? 80

Des. Heaven bless us !

Oth. Say you ?

Des. It is not lost ; but what an if it were ?

Oth. How ! 84

Des. I say it is not lost.

Oth. Fetch't, let me see't.

Des. Why, so I can, sir, but I will not
now.

This is a trick to put me from my suit :

Pray you let Cassio be receiv'd again.

Oth. Fetch me the handkerchief : my mind misgives. 90

Des. Come, come ;

You'll never meet a more sufficient man.

Oth. The handkerchief !

Des. I pray talk me of Cassio.

Oth. The handkerchief !

Des. A man that all his time Hath founded his good fortunes on your
love, 95

Shar'd dangers with you—

Oth. The handkerchief !

Des. I'faith, you are to blame.

Oth. Zounds ! [Exit Othello.

Emil. Is not this man jealous ? 100

Des. I ne'er saw this before.

Sure there's some wonder in this handkerchief ;

I am most unhappy in the loss of it.

1138

Emil. 'Tis not a year or two shows us a
man.

They are all but stomachs, and we all but
food ; 105

They eat us hungrily, and when they are full,

They belch us.

Enter CASSIO and IAGO.

Look you, Cassio and my husband.

Iago. There is no other way ; 'tis she must do 't.

And, lo, the happiness ! Go and importune
her.

Des. How now, good Cassio, what's the news with you ? 110

Cas. Madam, my former suit. I do
beseech you

That by your virtuous means I may again
Exist, and be a member of his love

Whom I, with all the office of my heart,
Entirely honour. I would not be delay'd.

If my offence be of such mortal kind 116
That nor my service past, nor present

sorrows,

Nor purpos'd merit in futurity,
Can ransom me into his love again,

But to know so must be my benefit ; 120
So shall I clothe me in a forc'd content,

And shut myself up in some other course,
To fortune's alms.

Des. Alas, thrice-gentle Cassio !

My advocacy is not now in tune ;
My lord is not my lord ; nor should I know

him, 125

Were he in favour as in humour alter'd.
So help me every spirit sanctified,

As I have spoken for you all my best,
And stood within the blank of his dis-
pleasure

For my free speech ! You must awhile be patient. 130

What I can do I will ; and more I will
Than for myself I dare ; let that suffice you.

Iago. Is my lord angry ?

Emil. He went hence but now,
And certainly in strange unquietness.

Iago. Can he be angry ? I have seen the cannon 135

When it hath blown his ranks into the air,

And, like the devil, from his very arm
Puff'd his own brother—and is he angry ?

Something of moment, then. I will go meet
him. 139

There's matter in't indeed, if he be angry.

Des. I prithee do so. [Exit Iago.

Something sure of state Either from Venice, or some unhatch'd
practice

Made demonstrable here in Cyprus to him, Hath puddled his clear spirit ; and in such cases 144

Men's natures wrangle with inferior things,

Though great ones are their object. 'Tis even so ;

For let our patient ache, and it endues
Our other healthful members even to a sense

Of pain. Nay, we must think, men are not gods,

Nor of them look for such observancy 156
As fits the bridal. Beshrew me much Emilia,

I was—unhandsome warrior as I am—
Arraigning his unkindness with my soul ;
But now I find I had suborn'd the witness
And he's indicted falsely. 155

Emil. Pray heaven it be state matters, as you think,

And no conception nor no jealous toy
Concerning you.

Des. Alas the day, I never gave him cause !

Emil. But jealous souls will not be answer'd so ; 160

They are not ever jealous for the cause.
But jealous for they are jealous. 'Tis a monster

Begot upon it self, born on it self.

Des. Heaven keep that monster from Othello's mind !

Emil. Lady, amen. 165

Des. I will go seek him. Cassio, walk hereabout.

If I do find him fit, I'll move your suit,
And seek to effect it to my uttermost.

Cas. I humbly thank your ladyship. 169
[Exeunt Desdemona and Emilia.]

Enter BIANCA.

Bian. Save you, friend Cassio !

Cas. What make you from home ?
How is it with you, my most fair Bianca ?
I' faith, sweet love, I was coming to your house.

Bian. And I was going to your lodging, Cassio.

What, keep a week away ? seven days and nights ?

Eightscore eight hours ? and lovers' absent hours, 175

More tedious than the dial eight score times ?

O weary reckoning !

Cas. Pardon me, Bianca.

I have this while with leaden thoughts been press'd ;

But I shall in a more continue time
Strike off this score of absence. Sweet Bianca, 180

[Giving her Desdemona's handkerchief.]

Take me this work out.

Bian. O Cassio, whence came this ?
This is some token from a newer friend :

To the felt absence now I feel a cause.

Is't come to this ? Well, well.

Cas. Go to, woman !

Throw your vile guesses in the devil's teeth, 185

From whence you have them. You are jealous now

That this is from some mistress, some remembrance.

No, by my faith, Bianca.

Bian. Why, whose is it ?

Cas. I know not neither ; I found it in my chamber. 189

I like the work well ; ere it be demanded—
As like enough it will—I would have it copied.

Take it, and do't ; and leave me for this time.

Bian. Leave you ! Wherefore ?

Cas. I do attend here on the General ;
And think it no addition, nor my wish, 195
To have him see me woman'd.

Bian. Why, I pray you ?

Cas. Not that I love you not.

Bian. But that you do not love me.
I pray you bring me on the way a little ;
And say if I shall see you soon at night.

Cas. 'Tis but a little way that I can bring you, 200

For I attend here ; but I'll see you soon.

Bian. 'Tis very good ; I must be circumstanc'd. [Exeunt.]

ACT FOUR

SCENE I. Cyprus. Before the citadel.

Enter OTHELLO and IAGO.

Iago. Will you think so ?

Oth. Think so, Iago ?

Iago. What,

To kiss in private ?

Oth. An unauthoriz'd kiss.

Iago. Or to be naked with her friend abed
An hour or more, not meaning any harm ?

Oth. Naked abed, Iago, and not mean harm ! 5

It is hypocrisy against the devil.

They that mean virtuously and yet do so,
The devil their virtue tempts, and they tempt heaven.

Iago. So they do nothing, 'tis a venial slip ;

But if I give my wife a handkerchief— 10

Oth. What then ?

Iago. Why, then 'tis hers, my lord ; and, being hers,

She may, I think, bestow't on any man.

Oth. She is protectress of her honour too :
May she give that ? 15

Iago. Her honour is an essence that's not seen ;

They have it very oft that have it not.

But, for the handkerchief—

Oth. By heaven, I would most gladly have forgot it. 19

Thou said'st—O, it comes o'er my memory

As doth the raven o'er the infected house,
Boding to all—he had my handkerchief.

Iago. Ay, what of that ?

Oth. That's not so good now.

Iago. What

If I had said I had seen him do you wrong ?
Or heard him say—as knaves be such abroad,

Who having, by their own importunate
suit,

Or voluntary dotage of some mistress,
Convinced or supplied them, cannot choose
But they must blab—

Oth. Hath he said anything ?

Iago. He hath, my lord ; but he you well
assur'd,

No more than he'll unswear.

Oth. What hath he said ?

Iago. Faith, that he did—I know not what he did.

Oth. What ? what ?

Iago. Lie—

Oth. With her ?

Iago. With her, on her ; what you will.

Oth. Lie with her—lie on her ? We say lie on her when they belie her. Lie with her. Zounds, that's fulsome. Handkerchief —confessions—handkerchief ! To confess, and be hang'd for his labour—first, to be hang'd, and then to confess. I tremble at it. Nature would not invest herself in such shadowing passion without some instruction.
It is not words that shakes me thus—pish !—noses, ears, and lips. Is't possible ?
Confess ! Handkerchief ! O devil !

[Falls in a trance.

Iago. Work on,
My medicine, work. Thus credulous fools are caught ;

And many worthy and chaste dames even
thus,

All guiltless, meet reproach. What, ho !
my lord !

My lord, I say ! Othello !

Enter CASSIO.

How now, Cassio !

Cas. What's the matter ?

Iago. My lord is fall'n into an epilepsy. 50
This is his second fit ; he had one yesterday.

Cas. Rub him about the temples.

Iago. No, forbear.

The lethargy must have his quiet course ;
If not, he foams at mouth, and by and by Breaks out to savage madness. Look, he stirs.

Do you withdraw yourself a little while ;
He will recover straight ; when he is
gone,

I would on great occasion speak with you.

[Exit Cassio.

How is it, General ? Have you not hurt your head ?

Oth. Dost thou mock me ?

Iago. I mock you ? No, by heaven !
Would you would bear your fortune like a
man !

Oth. A horned man's a monster and a beast.

Iago. There's many a beast then in a populous city,

And many a civil monster.

Oth. Did he confess it ?

Iago. Good sir, be a man ; 65 Think every bearded fellow that's but yok'd

May draw with you ; there's millions now alive

That nightly lie in those unproper beds
Which they dare swear peculiar : your case is better.

O, 'tis the spite of hell, the fiend's arch-
mock,

To lip a wanton in a secure couch,
And to suppose her chaste ! No, let me
know ;

And knowing what I am, I know what she
shall be.

Oth. O, thou art wise ; 'tis certain.

Iago. Stand you awhile apart.

Confine yourself but in a patient list. 75
Whilst you were here o'erwhelmed with your grief—

A passion most unsuited such a man—
Cassio came hither ; I shifted him away,
And laid good 'scuse upon your ecstasy ;
Bade him anon return, and here speak with
me ;

The which he promis'd. Do but encave
yourself,

And mark the fleers, the gibes, and notable scorns,

That dwell in every region of his face ;
For I will make him tell the tale anew—
Where, how, how oft, how long ago, and when,

He hath, and is again to cope your wife.
I say, but mark his gesture. Marry,
patience ;

Or I shall say you are all in all in spleen,
And nothing of a man.

Oth. Dost thou hear, Iago ?
I will be found most cunning in my
patience ;

But—dost thou hear ?—most bloody.

Iago. That's not amiss ;
But yet keep time in all. Will you withdraw ? [Othello withdraws.

Now will I question Cassio of Bianca,
A huswife that by selling her desires Buys herself bread and clothes ; it is a creature

That dotes on Cassio, as 'tis the strumpet's plague

To beguile many and be beguil'd by one.
He, when he hears of her, cannot restrain
From the excess of laughter.

Re-enter CASSIO.

Here he comes.
As he shall smile Othello shall go mad ; 100
And his unbookish jealousy must construe Poor Cassio's smiles, gestures, and light behaviours,

Quite in the wrong. How do you now,
Lieutenant ?

Cas. The worser that you give me the addition

Whose want even kills me. 105

Iago. Ply Desdemona well, and you are sure on't.

Now, if this suit lay in Bianca's dower,
How quickly should you speed !

Cas. Alas, poor caitiff !

Oth. Look how he laughs already ! 106

Iago. I never knew a woman love man so.

Cas. Alas, poor rogue ! I think, i' faith,
she loves me.

Oth. Now he denies it faintly, and laughs
it out.

Iago. Do you hear, Cassio ?

Oth. Now he importunes him

To tell it o'er. Go to ; well said, well said.

Iago. She gives it out that you shali marry her. 115

Do you intend it ?

Cas. Ha, ha, ha !

Oth. Do you triumph, Roman ? Do you triumph ?

Cas. I marry her ! What, a customer ! I pritheer bear some charity to my wit ; do not think it so unwholesome. Ha, ha, ha !

Oth. So, so, so, so—they laugh that wins. 122

Iago. Faith, the cry goes that you marry
her.

Cas. Prithceer say true.

Iago. I am a very villain else. 125

Oth. Ha you scor'd me ? Well.

Cas. This is the monkey's own giving out : she is persuaded I will marry her, out of her own love and flattery, not out of my promise.

Oth. Iago beckons me ; now he begins the story. 130

Cas. She was here even now ; she haunts me in every place. I was t'other day talking on the sea-bank with certain Venetians, and thither comes the bauble—by this hand, she falls me thus about my neck.

Oth. Crying ' O dear Cassio ! ' as it were :
his gesture imports it. 136

Cas. So hangs, and lolls, and weeps upon me ; so hales, and pulls me. Ha, ha, ha !

Oth. Now he tells how she pluck'd him to my chamber. O, I see that nose of yours, but not that dog I shall throw't to. 141

Cas. Well, I must leave her company.

Enter BIANCA.

Iago. Before me ! Look where she comes.

Cas. 'Tis such another fitchew ! marry, a perfum'd one. What do you mean by this haunting of me ? 145

Bian. Let the devil and his dam haunt you. What did you mean by that same handkerchief you gave me even now ? I was a fine fool to take it. I must take out the whole work—a likely piece of work that you should find it in your chamber and know not who left it there ! This is some minx's token, and I must take out the work ? There—give it your hobby-horse. Wheresoe'er you had it, I'll take out no work on't. 153

Cas. How now, my sweet Bianca ! how now ! how now !

Oth. By heaven, that should be my handkerchief ! 155

Bian. An you'll come to supper to-night, you may ; an you will not, come when you are next prepar'd for. [Exit.

Iago. After her, after her.

Cas. Faith, I must ; she'll rail i' th' street else.

Iago. Will you sup there ? 160

Cas. Faith, I intend so.

Iago. Well, I may chance to see you ; for
I would very fain speak with you.

Cas. Prithceer come ; will you ?

Iago. Go to ; say no more. [Exit Cassio.

Oth. [Coming forward] How shall I murder him, Iago ? 166

Iago. Did you perceive how he laugh'd at his vice ?

Oth. O Iago !

Iago. And did you see the handkerchief ?

Oth. Was that mine ? 170

Iago. Yours, by this hand. And to see how he prizes the foolish woman your wife !
She gave it him, and he hath giv'n it his whore.

Oth. I would have him nine years a-killing. A fine woman ! a fair woman ! a sweet woman ! 175

Iago. Nay, you must forget that.

Oth. Ay, let her rot, and perish, and be damn'd to-night ; for she shall not live.
No, my heart is turn'd to stone ; I strike it, and it hurts my hand. O, the world hath not a sweeter creature ; she might lie by an emperor's side and command him tasks. 181

Iago. Nay, that's not your way.

Oth. Hang her ! I do but say what she is : so delicate with her needle, an admirable musician—O, she will sing the savageness out of a bear !—of so high and plenteous wit and invention. 186

Iago. She's the worse for all this.

Oth. O, a thousand, a thousand times—and then of so gentle a condition.

Iago. Ay, too gentle. 190

Oth. Nay, that's certain. But yet the pity of it, Iago! O, Iago, the pity of it, Iago!

Iago. If you be so fond over her iniquity, give her patent to offend; for, if it touch not you, it comes near nobody. ¹⁹⁵

Oth. I will chop her into messes. Cuckold me!

Iago. O, 'tis foul in her.

Oth. With mine officer!

Iago. That's fouler. ¹⁹⁹

Oth. Get me some poison, Iago—this night. I'll not expostulate with her, lest her body and beauty unprovide my mind again—this night, Iago.

Iago. Do it not with poison; strangle her in her bed, even the bed she hath contaminated. ²⁰⁴

Oth. Good, good; the justice of it pleases; very good.

Iago. And for Cassio—let me be his undertaker. You shall hear more by mid-night. ²⁰⁷

Oth. Excellent good. [A trumpet.
What trumpet is that same?

Iago. I warrant, something from Venice.

Enter LODOVICO, DESDEMONA, and Attendants.

'Tis Lodovico—this comes from the Duke. See, your wife's with him.

Lod. God save thee, worthy General!

Oth. With all my heart, sir.

Lod. The Duke and Senators of Venice greet you. [Gives him a packet.

Oth. I kiss the instrument of their pleasures. [Opens the packet and reads.

Des. And what's the news, good cousin Lodovico? ²¹⁴

Iago. I am very glad to see you, signior; Welcome to Cyprus.

Lod. I thank you. How does Lieutenant Cassio?

Iago. Lives, sir.

Des. Cousin, there's fall'n between him and my lord

An unkind breach; but you shall make all well. ²²⁰

Oth. Are you sure of that?

Des. My lord?

Oth. [Reads] 'This fail you not to do as you will'—

Lod. He did not call; he's busy in the paper.

Is there division 'twixt thy lord and Cassio? ²²⁵

Des. A most unhappy one. I would do much

T' atone them, for the love I bear to Cassio.

Oth. Fire and brimstone!

Des. My lord?

Oth. Are you wise?

Des. What, is he angry?

Lod. May be the letter mov'd him;

For, as I think, they do command him home,

Deputing Cassio in his government.

Des. By my troth, I am glad on't.

Oth. Indeed!

Des. My lord?

Oth. I am glad to see you mad.

Des. Why, sweet Othello?

Oth. Devil!

Des. I have not deserv'd this. ²³⁷

Lod. My lord, this would not be believ'd in Venice,

Though I should swear I saw't. 'Tis very much.

Make her amends; she weeps.

Oth. O devil, devil! ²⁴⁰

If that the earth could teem with woman's tears,

Each drop she falls would prove a crocodile. Out of my sight!

Des. I will not stay to offend you. [Going.

Lod. Truly, an obedient lady. ²⁴⁴
I do beseech your lordship, call her back.

Oth. Mistress!

Des. My lord?

Oth. What would you with her, sir?

Lod. Who, I, my lord?

Oth. Ay; you did wish that I would make her turn. ²⁴⁹

Sir, she can turn, and turn, and yet go on,

And turn again; and she can weep, sir, weep;

And she's obedient, as you say, obedient, Very obedient.—Proceed you in your tears.—

Concerning this, sir,—O, well-painted passion!— ²⁵⁴

I am commanded home.—Get you away; I'll send for you anon.—Sir, I obey the mandate, And will return to Venice.—Hence, avaunt!

[Exit Desdemona.
Cassio shall have my place. And, sir, to-night,

I do entreat that we may sup together. You are welcome, sir, to Cyprus.—Goat-and monkeys! [Exit.

Lod. Is this the noble Moor whom our full Senate ²⁶¹

Call all in all sufficient? Is this the nature Whom passion could not shake, whose solid virtue The shot of accident nor dart of chance Could neither graze nor pierce?

Iago. He is much chang'd.

Lod. Are his wits safe? Is he not light of brain?

Iago. He's that he is. I may not breathe my censure.

What he might be, if what he might he is not,

I would to heaven he were!

Lod. What, strike his wife!

Iago. Faith, that was not so well; yet would I knew 270
That stroke would prove the worst!
Lod. Is it his use?
Or did the letters work upon his blood,
And new-create this fault?
Iago. Alas, alas!
It is not honesty in me to speak
What I have seen and known. You shall observe him; 275
And his own courses will denote him so That I may save my speech. Do but go after,
And mark how he continues.
Lod. I am sorry that I am deceiv'd in him. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II. Cyprus. The citadel.

Enter OTHELLO and EMILIA.

Oth. You have seen nothing, then?
Emil. Nor ever heard, nor ever did suspect.
Oth. Yes, you have seen Cassio and she
together.
Emil. But then I saw no harm, and then
I heard
Each syllable that breath made up between
them. 5
Oth. What, did they never whisper?
Emil. Never, my lord.
Oth. Nor send you out o' th' way?
Emil. Never.
Oth. To fetch her fan, her gloves, her mask, nor nothing?
Emil. Never, my lord. 10
Oth. That's strange.
Emil. I durst, my lord, to wager she is honest,
Lay down my soul at stake. If you think
other,
Remove your thought—it doth abuse your
bosom.
If any wretch have put this in your head, 15
Let heaven requite it with the serpent's
curse;
For if she be not honest, chaste, and
true,
There's no man happy; the purest of their wives
Is foul as slander.
Oth. Bid her come hither. Go. [Exit Emilia.]
She says enough; yet she's a simple bawd
That cannot say as much. This is a subtle
whore, 21
A closet-lock-and-key of villainous secrets;
And yet she'll kneel and pray; I have seen her do't.
Re-enter EMILIA with DESDEMONA.
Des. My lord, what is your will?
Oth. Pray you chuck, come hither. 24
Des. What is your pleasure?

Oth. Let me see your eyes; look in my face.
Des. What horrible fancy's this?
Oth. [To Emilia] Some of your function,
mistress;
Leave procreants alone, and shut the door;
Cough, or cry hem, if any body come. 29
Your mystery, your mystery; nay, dispatch. [Exit Emilia.] Des. Upon my knees, what doth your speech import?
I understand a fury in your words,
But not the words.
Oth. Why, what art thou?
Des. You wife, my lord; your true and loyal wife. 35
Oth. Come, swear it, damn thyself; lest being like one of heaven, the devils themselves should fear to seize thee; therefore be double-damn'd—swear thou art honest.
Des. Heaven doth truly know it.
Oth. Heaven truly knows that thou art false as hell.
Des. To whom, my lord? With whom?
How am I false? 41
Oth. Ah, Desdemona! away! away!
away!
Des. Alas the heavy day! Why do you
weep?
Am I the motive of these tears, my lord?
If haply you my father do suspect 45
An instrument of this your calling back, Lay not your blame on me; if you have lost him,
Why, I have lost him too.
Oth. Had it pleas'd heaven
To try me with affliction; had they rain'd
All kind of sores and shames on my bare
head, 50
Steep'd me in poverty to the very lips,
Given to captivity me and my utmost hopes,
I should have found in some place of my
soul
A drop of patience; but, alas, to make me
The fixed figure for the time of scorn 55
To point his slow unmoving finger at!—
O, O!
Yet could I bear that too; well, very well;
But there, where I have garner'd up my
heart,
Where either I must live or bear no life,
The fountain from the which my current runs, 60
Or else dries up—to be discarded thence!
Or keep it as a cistern for foul toads
To knot and gender in! Turn thy complexion there,
Patience, thou young and rose-lipp'd
cherubin—
Ay, here, look grim as hell. 65
Des. I hope my noble lord esteems me
honest.

Oth. O, ay ; as summer flies are in the shambles,
That quicken even with blowing. O thou weed
Who art so lovely fair and smell'st so sweet
That the sense aches at thee!
Would thou had'st never been born ! 70
Des. Alas, what ignorant sin have I committed ?
Oth. Was this fair paper, this most goodly
book,
Made to write ' whore ' upon ? What committed !
Committed ! O thou public commoner !
I should make very forges of my cheeks 75
That would to cinders burn up modesty, Did I but speak thy deeds. What committed !
Heaven stops the nose at it, and the moon
winks ;
The bawdy wind, that kisses all it meets,
Is hush'd within the hollow mine of earth
And will not hear it. What committed ! 81
Impudent strumpet !
Des. By heaven, you do me wrong.
Oth. Are not you a strumpet ?
Des. No, as I am a Christian.
If to preserve this vessel for my lord
From any other foul unlawful touch 85
Be not to be a strumpet, I am none.
Oth. What, not a whore ?
Des. No, as I shall be sav'd.
Oth. Is't possible ?
Des. O, heaven forgive us !
Oth. I cry you mercy, then.
I took you for that cunning whore of Venice 90
That married with Othello.—You, mistress,
That have the office opposite to Saint Peter
And keeps the gate of hell !
Re-enter EMILIA.
You, you, ay you !
We ha done our course ; there's money
for your pains.
I pray you turn the key, and keep our counsel. [Exit.
Emil. Alas, what does this gentleman conceive ? 96
How do you, madam ? How do you, my good lady ?
Des. Faith, half asleep.
Emil. Good madam, what's the matter with my lord ?
Des. With who ? 100
Emil. Why, with my lord, madam.
Des. Who is thy lord ?
Emil. He that is yours, sweet lady.
Des. I have none. Do not talk to me,
Emilia ;
I cannot weep, nor answers have I none
But what should go by water. Prithee,
to-night 105

Lay on my bed my wedding sheets—remember ;
And call thy husband hither.
Emil. Here's a change indeed ! [Exit.
Des. 'Tis meet I should be us'd so, very meet.
How have I been behav'd, that he might stick 109
The small'st opinion on my great'st abuse ?
Re-enter EMILIA with IAGO.
Iago. What is your pleasure, madam ?
How is't with you ?
Des. I cannot tell. Those that do teach young babes
Do it with gentle means and easy tasks.
He might have chid me so ; for, in good faith,
I am a child to chiding.
Iago. What is the matter, lady ? 115 Emil. Alas, Iago, my lord hath so bewhor'd her,
Thrown such despite and heavy terms upon
her
That true hearts cannot bear it.
Des. Am I that name, Iago ?
Iago. What name, fair lady ?
Des. Such as she says my lord did say
I was. 120
Emil. He call'd her whore. A beggar in his drink
Could not have laid such terms upon his callat.
Iago. Why did he so ?
Des. I do not know ; I am sure I am none such.
Iago. Do not weep, do not weep. Alas,
the day ! 125
Emil. Hath she forsook so many noble matches,
Her father, and her country, and her
friends,
To be call'd whore ? Would it not make one weep ?
Des. It is my wretched fortune.
Iago. Beshrew him for't !
How comes this trick upon him ?
Des. Nay, heaven doth know.
Emil. I will be hang'd if some eternal
villain, 131
Some busy and insinuating rogue,
Some cogging, cozening slave, to get some
office,
Have not devis'd this slander ; I'll be hang'd else.
Iago. Fie, there is no such man ; it is impossible. 135
Des. If any such there be, heaven pardon
him !
Emil. A halter pardon him ! and hell gnaw his bones !
Why should he call her whore ? Who keeps her company ?
What place, what time, what form, what likelihood ?

The Moor's abus'd by some outrageous knave, 140
Some base notorious knave, some scurvy fellow.

O heaven, that such companions thou'dst unfold,

And put in every honest hand a whip
To lash the rascals naked through the world
Even from the east to the west!

Iago. Speak within door. 145

Emil. O, fie upon them! Some such squire he was

That turn'd your wit the seamy side without

And made you to suspect me with the Moor.

Iago. You are a fool; go to.

Des. O God! Iago,

What shall I do to win my lord again? 150

Good friend, go to him; for, by this light of heaven,

I know not how I lost him. Here I kneel.

If e'er my will did trespass 'gainst his love,

Either in discourse of thought or actual deed, 154

Or that mine eyes, mine ears, or any sense

Delighted them in any other form,

Or that I do not yet and ever did,

And ever will—though he do shake me off

To beggarly divorcement—love him dearly.

Comfort forswear me! Unkindness may do much; 160

And his unkindness may defeat my life,

But never take my love. I cannot say 'whore';

It does abhor me now I speak the word;

To do the act that might the addition earn,

Not the world's mass of vanity could make me. 165

Iago. I pray you be content; 'tis but his humour.

The business of the state does him offence,
And he does chide with you.

Des. If 'twere no other!

Iago. It is but so, I warrant.

[Trumpets within.]

Hark how these instruments summon you to supper. 170

The messengers of Venice stay the meat.

Go in, and weep not; all things shall be well.

[Exeunt Desdemona and Emilia.]

Enter RODERIGO.

How now, Roderigo!

Rod. I do not find that thou deal'st justly with me.

Iago. What in the contrary? 175

Rod. Every day thou daff'st me with some device, Iago; and rather, as it seems to me now, keep'st from me all convenience than suppliest me with the least advantage of hope. I will indeed, no longer endure it; nor am I yet persuaded to put up in peace what already I have foolishly suffer'd. 181

Iago. Will you hear me, Roderigo?

Rod. Faith, I have heard too much; for your words and performances are no kin together.

Iago. You charge me most unjustly. 185

Rod. With nought but truth. I have wasted myself out of my means. The jewels you have had from me to deliver to Desdemona would half have corrupted a votarist. You have told me she hath receiv'd them, and return'd me expectations and comforts of sudden respect and acquaintance; but I find none. 191

Iago. Well; go to; very well.

Rod. Very well! go to! I cannot go to, man, nor 'tis not very well; by this hand, I say 'tis very scurvy, and begin to find myself fopt in it. 195 Iago. Very well.

Rod. I tell you 'tis not very well. I will make myself known to Desdemona. If she will return me my jewels, I will give over my suit and repent my unlawful solicitation; if not, assure yourself I will seek satisfaction of you.

Iago. You have said now. 201

Rod. Ay, and said nothing but what I protest intendment of doing.

Iago. Why, now I see there's mettle in thee; and even from this instant do build on thee a better opinion than ever before. Give me thy hand, Roderigo. Thou hast taken against me a most just exception; but yet, I protest, I have dealt most directly in thy affair.

Rod. It hath not appear'd. 209

Iago. I grant, indeed, it hath not appear'd; and your suspicion is not without wit and judgment. But, Roderigo, if thou hast that in thee indeed, which I have greater reason to believe now than ever—I mean purpose, courage, and valour—this night show it; if thou the next night following enjoy not Desdemona, take me from this world with treachery, and devise engines for my life.

Rod. Well, what is it? Is it within reason and compass? 218

Iago. Sir, there is especial commission come from Venice to depute Cassio in Othello's place. 220

Rod. Is that true? Why, then Othello and Desdemona return again to Venice.

Iago. O, no; he goes into Mauritania, and taketh away with him the fair Desdemona, unless his abode be linger'd here by some accident; wherein none can be so determinate as the removing of Cassio. 226

Rod. How do you mean removing of him?

Iago. Why, by making him incapable of Othello's place—knocking out his brains.

Rod. And that you would have me to do?

Iago. Ay, an if you dare do yourself a profit and right. He sups to-night with a harlotry, and thither will I go to him—he knows not yet of his honourable fortune. If you will watch his going thence, which I will fashion to fall out between twelve and one, you may take him at your pleasure. I will be near to second your attempt, and he shall fall between us. Come, stand not amaz'd at it, but go along with me; I will show you such a necessity in his death that you shall think yourself bound to put it on him. It is now high supper-time, and the night grows to waste. About it. ²⁴¹

Rod. I will hear further reason for this.

Iago. And you shall be satisfied. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III. Cyprus. The citadel.

Enter OTHELLO, DESDEMONA, LODOVICO, EMILIA, and Attendants.

Lod. I do beseech you, sir, trouble yourself no further.

Oth. O, pardon me; 'twill do me good to walk.

Lod. Madam, good night; I humbly thank your ladyship.

Des. Your honour is most welcome.

Oth. Will you walk, sir? O, Desdemona!

Des. My lord? ⁶

Oth. Get you to bed on th' instant; I will be return'd forthwith. Dispatch your attendant there. Look 't be done.

Des. I will, my lord. [Exeunt Othello, Lodovico, and Attendants.]

Emil. How goes it now? He looks gentler than he did. ¹⁰

Des. He says he will return incontinent. He hath commanded me to go to bed, And bade me to dismiss you.

Emil. Dismiss me!

Des. It was his bidding; therefore, good Emilia,

Give me my nightly wearing, and adieu. ¹⁵
We must not now displease him.

Emil. I would you had never seen him.

Des. So would not I: my love doth so approve him

That even his stubbornness, his checks, his frowns—

Prithee unpin me—have grace and favour in them. ²⁰

Emil. I have laid those sheets you bade me on the bed.

Des. All's one. Good faith, how foolish are our minds!

If I do die before thee, prithee shroud me In one of these same sheets.

Emil. Come, come, you talk.

Des. My mother had a maid call'd Barbary: ²⁵

She was in love; and he she lov'd prov'd mad,

And did forsake her. She had a song of 'willow';

An old thing 'twas, but it express'd her fortune,

And she died singing it. That song to-night Will not go from my mind; I have much to do ³⁰

But to go hang my head all at one side And sing it like poor Barbary. Prithee dispatch.

Emil. Shall I go fetch your night-gown?

Des. No, unpin me here.

This Lodovico is a proper man.

Emil. A very handsome man. ³⁵

Des. He speaks well.

Emil. I know a lady in Venice would have walk'd barefoot to Palestine for a touch of his nether lip.

Des. [Sings] The poor soul sat sighing by a sycamore tree,

Sing all a green willow; ⁴⁰

Her hand on her bosom, her head on her knee.

Sing willow, willow, willow.

The fresh streams ran by her, and murmur'd her means;

Sing willow, willow, willow;

Her salt tears fell from her and soft'ned the stones; ⁴⁵

Sing willow—

Lay by these—willow, willow.—

Prithee, hie thee; he'll come anon.—

Sing all a green willow must be my garland.

Let nobody blame him; his scorn I approve— ⁵⁰

Nay, that's not next. Hark! who is't that knocks?

Emil. It is the wind.

Des. [Sings] I call'd my love false love; but what said he then?

Sing willow, willow, willow:

If I court moe women, you'll couch with moe men— ⁵⁵

So, get thee gone; good night. Mine eyes do itch;

Doth that bode weeping?

Emil. 'Tis neither here nor there.

Des. I have heard it said so. O, these men, these men!

Dost thou in conscience think—tell me, Emilia—

That there be women do abuse their husbands ⁶⁰

In such gross kind?

Emil. There be some such, no question.

Des. Wouldst thou do such a deed for all the world?

Emil. Why, would not you?

Des. No, by this heavenly light!

Emil. Nor I neither by this heavenly light;

I might do't as well i' th' dark. ⁶⁵

Des. Wouldst thou do such a deed for all the world ?

Emil. The world's a huge thing.
It is a great price for a small vice.

Des. Good troth, I think thou wouldst not.

Emil. By my troth, I think I should ; and undo't when I had done it. Marry, I would not do such a thing for a joint-ring, nor for measures of lawn, nor for gowns, petticoats, nor caps, nor any petty exhibition ; but for all the whole world—ud's pity, who would not make her husband a cuckold to make him a monarch ? I should venture purgatory for't. 75

Des. Beshrew me, if I would do such a wrong for the whole world.

Emil. Why, the wrong is but a wrong i' th' world ; and having the world for your labour, 'tis a wrong in your own world, and you might quickly make it right. 80

Des. I do not think there is any such woman.

Emil. Yes, a dozen ; and as many to th' vantage as would store the world they play'd for.

But I do think it is their husbands' faults If wives do fall. Say that they slack their duties, 85

And pour our treasures into foreign laps ; Or else break out in peevish jealousies, Throwing restraint upon us ; or say they strike us,

Or scant our former having in despite ; Why, we have galls ; and though we have some grace, 90

Yet have we some revenge. Let husbands know

Their wives have sense like them ; they see and smell,

And have their palates both for sweet and sour

As husbands have. What is it that they do When they change us for others ? Is it sport ? 95

I think it is. And doth affection breed it ? I think it doth. Is't frailty that thus errs ? It is so too. And have not we affections, Desires for sport, and frailty, as men have ? Then let them use us well ; else let them know 100

The ills we do their ills instruct us so.

Des. Good night, good night. God me such uses send,
Not to pick bad from bad, but by bad mend ! [Exeunt.]

ACT FIVE

SCENE I. Cyprus. A street.

Enter IAGO and RODERIGO.

Iago. Here, stand behind this bulk ; straight will he come.

Wear thy good rapier bare, and put it home.

Quick, quick ; fear nothing ; I'll be at thy elbow.

It makes us or it mars us ; think on that, And fix most firm thy resolution. 5

Rod. Be near at hand ; I may miscarry in't.

Iago. Here, at thy hand. Be bold, and take thy stand. [Withdraws.]

Rod. I have no great devotion to the deed ;

And yet he hath given me satisfying reasons—

'Tis but a man gone. Forth, my sword ; he dies. 10

Iago. I have rubb'd this young quat almost to the sense,

And he grows angry. Now, whether he kill Cassio

Or Cassio him, or each do kill the other.

Every way makes my gain. Live Roderigo, He calls me to a restitution large 15

Of gold and jewels that I bobb'd from him As gifts to Desdemona ;

It must not be. If Cassio do remain,

He hath a daily beauty in his life

That makes me ugly ; and besides, the Moor 20

May unfold me to him ; there stand I in much peril.

No, he must die. Be 't so. I hear him coming.

Enter CASSIO.

Rod. I know his gait, 'tis he. Villain, thou diest ! [Thrusts at Cassio.]

Cas. That thrust had been mine enemy indeed

But that my coat is better than thou know'st. 25

I will make proof of thine. [Draws, and wounds Roderigo.]

Rod. O, I am slain ! [Iago stabs Cassio from behind in the leg, and exit.]

Cas. I am maim'd for ever. Help, ho ! murder ! murder ! [Falls.]

Enter OTHELLO at a distance.

Oth. The voice of Cassio. Iago keeps his word.

Rod. O, villain that I am !

Oth. It is even so.

Cas. O, help, ho ! light ! a surgeon ! 30

Oth. 'Tis he. O brave Iago, honest and just,

That hast such noble sense of thy friend's wrong !

Thou teachest me—minion, your dear lies dead,

And your unblest fate hies. Strumpet, I come.

Forth of my heart those charms, thine eyes, are blotted ; 35

Thy bed, lust-stain'd, shall with lust's blood be spotted. [Exit.]

Enter LODOVICO and GRATIANO at a distance.

Cas. What, ho ! No watch ? No passage ?
Murder ! murder !

Gra. 'Tis some mischance ; the voice is very direful.

Cas. O, help !

Lod. Hark ! 40

Rod. O wretched villain !

Lod. Two or three groan. 'Tis heavy
night ;

These may be counterfeits ; let's think't unsafe

To come in to the cry without more help.

Rod. Nobody come ? Then shall I bleed to death. 45

Re-enter IAGO with a light.

Lod. Hark !

Gra. Here's one comes in his shirt, with light and weapons.

Iago. Who's there ? Whose noise is this that cries on murder ?

Lod. We do not know.

Iago. Did not you hear a cry ?

Cas. Here, here ! For heaven's sake, help me !

Iago. What's the matter ?

Gra. This is Othello's ancient, as I take it.

Lod. The same indeed ; a very valiant
fellow. 52

Iago. What are you here that cry so grievously ?

Cas. Iago ? O, I am spoil'd, undone by villains !

Give me some help. 55

Iago. O me, Lieutenant ! What villains have done this ?

Cas. I think that one of them is hereabout,

And cannot make away.

Iago. O treacherous villains !—

[To Lodovico and Gratiano] What are you there ? Come in, and give some help.

Rod. O, help me there ! 60

Cas. That's one of them.

Iago. O murd'rous slave ! O villain !
[Stabs Roderigo.]

Rod. O damn'd Iago ! O inhuman dog !

Iago. Kill men i' th' dark ! Where be these bloody thieves ?

How silent is this town ! Ho ! murder !
murder !

What may you be ? Are you of good or evil ? 65

Lod. As you shall prove us, praise us.

Iago. Signior Lodovico ?

Lod. He, sir.

Iago. I cry you mercy. Here's Cassio hurt by villains.

Gra. Cassio ! 70

Iago. How is't, brother ?

Cas. My leg is cut in two.

Iago. Marry, heaven forbid !

Light, gentlemen. I'll bind it with my shirt.

Enter BIANCA.

Bian. What is the matter, ho ? Who is't that cried ?

Iago. Who is't that cried ! 75

Bian. O my dear Cassio !

My sweet Cassio ! O Cassio, Cassio, Cassio !

Iago. O notable strumpet ! Cassio, may you suspect

Who they should be that have thus mangled you ?

Cas. No. 80

Gra. I am sorry to find you thus ; I have been to seek you.

Iago. Lend me a garter. So.

O, for a chair, to bear him easily hence !

Bian. Alas, he faints ! O Cassio, Cassio, Cassio !

Iago. Gentlemen all, I do suspect this trash 85

To be a party in this injury.

Patience awhile, good Cassio. Come,
come ;

Lend me a light. Know we this face or no ?
Alas, my friend and my dear countryman

Roderigo ? No—yes, sure ; O heaven !
Roderigo. 90

Gra. What, of Venice ?

Iago. Even he, sir ; did you know him ?

Gra. Know him ! Ay.

Iago. Signior Gratiano ? I cry your gentle
pardon ;

These bloody accidents must excuse my manners,

That so neglected you.

Gra. I am glad to see you. 95

Iago. How do you, Cassio ?—O, a chair, a chair !

Gra. Roderigo !

Iago. He, he, 'tis he. [A chair brought in.
O, that's well said ; the chair.

Some good man bear him carefully from
hence ;

I'll fetch the General's surgeon. [To Bianca]
For you, mistress, 100

Save you your labour.—He that lies slain
here, Cassio,

Was my dear friend. What malice was between you ?

Cas. None in the world ; nor do I know the man.

Iago. [To Bianca] What, look you
pale ?—O, bear him out o' th' air.

[Cassio and Roderigo are borne off.]
Stay you, good gentlemen.—Look you pale,
mistress ?— 105

Do you perceive the gastness of her eye ?—
Nay, an you stare, we shall hear more anon.—

Behold her well ; I pray you look upon her.
Do you see, gentlemen ? Nay, guiltiness will speak
Though tongues were out of use. 110

Enter EMILIA.

Emil. 'Las, what's the matter ? What's the matter, husband ?

Iago. Cassio hath here been set on in the dark

By Roderigo and fellows that are 'scap'd.
He's almost slain, and Roderigo quite dead.

Emil. Alas, good gentleman ! Alas, good
Cassio ! 115

Iago. This is the fruits of whoring.
Prithee, Emilia,

Go know of Cassio where he supp'd to-
night.—

What, do you shake at that ?

Bian. He supp'd at my house ; but I therefore shake not.

Iago. O, did he so ? I charge you go with me. 120

Emil. Fie, fie upon thee, strumpet !

Bian. I am no strumpet, but of life as honest

As you that thus abuse me.

Emil. As I ! Foh ! Fie upon thee !

Iago. Kind gentlemen, let's go see poor Cassio dress'd.—

Come, mistress, you must tell's another tale. 125

Emilia, run you to the citadel,

And tell my lord and lady what hath happ'd.

Will you go on afore ? [Aside] This is the
night

That either makes me or fordoes me quite.
[Exeunt.]

SCENE II. Cyprus. The citadel.

DESDEMONA in her bed. Enter OTHELLO with a light.

Oth. It is the cause, it is the cause, my soul—

Let me not name it to you, you chaste stars—

It is the cause. Yet I'll not shed her blood,
Nor scar that whiter skin of hers than snow,
And smooth as monumental alabaster. 5
Yet she must die, else she'll betray more
men.

Put out the light, and then put out the
light.

If I quench thee, thou flaming minister,
I can again thy former light restore,
Should I repent me ; but once put out thy light, 10

Thou cunning'st pattern of excelling
nature,

I know not where is that Promethean heat That can thy light relume. When I have pluck'd thy rose,

I cannot give it vital growth again ;
It needs must wither. I'll smell thee on the tree. [Kissing her. 15

O balmy breath, that dost almost persuade Justice to break her sword ! One more, one
more.

Be thus when thou art dead, and I will kill thee,

And love thee after. One more, and that's the last : 19

So sweet was ne'er so fatal. I must weep,
But they are cruel tears. This sorrow's heavenly ;

It strikes where it doth love. She wakes.

Des. Who's there ? Othello ?

Oth. Ay, Desdemona.

Des. Will you come to bed, my lord ?

Oth. Have you pray'd to-night, Desdemona ? 25

Des. Ay, my lord.

Oth. If you bethink yourself of any crime
Unreconcil'd as yet to heaven and grace,
Solicit for it straight.

Des. Alack, my lord,

What may you mean by that ? 30

Oth. Well, do it, and be brief ; I will walk by.

I would not kill thy unprepared spirit ;
No, heaven forfend !—I would not kill thy soul. 33

Des. Talk you of killing ?

Oth. Ay, I do.

Des. Then heaven

Have mercy on me !

Oth. Amen, with all my heart !

Des. If you say so, I hope you will not kill me.

Oth. Humh !

Des. And yet I fear you ; for you're fatal then 40

When your eyes roll so. Why I should fear
I know not,

Since guiltiness I know not ; but yet I feel
I fear.

Oth. Think on thy sins.

Des. They are loves I bear to you.

Oth. Ay, and for that thou diest.

Des. That death's unnatural that kills for loving. 45

Alas, why gnaw you so your nether lip ?
Some bloody passion shakes your very frame.

These are portents ; but yet I hope, I hope,
They do not point on me.

Oth. Peace, and be still.

Des. I will so. What's the matter ? 50

Oth. That handkerchief which I so lov'd and gave thee

Thou gav'st to Cassio.

Des. No, by my life and soul !
Send for the man and ask him.

Oth. Sweet soul, take heed, Take heed of perjury ; thou art on thy death-bed.

Des. Ay, but not yet to die.
 Oth. Yes, presently. 55
 Therefore confess thee freely of thy sin ;
 For to deny each article with oath
 Cannot remove nor choke the strong conception
 That I do groan withal. Thou art to die. 59
 Des. Then, Lord have mercy on me !
 Oth. I say, amen.
 Des. And have you mercy too ! I never did Offend you in my life ; never lov'd Cassio
 But with such general warranty of heaven
 As I might love. I never gave him token.
 Oth. By heaven, I saw my handkerchief in's hand. 65
 O perjur'd woman ! thou dost stone my
 heart,
 And mak'st me call what I intend to do
 A murder, which I thought a sacrifice.
 I saw the handkerchief.
 Des. He found it, then ;
 I never gave it him. Send for him hither ;
 Let him confess a truth.
 Oth. He hath confess'd. 71
 Des. What, my lord ?
 Oth. That he hath—ud's death !—
 us'd thee.
 Des. How ? unlawfully ?
 Oth. Ay.
 Des. He will not say so.
 Oth. No, his mouth is stopp'd ;
 Honest Iago hath ta'en order for't. 76 Des. O, my fear interprets ! What, is he
 dead ?
 Oth. Had all his hairs been lives, my great revenge
 Had stomach for them all. 79
 Des. Alas, he is betray'd, and I undone !
 Oth. Out, strumpet ! Weep'st thou for him to my face ?
 Des. O, banish me, my lord, but kill me
 not !
 Oth. Down, strumpet.
 Des. Kill me to-morrow ; let me live to-
 night.
 Oth. Nay, an you strive— 85
 Des. But half an hour !
 Oth. Being done, there is no pause.
 Des. But while I say one prayer !
 Oth. It is too late. [Smothers her.
 Des. O Lord, Lord, Lord !
 Emil. [Within] My lord, my lord !
 what, ho ! my lord, my lord !
 Oth. What voice is this ? Not dead ? not yet quite dead ?
 I that am cruel am yet merciful ; 90
 I would not have thee linger in thy pain.
 So, so.
 Emil. [Within] What, ho ! my lord, my
 lord !
 Oth. Who's there ?
 Emil. [Within] O, good my lord, I'd speak a word with you !

Oth. Yes—'tis Emilia—by and by. She's
 dead.
 'Tis like she comes to speak of Cassio's
 death ; 95
 The noise was high. Ha ! no more moving ?
 Still as the grave. Shall she come in ?
 Were't good ?
 I think she stirs again. No. What's the best ?
 If she come in she'll sure speak to my wife.
 My wife ! my wife ! what wife ? I have no
 wife. 100
 O insupportable ! O heavy hour !
 Methinks it should be now a huge eclipse
 Of sun and moon, and that th' affrighted globe
 Did yawn at alteration.
 Emil. [Within] I do beseech you that I may speak with you. O good my
 lord ! 105
 Oth. I had forgot thee : O, come in,
 Emilia.
 Soft, by and by. Let me the curtains draw.
 Where art thou ? [Unlocks the door.
 Enter EMILIA.
 What's the matter with thee now ?
 Emil. O, my good lord, yonder's foul murders done !
 Oth. What, now ? 110
 Emil. But now, my lord.
 Oth. It is the very error of the moon ;
 She comes more nearer earth than she was wont,
 And makes men mad.
 Emil. Cassio, my lord, hath kill'd a young Venetian 115
 Call'd Roderigo.
 Oth. Roderigo kill'd !
 And Cassio kill'd !
 Emil. No, Cassio, is not kill'd.
 Oth. Not Cassio kill'd ! Then murder's out of tune,
 And sweet revenge grows harsh.
 Des. O, falsely, falsely murder'd !
 Emil. O Lord, what cry is that ?
 Oth. That ! what ? 121
 Emil. Out and alas ! that was my lady's voice.
 Help ! help, ho ! help ! O lady, speak
 again !
 Sweet Desdemona ! O sweet mistress,
 speak !
 Des. A guiltless death I die. 125
 Emil. O, who hath done this deed ?
 Des. Nobody. I myself. Farewell.
 Commend me to my kind lord. O, farewell !
 [She dies.
 Oth. Why, how should she be murd' red ?
 Emil. Alas, who knows ?
 Oth. You heard her say herself it was not I. 130
 Emil. She said so. I must needs report a truth.

Oth. She's like a liar gone to burning hell:
'Twas I that kill'd her.
Emil. O, the more angel she,
And you the blacker devil!
Oth. She turn'd to folly, and she was a whore. 135
Emil. Thou dost belie her, and thou art a devil.
Oth. She was false as water.
Emil. Thou art rash as fire to say
That she was false. O, she was heavenly true!
Oth. Cassio did top her; ask thy husband else. 139
O, I were damn'd beneath all depth in hell
But that I did proceed upon just grounds
To this extremity. Thy husband knew it all.
Emil. My husband!
Oth. Thy husband.
Emil. That she was false to wedlock? 145
Oth. Ay, with Cassio. Nay, had she been true,
If heaven would make me such another world
Of one entire and perfect chrysolite,
I'd not have sold her for it.
Emil. My husband!
Oth. Ay, 'twas he that told me on her first. 150
An honest man he is, and hates the slime
That sticks on filthy deeds.
Emil. My husband!
Oth. What needs this iteration, woman?
I say thy husband.
Emil. O mistress, villainy hath made mocks with love!
My husband say that she was false!
Oth. He, woman; 155
I say thy husband; dost understand the word?
My friend, thy husband—honest, honest Iago.
Emil. If he say so, may his pernicious soul
Rot half a grain a day! He lies to th' heart.
She was too fond of her most filthy bargain.
Oth. Ha! 161
Emil. Do thy worst:
This deed of thine is no more worthy heaven
Than thou wast worthy her.
Oth. Peace, you were best.
Emil. Thou hast not half that power to do me harm 165
As I have to be hurt. O gull! O dolt!
As ignorant as dirt! Thou hast done a deed—
I care not for thy sword; I'll make thee known,
Though I lost twenty lives. Help! help, ho! help!

The Moor hath kill'd my mistress! Murder! murder! 170
Enter MONTANO, GRATIANO, IAGO, and Others.
Mon. What is the matter? How now, General!
Emil. O, are you come, Iago? You have done well,
That men must lay their murders on your neck.
Gra. What is the matter?
Emil. Disprove this villain, if thou be'st a man: 175
He says thou told'st him that his wife was false.
I know thou didst not; thou'rt not such a villain.
Speak, for my heart is full.
Iago. I told him what I thought, and told no more Than what he found himself was apt and true. 180
Emil. But did you ever tell him she was false?
Iago. I did.
Emil. You told a lie—an odious, damned lie.
Upon my soul, a lie—a wicked lie.
She false with Cassio! Did you say with Cassio? 185
Iago. With Cassio, mistress. Go to, charm your tongue.
Emil. I will not charm my tongue; I am bound to speak:
My mistress here lies murdered in her bed.
All. O heavens forfend!
Emil. And your reports have set the murder on. 190
Oth. Nay, stare not, masters: it is true, indeed.
Gra. 'Tis a strange truth.
Mon. O monstrous act!
Emil. Villainy, villainy, villainy!
I think upon't. I think—I smell't. O villainy!
I thought so then. I'll kill myself for grief. 195
O villainy, villainy!
Iago. What, are you mad? I charge you get you home.
Emil. Good gentlemen, let me have leave to speak.
'Tis proper I obey him, but not now.
Perchance, Iago, I will ne'er go home. 200
Oth. O! O! O! [Falls on the bed.]
Emil. Nay, lay thee down and roar;
For thou hast kill'd the sweetest innocent
That e'er did lift up eye.
Oth. [Rising] O, she was foul!
I scarce did know you, uncle. There lies your niece,
Whose breath indeed these hands have newly stopp'd. 205

I know this act shows horrible and grim.

Gra. Poor Desdemona! I am glad thy father's dead.

Thy match was mortal to him, and pure grief

Shore his old thread atwain. Did he live now,

This sight would make him do a desperate turn,

Yea, curse his better angel from his side, And fall to reprobance.

Oth. 'Tis pitiful; but yet Iago knows That she with Cassio hath the act of shame A thousand times committed; Cassio confess'd it;

And she did gratify his amorous works With that recognizance and pledge of love Which I first gave her; I saw it in his hand.

It was a handkerchief, an antique token My father gave my mother.

Emil. O God! O heavenly God!

Iago. Zounds, hold your peace.

Emil. 'Twill out, 'twill out. I, peace! No, I will speak as liberal as the north. Let heaven and men and devils, let them all, All, all, cry shame against me, yet I'll speak.

Iago. Be wise, and get you home.

Emil. I will not.

[Iago offers to stab his wife.]

Gra. Fie! Your sword upon a woman?

Emil. O thou dull Moor! That handkerchief thou speak'st of

I found by fortune, and did give my husband;

For often with a solemn earnestness— More than indeed belong'd to such a trifle— He begg'd of me to steal it.

Iago. Villainous whore!

Emil. She gave it Cassio! No, alas, I found it,

And I did give't my husband.

Iago. Filth, thou liest.

Emil. By heaven, I do not, I do not, gentlemen.

O murderous coxcomb! What should such a fool

Do with so good a wife? [The Moor runs at Iago; Montano and others disarm the Moor. Iago kills his wife and escapes.]

Oth. Are there no stones in heaven but what serves for the thunder? Precious villain!

Gra. The woman falls; sure he hath kill'd his wife.

Emil. Ay, ay. O, lay me by my mistress' side.

Gra. He's gone, but his wife's kill'd.

Mon. 'Tis a notorious villain. Take you this weapon,

Which I have here recover'd from the Moor. Come, guard the door without; let him not pass,

But kill him rather. I'll after that same villain,

For 'tis a damned slave.

[Exeunt Montano, Gratiano, and others.]

Oth. I am not valiant neither—

But every puny whipster gets my sword. But why should honour outlive honesty? Let it go all.

Emil. What did thy song bode, lady?

Hark, canst thou hear me? I will play the swan,

And die in music. [Sings] Willow, willow, willow.—

Moor, she was chaste; she lov'd thee, cruel Moor;

So come my soul to bliss, as I speak true; So speaking as I think, alas, I die.

[She dies.]

Oth. I have another weapon in this chamber;

It was a sword of Spain, the ice-brook's temper.

O, here it is. Uncle, I must come forth.

Gra. [Within] If thou attempt it, it will cost thee dear;

Thou hast no weapon, and perforce must suffer.

Oth. Look in upon me, then, and speak with me,

Or, naked as I am, I will assault thee.

Re-enter GRATIANO.

Gra. What is the matter?

Oth. Behold, I have a weapon; A better never did itself sustain Upon a soldier's thigh. I have seen the day That with this little arm and this good sword

I have made my way through more impediments

Than twenty times your stop. But, O vain boast!

Who can control his fate? 'Tis not so now. Be not afraid though you do see me weapon'd;

Here is my journey's end, here is my butt, And very sea-mark of my utmost sail.

Do you go back dismay'd? 'Tis a lost fear; Man but a rush against Othello's breast, And he retires. Where should Othello go? Now, how dost thou look now? O ill-starr'd wench!

Pale as thy smock! When we shall meet at compt,

This look of thine will hurl my soul from heaven,

And fiends will snatch at it. Cold, cold, my girl!

Even like thy chastity. O cursed, cursed slave!

Whip me, ye devils, From the possession of this heavenly sight.

Blow me about in winds, roast me in sulphur,

Wash me in steep-down gulfs of liquid fire.
O Desdemona! Dead! Desdemona! Dead!
O! O!

285

Enter LODOVICO, MONTANO, CASSIO carried in a chair, and Officers, with IAGO prisoner.

Lod. Where is this rash and most unfortunate man?

Oth. That's he that was Othello—here
I am.

Lod. Where is that viper? Bring the villain forth.

Oth. I look down towards his feet—but that's a fable.

289

If that thou be'st a devil, I cannot kill thee.
[Wounds Iago.]

Lod. Wrench his sword from him.

Iago. I bleed, sir; but not kill'd.

Oth. I am not sorry neither: I'd have thee live;

For, in my sense, 'tis happiness to die.

Lod. O thou Othello, that was once so good,

Fall'n in the practice of a damned slave, 295
What shall be said to thee?

Oth. Why, any thing:
An honourable murderer, if you will;

For nought I did in hate, but all in honour.

Lod. This wretch hath part confess'd his villainy.

299

Did you and he consent in Cassio's death?

Oth. Ay.

Cas. Dear General, I never gave you
cause.

Oth. I do believe it, and I ask your pardon.

Will you, I pray, demand that demi-devil
Why he hath thus ensnar'd my soul and body?

305

Iago. Demand me nothing. What you know, you know.

From this time forth I never will speak
word.

Lod. What, not to pray?

Gra. Torments will ope your lips.

Oth. Well, thou dost best.

Lod. Sir, you shall understand what hath befall'n,

310

Which, as I think, you know not. Here is a letter

Found in the pocket of the slain Roderigo;
And here another: the one of them
imports

The death of Cassio to be undertook
By Roderigo.

315

Oth. O villain!

Cas. Most heathenish and most gross!

Lod. Now here's another discontented paper,

Found in his pocket too; and this, it seems,
Roderigo meant t' have sent this damned
villain;

But that, belike, Iago in the nick
Came in and satisfied him.

320

Oth. O thou pernicious caitiff!
How came you, Cassio, by that handkerchief

That was my wife's?

Cas. I found it in my chamber;
And he himself confess'd it even now

That there he dropp'd it for a special purpose

325

Which wrought to his desire.

Oth. O fool! fool! fool!

Cas. There is besides in Roderigo's letter,
How he upbraids Iago that he made him

Brave me upon the watch; whereon it came

That I was cast; and even but now he spake,

330

After long seeming dead, Iago hurt him,

Iago set him on.

Lod. You must forsake this room and go
with us.

Your power and your command is taken off,
And Cassio rules in Cyprus. For this slave,

If there be any cunning cruelty 336
That can torment him much and hold him

long,

It shall be his. You shall close prisoner rest
Till that the nature of your fault be known

To the Venetian state. Come, bring away.

Oth. Soft you; a word or two before you go.

341

I have done the state some service, and they know't—

No more of that. I pray you, in your letters,

When you shall these unlucky deeds relate,
Speak of me as I am; nothing extenuate,

Nor set down aught in malice. Then must you speak

346

Of one that lov'd not wisely, but too well;
Of one not easily jealous, but, being

wrought,

Perplexed in the extreme; of one whose
hand,

349

Like the base Indian, threw a pearl away Richer than all his tribe; of one whose subdu'd eyes,

Albeit unused to the melting mood,

Drops tears as fast as the Arabian trees

Their med'cinable gum. Set you down this:
And say besides that in Aleppo once, 355

Where a malignant and a turban'd Turk
Beat a Venetian and traduc'd the state,

I took by th' throat the circumcised dog,
And smote him—thus. [He stabs himself.]

Lod. O bloody period!

Gra. All that is spoke is marr'd. 360

Oth. I kiss'd thee ere I kill'd thee. No way but this—

Killing my self, to die upon a kiss.

[Falls on the bed and dies.]

Cas. This did I fear, but thought he had no weapon;

For he was great of heart.

Lod. [To Iago] O Spartan dog,

More fell than anguish, hunger, or the sea !
 Look on the tragic loading of this bed. ³⁶⁶
 This is thy work.—The object poisons
 sight ;
 Let it be hid. Gratiano, keep the house,
 And seize upon the fortunes of the Moor,
 For they succeed on you. To you, Lord
 Governor, 370

Remains the censure of this hellish
 villain ;
 The time, the place, the torture—O, enforce
 it !
 Myself will straight aboard ; and to the
 state
 This heavy act with heavy heart relate.
[Exeunt.]

THE SCENE : The Roman Empire.

ACT ONE

SCENE I. Alexandria. Cleopatra's palace.

Enter DEMETRIUS and PHILO.

Phi. Nay, but this dotage of our general's O'erflows the measure. Those his goodly
eyes,

That o'er the files and musters of the war
Have glow'd like plated Mars, now bend,
now turn,

The office and devotion of their view 5
Upon a tawny front. His captain's heart, Which in the scuffles of great fights hath burst

The buckles on his breast, reneges all temper,

And is become the bellows and the fan
To cool a gipsy's lust.

*Flourish. Enter ANTONY, CLEOPATRA, her Ladies, the Train, with Eunuchs fanning
her.*

Look where they come !

Take but good note, and you shall see in
him 11

The triple pillar of the world transform'd
Into a strumpet's fool. Behold and see.

Cleo. If it be love indeed, tell me how much.

Ant. There's beggary in the love that can be reckon'd. 15

Cleo. I'll set a bourn how far to be belov'd.

Ant. Then must thou needs find out new heaven, new earth.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. News, my good lord, from Rome.

Ant. Grates me the sum.

Cleo. Nay, hear them, Antony. 19

Fulvia perchance is angry ; or who knows
If the scarce-bearded Cæsar have not sent His pow'rful mandate to you : ' Do this or this ;

Take in that kingdom and enfranchise that ;
Perform't, or else we damn thee '.

Ant. How, my love ?

Cleo. Perchance ? Nay, and most like, 25
You must not stay here longer ; your dismission

Is come from Cæsar ; therefore hear it,
Antony.

Where's Fulvia's process ? Cæsar's I would say ? Both ?

Call in the messengers. As I am Egypt's
Queen,

Thou blushest, Antony, and that blood of
thine 30

Is Cæsar's homager. Else so thy cheek pays shame

When shrill-tongu'd Fulvia scolds. The messengers !

Ant. Let Rome in Tiber melt, and the wide arch

Of the rang'd empire fall ! Here is my space. 34

Kingdoms are clay ; our dungy earth alike

Feeds beast as man. The nobleness of life Is to do thus [embracing], when such a mutual pair
And such a twain can do't, in which I bind,

On pain of punishment, the world to weet
We stand up peerless.

Cleo. Excellent falsehood! 40
Why did he marry Fulvia, and not love her?
I'll seem the fool I am not. Antony
Will be himself.

Ant. But stirr'd by Cleopatra.
Now for the love of Love and her soft
hours,

Let's not confound the time with conference harsh; 45

There's not a minute of our lives should stretch

Without some pleasure now. What sport
to-night?

Cleo. Hear the ambassadors.

Ant. Fie, wrangling queen!
Whom everything becomes—to chide, to
laugh, 49

To weep; whose every passion fully strives
To make itself in thee fair and admir'd.
No messenger but thine, and all alone
To-night we'll wander through the streets and note

The qualities of people. Come, my queen;
Last night you did desire it. Speak not to us. 55

[Exeunt Antony and Cleopatra, with the Train.]

Dem. Is Cæsar with Antonius priz'd so slight?

Phi. Sir, sometimes when he is not
Antony,

He comes too short of that great property
Which still should go with Antony.

Dem. I am full sorry
That he approves the common liar, who 60 Thus speaks of him at Rome; but I will hope

Of better deeds to-morrow. Rest you happy! [Exeunt.]

SCENE II. Alexandria. Cleopatra's palace.

Enter CHARMIAN, IRAS, ALEXAS, and a Soothsayer.

Char. Lord Alexas, sweet Alexas, most anything Alexas, almost most absolute Alexas, where's the soothsayer that you prais'd so to th' Queen? O that I knew this husband, which you say must charge his horns with garlands! 5

Alex. Soothsayer!

Sooth. Your will?

Char. Is this the man? Is't you, sir, that know things?

Sooth. In nature's infinite book of secrecy
A little I can read.

Alex. Show him your hand. 10

Enter ENOBARBUS.

Eno. Bring in the banquet quickly;
wine enough

Cleopatra's health to drink.

Char. Good sir, give me good fortune.

Sooth. I make not, but foresee.

Char. Pray, then, foresee me one. 15

Sooth. You shall be yet far fairer than you are.

Char. He means in flesh.

Iras. No, you shall paint when you are old.

Char. Wrinkles forbid!

Alex. Vex not his prescience; be attentive. 20

Char. Hush!

Sooth. You shall be more believing than beloved.

Char. I had rather heat my liver with drinking.

Alex. Nay, hear him. 24

Char. Good now, some excellent fortune!
Let me be married to three kings in a forenoon, and widow them all. Let me have a child at fifty, to whom Herod of Jewry may do homage. Find me to marry me with Octavius Cæsar, and companion me with my mistress.

Sooth. You shall outlive the lady whom you serve. 30

Char. O, excellent! I love long life better than figs.

Sooth. You have seen and prov'd a fairer former fortune

Than that which is to approach.

Char. Then belike my children shall have no names. Prithee, how many boys and wenches must I have? 35

Sooth. If every of your wishes had a womb,

And fertile every wish, a million.

Char. Out, fool! I forgive thee for a witch.

Alex. You think none but your sheets are privy to your wishes. 40

Char. Nay, come, tell Iras hers.

Alex. We'll know all our fortunes.

Eno. Mine, and most of our fortunes, to-night, shall be—drunk to bed.

Iras. There's a palm presages chastity, if nothing else. 45

Char. E'en as the o'erflowing Nilus presageth famine.

Iras. Go, you wild bedfellow, you cannot soothsay.

Char. Nay, if an oily palm be not a fruitful prognostication, I cannot scratch mine ear. Prithee, tell her but a worky-day
fortune. 50

Sooth. Your fortunes are alike.

Iras. But how, but how? Give me particulars.

Sooth. I have said.

Iras. Am I not an inch of fortune better than she ?
Char. Well, if you were but an inch of fortune better than I, where would you choose it ? 56
Iras. Not in my husband's nose.
Char. Our worse thoughts heavens mend ! Alexas—come, his fortune, his fortune ! O, let him marry a woman that cannot go, sweet Isis, I beseech thee ! And let her die too, and give him a worse ! And let worse follow worse, till the worst of all follow him laughing to his grave, fiftyfold a cuckold ! Good Isis, hear me this prayer, though thou deny me a matter of more weight ; good Isis, I beseech thee ! 64 Iras. Amen. Dear goddess, hear that prayer of the people ! For, as it is a heart-breaking to see a handsome man loose-wiv'd, so it is a deadly sorrow to behold a foul knave uncuckolded. Therefore, dear Isis, keep decorum, and fortune him accordingly !
Char. Amen. 70
Alex. Lo now, if it lay in their hands to make me a cuckold, they would make themselves whores but they'd do't !

Enter CLEOPATRA.
Eno. Hush ! Here comes Antony.
Char. Not he ; the Queen.
Cleo. Saw you my lord ?
Eno. No, lady.
Cleo. Was he not there ?
Char. No, madam.
Cleo. He was dispos'd to mirth ; but on the sudden
A Roman thought hath struck him. Eno-barbus ! 80
Eno. Madam ?
Cleo. Seek him, and bring him hither. Where's Alexas ?
Alex. Here, at your service. My lord approaches.

Enter ANTONY, with a Messenger and Attendants.
Cleo. We will not look upon him. Go with us. [Exeunt Cleopatra, Eno- barbus, and the rest.
Mess. Fulvia thy wife first came into the field. 85
Ant. Against my brother Lucius ?
Mess. Ay.
But soon that war had end, and the time's state
Made friends of them, jointing their force 'gainst Cæsar, Whose better issue in the war from Italy 90
Upon the first encounter drave them.
Ant. Well, what worst ?
Mess. The nature of bad news infects the teller.

Ant. When it concerns the fool or coward. On !
Things that are past are done with me. 'Tis thus :
Who tells me true, though in his tale lie death, 93
I hear him as he flatter'd.
Mess. Labienus—
This is stiff news—hath with his Parthian force
Extended Asia from Euphrates,
His conquering banner shook from Syria
To Lydia and to Ionia, 100
Whilst—
Ant. Antony, thou wouldst say.
Mess. O, my lord !
Ant. Speak to me home ; mince not the general tongue ;
Name Cleopatra as she is call'd in Rome.
Rail thou in Fulvia's phrase, and taunt my faults
With such full licence as both truth and malice 105
Have power to utter. O, then we bring forth weeds
When our quick minds lie still, and our ills told us
Is as our earring. Fare thee well awhile.
Mess. At your noble pleasure. [Exit.
Ant. From Sicyon, ho, the news ! Speak there ! 110
1 Att. The man from Sicyon—is there such an one ?
2 Att. He stays upon your will.
Ant. Let him appear.
These strong Egyptian fetters I must break,
Or lose myself in dotage.

Enter another Messenger with a letter.
What are you ?
2 Mess. Fulvia thy wife is dead.
Ant. Where died she ?
2 Mess. In Sicyon. 116
Her length of sickness, with what else more serious
Importeth thee to know, this bears.
[Gives the letter.
Ant. Forbear me.
[Exit Messenger.
There's a great spirit gone ! Thus did I desire it.
What our contempts doth often hurl from us 120
We wish it ours again ; the present pleasure,
By revolution low'ring, does become
The opposite of itself. She's good, being gone ;
The hand could pluck her back that shov'd her on.
I must from this enchanting queen break off. 125
Ten thousand harms, more than the ills I know,

My idleness doth hatch. How now,
Enobarbus!

Re-enter ENOBARBUS.

Eno. What's your pleasure, sir?

Ant. I must with haste from hence.

Eno. Why, then we kill all our women.
We see how mortal an unkindness is to them; if they suffer our departure, death's the word. 132

Ant. I must be gone.

Eno. Under a compelling occasion, let women die. It were pity to cast them away for nothing, though between them and a great cause they should be esteemed nothing.
Cleopatra, catching but the least noise of this, dies instantly; I have seen her die twenty times upon far poorer moment. I do think there is mettle in death, which commits some loving act upon her, she hath such a celerity in dying. 140

Ant. She is cunning past man's thought.

Eno. Alack, sir, no! Her passions are made of nothing but the finest part of pure love. We cannot call her winds and waters sighs and tears; they are greater storms and tempests than almanacs can report.
This cannot be cunning in her; if it be, she makes a show'r of rain as well as Jove.

Ant. Would I had never seen her! 147

Eno. O sir, you had then left unseen a wonderful piece of work, which not to have been blest withal would have discredited your travel. 150

Ant. Fulvia is dead.

Eno. Sir?

Ant. Fulvia is dead.

Eno. Fulvia?

Ant. Dead. 155

Eno. Why, sir, give the gods a thankful sacrifice. When it pleaseth their deities to take the wife of a man from him, it shows to man the tailors of the earth; comforting therein that when old robes are worn out there are members to make new. If there were no more women but Fulvia, then had you indeed a cut, and the case to be lamented. This grief is crown'd with consolation:
your old smock brings forth a new petticoat; and indeed the tears live in an onion that should water this sorrow.

Ant. The business she hath broached in the state 165

Cannot endure my absence.

Eno. And the business you have broach'd here cannot be without you; especially that of Cleopatra's, which wholly depends on your abode.

Ant. No more light answers. Let our officers 170

Have notice what we purpose. I shall break

The cause of our expedience to the Queen,
And get her leave to part. For not alone

1158

The death of Fulvia, with more urgent touches,

Do strongly speak to us; but the letters
too 175

Of many our contriving friends in Rome
Petition us at home. Sextus Pompeius
Hath given the dare to Cæsar, and commands

The empire of the sea; our slippery people,
Whose love is never link'd to the deserver
Till his deserts are past, begin to throw Pompey the Great and all his dignities 182 Upon his son; who, high in name and

power,
Higher than both in blood and life, stands
up

For the main soldier; whose quality, going
on, 185

The sides o' th' world may danger. Much is breeding

Which, like the courser's hair, hath yet but
life

And not a serpent's poison. Say our
pleasure,

To such whose place is under us, requires
Our quick remove from hence. 190

Eno. I shall do't. [Exeunt.

SCENE III. Alexandria. Cleopatra's palace.

Enter CLEOPATRA, CHARMIAN, IRAS, and ALEXAS.

Cleo. Where is he?

Char. I did not see him since.

Cleo. See where he is, who's with him, what he does.

I did not send you. If you find him sad,
Say I am dancing; if in mirth, report

That I am sudden sick. Quick, and return.
[Exit Alexas.

Char. Madam, methinks, if you did love him dearly, 6

You do not hold the method to enforce
The like from him.

Cleo. What should I do I do not?

Char. In each thing give him way; cross him in nothing.

Cleo. Thou teachest like a fool—the way to lose him. 10

Char. Tempt him not so too far; I wish,
forbear;

In time we hate that which we often fear.

Enter ANTONY.

But here comes Antony.

Cleo. I am sick and sullen.

Ant. I am sorry to give breathing to my purpose—

Cleo. Help me away, dear Charmian; I shall fall. 15

It cannot be thus long; the sides of nature
Will not sustain it.

Ant. Now, my dearest queen—

Cleo. Pray you, stand farther from me.

Ant. What's the matter ?
Cleo. I know by that same eye there's some good news.
What says the married woman ? You may
go. 20
Would she had never given you leave to
come !
Let her not say 'tis I that keep you here—
I have no power upon you ; hers you
are.
Ant. The gods best know—
Cleo. O, never was there queen
So mightily betray'd ! Yet at the first 25
I saw the treasons planted.
Ant. Cleopatra—
Cleo. Why should I think you can be mine and true,
Though you in swearing shake the throned
gods,
Who have been false to Fulvia ? Riotous
madness,
To be entangled with those mouth-made
vows, 30
Which break themselves in swearing !
Ant. Most sweet queen—Cleo. Nay, pray you seek no colour for your going,
But bid farewell, and go. When you sued staying,
Then was the time for words. No going
then !
Eternity was in our lips and eyes, 35
Bliss in our brows' bent, none our parts so poor
But was a race of heaven. They are so still,
Or thou, the greatest soldier of the world,
Art turn'd the greatest liar.
Ant. How now, lady !
Cleo. I would I had thy inches. Thou shouldst know 40
There were a heart in Egypt.
Ant. Hear me, Queen :
The strong necessity of time commands
Our services awhile ; but my full heart
Remains in use with you. Our Italy Shines o'er with civil swords : Sextus
Pompeius 45
Makes his approaches to the port of Rome ;
Equality of two domestic powers Breed scrupulous faction ; the hated, grown to strength,
Are newly grown to love. The condemn'd
Pompey,
Rich in his father's honour, creeps apace 50
Into the hearts of such as have not thrived
Upon the present state, whose numbers threaten ;
And quietness, grown sick of rest, would purge
By any desperate change. My more particular,
And that which most with you should safe
my going, 55
Is Fulvia's death.

Cleo. Though age from folly could not give me freedom,
It does from childishness. Can Fulvia die ?
Ant. She's dead, my queen. 59
Look here, and at thy sovereign leisure read
The garboils she awak'd. At the last, best.
See when and where she died.
Cleo. O most false love !
Where be the sacred vials thou shouldst fill With sorrowful water ? Now I see, I see,
In Fulvia's death how mine receiv'd shall
be. 65
Ant. Quarrel no more, but be prepar'd to
know
The purposes I bear ; which are, or cease,
As you shall give th' advice. By the fire
That quickens Nilus' slime, I go from hence Thy soldier, servant, making peace or war
As thou affects.
Cleo. Cut my lace, Charmian, come !
But let it be ; I am quickly ill and well—
So Antony loves.
Ant. My precious queen, forbear,
And give true evidence to his love, which stands
An honourable trial.
Cleo. So Fulvia told me. 75
I prithee turn aside and weep for her ;
Then bid adieu to me, and say the tears
Belong to Egypt. Good now, play one scene
Of excellent dissembling, and let it look Like perfect honour.
Ant. You'll heat my blood ; no more.
Cleo. You can do better yet ; but this is meetly. 81
Ant. Now, by my sword—
Cleo. And target. Still he mends ;
But this is not the best. Look, prithee,
Charmian,
How this Herculean Roman does become
The carriage of his chafe. 85
Ant. I'll leave you, lady.
Cleo. Courteous lord, one word.
Sir, you and I must part—but that's not it.
Sir, you and I have lov'd—but there's not it.
That you know well. Something it is I would—
O, my oblivion is a very Antony, 90
And I am all forgotten !
Ant. But that your royalty Holds idleness your subject, I should take
you
For idleness itself.
Cleo. 'Tis sweating labour
To bear such idleness so near the heart
As Cleopatra this. But, sir, forgive me ; 95
Since my becoming kill me when they do
not Eye well to you. Your honour calls you
hence ;
Therefore be deaf to my unpitied folly,
And all the gods go with you ! Upon your sword

Sit laurel victory, and smooth success 100
Be strew'd before your feet !

Ant. Let us go. Come.
Our separation so abides and flies
That thou, residing here, goes yet with
me,
And I, hence fleeting, here remain with
thee.
Away ! [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV. Rome. Cæsar's house.

Enter OCTAVIUS CÆSAR, reading a letter ; LEPIDUS, and their Train.

Cæs. You may see, Lepidus, and henceforth know,
It is not Cæsar's natural vice to hate
Our great competitor. From Alexandria
This is the news : he fishes, drinks, and wastes
The lamps of night in revel ; is not more manlike 5
Than Cleopatra, nor the queen of Ptolemy More womanly than he ; hardly gave audience, or Vouchsaf'd to think he had partners. You shall find there
A man who is the abstract of all faults 9
That all men follow.

Lep. I must not think there are Evils enow to darken all his goodness.
His faults, in him, seem as the spots of
heaven,
More fiery by night's blackness ; hereditary Rather than purchas'd ; what he cannot change
Than what he chooses. 15

Cæs. You are too indulgent. Let's grant it is not
Amisss to tumble on the bed of Ptolemy,
To give a kingdom for a mirth, to sit
And keep the turn of tippling with a slave,
To reel the streets at noon, and stand the buffet 20
With knaves that smell of sweat. Say this becomes him—

As his composure must be rare indeed Whom these things cannot blemish—yet must Antony

No way excuse his foils when we do bear
So great weight in his lightness. If he fill'd 25

His vacancy with his voluptuousness,
Full surfeits and the dryness of his bones Call on him for't ! But to confound such
time

That drums him from his sport and speaks
as loud

As his own state and ours—'tis to be chid
As we rate boys who, being mature in knowledge, 31

Pawn their experience to their present
pleasure,

And so rebel to judgment.

Enter a Messenger.

Lep. Here's more news.

Mess. Thy biddings have been done ; and every hour, 34
Most noble Cæsar, shalt thou have report
How 'tis abroad. Pompey is strong at sea,
And it appears he is belov'd of those That only have fear'd Cæsar. To the ports
The discontents repair, and men's reports
Give him much wrong'd.

Cæs. I should have known no less. 40
It hath been taught us from the primal
state

That he which is was wish'd until he were ;
And the ebb'd man, ne'er lov'd till ne'er worth love,
Comes dear'd by being lack'd. This common body,

Like to a vagabond flag upon the stream,
Goes to and back, lackeying the varying tide, 46

To rot itself with motion.

Mess. Cæsar, I bring thee word
Menecrates and Menas, famous pirates,
Make the sea serve them, which they ear and wound 49

With keels of every kind. Many hot inroads
They make in Italy ; the borders maritime Lack blood to think on't, and flush youth revolt.

No vessel can peep forth but 'tis as soon Taken as seen ; for Pompey's name strikes
more

Than could his war resisted.

Cæs. Antony, 55
Leave thy lascivious wassails. When thou
once

Was beaten from Modena, where thou slew'st

Hirtius and Pansa, consuls, at thy heel Did famine follow ; whom thou fought'st against,

Though daintily brought up, with patience
more 60

Than savages could suffer. Thou didst
drink

The stale of horses and the gilded puddle Which beasts would cough at. Thy palate then did deign

The roughest berry on the rudest hedge ;
Yea, like the stag when snow the pasture sheets, 65

The barks of trees thou brows'd. On the Alps

It is reported thou didst eat strange flesh,
Which some did die to look on. And all
this—

It wounds thine honour that I speak it
now— 69

Was borne so like a soldier that thy cheek
So much as lank'd not.

Lep. 'Tis pity of him.

Cæs. Let his shames quickly

Drive him to Rome. 'Tis time we twain Did show ourselves i' th' field; and to that end 74

Assemble we immediate council. Pompey Thrives in our idleness.

Lep. To-morrow, Cæsar,
I shall be furnish'd to inform you rightly Both what by sea and land I can be able To front this present time.

Cæs. Till which encounter
It is my business too. Farewell. 80

Lep. Farewell, my lord. What you shall know meantime

Of stirs abroad, I shall beseech you, sir,
To let me be partaker.

Cæs. Doubt not, sir;
I knew it for my bond. [Exeunt.]

SCENE V. Alexandria. Cleopatra's
palace.

Enter CLEOPATRA, CHARMIAN, IRAS, and MARDIAN.

Cleo. Charmian!

Char. Madam?

Cleo. Ha, ha!

Give me to drink mandragora.

Char. Why, madam?

Cleo. That I might sleep out this great gap of time 5

My Antony is away.

Char. You think of him too much.

Cleo. O, 'tis treason!

Char. Madam, I trust, not so.

Cleo. Thou, eunuch Mardian!

Mar. What's your Highness' pleasure?

Cleo. Not now to hear thee sing; I take no pleasure

In aught an eunuch has. 'Tis well for
thee 10

That, being unseminar'd, thy freer thoughts
May not fly forth of Egypt. Hast thou affections?

Mar. Yes, gracious madam.

Cleo. Indeed?

Mar. Not in deed, madam; for I can do nothing 15

But what indeed is honest to be done.

Yet have I fierce affections, and think What Venus did with Mars.

Cleo. O Charmian,

Where think'st thou he is now? Stands he or sits he?

Or does he walk? or is he on his horse? 20

O happy horse, to bear the weight of Antony!

Do bravely, horse; for wot'st thou whom thou mov'st?

The demi-Atlas of this earth, the arm
And burget of men. He's speaking now,
Or murmuring 'Where's my serpent of old Nile?' 25

For so he calls me. Now I feed myself
With most delicious poison. Think on me,

That am with Phœbus' amorous pinches
black,

And wrinkled deep in time? Broad-fronted Cæsar,

When thou wast here above the ground,
I was 30

A morsel for a monarch; and great
Pompey

Would stand and make his eyes grow in my
brow;

There would he anchor his aspect and die
With looking on his life.

Enter ALEXAS.

Alex. Sovereign of Egypt, hail!

Cleo. How much unlike art thou Mark
Antony! 35

Yet, coming from him, that great med'cine hath

With his tinct gilded thee.

How goes it with my brave Mark Antony?

Alex. Last thing he did, dear Queen,
He kiss'd—the last of many doubled
kisses— 40

This orient pearl. His speech sticks in my
heart.

Cleo. Mine ear must pluck it thence.

Alex. 'Good friend,' quoth he

'Say the firm Roman to great Egypt sends This treasure of an oyster; at whose foot,

To mend the petty present, I will piece 45
Her opulent throne with kingdoms. All the

East,

Say thou, shall call her mistress.' So he nodded,

And soberly did mount an arm-gaunt steed,
Who neigh'd so high that what I would have spoke

Was beastly dumb'd by him.

Cleo. What, was he sad or merry?

Alex. Like to the time o' th' year between the extremes 51

Of hot and cold; he was nor sad nor merry.

Cleo. O well-divided disposition! Note
him,

Note him, good Charmian; 'tis the man;
but note him! 54

He was not sad, for he would shine on those That make their looks by his; he was not merry,

Which seem'd to tell them his remembrance

lay

In Egypt with his joy; but between both.
O heavenly mingle! Be'st thou sad or

merry,
The violence of either thee becomes, 60
So does it no man else. Met'st thou my posts?

Alex. Ay, madam, twenty several messengers.

Why do you send so thick?
Cleo. Who's born that day
When I forget to send to Antony

Shall die a beggar. Ink and paper, Char-mian. 65
Welcome, my good Alexas. Did I, Char-
mian,
Ever love Cæsar so ?
Char. O that brave Cæsar !
Cleo. Be chok'd with such another emphasis !
Say ' the brave Antony ' .
Char. The valiant Cæsar !
Cleo. By Isis, I will give thee bloody teeth 70
If thou with Cæsar paragon again
My man of men.
Char. By your most gracious pardon,
I sing but after you.
Cleo. My salad days,
When I was green in judgment, cold in
blood,
To say as I said then. But come, away ! 75
Get me ink and paper.
He shall have every day a several greeting,
Or I'll unpeople Egypt.

[Exeunt.

ACT TWO

SCENE I. Messina. Pompey's house.

Enter POMPEY, MENECRATES, and MENAS, in warlike manner.

Pom. If the great gods be just, they shall assist

The deeds of justest men.

Mene. Know, worthy Pompey,
That what they do delay they not deny.

Pom. Whiles we are suitors to their throne, decays

The thing we sue for.

Mene. We, ignorant of ourselves, 5 Beg often our own harms, which the wise
pow'rs

Deny us for our good ; so find we profit
By losing of our prayers.

Pom. I shall do well.
The people love me, and the sea is mine ;
My powers are crescent, and my auguring
hope 10

Says it will come to th' full. Mark Antony
In Egypt sits at dinner, and will make No wars without doors. Cæsar gets money where

He loses hearts. Lepidus flatters both, 14
Of both is flatter'd ; but he neither loves,
Nor either cares for him.

Men. Cæsar and Lepidus
Are in the field. A mighty strength they carry.

Pom. Where have you this ? 'Tis false.

Men. From Silvius, sir.

Pom. He dreams. I know they are in Rome together,
Looking for Antony. But all the charms
of love, 20

Salt Cleopatra, soften thy wan'd lip !

Let witchcraft join with beauty, lust with both ;

Tie up the libertine in a field of feasts,
Keep his brain fuming. Epicurean cooks
Sharpen with cloyless sauce his appetite, 25
That sleep and feeding may prorogue his honour

Even till a Lethe'd dullness—

Enter VARRIUS.

How now, Varrius !

Var. This is most certain that I shall deliver :

Mark Antony is every hour in Rome 29
Expected. Since he went from Egypt 'tis
A space for farther travel.

Pom. I could have given less matter
A better ear. Menas, I did not think This amorous surfeiter would have donn'd his helm

For such a petty war ; his soldiership
Is twice the other twain. But let us rear 35
The higher our opinion, that our stirring
Can from the lap of Egypt's widow pluck
The ne'er-lust-wearied Antony.

Men. I cannot hope
Cæsar and Antony shall well greet together.
His wife that's dead did trespasses to
Cæsar ; 40

His brother warr'd upon him ; although, I
think,

Not mov'd by Antony.

Pom. I know not, Menas,
How lesser enmities may give way to greater.

Were't not that we stand up against them
all,

'Twere pregnant they should square between themselves ; 45

For they have entertained cause enough
To draw their swords. But how the fear of us

May cement their divisions, and bind up
The petty difference we yet not know.

Be't as our gods will have't ! It only stands
Our lives upon to use our strongest hands.

Come, Menas. [Exeunt.

SCENE II. Rome. The house of Lepidus.

Enter ENOBARBUS and LEPIDUS.

Lep. Good Enobarbus, 'tis a worthy
deed,

And shall become you well, to entreat your captain

To soft and gentle speech.

Eno. I shall entreat him
To answer like himself. If Cæsar move him,
Let Antony look over Cæsar's head 5

And speak as loud as Mars. By Jupiter,
Were I the wearer of Antonius' beard,
I would not shave't to-day.

Lep. 'Tis not a time
For private stomaching.

Eno. Every time
Serves for the matter that is then born in't. ¹⁰

Lep. But small to greater matters must give way.

Eno. Not if the small come first.

Lep. Your speech is passion ;
But pray you stir no embers up. Here comes
The noble Antony.

Enter ANTONY and VENTIDIUS.

Eno. And yonder, Cæsar.

Enter CÆSAR, MÆCENAS, and AGRIPPA.

Ant. If we compose well here, to Parthia.
Hark, Ventidius. ¹⁶

Cæs. I do not know, Mæcenas. Ask Agrippa.

Lep. Noble friends,
That which combin'd us was most great,
and let not
A leaner action rend us. What's amiss,
May it be gently heard. When we debate ²⁰
Our trivial difference loud, we do commit Murder in healing wounds. Then, noble partners,
The rather for I earnestly beseech, Touch you the sourest points with sweetest terms,
Nor curstness grow to th' matter.

Ant. 'Tis spoken well. ²⁵

Were we before our armies, and to fight,
I should do thus. [Flourish.]

Cæs. Welcome to Rome.

Ant. Thank you.

Cæs. Sit. ³⁰

Ant. Sit, sir.

Cæs. Nay, then. [They sit.]

Ant. I learn you take things ill which are not so,
Or being, concern you not.

Cæs. I must be laugh'd at
If, or for nothing or a little, I ³⁵
Should say myself offended, and with you Chiefly i' th' world ; more laugh'd at that I should Once name you derogately when to sound your name
It not concern'd me.

Ant. My being in Egypt, Cæsar,
What was't to you ? ⁴⁰

Cæs. No more than my residing here at Rome
Might be to you in Egypt. Yet, if you
there
Did practise on my state, your being in Egypt
Might be my question.

Ant. How intend you—practis'd ?

Cæs. You may be pleas'd to catch at mine intent ⁴⁵

By what did here befall me. Your wife and
brother

Made wars upon me, and their contestation Was theme for you ; you were the word of war.

Ant. You do mistake your business ; my brother never Did urge me in his act. I did inquire it, ⁵⁰
And have my learning from some true reports
That drew their swords with you. Did he not rather
Discredit my authority with yours,
And make the wars alike against my stomach,
Having alike your cause ? Of this my letters ⁵⁵
Before did satisfy you. If you'll patch a quarrel,
As matter whole you have not to make it with,
It must not be with this.

Cæs. You praise yourself
By laying defects of judgment to me ; but
You patch'd up your excuses.

Ant. Not so, not so ;
I know you could not lack, I am certain on't, ⁶¹
Very necessity of this thought, that I,
Your partner in the cause 'gainst which he fought,
Could not with graceful eyes attend those wars
Which fronted mine own peace. As for my wife, ⁶⁵
I would you had her spirit in such another !
The third o' th' world is yours, which with a snaffle
You may pace easy, but not such a wife.

Eno. Would we had all such wives, that the men might go to wars with the women !

Ant. So much uncurbable, her garboils,
Cæsar, ⁷¹
Made out of her impatience—which not wanted
Shrewdness of policy too—I grieving grant Did you too much disquiet. For that you must
But say I could not help it.

Cæs. I wrote to you ⁷⁵
When rioting in Alexandria ; you
Did pocket up my letters, and with taunts
Did gibe my missive out of audience.

Ant. Sir,
He fell upon me ere admitted. Then Three kings I had newly feasted, and did want ⁸⁰
Of what I was i' th' morning ; but next day
I told him of myself, which was as much As to have ask'd him pardon. Let this fellow
Be nothing of our strife ; if we contend,
Out of our question wipe him.

Cæs. You have broken ⁸⁵
The article of your oath, which you shall never

Have tongue to charge me with.

Lep. Soft, Cæsar !

Ant. No ;

Lepidus, let him speak.

The honour is sacred which he talks on now,

Supposing that I lack'd it. But on, Cæsar :
The article of my oath— 91

Cæs. To lend me arms and aid when I requir'd them,

The which you both denied.

Ant. Neglected, rather ;
And then when poisoned hours had bound me up

From mine own knowledge. As nearly as I may, 95

I'll play the penitent to you ; but mine honesty

Shall not make poor my greatness, nor my power

Work without it. Truth is, that Fulvia,
To have me out of Egypt, made wars here ;
For which myself, the ignorant motive, do
So far ask pardon as befits mine honour
To stoop in such a case.

Lep. 'Tis noble spoken.

Mæc. If it might please you to enforce no further

The griefs between ye—to forget them quite

Were to remember that the present need 105
Speaks to atone you.

Lep. Worthily spoken, Mæcenus.

Eno. Or, if you borrow one another's love for the instant, you may, when you hear no more words of Pompey, return it again.
You shall have time to wrangle in when you have nothing else to do. 110

Ant. Thou art a soldier only. Speak no more.

Eno. That truth should be silent I had almost forgot.

Ant. You wrong this presence ; therefore speak no more.

Eno. Go to, then—your considerate stone !

Cæs. I do not much dislike the matter, but 115

The manner of his speech ; for't cannot be
We shall remain in friendship, our conditions

So diff'ring in their acts. Yet if I knew What hoop should hold us stanch, from edge to edge

O' th' world, I would pursue it.

Agr. Give me leave, Cæsar.

Cæs. Speak, Agrippa. 121

Agr. Thou hast a sister by the mother's side,

Admir'd Octavia. Great Mark Antony
Is now a widower.

Cæs. Say not so, Agrippa.

If Cleopatra heard you, your reproof 125
Were well deserv'd of rashness.

Ant. I am not married, Cæsar. Let me hear

Agrippa further speak.

Agr. To hold you in perpetual amity,
To make you brothers, and to knit your hearts 130

With an unslipping knot, take Antony
Octavia to his wife ; whose beauty claims
No worse a husband than the best of men ;
Whose virtue and whose general graces speak

That which none else can utter. By this marriage, 135

All little jealousies, which now seem great,
And all great fears, which now import their dangers,

Would then be nothing. Truths would be tales,

Where now half tales be truths. Her love to both 140

Would each to other, and all loves to both,
Draw after her. Pardon what I have spoke ;
For 'tis a studied, not a present thought,
By duty ruminated.

Ant. Will Cæsar speak ?

Cæs. Not till he hears how Antony is touch'd

With what is spoke already.

Ant. What power is in Agrippa,
If I would say ' Agrippa, be it so', 146
To make this good ?

Cæs. The power of Cæsar, and His power unto Octavia.

Ant. May I never
To this good purpose, that so fairly shows,
Dream of impediment ! Let me have thy hand. 150

Further this act of grace ; and from this hour

The heart of brothers govern in our loves
And sway our great designs !

Cæs. There is my hand.
A sister I bequeath you, whom no brother
Did ever love so dearly. Let her live 155
To join our kingdoms and our hearts ; and never

Fly off our loves again !

Lep. Happily, amen !

Ant. I did not think to draw my sword
'gainst Pompey ;

For he hath laid strange courtesies and great 159

Of late upon me. I must thank him only,
Lest my remembrance suffer ill report ;
At heel of that, defy him.

Lep. Time calls upon's.
Of us must Pompey presently be sought,
Or else he seeks out us.

Ant. Where lies he ? 164

Cæs. About the Mount Misenum.

Ant. What is his strength by land ?

Cæs. Great and increasing ; but by sea
He is an absolute master.

Ant. So is the fame.

Would we had spoke together! Haste we
for it.
Yet, ere we put ourselves in arms, dispatch
we
The business we have talk'd of.
Cæs. With most gladness;
And do invite you to my sister's view, 171
Whither straight I'll lead you.
Ant. Let us, Lepidus,
Not lack your company.
Lep. Noble Antony,
Not sickness should detain me.
[Flourish. Exeunt all but Enobarbus, Agrippa, Mæcenas.
Mæc. Welcome from Egypt, sir. 175
Eno. Half the heart of Cæsar, worthy Mæcenas! My honourable friend, Agrippa!
Agr. Good Enobarbus!
Mæc. We have cause to be glad that matters are so well digested. You stay'd well by't in Egypt. 180
Eno. Ay, sir; we did sleep day out of countenance and made the night light with drinking.
Mæc. Eight wild boars roasted whole at a breakfast, and but twelve persons there.
Is this true? 184
Eno. This was but as a fly by an eagle.
We had much more monstrous matter of feast, which worthily deserved noting.
Mæc. She's a most triumphant lady, if report be square to her.
Eno. When she first met Mark Antony she purs'd up his heart, upon the river of Cydnus. 191
Agr. There she appear'd indeed! Or my reporter devis'd well for her.
Eno. I will tell you.
The barge she sat in, like a burnish'd
throne, 195
Burn'd on the water. The poop was beaten
gold;
Purple the sails, and so perfumed that The winds were love-sick with them; the oars were silver,
Which to the tune of flutes kept stroke, and
made 196
The water which they beat to follow faster,
As amorous of their strokes. For her own person,
It beggar'd all description. She did lie
In her pavilion, cloth-of-gold, of tissue, O'erpicturing that Venus where we see The fancy out-work nature. On each side
her 205
Stood pretty dimpled boys, like smiling
Cupids,
With divers-colour'd fans, whose wind did seem
To glow the delicate cheeks which they did cool, 208
And what they undid did.

Agr. O, rare for Antony!
Eno. Her gentlewomen, like the Nereides,

So many mermaids, tended her i' th' eyes,
And made their bends adornings. At the helm
A seeming mermaid steers. The silken tackle Swell with the touches of those flower-soft hands
That yarely frame the office. From the barge 215
A strange invisible perfume hits the sense
Of the adjacent wharfs. The city cast
Her people out upon her; and Antony,
Enthron'd i' th' market-place, did sit alone, Whistling to th' air; which, but for vacancy, 220
Had gone to gaze on Cleopatra too,
And made a gap in nature.

Agr. Rare Egyptian!
Eno. Upon her landing, Antony sent to
her,
Invited her to supper. She replied 224
It should be better he became her guest;
Which she entreated. Our courteous
Antony,
Whom ne'er the word of 'No' woman heard
speak,
Being barber'd ten times o'er, goes to the
feast,
And for his ordinary pays his heart
For what his eyes eat only.

Agr. Royal wench! 230
She made great Cæsar lay his sword to bed.
He ploughed her, and she cropp'd.

Eno. I saw her once
Hop forty paces through the public street;
And, having lost her breath, she spoke, and panted,

That she did make defect perfection, 235
And, breathless, pow'r breathe forth.

Mæc. Now Antony must leave her utterly.

Eno. Never! He will not.
Age cannot wither her, nor custom stale
Her infinite variety. Other women cloy 240
The appetites they feed, but she makes hungry

Where most she satisfies; for vilest things Become themselves in her, that the holy priests

Bless her when she is riggish.

Mæc. If beauty, wisdom, modesty, can settle 245

The heart of Antony, Octavia is
A blessed lottery to him.

Agr. Let us go.
Good Enobarbus, make yourself my guest
Whilst you abide here.

Eno. Humbly, sir, I thank you. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III. Rome. Cæsar's house.

Enter ANTONY, CÆSAR, OCTAVIA between
them.

Ant. The world and my great office will sometimes

Divide me from your bosom.

Octa. All which time Before the gods my knee shall bow my prayers

To them for you.

Ant. Good night, sir. My Octavia, Read not my blemishes in the world's report.

I have not kept my square; but that to
come

Shall all be done by th' rule. Good night,
dear lady.

Octa. Good night, sir.

Cæs. Good night.

[Exeunt Cæsar and Octavia.]

Enter Soothsayer.

Ant. Now, sirrah, you do wish yourself in Egypt?

Sooth. Would I had never come from thence, nor you thither!

Ant. If you can—your reason.

Sooth. I see it in my motion, have it not in my tongue; but yet hie you to Egypt
again.

Ant. Say to me,
Whose fortunes shall rise higher, Cæsar's or
mine?

Sooth. Cæsar's.
Therefore, O Antony, stay not by his side.
Thy dæmon, that thy spirit which keeps thee, is

Noble, courageous, high, unmatchable,
Where Cæsar's is not; but near him thy angel

Becomes a fear, as being o'erpow'r'd.
Therefore

Make space enough between you.

Ant. Speak this no more.

Sooth. To none but thee; no more but when to thee.

If thou dost play with him at any game,
Thou art sure to lose; and of that natural luck

He beats thee 'gainst the odds. Thy lustre thickens

When he shines by. I say again, thy spirit
Is all afraid to govern thee near him;
But, he away, 'tis noble.

Ant. Get thee gone.
Say to Ventidius I would speak with him.

[Exit Soothsayer.]

He shall to Parthia.—Be it art or hap,
He hath spoken true. The very dice obey
him;

And in our sports my better cunning faints Under his chance. If we draw lots, he speeds;

His cocks do win the battle still of mine,
When it is all to nought, and his quails ever Beat mine, inhoop'd, at odds. I will to Egypt;

And though I make this marriage for my
peace,

I' th' East my pleasure lies.

Enter VENTIDIUS.

O, come, Ventidius,

You must to Parthia. Your commission's ready;

Follow me and receive't. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV. Rome. A street.

Enter LEPIDUS, MÆCENAS, and AGRIPPA.

Lep. Trouble yourselves no further. Pray you hasten

Your generals after.

Agr. Sir, Mark Antony

Will e'en but kiss Octavia, and we'll follow.

Lep. Till I shall see you in your soldier's dress,

Which will become you both, farewell.

Mæc. We shall,

As I conceive the journey, be at th' Mount
Before you, Lepidus.

Lep. Your way is shorter;
My purposes do draw me much about.

You'll win two days upon me.

Both. Sir, good success!

Lep. Farewell. [Exeunt.]

SCENE V. Alexandria. Cleopatra's palace.

ALEXAS.*

Cleo. Give me some music—music, moody
food

Of us that trade in love.

All. The music, ho!

Enter MARDIAN the Eunuch.

Cleo. Let it alone! Let's to billiards.

Come, Charmian.

Char. My arm is sore; best play with Mardian.

Cleo. As well a woman with an eunuch play'd

As with a woman. Come, you'll play with me, sir?

Mar. As well as I can, madam.

Cleo. And when good will is show'd, though't come too short,

The actor may plead pardon. I'll none now.
Give me mine angle—we'll to th' river.

There,

My music playing far off, I will betray Tawny-finn'd fishes; my bended hook shall pierce

Their slimy jaws; and as I draw them up
I'll think them every one an Antony,
And say 'Ah ha! Y'are caught'.

Char. 'Twas merry when

You wager'd on your angling; when your diver

Did hang a salt fish on his hook, which he
With fervency drew up.

Cleo. That time? O times!

I laugh'd him out of patience; and that night
 I laugh'd him into patience; and next morn,²⁰
 Ere the ninth hour, I drunk him to his bed,
 Then put my tires and mantles on him, whilst
 I wore his sword Philippan.

Enter a Messenger.

O! from Italy?
 Ram thou thy fruitful tidings in mine ears,
 That long time have been barren.

Mess. Madam, madam—²⁵

Cleo. Antony's dead! If thou say so, villain,

Thou kill'st thy mistress; but well and free,

If thou so yield him, there is gold, and here
 My bluest veins to kiss—a hand that kings
 Have lipp'd, and trembled kissing.³⁰

Mess. First, madam, he is well.

Cleo. Why, there's more gold.

But, sirrah, mark, we use
 To say the dead are well. Bring it to that,

The gold I give thee will I melt and pour Down thy ill-uttering throat.³⁵

Mess. Good madam, hear me.

Cleo. Well, go to, I will.

But there's no goodness in thy face. If
 Antony

Be free and healthful—why so tart a favour
 To trumpet such good tidings? If not well, Thou shouldst come like a Fury crown'd with snakes,⁴⁰

Not like a formal man.

Mess. Will't please you hear me?

Cleo. I have a mind to strike thee ere thou speak'st.

Yet, if thou say Antony lives, is well,
 Or friends with Cæsar, or not captive to
 him,

I'll set thee in a shower of gold, and hail⁴⁵
 Rich pearls upon thee.

Mess. Madam, he's well.

Cleo. Well said.

Mess. And friends with Cæsar.

Cleo. Th'art an honest man.

Mess. Cæsar and he are greater friends than ever.

Cleo. Make thee a fortune from me.

Mess. But yet, madam—

Cleo. I do not like 'but yet'. It does allay⁵⁰

The good precedence; fie upon 'but yet'!
 'But yet' is as a gaoler to bring forth

Some monstrous malefactor. Prithee,
 friend,

Pour out the pack of matter to mine ear,
 The good and bad together. He's friends with Cæsar;⁵⁵

In state of health, thou say'st; and, thou say'st, free.

Mess. Free, madam! No; I made no such report.

He's bound unto Octavia.

Cleo. For what good turn?

Mess. For the best turn i' th' bed.

Cleo. I am pale, Charmian.

Mess. Madam, he's married to Octavia.

Cleo. The most infectious pestilence upon thee! [Strikes him down.]

Mess. Good madam, patience.

Cleo. What say you? Hence,
 [Strikes him.]

Horrible villain! or I'll spurn thine eyes
 Like balls before me; I'll unhair thy head;
 [She hales him up and down.]

Thou shalt be whipp'd with wire and stew'd in brine,⁶⁵

Smarting in ling'ring pickle.

Mess. Gracious madam,
 I that do bring the news made not the match.

Cleo. Say 'tis not so, a province I will give thee,

And make thy fortunes proud. The blow thou hadst

Shall make thy peace for moving me to rage;⁷⁰

And I will boot thee with what gift beside Thy modesty can beg.

Mess. He's married, madam.

Cleo. Rogue, thou hast liv'd too long.
 [Draws a knife.]

Mess. Nay, then I'll run.

What mean you, madam? I have made no fault. [Exit.]

Char. Good madam, keep yourself within yourself:⁷⁵

The man is innocent.

Cleo. Some innocents scape not the thunderbolt.

Melt Egypt into Nile! and kindly creatures
 Turn all to serpents! Call the slave again.

Though I am mad, I will not bite him. Call!
 Char. He is afar'd to come.

Cleo. I will not hurt him.

These hands do lack nobility, that they strike⁸²

A meaner than myself; since I myself
 Have given myself the cause.

Enter the Messenger again.

Come hither, sir.

Though it be honest, it is never good⁸⁵
 To bring bad news. Give to a gracious message

An host of tongues; but let ill tidings tell Themselves when they be felt.

Mess. I have done my duty.

Cleo. Is he married?

I cannot hate thee worse than I do⁹⁰
 If thou again say 'Yes'.

Mess. He's married, madam.

Cleo. The gods confound thee! Dost thou hold there still?

Mess. Should I lie, madam ?
 Cleo. O, I would thou didst, So half my Egypt were submerg'd and
 made
 A cistern for scal'd snakes ! Go, get thee
 hence. 95
 Hadst thou Narcissus in thy face, to me Thou wouldst appear most ugly. He is married ?

Mess. I crave your Highness' pardon.
 Cleo. He is married ?
 Mess. Take no offence that I would not offend you ;
 To punish me for what you make me do 100 Seems much unequal. He's married to Octavia.

Cleo. O, that his fault should make a knave of thee
 That art not what th'art sure of ! Get thee
 hence.

The merchandise which thou hast brought from Rome

Are all too dear for me. Lie they upon thy
 hand, 105

And be undone by 'em ! [Exit Messenger.

Char. Good your Highness, patience.

Cleo. In praising Antony I have disprais'd Cæsar.

Char. Many times, madam.

Cleo. I am paid for't now. Lead me from hence, 109

I faint. O Iras, Charmian ! 'Tis no matter.
 Go to the fellow, good Alexas ; bid him
 Report the feature of Octavia, her years,
 Her inclination ; let him not leave out
 The colour of her hair. Bring me word quickly. [Exit Alexas.

Let him for ever go—let him not,
 Charmian— 115

Though he be painted one way like a Gorgon,

The other way's a Mars. [To Mardian]
 Bid you Alexas

Bring me word how tall she is.—Pity me,
 Charmian,

But do not speak to me. Lead me to my chamber. [Exeunt.

SCENE VI. Near Misenum.

Flourish. Enter POMPEY and MENAS at one door, with drum and trumpet ; at another, CÆSAR, ANTONY, LEPIDUS, ENO-BARBUS, MÆCENAS, AGRIPPA, with Soldiers marching.

Pom. Your hostages I have, so have you
 mine ;
 And we shall talk before we fight.

Cæs. Most meet
 That first we come to words ; and therefore have we

Our written purposes before us sent ; 4
 Which if thou hast considered, let us know
 If 'twill tie up thy discontented sword

And carry back to Sicily much tall youth
 That else must perish here.

Pom. To you all three,
 The senators alone of this great world, 9
 Chief factors for the gods : I do not know Wherefore my father should revengers want,

Having a son and friends, since Julius
 Cæsar,

Who at Philippi the good Brutus ghosted, There saw you labouring for him. What was't

That mov'd pale Cassius to conspire ? and what 15

Made the all-honour'd honest Roman,
 Brutus,

With the arm'd rest, courtiers of beauteous
 freedom,

To drench the Capitol, but that they would Have one man but a man ? And that is it Hath made me rig my navy, at whose burden 20

The anger'd ocean foams ; with which I meant

To scourge th' ingratitude that despiteful
 Rome

Cast on my noble father.

Cæs. Take your time.

Ant. Thou canst not fear us, Pompey, with thy sails ;

We'll speak with thee at sea ; at land thou
 know'st 25

How much we do o'er-count thee.

Pom. At land, indeed, Thou dost o'er-count me of my father's house.

But since the cuckoo builds not for himself,
 Remain in't as thou mayst.

Lep. Be pleas'd to tell us—
 For this is from the present—how you take
 The offers we have sent you.

Cæs. There's the point.

Ant. Which do not be entreated to, but weigh

What it is worth embrac'd.

Cæs. And what may follow,
 To try a larger fortune.

Pom. You have made me offer
 Of Sicily, Sardinia ; and I must 35 Rid all the sea of pirates ; then to send Measures of wheat to Rome ; this 'greed
 upon,

To part with unhack'd edges and bear back
 Our targes undinted.

All. That's our offer.

Pom. Know, then,
 I came before you here a man prepar'd 40
 To take this offer ; but Mark Antony Put me to some impatience. Though I lose
 The praise of it by telling, you must know,
 When Cæsar and your brother were at blows, 44

Your mother came to Sicily and did find
 Her welcome friendly.

Ant. I have heard it, Pompey,
And am well studied for a liberal thanks
Which I do owe you.

Pom. Let me have your hand.
I did not think, sir, to have met you here.

Ant. The beds i' th' East are soft ; and thanks to you, 50
That call'd me timelier than my purpose
hither ;

For I gave gained by't.

Cæs. Since I saw you last
There is a change upon you.

Pom. Well, I know not What counts harsh fortune casts upon my
face ;

But in my bosom shall she never come 55
To make my heart her vassal.

Lep. Well met here.

Pom. I hope so, Lepidus. Thus we are agreed.

I crave our composition may be written,
And seal'd between us.

Cæs. That's the next to do.

Pom. We'll feast each other ere we part,
and let's 60

Draw lots who shall begin.

Ant. That will I, Pompey.

Pom. No, Antony, take the lot ;

But, first or last, your fine Egyptian cookery

Shall have the fame. I have heard that Julius Cæsar

Grew fat with feasting there.

Ant. You have heard much. 65

Pom. I have fair meanings, sir.

Ant. And fair words to them.

Pom. Then so much have I heard ;

And I have heard Apollodorus carried—

Eno. No more of that ! He did so.

Pom. What, I pray you ?

Eno. A certain queen to Cæsar in a mattress. 70

Pom. I know thee now. How far'st thou, soldier ?

Eno. Well ;

And well am like to do, for I perceive

Four feasts are toward.

Pom. Let me shake thy hand.

I never hated thee ; I have seen thee
fight,

When I have envied thy behaviour.

Eno. Sir,

I never lov'd you much ; but I ha' prais'd
ye 76

When you have well deserv'd ten times as
much

As I have said you did.

Pom. Enjoy thy plainness ;

It nothing ill becomes thee.

Aboard my galley I invite you all. 80

Will you lead, lords ?

All. Show's the way sir.

Pom. Come.

[Exeunt all but Enobarbus and Menas.]

Men. [Aside] Thy father, Pompey, would ne'er have made this treaty.—

You and I have known, sir.

Eno. At sea, I think.

Men. We have, sir. 85

Eno. You have done well by water.

Men. And you by land.

Eno. I will praise any man that will praise me ; though it cannot be denied what I have done by land. 89

Men. Nor what I have done by water.

Eno. Yes, something you can deny for your own safety : you have been a great thief by sea.

Men. And you by land.

Eno. There I deny my land service. But give me your hand, Menas ; if our eyes had authority, here they might take two thieves kissing. 96

Men. All men's faces are true, whatsome-
'er their hands are.

Eno. But there is never a fair woman has a true face.

Men. No slander : they steal hearts. 99

Eno. We came hither to fight with you.

Men. For my part, I am sorry it is turn'd to a drinking. Pompey doth this day laugh away his fortune.

Eno. If he do, sure he cannot weep't back again.

Men. Y'have said, sir. We look'd not for Mark Antony here. Pray you, is he married to Cleopatra ? 105

Eno. Cæsar's sister is call'd Octavia.

Men. True, sir ; she was the wife of Caius Marcellus.

Eno. But she is now the wife of Marcus Antonius.

Men. Pray ye, sir ?

Eno. 'Tis true. 110

Men. Then is Cæsar and he for ever knit
together.

Eno. If I were bound to divine of this unity, I would not prophesy so.

Men. I think the policy of that purpose made more in the marriage than the love of the parties. 115

Eno. I think so too. But you shall find the band that seems to tie their friendship together will be the very strangler of their amity : Octavia is of a holy, cold, and still conversation. 119

Men. Who would not have his wife so ?

Eno. Not he that himself is not so ; which is Mark Antony. He will to his Egyptian dish again ; then shall the sighs of Octavia blow the fire up in Cæsar, and, as I said before, that which is the strength of their amity shall prove the immediate author of their variance. Antony will use his affection where it is ; he married but his occasion
here. 127

Men. And thus it may be. Come, sir, will you aboard ? I have a health for you.

Eno. I shall take it, sir. We have us'd our throats in Egypt. 131

Men. Come, let's away. [Exeunt.]

SCENE VII. On board Pompey's galley, off Misenum.

Music plays. Enter two or three Servants with a banquet.

1 Serv. Here they'll be, man. Some o' their plants are ill-rooted already; the least wind i' th' world will blow them down.

2 Serv. Lepidus is high-colour'd.

1 Serv. They have made him drink alms-drink. 5

2 Serv. As they pinch one another by the disposition, he cries out 'No more!'; reconciles them to his entreaty and himself to th' drink.

1 Serv. But it raises the greater war between him and his discretion. 10

2 Serv. Why, this it is to have a name in great men's fellowship. I had as lief have a reed that will do me no service as a partizan I could not heave.

1 Serv. To be call'd into a huge sphere, and not to be seen to move in't, are the holes where eyes should be, which pitifully disaster the cheeks. 16

A sennet sounded. Enter CÆSAR, ANTONY, LEPIDUS, POMPEY, AGRIPPA, MÆCENAS, ENOBARBUS, MENAS, with other Captains.

Ant. [To Cæsar] Thus do they, sir: they take the flow o' th' Nile

By certain scales i' th' pyramid; they know

By th' height, the lowness, or the mean, if dearth

Or foison follow. The higher Nilus swells 20
The more it promises; as it ebbs, the seedsmen

Upon the slime and ooze scatters his grain, And shortly comes to harvest.

Lep. Y'have strange serpents there.

Ant. Ay, Lepidus. 25

Lep. Your serpent of Egypt is bred now of your mud by the operation of your sun; so is your crocodile.

Ant. They are so.

Pom. Sit—and some wine! A health to Lepidus!

Lep. I am not so well as I should be, but I'll ne'er out. 30

Eno. Not till you have slept. I fear me you'll be in till then.

Lep. Nay, certainly, I have heard the Ptolemies' pyramises are very goodly things. Without contradiction I have heard that. 35

Men. [Aside to Pompey] Pompey, a word.

Pom. [Aside to Menas] Say in mine ear; what is't?

Men. [Aside to Pompey] Forsake thy seat, I do beseech thee, Captain, And hear me speak a word.

Pom. [Whispers in's ear] Forbear me till anon—

This wine for Lepidus!

Lep. What manner o' thing is your crocodile? 40

Ant. It is shap'd, sir, like itself, and it is as broad as it hath breadth; it is just so high as it is, and moves with it own organs. It lives by that which nourisheth it, and the elements once out of it, it transmigrates.

Lep. What colour is it of? 45

Ant. Of it own colour too.

Lep. 'Tis a strange serpent.

Ant. 'Tis so. And the tears of it are wet.

Cæs. Will this description satisfy him?

Ant. With the health that Pompey gives him, else he is a very epicure. 51

Pom. [Aside to Menas] Go, hang, sir, hang! Tell me of that! Away!

Do as I bid you.—Where's this cup I call'd for?

Men. [Aside to Pompey] If for the sake of merit thou wilt hear me, 54

Rise from thy stool.

Pom. [Aside to Menas] I think th'art mad. [Rises and walks aside] The matter?

Men. I have ever held my cap off to thy fortunes.

Pom. Thou hast serv'd me with much faith. What's else to say?—

Be jolly, lords.

Ant. These quicksands, Lepidus, Keep off them, for you sink. 59

Men. Wilt thou be lord of all the world?

Pom. What say'st thou?

Men. Wilt thou be lord of the whole world? That's twice. 61

Pom. How should that be?

Men. But entertain it, And though thou think me poor, I am the man

Will give thee all the world.

Pom. Hast thou drunk well?

Men. No, Pompey, I have kept me from the cup. 65

Thou art, if thou dar'st be, the earthly Jove;

Whate'er the ocean pales or sky inclips Is thine, if thou wilt ha't.

Pom. Show me which way.

Men. These three world-sharers, these competitors, 69

Are in thy vessel. Let me cut the cable; And when we are put off, fall to their throats.

All there is thine.

Pom. Ah, this thou shouldst have done, And not have spoke on't. In me 'tis villainy:

In thee't had been good service. Thou must know
'Tis not my profit that does lead mine
honour : 75
Mine honour, it. Repent that e'er thy
tongue
Hath so betray'd thine act. Being done unknown,
I should have found it afterwards well done,
But must condemn it now. Desist, and drink.

Men. [Aside] For this, 80
I'll never follow thy pall'd fortunes more.
Who seeks, and will not take when once 'tis
offer'd,
Shall never find it more.

Pom. This health to Lepidus !

Ant. Bear him ashore, I'll pledge it for him, Pompey.

Eno. Here's to thee, Menas !

Men. Enobarbus, welcome ! 85

Pom. Fill till the cup be hid.

Eno. There's a strong fellow, Menas.

[Pointing to the Servant who carries off
Lepidus.]

Men. Why ?

Eno. 'A bears the third part of the world, man ; see'st not ?

Men. The third part, then, is drunk.
Would it were all,

That it might go on wheels ! 91

Eno. Drink thou ; increase the reels.

Men. Come.

Pom. This is not yet an Alexandrian
feast.

Ant. It ripens towards it. Strike the vessels, ho ! 95

Here's to Cæsar !

Cæs. I could well forbear 't.
It's monstrous labour when I wash my brain

And it grows fouler.

Ant. Be a child o' th' time.

Cæs. Possess it, I'll make answer.

But I had rather fast from all four days 100
Than drink so much in one.

Eno. [To Antony] Ha, my brave emperor!
Shall we dance now the Egyptian Bac-chanals

And celebrate our drink ?

Pom. Let's ha't, good soldier.

Ant. Come, let's all take hands,

Till that the conquering wine hath steep'd our sense 105

In soft and delicate Lethe.

Eno. All take hands.

Make battery to our ears with the loud
music,

The while I'll place you ; then the boy
shall sing ;

The holding every man shall bear as loud
As his strong sides can volley. 110

[Music plays. Enobarbus places them hand in hand.]

The Song.

Come, thou monarch of the vine,
Plumpy Bacchus with pink eyne !
In thy fats our cares be drown'd,
With thy grapes our hairs be crown'd.
Cup us till the world go round, 115
Cup us till the world go round !

Cæs. What would you more ? Pompey, good night. Good brother,

Let me request you off ; our graver business

Frowns at this levity. Gentle lords, let's part ;

You see we have burnt our cheeks. Strong Enobarb 120

Is weaker than the wine, and mine own
tongue

Splits what it speaks. The wild disguise hath almost

Antick'd us all. What needs more words ?
Good night.

Good Antony, your hand.

Pom. I'll try you on the shore.

Ant. And shall, sir. Give's your hand.

Pom. O Antony,

You have my father's house—but what ?
We are friends. 125

Come, down into the boat.

Eno. Take heed you fall not.

[Exeunt all but Enobarbus and Menas.]

Menas, I'll not on shore.

Men.

No, to my cabin.
These drums ! these trumpets, flutes ! what !
Let Neptune hear we bid a loud farewell

To these great fellows. Sound and be hang'd, sound out ! 131

[Sound a flourish, with drums.]

Eno. Hoo ! says 'a. There's my cap.

Men. Hoo ! Noble Captain, come.

[Exeunt.]

ACT THREE

SCENE I. A plain in Syria.

Enter VENTIDIUS, as it were in triumph, with SILIUS and other Romans, Officers and Soldiers ; the dead body of PACORUS borne before him.

Ven. Now, darting Parthia, art thou struck, and now

Pleas'd fortune does of Marcus Crassus'
death

Make me revenger. Bear the King's son's
body

Before our army. Thy Pacorus, Orodes, Pays this for Marcus Crassus.

Sil.

Noble Ventidius,

Whilst yet with Parthian blood thy sword is warm 6

The fugitive Parthians follow ; spur through Media,

Mesopotamia, and the shelters whither

The routed fly. So thy grand captain,
Antony,
Shall set thee on triumphant chariots and Put garlands on thy head.

Ven. O Silius, Silius,
I have done enough. A lower place, note
well,

May make too great an act; for learn this,
Silius:

Better to leave undone than by our deed Acquire too high a fame when him we serve's away.

Cæsar and Antony have ever won
More in their officer, than person. Sossius,
One of my place in Syria, his lieutenant,
For quick accumulation of renown,
Which he achiev'd by th' minute, lost his favour.

Who does i' th' wars more than his captain can

Becomes his captain's captain; and ambition,

The soldier's virtue, rather makes choice of loss

Than gain which darkens him.
I could do more to do Antonius good,
But 'twould offend him; and in his offence
Should my performance perish.

Sil. Thou hast, Ventidius, that Without the which a soldier and his sword

Grants scarce distinction. Thou wilt write to Antony?

Ven. I'll humbly signify what in his
name,

That magical word of war, we have effected;
How, with his banners, and his well-paid ranks,

The ne'er-yet-beaten horse of Parthia
We have jaded out o' th' field.

Sil. Where is he now?

Ven. He purposeth to Athens; whither, with what haste

The weight we must convey with's will permit,

We shall appear before him.—On, there;
pass along.

SCENE II. Rome. Cæsar's house.

Enter AGRIPPA at one door, ENOBARBUS at another.

Agr. What, are the brothers parted?

Eno. They have dispatch'd with Pompey; he is gone;

The other three are sealing. Octavia weeps
To part from Rome; Cæsar is sad; and

Lepidus,
Since Pompey's feast, as Menas says, is troubled

With the green sickness.

Agr. 'Tis a noble Lepidus.

Eno. A very fine one. O, how he loves
Cæsar!

Agr. Nay, but how dearly he adores
Mark Antony!

Eno. Cæsar? Why he's the Jupiter of men.

Agr. What's Antony? The god of Jupiter.

Eno. Spake you of Cæsar? How! the nonpareil!

Agr. O, Antony! O thou Arabian bird!

Eno. Would you praise Cæsar, say
'Cæsar'—go no further.

Agr. Indeed, he plied them both with excellent praises.

Eno. But he loves Cæsar best. Yet he loves Antony.

Hoo! hearts, tongues, figures, scribes, bards, poets, cannot

Think, speak, cast, write, sing, number—hoo!

His love to Antony. But as for Cæsar,
Kneel down, kneel down, and wonder.

Agr. Both he loves.

Eno. They are his shards, and he their beetle. [Trumpets within] So—

This is to horse. Adieu, noble Agrippa.

Agr. Good fortune, worthy soldier, and farewell.

Enter CÆSAR, ANTONY, LEPIDUS, and OCTAVIA.

Ant. No further, sir.

Cæs. You take from me a great part of myself;

Use me well in't. Sister, prove such a wife

As my thoughts make thee, and as my farthest band

Shall pass on thy approval. Most noble
Antony,

Let not the piece of virtue which is set Betwixt us as the cement of our love

To keep it builded be the ram to batter
The fortress of it; for better might we

Have lov'd without this mean, if on both parts

This be not cherish'd.

Ant. Make me not offended
In your distrust.

Cæs. I have said.

Ant. You shall not find,
Though you be therein curious, the least

cause

For what you seem to fear. So the gods keep you,

And make the hearts of Romans serve your ends!

We will here part.

Cæs. Farewell, my dearest sister, fare thee well.

The elements be kind to thee and make Thy spirits all of comfort! Fare thee well.

Octa. My noble brother!

Ant. The April's in her eyes. It is love's
spring,

And these the showers to bring it on. Be cheerful.

Octa. Sir, look well to my husband's house; and—

Cæs. What, 45
Octavia?

Octa. I'll tell you in your ear.

Ant. Her tongue will not obey her heart, nor can

Her heart inform her tongue—the swan's down feather,

That stands upon the swell at the full of tide,

And neither way inclines. 50

Eno. [Aside to Agrippa] Will Cæsar weep?

Agr. [Aside to Enobarbus] He has a cloud in's face.

Eno. [Aside to Agrippa] He were the worse for that, were he a horse;

So is he, being a man.

Agr. [Aside to Enobarbus] Why, Enobarbus,

When Antony found Julius Cæsar dead, He cried almost to roaring; and he wept 55

When at Philippi he found Brutus slain.

Eno. [Aside to Agrippa] That year, indeed, he was troubled with a rheum;

What willingly he did confound he wail'd, Believe't—till I weep too.

Cæs. No, sweet Octavia, You shall hear from me still; the time 60 shall not

Out-go my thinking on you.

Ant. Come, sir, come; I'll wrestle with you in my strength of love.

Look here I have you; thus I let you go, And give you to the gods.

Cæs. Adieu; be happy!

Lep. Let all the number of the stars give light 65

To thy fair way!

Cæs. Farewell, farewell! [Kisses Octavia.]

Ant. Farewell!

[Trumpets sound. Exeunt.]

SCENE III. Alexandria. Cleopatra's palace.

Enter CLEOPATRA, CHARMIAN, IRAS, and ALEXAS.

Cleo. Where is the fellow?

Alex. Half afeard to come.

Cleo. Go to, go to.

Enter the Messenger as before.

Come hither, sir.

Alex. Good Majesty,

Herod of Jewry dare not look upon you But when you are well pleas'd.

Cleo. That Herod's head I'll have. But how, when Antony is gone, 5

Through whom I might command it?

Come thou near.

Mess. Most gracious Majesty!

Cleo. Didst thou behold Octavia?

Mess.

Ay, dread Queen.

Cleo. Where?

Mess. Madam, in Rome

I look'd her in the face, and saw her led Between her brother and Mark Antony. 10

Cleo. Is she as tall as me?

Mess. She is not, madam.

Cleo. Didst hear her speak? Is she shrill-tongu'd or low?

Mess. Madam, I heard her speak: she is low voic'd.

Cleo. That's not so good. He cannot like her long. 14

Char. Like her? O Isis! 'tis impossible.

Cleo. I think so, Charmian. Dull of tongue and dwarfish!

What majesty is in her gait? Remember, If e'er thou look'dst on majesty.

Mess. She creeps.

Her motion and her station are as one; She shows a body rather than a life, 20

A statue than a breather.

Cleo. Is this certain?

Mess. Or I have no observance.

Char. Three in Egypt

Cannot make better note.

Cleo. He's very knowing;

I do perceive't. There's nothing in her yet. The fellow has good judgment.

Char. Excellent. 25

Cleo. Guess at her years, I prithee.

Mess. Madam,

She was a widow.

Cleo. Widow? Charmian, hark!

Mess. And I do think she's thirty.

Cleo. Bear'st thou her face in mind? Is't long or round?

Mess. Round even to faultiness. 30

Cleo. For the most part, too, they are foolish that are so.

Her hair, what colour?

Mess. Brown, madam; and her forehead As low as she would wish it.

Cleo. There's gold for thee.

Thou must not take my former sharpness ill. 34

I will employ thee back again; I find thee Most fit for business. Go make thee ready;

Our letters are prepar'd. [Exit Messenger.]

Char. A proper man.

Cleo. Indeed, he is so. I repent me much That so I harried him. Why, methinks, by him,

This creature's no such thing.

Char. Nothing, madam. 40

Cleo. The man hath seen some majesty, and should know.

Char. Hath he seen majesty? Isis else defend,

And serving you so long!

Cleo. I have one thing more to ask him yet, good Charmian.

But 'tis no matter; thou shalt bring him to me 45

Where I will write. All may be well enough.

Char. I warrant you, madam. [Exeunt.

SCENE IV. Athens. Antony's house.

Enter ANTONY and OCTAVIA.

Ant. Nay, nay, Octavia, not only that—
That were excusable, that and thousands

Of semblable import—but he hath wag'd
New wars 'gainst Pompey; made his will,
and read it

To public ear; 5
Spoke scantily of me; when perforce he could not

But pay me terms of honour, cold and sickly

He vented them, most narrow measure
lent me;

When the best hint was given him, he not took't,

Or did it from his teeth.

Octa. O my good lord, 10
Believe not all; or if you must believe,
Stomach not all. A more unhappy lady,
If this division chance, ne'er stood between,
Praying for both parts.

The good gods will mock me presently 15
When I shall pray 'O, bless my lord and
husband!'

Undo that prayer by crying out as loud
'O, bless my brother!' Husband win, win
brother,

Prays, and destroys the prayer; no mid-
way

'Twixt these extremes at all.

Ant. Gentle Octavia, 20
Let your best love draw to that point which seeks

Best to preserve it. If I lose mine
honour,

I lose myself; better I were not yours
Than yours so branchless. But, as you requested,

Yourself shall go between's. The meantime, lady, 25

I'll raise the preparation of a war Shall stain your brother. Make your soonest
haste;

So your desires are yours.

Octa. Thanks to my lord.
The Jove of power make me, most weak,
most weak,

Your reconciler! Wars 'twixt you twain would be 30

As if the world should cleave, and that slain men

Should solder up the rift.

Ant. When it appears to you where this begins,

Turn your displeasure that way, for our faults

Can never be so equal that your love 35

Can equally move with them. Provide your going;

Choose your own company, and command
what cost

Your heart has mind to. [Exeunt.

SCENE V. Athens. Antony's house.

Enter ENOBARBUS and EROS, meeting.

Eno. How now, friend Eros!

Eros. There's strange news come, sir

Eno. What, man?

Eros. Cæsar and Lepidus have made wars upon Pompey. 5

Eno. This is old. What is the success?

Eros. Cæsar, having made use of him in the wars 'gainst Pompey, presently denied him rivalry, would not let him partake in the glory of the action; and not resting here, accuses him of letters he had formerly wrote to Pompey; upon his own appeal, seizes him. So the poor third is up, till death enlarge his confine. 12

Eno. Then, world, thou hast a pair of chaps—no more;

And throw between them all the food thou hast,

They'll grind the one the other. Where's
Antony? 15

Eros. He's walking in the garden—thus, and spurns

The rush that lies before him; cries 'Fool
Lepidus!'

And threatens the throat of that his officer
That murd'ed Pompey.

Eno. Our great navy's rigg'd.

Eros. For Italy and Cæsar. More,
Domitius: 20

My lord desires you presently; my news
I might have told hereafter.

Eno. 'Twill be naught;

But let it be. Bring me to Antony.
Eros. Come, sir. [Exeunt.

SCENE VI. Rome. Cæsar's house.

Enter CÆSAR, AGRIPPA, and MÆCENAS.

Cæs. Contemning Rome, he has done all this and more

In Alexandria. Here's the manner of't:
I' th' market-place, on a tribunal silver'd,
Cleopatra and himself in chairs of gold
Were publicly enthron'd; at the feet sat
Cæsarion, whom they call my father's son,
And all the unlawful issue that their lust Since then hath made between them. Unto
her

He gave the stablishment of Egypt; made
her

Of lower Syria, Cyprus, Lydia, 10
Absolute queen.

Mæc. This in the public eye?

Cæs. I' th' common show-place, where they exercise.

His sons he there proclaim'd the kings of kings :

Great Media, Parthia, and Armenia, He gave to Alexander; to Ptolemy he assign'd 15

Syria, Cilicia, and Phœnicia. She
In th' habiliments of the goddess Isis That day appear'd; and oft before gave audience,

As 'tis reported, so.

Mæc. Let Rome be thus Inform'd.

Agr. Who, queasy with his insolence 20 Already, will their good thoughts call from
him.

Cæs. The people knows it, and have now receiv'd

His accusations.

Agr. Who does he accuse ?

Cæs. Cæsar; and that, having in Sicily Sextus Pompeius spoil'd, we had not rated
him 25

His part o' th' isle. Then does he say he lent me

Some shipping, unrestor'd. Lastly, he frets
That Lepidus of the triumvirate Should be depos'd; and, being, that we detain

All his revenue.

Agr. Sir, this should be answer'd. 30
Cæs. 'Tis done already, and the messenger
gone.

I have told him Lepidus was grown too
cruel,

That he his high authority abus'd,
And did deserve his change. For what I have conquer'd

I grant him part; but then, in his Armenia
And other of his conquer'd kingdoms, I 35
Demand the like.

Mæc. He'll never yield to that.

Cæs. Nor must not then be yielded to in this.

Enter OCTAVIA, with her Train.

Octa. Hail, Cæsar, and my lord! hail, most dear Cæsar!

Cæs. That ever I should call thee cast-
away! 40

Octa. You have not call'd me so, nor have you cause.

Cæs. Why have you stol'n upon us thus ?
You come not

Like Cæsar's sister. The wife of Antony Should have an army for an usher, and
The neighs of horse to tell of her approach Long ere she did appear. The trees by th'
way 46

Should have borne men, and expectation fainted,

Longing for what it had not. Nay, the dust
Should have ascended to the roof of heaven, Rais'd by your populous troops. But you
are come 50

A market-maid to Rome, and have prevented

The ostentation of our love, which left unshown

Is often left unlov'd. We should have met
you

By sea and land, supplying every stage
With an augmented greeting.

Octa. Good my lord, 55
To come thus was I not constrain'd, but did it

On my free will. My lord, Mark Antony, Hearing that you prepar'd for war,
acquainted

My grieved ear withal; whereon I begg'd
His pardon for return.

Cæs. Which soon he granted, 60
Being an obstruct 'tween his lust and him.

Octa. Do not say so, my lord.

Cæs. I have eyes upon him,
And his affairs come to me on the wind.

Where is he now ?

Octa. My lord, in Athens.

Cæs. No, my most wronged sister :
Cleopatra 65

Hath nodded him to her. He hath given his empire

Up to a whore, who now are levying
The kings o' th' earth for war. He hath assembled

Bocchus, the king of Libya; Archelaus
Of Cappadocia; Philadelphos, king 70
Of Paphlagonia; the Thracian king,
Adallas;

King Manchus of Arabia; King of Pont;
Herod of Jewry; Mithridates, king
Of Comagene; Polemon and Amyntas,
The kings of Mede and Lycaonia, with a 75
More larger list of sceptres.

Octa. Ay me most wretched,
That have my heart parted betwixt two
friends,

That does afflict each other !

Cæs. Welcome hither.
Your letters did withhold our breaking
forth,

Till we perceiv'd both how you were wrong led 80

And we in negligent danger. Cheer your
heart;

Be you not troubled with the time, which drives

O'er your content these strong necessities,
But let determin'd things to destiny Hold unbewail'd their way. Welcome to Rome; 85

Nothing more dear to me. You are abus'd Beyond the mark of thought, and the high
gods,

To do you justice, make their ministers Of us and those that love you. Best of comfort,

And ever welcome to us.

Agr. Welcome, lady. 90

Mæc. Welcome, dear madam.
Each heart in Rome does love and pity you;
Only th' adulterous Antony, most large
In his abominations, turns you off,
And gives his potent regiment to a trull ⁹⁵
That noises it against us.

Octa. Is it so, sir?

Cæs. Most certain. Sister, welcome.
Pray you

Be ever known to patience. My dear'st sister! [Exeunt.]

SCENE VII. Antony's camp near Actium.

Enter CLEOPATRA and ENOBARBUS.

Cleo. I will be even with thee, doubt it
not.

Eno. But why, why, why?

Cleo. Thou hast forsake my being in these wars,
And say'st it is not fit.

Eno. Well, is it, is it?

Cleo. Is't not denounc'd against us?
Why should not we ⁵
Be there in person?

Eno. [Aside] Well, I could reply:
If we should serve with horse and mares
together

The horse were merely lost; the mares would bear

A soldier and his horse.

Cleo. What is't you say?

Eno. Your presence needs must puzzle
Antony; ¹⁰

Take from his heart, take from his brain,
from 's time,

What should not then be spar'd. He is already

Traduc'd for levity; and 'tis said in Rome
That Photinus an eunuch and your maids Manage this war.

Cleo. Sink Rome, and their tongues rot That speak against us! A charge we bear i'
th' war, ¹⁶

And, as the president of my kingdom, will Appear there for a man. Speak not against
it;

I will not stay behind.

Enter ANTONY and CANIDIUS.

Eno. Nay, I have done.
Here comes the Emperor.

Ant. Is it not strange, Canidius,
That from Tarentum and Brundisium ²¹
He could so quickly cut the Ionian sea,
And take in Toryne?—You have heard on't, sweet?

Cleo. Celerity is never more admir'd Than by the negligent.

Ant. A good rebuke, ²⁵
Which might have well becom'd the best of
men

To taunt at slackness. Canidius, we Will fight with him by sea.

1176

Cleo. By sea! What else?

Can. Why will my lord do so?

Ant. For that he dares us to 't.

Eno. So hath my lord dar'd him to single fight. ³⁰

Can. Ay, and to wage this battle at Pharsalia,

Where Cæsar fought with Pompey. But these offers,

Which serve not for his vantage, he shakes
off;

And so should you.

Eno. Your ships are not well mann'd;
Your mariners are muleteers, reapers, people ³⁵

Ingross'd by swift impress. In Cæsar's fleet
Are those that often have 'gainst Pompey
fought;

Their ships are yare; yours heavy. No disgrace

Shall fall you for refusing him at sea,
Being prepar'd for land.

Ant. By sea, by sea. ⁴⁰

Eno. Most worthy sir, you therein throw away

The absolute soldiership you have by land; Distract your army, which doth most consist

Of war-mark'd footmen; leave unexecuted

Your own renowned knowledge; quite forgo ⁴⁵

The way which promises assurance; and Give up yourself merely to chance and hazard

From firm security.

Ant. I'll fight at sea.

Cleo. I have sixty sails, Cæsar none better.

Ant. Our overplus of shipping will we burn, ⁵⁰

And, with the rest full-mann'd, from th'
head of Actium

Beat th' approaching Cæsar. But if we fail,
We then can do't at land.

Enter a Messenger.

Thy business?

Mess. The news is true, my lord: he is descried;

Cæsar has taken Toryne. ⁵⁵

Ant. Can he be there in person? 'Tis impossible—

Strange that his power should be. Canidius, Our nineteen legions thou shalt hold by
land,

And our twelve thousand horse. We'll to our ship.

Away, my Thetis!

Enter a Soldier.

How now, worthy soldier? ⁶⁰

Sold. O noble Emperor, do not fight by sea;

Trust not to rotten planks. Do you mis-doubt

This sword and these my wounds ? Let th'
Egyptians

And the Phœnicians go a-ducking ; we ⁶⁴
Have us'd to conquer standing on the earth
And fighting foot to foot.

Ant. Well, well—away.

[Exeunt Antony, Cleopatra, and Enobarbus.

Sold. By Hercules, I think I am i' th'
right.

Can. Soldier, thou art ; but his whole action grows

Not in the power on't. So our leader's led,
And we are women's men.

Sold. You keep by land
The legions and the horse whole, do you not ? ⁷¹

Can. Marcus Octavius, Marcus Justeius, Publicola, and Cælius are for sea ;

But we keep whole by land. This speed of Cæsar's

Carries beyond belief.

Sold. While he was yet in Rome,
His power went out in such distractions as Beguil'd all spies.

Can. Who's his lieutenant, hear you ?

Sold. They say one Taurus.

Can. Well I know the man.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. The Emperor calls Canidius.

Can. With news the time's with labour and throes forth ⁸⁰

Each minute some. [Exeunt.

SCENE VIII. A plain near Actium.

Enter CÆSAR, with his Army, marching.

Cæs. Taurus !

Taur. My lord ?

Cæs. Strike not by land ; keep whole ;
provoke not battle

Till we have done at sea. Do not exceed ⁴
The prescript of this scroll. Our fortune lies Upon this jump. [Exeunt.

SCENE IX. Another part of the plain.

Enter ANTONY and ENOBARBUS.

Ant. Set we our squadrons on yond side
o' th' hill,

In eye of Cæsar's battle ; from which place
We may the number of the ships behold,
And so proceed accordingly. [Exeunt.

SCENE X. Another part of the plain.

CANIDIUS marcheth with his land Army one way over the stage, and TAURUS, the Lieutenant of Cæsar, the other way.
After their going in is heard the noise of a sea-fight.

Alarum. Enter ENOBARBUS.

Eno. Naught, naught, all naught ! I can behold no longer.

Th' Antoniad, the Egyptian admiral,
With all their sixty, fly and turn the rudder.
To see't mine eyes are blasted.

Enter SCARUS.

Scar. Gods and goddesses,
All the whole synod of them !

Eno. What's thy passion ? ⁵

Scar. The greater cantle of the world is lost

With very ignorance ; we have kiss'd away
Kingdoms and provinces.

Eno. How appears the fight ?

Scar. On our side like the token'd pestilence,

Where death is sure. Yon ribaudred nag of Egypt— ¹⁰

Whom leprosy o'ertake !—i' th' midst o'
th' fight,

When vantage like a pair of twins appear'd,
Both as the same, or rather ours the elder—
The breeze upon her, like a cow in June—Hoists sails and flies. ¹⁵

Ero. That I beheld ;

Mine eyes did sicken at the sight and could
not

Endure a further view.

Scar. She once being loof'd,
The noble ruin of her magic, Antony, Claps on his sea-wing, and, like a doting
mallard, ²⁰

Leaving the fight in height, flies after her.
I never saw an action of such shame ;
Experience, manhood, honour, ne'er before
Did violate so itself.

Eno. Alack, alack !

Enter CANIDIUS.

Can. Our fortune on the sea is out of breath, ²⁵

And sinks most lamentably. Had our general

Been what he knew himself, it had gone
well.

O, he has given example for our flight
Most grossly by his own !

Eno. Ay, are you thereabouts ?
Why then, good night indeed. ³⁰

Can. Toward Peloponnesus are they fled.

Scar. 'Tis easy to't ; and there I will attend

What further comes.

Can. To Cæsar will I render
My legions and my horse ; six kings already Show me the way of yielding.

Eno. I'll yet follow ³⁵
The wounded chance of Antony, though my
reason

Sits in the wind against me. [Exeunt.

SCENE XI. Alexandria. Cleopatra's palace.

Enter ANTONY with Attendants.

Ant. Hark ! the land bids me tread no more upon't ;
It is asham'd to bear me. Friends, come hither.

I am so lated in the world that I Have lost my way for ever. I have a ship Laden with gold ; take that ; divide it.
Fly, 5

And make your peace with Cæsar.

All. Fly ? Not we !

Ant. I have fled myself, and have instructed cowards

To run and show their shoulders. Friends, be gone ;

I have myself resolv'd upon a course
Which has no need of you ; be gone. 10

My treasure's in the harbour, take it. O,
I follow'd that I blush to look upon.

My very hairs do mutiny ; for the white
Reprove the brown for rashness, and they them

For fear and doting. Friends, be gone ;
you shall 15

Have letters from me to some friends that will Sweep your way for you. Pray you look not sad,

Nor make replies of loathness ; take the hint

Which my despair proclaims. Let that be left

Which leaves itself. To the sea-side straight way. 20

I will possess you of that ship and treasure.
Leave me, I pray, a little ; pray you now ;

Nay, do so, for indeed I have lost command ;
Therefore I pray you. I'll see you by and by.

[Sits down.]

Enter CLEOPATRA, led by CHARMIAN and IRAS, EROS following.

Eros. Nay, gentle madam, to him ! Comfort him. 25

Iras. Do, most dear Queen.

Char. Do ? Why, what else ?

Cleo. Let me sit down. O Juno !

Ant. No, no, no, no, no.

Eros. See you here, sir ? 30

Ant. O, fie, fie, fie !

Char. Madam !

Iras. Madam, O good Empress !

Eros. Sir, sir !

Ant. Yes, my lord, yes. He at Philippi kept 35

His sword e'en like a dancer, while I struck
The lean and wrinkled Cassius ; and 'twas I
That the mad Brutus ended ; he alone Dealt on lieutenantry, and no practice had
In the brave squares of war. Yet now—no matter. 40

Cleo. Ah, stand by !

Eros. The Queen, my lord, the Queen !
Iras. Go to him, madam, speak to him.
He is unqualitied with very shame.

Cleo. Well then, sustain me. O ! 45

Eros. Most noble sir, arise ; the Queen approaches.

Her head's declin'd, and death will seize her but

Your comfort makes the rescue.

Ant. I have offended reputation—

A most unnoble swerving.

Eros. Sir, the Queen. 50

Ant. O, whither hast thou led me, Egypt ?
See

How I convey my shame out of thine eyes

By looking back what I have left behind
'Stroy'd in dishonour.

Cleo. O my lord, my lord, 54
Forgive my fearful sails ! I little thought
You would have followed.

Ant. Egypt, thou knew'st too well
My heart was to thy rudder tied by th'

strings,
And thou shouldst tow me after. O'er my spirit

Thy full supremacy thou knew'st, and that Thy beck might from the bidding of the gods 60

Command me.

Cleo. O, my pardon !

Ant. Now I must
To the young man send humble treaties, dodge

And palter in the shifts of lowness, who With half the bulk o' th' world play'd as I pleas'd,

Making and marring fortunes. You did know 65

How much you were my conqueror, and that

My sword, made weak by my affection,
would

Obeys it on all cause.

Cleo. Pardon, pardon !

Ant. Fall not a tear, I say ; one of them rates

All that is won and lost. Give me a kiss ; 70
Even this repays me.

We sent our schoolmaster ; is 'a come back ?
Love, I am full of lead. Some wine,

Within there, and our viands ! Fortune knows

We scorn her most when most she offers blows. [Exeunt.]

SCENE XII. Cæsar's camp in Egypt.

Enter CÆSAR, AGRIPPA, DOLABELLA, THYREUS, with Others.

Cæs. Let him appear that's come from Antony.

Know you him ?

Dol. Cæsar, 'tis his schoolmaster :

An argument that he is pluck'd, when hither
He sends so poor a pinion of his wing, 4
Which had superfluous kings for messengers
Not many moons gone by.

*Enter EUPHRONIUS, Ambassador from
Antony.*

Cæs. Approach, and speak.

Eup. Such as I am, I come from Antony.
I was of late as petty to his ends
As is the morn-dew on the myrtle leaf
To his grand sea.

Cæs. Be't so. Declare thine office. 10

Eup. Lord of his fortunes he salutes thee,
and Requires to live in Egypt; which not granted,

He lessens his requests and to thee sues
To let him breathe between the heavens and earth,

A private man in Athens. This for him. 15
Next, Cleopatra does confess thy greatness,
Submits her to thy might, and of thee craves
The circle of the Ptolemies for her heirs,
Now hazarded to thy grace.

Cæs. For Antony,
I have no ears to his request. The Queen 20
Of audience nor desire shall fail, so she
From Egypt drive her all-disgraced friend,
Or take his life there. This if she perform,
She shall not sue unheard. So to them both.

Eup. Fortune pursue thee!

Cæs. Bring him through the bands.
[Exit Euphronius.
[To Thyreus] To try thy eloquence, now 'tis time. Dispatch; 26

From Antony win Cleopatra. Promise,
And in our name, what she requires; add
more,

From thine invention, offers. Women are
not

In their best fortunes strong; but want will perjure 30

The ne'er-touch'd vestal. Try thy cunning, Thyreus;

Make thine own edict for thy pains, which we

Will answer as a law.

Thyr. Cæsar, I go.

Cæs. Observe how Antony becomes his flaw,
And what thou think'st his very action speaks 35

In every power that moves.

Thyr. Cæsar, I shall. [Exeunt.

SCENE XIII. Alexandria. Cleopatra's
palace.

Enter CLEOPATRA, ENOBARBUS, CHARMIAN, and IRAS.

Cleo. What shall we do, Enobarbus?

Eno. Think, and die.

Cleo. Is Antony or we in fault for this?

Eno. Antony only, that would make his
will

Lord of his reason. What though you fled

From that great face of war, whose several ranges 5

Frighted each other? Why should he follow?

The itch of his affection should not then Have nick'd his captainship, at such a point,

When half to half the world oppos'd, he being

The mered question. 'Twas a shame no less 10

Than was his loss, to course your flying flags

And leave his navy gazing.

Cleo. Prithee, peace.

Enter EUPHRONIUS, the Ambassador; with ANTONY.

Ant. Is that his answer?

Eup. Ay, my lord.

Ant. The Queen shall then have courtesy, so she 15

Will yield us up.

Eup. He says so.

Ant. Let her know't.

To the boy Cæsar send this grizzled head,
And he will fill thy wishes to the brim
With principalities.

Cleo. That head, my lord?

Ant. To him again. Tell him he wears the rose 20

Of youth upon him; from which the world should note

Something particular. His coin, ships, legions,

May be a coward's, whose ministers would prevail

Under the service of a child as soon

As i' th' command of Cæsar. I dare him
therefore 25

To lay his gay comparisons apart,

And answer me declin'd, sword against
sword,

Ourselves alone. I'll write it. Follow me.
[Exeunt Antony and Euphronius.

Eno. [Aside] Yes, like enough high-battled Cæsar will

Unstate his happiness, and be stag'd to th'
show 30

Against a sword! I see men's judgments
are

A parcel of their fortunes, and things outward

Do draw the inward quality after them,
To suffer all alike. That he should dream,

Knowing all measures, the full Cæsar will 35

Answer his emptiness! Cæsar, thou hast
subdu'd

His judgment too.

Enter a Servant.

Serv. A messenger from Cæsar.

Cleo. What, no more ceremony? See, my women!

Against the blown rose may they stop their nose

That kneel'd unto the buds. Admit him, sir. [Exit Servant.]

Eno. [Aside] Mine honesty and I begin to square. ⁴¹

The loyalty well held to fools does make Our faith mere folly. Yet he that can endure

To follow with allegiance a fall'n lord Does conquer him that did his master conquer, ⁴⁵

And earns a place i' th' story.

Enter THYREUS.

Cleo. Cæsar's will?

Thyr. Hear it apart.

Cleo. None but friends: say boldly.

Thyr. So, haply, are they friends to Antony.

Eno. He needs as many, sir, as Cæsar has, Or needs not us. If Cæsar please, our master ⁵⁰

Will leap to be his friend. For us, you know Whose he is we are, and that is Cæsar's.

Thyr. So. Thus then, thou most renown'd: Cæsar entreats

Not to consider in what case thou stand'st Further than he is Cæsar.

Cleo. Go on. Right royal! ⁵⁵

Thyr. He knows that you embrace not Antony

As you did love, but as you fear'd him.

Cleo. O!

Thyr. The scars upon your honour, therefore, he Does pity, as constrained blemishes, Not as deserv'd.

Cleo. He is a god, and knows ⁶⁰ What is most right. Mine honour was not yielded,

But conquer'd merely.

Eno. [Aside] To be sure of that, I will ask Antony. Sir, sir, thou art so leaky

That we must leave thee to thy sinking, for Thy dearest quit thee. [Exit.]

Thyr. Shall I say to Cæsar ⁶⁵ What you require of him? For he partly begs

To be desir'd to give. It much would please him

That of his fortunes you should make a staff To lean upon. But it would warm his spirits To hear from me you had left Antony, ⁷⁰ And put yourself under his shroud, The universal landlord.

Cleo. What's your name?

Thyr. My name is Thyreus.

Cleo. Most kind messenger, Say to great Cæsar this: in deputation I kiss his conqu'ring hand. Tell him I am prompt ⁷⁵

To lay my crown at 's feet, and there to kneel.

Tell him from his all-obeying breath I hear The doom of Egypt.

Thyr. 'Tis your noblest course. Wisdom and fortune combating together, If that the former dare but what it can, ⁸⁰ No chance may shake it. Give me grace to lay

My duty on your hand.

Cleo. Your Cæsar's father oft, When he hath mus'd of taking kingdoms in, Bestow'd his lips on that unworthy place, As it rain'd kisses.

Re-enter ANTONY and ENOBARBUS.

Ant. Favours, by Jove that thunders! What art thou, fellow?

Thyr. One that but performs The bidding of the fullest man, and worthiest ⁸⁷

To have command obey'd.

Eno. [Aside] You will be whipt.

Ant. Approach there.—Ah, you kite!— Now, gods and devils!

Authority melts from me. Of late, when I cried 'Ho!' ⁹⁰

Like boys unto a muss, kings would start forth

And cry 'Your will?' Have you no ears? I am Antony yet.

Enter Servants.

Take hence this Jack and whip him.

Eno. 'Tis better playing with a lion's whelp

Than with an old one dying.

Ant. Moon and stars! ⁹⁵

Whip him. Were't twenty of the greatest tributaries

That do acknowledge Cæsar, should I find them

So saucy with the hand of she here—what's her name

Since she was Cleopatra? Whip him, fellows, ⁹⁹

Till like a boy you see him cringe his face, And whine aloud for mercy. Take him hence.

Thyr. Mark Antony—

Ant. Tug him away. Being whipt, Bring him again: the Jack of Cæsar's shall Bear us an errand to him. ¹⁰⁴

[Exeunt Servants with Thyreus.]

You were half blasted ere I knew you. Ha! Have I my pillow left unpress'd in Rome, Forborne the getting of a lawful race, And by a gem of women, to be abus'd?

By one that looks on feeders ?
Cleo. Good my lord—
Ant. You have been a boggler ever. 110
But when we in our viciousness grow
hard—
O misery on't !—the wise gods seel our eyes,
In our own filth drop our clear judgments,
make us
Adore our errors, laugh at's while we strut
To our confusion.
Cleo. O, is't come to this ? 115
Ant. I found you as a morsel cold upon Dead Cæsar's trencher. Nay, you were a fragment
Of Cneius Pompey's, besides what hotter
hours,
Unregist'ed in vulgar fame, you have Luxuriously pick'd out ; for I am sure, 120
Though you can guess what temperance
should be,
You know not what it is.
Cleo. Wherefore is this ?
Ant. To let a fellow that will take rewards, 123
And say ' God quit you ! ' be familiar with My playfellow, your hand, this kingly seal
And plighter of high hearts ! O that I were Upon the hill of Basan to outroar
The horned herd ! For I have savage cause,
And to proclaim it civilly were like A halter'd neck which does the hangman thank 130
For being yare about him.
Re-enter a Servant with THYREUS.
Is he whipt ?
Serv. Soundly, my lord.
Ant. Cried he ? and begg'd 'a pardon ?
Serv. He did ask favour.
Ant. If that thy father live, let him repent
Thou wast not made his daughter ; and be thou sorry
To follow Cæsar in his triumph, since 136
Thou hast been whipt for following him.
Henceforth
The white hand of a lady fever thee !
Shake thou to look on't. Get thee back to Cæsar ;
Tell him thy entertainment ; look thou say He makes me angry with him ; for he seems 141
Proud and disdainful, harping on what I am,
Not what he knew I was. He makes me angry ;
And at this time most easy 'tis to do't,
When my good stars, that were my former guides, 145
Have empty left their orbs and shot their fires
Into th' abysm of hell. If he mislike
My speech and what is done, tell him he has

Hipparchus, my enfranch'd bondman, whom
He may at pleasure whip or hang or torture, 150
As he shall like, to quit me. Urge it thou.
Hence with thy stripes, be gone.
[Exit Thyreus.
Cleo. Have you done yet ?
Ant. Alack, our terrene moon
Is now eclips'd, and it portends alone
The fall of Antony.
Cleo. I must stay his time. 155
Ant. To flatter Cæsar, would you mingle
eyes
With one that ties his points ?
Cleo. Not know me yet ?
Ant. Cold-hearted toward me ?
Cleo. Ah, dear, if I be so,
From my cold heart let heaven engender
hail,
And poison it in the source, and the first
stone 160
Drop in my neck ; as it determines, so Dissolve my life ! The next Cæsarion smite!
Till by degrees the memory of my womb,
Together with my brave Egyptians all, 164
By the discandying of this pelleted storm,
Lie graveless, till the flies and gnats of Nile
Have buried them for prey.
Ant. I am satisfied.
Cæsar sits down in Alexandria, where
I will oppose his fate. Our force by land
Hath nobly held ; our sever'd navy too 170
Have knit again, and fleet, threat'ning most sea-like.
Where hast thou been, my heart ? Dost thou hear, lady ?
If from the field I shall return once more
To kiss these lips, I will appear in blood.
I and my sword will earn our chronicle. 175
There's hope in't yet.
Cleo. That's my brave lord !
Ant. I will be treble-sinew'd, hearted,
breath'd,
And fight maliciously. For when mine
hours 179
Were nice and lucky, men did ransom lives
Of me for jests ; but now I'll set my teeth,
And send to darkness all that stop me.
Come,
Let's have one other gaudy night. Call to
me
All my sad captains ; fill our bowls once
more ;
Let's mock the midnight bell.
Cleo. It is my birthday. 185
I had thought t'have held it poor ; but since my lord
Is Antony again, I will be Cleopatra.
Ant. We will yet do well.
Cleo. Call all his noble captains to my lord.
Ant. Do so, we'll speak to them ; and to-night I'll force 190

The wine peep through their scars. Come on, my queen, There's sap in't yet. The next time I do fight
I'll make death love me; for I will contend Even with his pestilent scythe.

[Exeunt all but Enobarbus.]

Eno. Now he'll outstare the lightning.
To be furious¹⁹⁵
Is to be frightened out of fear, and in that mood
The dove will peck the estridge; and I see still A diminution in our captain's brain
Restores his heart. When valour preys on reason,¹⁹⁹
It eats the sword it fights with. I will seek Some way to leave him. [Exit.]

ACT FOUR

SCENE I. Cæsar's camp before Alexandria.

Enter CÆSAR, AGRIPPA, and MÆCENAS, with his Army; Cæsar reading a letter.

Cæs. He calls me boy, and chides as he had power
To beat me out of Egypt. My messenger
He hath whipt with rods; dares me to personal combat, Cæsar to Antony. Let the old ruffian know
I have many other ways to die, meantime Laugh at his challenge.

Mæc. Cæsar must think,⁶
When one so great begins to rage, he's hunted Even to falling. Give him no breath, but now Make boot of his distraction. Never anger
Made good guard for itself.

Cæs. Let our best heads
Know that to-morrow the last of many battles¹¹
We mean to fight. Within our files there are
Of those that serv'd Mark Antony but late Enough to fetch him in. See it done;¹⁴
And feast the army; we have store to do't,
And they have earn'd the waste. Poor Antony!
[Exeunt.]

SCENE II. Alexandria. Cleopatra's palace.

Enter ANTONY, CLEOPATRA, ENOBARBUS, CHARMIAN, IRAS, ALEXAS, with Others.

Ant. He will not fight with me, Domitius?
Eno. No.

Ant. Why should he not?

Eno. He thinks, being twenty times of better fortune,

He is twenty men to one.

Ant. To-morrow, soldier,
By sea and land I'll fight. Or I will live,⁵
Or bathe my dying honour in the blood

Shall make it live again. Woo't thou fight well?

Eno. I'll strike, and cry 'Take all'.

Ant. Well said; come on.

Call forth my household servants; let's to-night

Be bounteous at our meal.

Enter three or four Servitors.

Give me thy hand,¹⁰
Thou hast been rightly honest. So hast thou;

Thou, and thou, and thou. You have serv'd me well,

And kings have been your fellows.

Cleo. [Aside to Enobarbus] What means this?

Eno. [Aside to Cleopatra] 'Tis one of those odd tricks which sorrow shoots
Out of the mind.

Ant. And thou art honest too.¹⁵

I wish I could be made so many men,
And all of you clapp'd up together in An Antony, that I might do you service
So good as you have done.

Serv. The gods forbid!

Ant. Well, my good fellows, wait on me to-night.²⁰

Scant not my cups, and make as much of me

As when mine empire was your fellow too,
And suffer'd my command.

Cleo. [Aside to Enobarbus] What does he mean?

Eno. [Aside to Cleopatra] To make his followers weep.

Ant. Tend me to-night;

May be it is the period of your duty.²⁵

Haply you shall not see me more; or if,
A mangled shadow. Perchance to-morrow
You'll serve another master. I look on you

As one that takes his leave. Mine honest friends,

I turn you not away; but, like a master³⁰
Married to your good service, stay till death.
Tend me to-night two hours, I ask no more,
And the gods yield you for't!

Eno. What mean you, sir,
To give them this discomfort? Look, they weep;³⁴

And I, an ass, am onion-ey'd. For shame!
Transform us not to women.

Ant. Ho, ho, ho!

Now the witch take me if I meant it thus!
Grace grow where those drops fall! My hearty friends,

You take me in too dolorous a sense;
For I spake to you for your comfort, did desire you⁴⁰

To burn this night with torches. Know, my hearts,

I hope well of to-morrow, and will lead you
Where rather I'll expect victorious life

Than death and honour. Let's to supper,
come,
And drown consideration. [Exeunt.

SCENE III. Alexandria. Before Cleopatra's
palace.

Enter a Company of Soldiers.

1 Sold. Brother, good night. To-morrow is the day.
2 Sold. It will determine one way. Fare you well.
Heard you of nothing strange about the streets?
1 Sold. Nothing. What news?
2 Sold. Belike 'tis but a rumour. Good night to you. 5
1 Sold. Well, sir, good night.

They meet other Soldiers.

2 Sold. Soldiers, have careful watch.
1 Sold. And you. Good night, good night.
[The two companies separate and place themselves in every corner of the stage.
2 Sold. Here we. And if to-morrow 9
Our navy thrive, I have an absolute hope
Our landmen will stand up.
3 Sold. 'Tis a brave army,
And full of purpose.

[Music of the hautboys is under the stage.]

2 Sold. Peace, what noise?
3 Sold. List, list!
2 Sold. Hark!
3 Sold. Music i' th' air.
4 Sold. Under the earth.
5 Sold. It signs well, does it not?
4 Sold. No.
3 Sold. Peace, I say!
What should this mean? 15
2 Sold. 'Tis the god Hercules, whom Antony lov'd,
Now leaves him.

3 Sold. Walk; let's see if other watchmen
Do hear what we do.

2 Sold. How now, masters! 19
Soldiers. [Speaking together] How now!
How now! Do you hear this?

1 Sold. Ay; is't not strange?
3 Sold. Do you hear, masters? Do you hear?

1 Sold. Follow the noise so far as we have quarter;

Let's see how it will give off. 25
Soldiers. Content. 'Tis strange. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV. Alexandria. Cleopatra's palace.

Enter ANTONY and CLEOPATRA, CHARMIAN, IRAS, with Others.

Ant. Eros! mine armour, Eros!

Cleo. Sleep a little.

Ant. No, my chuck. Eros! Come, mine armour, Eros!

Enter EROS with armour.

Come, good fellow, put mine iron on.
If fortune be not ours to-day, it is Because we brave her. Come.

Cleo. Nay, I'll help too. 5

What's this for?

Ant. Ah, let be, let be! Thou art
The armourer of my heart. False, false;
this, this.

Cleo. Sooth, la, I'll help. Thus it must be.

Ant. Well, well;

We shall thrive now. Seest thou, my good fellow?

Go put on thy defences.

Eros. Briefly, sir. 10

Cleo. Is not this buckled well?

Ant. Rarely, rarely!

He that unbuckles this, till we do please
To daff't for our repose, shall hear a storm.
Thou fumblest, Eros, and my queen's a squire

More tight at this than thou. Dispatch. O
love, 15

That thou couldst see my wars to-day, and knew'st

The royal occupation! Thou shouldst see
A workman in't.

Enter an armed Soldier.

Good-morrow to thee. Welcome.
Thou look'st like him that knows a warlike
charge.

To business that we love we rise betime, 20
And go to't with delight.

Sold. A thousand, sir,

Early though't be, have on their riveted
trim,

And at the port expect you.

[Shout. Flourish of trumpets within.]

Enter Captains and Soldiers.

Capt. The morn is fair. Good morrow,
General.

All. Good morrow, General.

Ant. 'Tis well blown, lads. 25

This morning, like the spirit of a youth
That means to be of note, begins betimes.
So, so. Come, give me that. This way.
Well said.

Fare thee well, dame, whate'er becomes of
me.

This is a soldier's kiss. Rebukeable, 30
And worthy shameful check it were, to stand

On more mechanic compliment; I'll leave
thee

Now like a man of steel. You that will
fight,

Follow me close; I'll bring you to't. Adieu.

[Exeunt Antony, Eros, Captains and Soldiers.]

Char. Please you retire to your chamber?

Cleo. Lead me.

He goes forth gallantly. That he and Caesar might³⁶
 Determine this great war in single fight!
 Then, Antony—but now. Well, on.
 [Exeunt.]

SCENE V. Alexandria. Antony's camp.
Trumpets sound. Enter ANTONY and EROS, a Soldier meeting them.

Sold. The gods make this a happy day
 to Antony!
 Ant. Would thou and those thy scars had once prevail'd
 To make me fight at land!
 Sold. Hadst thou done so The kings that have revolted, and the soldier
 That has this morning left thee, would have still⁵
 Followed thy heels.

Ant. Who's gone this morning?
 Sold. Who?
 One ever near thee. Call for Enobarbus,
 He shall not hear thee; or from Cæsar's
 camp

Say 'I am none of thine'.
 Ant. What say'st thou?
 Sold. Sir,
 He is with Cæsar.

Eros. Sir, his chests and treasure
 He has not with him.

Ant. Is he gone?
 Sold. Most certain.

Ant. Go, Eros, send his treasure after;
 do it;¹²
 Detain no jot, I charge thee. Write to
 him—

I will subscribe—gentle adieus and greetings;

Say that I wish he never find more cause¹⁵
 To change a master. O, my fortunes have Corrupted honest men! Dispatch. Eno-barbus!
 [Exeunt.]

SCENE VI. Alexandria. Cæsar's camp.
Flourish. Enter AGRIPPA, CÆSAR, with DOLABELLA and ENOBARBUS.

Cæs. Go forth, Agrippa, and begin the fight.

Our will is Antony be took alive;
 Make it so known.

Agr. Cæsar, I shall. [Exit.]
 Cæs. The time of universal peace is near.

Prove this a prosp'rous day, the threenook'd world⁶

Shall bear the olive freely.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Antony
 Is come into the field.

Cæs. Go charge Agrippa
 Plant those that have revolted in the vant,

That Antony may seem to spend his fury¹⁰
 Upon himself. [Exeunt all but Enobarbus.
 Eno. Alexas did revolt and went to Jewry on

Affairs of Antony; there did dissuade
 Great Herod to incline himself to Cæsar
 And leave his master Antony. For this¹⁵
 pains Cæsar hath hang'd him. Canidius and the rest

That fell away have entertainment, but
 No honourable trust. I have done ill,
 Of which I do accuse myself so sorely
 That I will joy no more.

Enter a Soldier of Cæsar's.

Sold. Enobarbus, Antony²⁰
 Hath after thee sent all thy treasure, with His bounty overplus. The messenger Came on my guard, and at thy tent is now
 Unloading of his mules.

Eno. I give it you.

Sold. Mock not, Enobarbus.²⁵
 I tell you true. Best you saf'd the bringer
 Out of the host. I must attend mine office,
 Or would have done't myself. Your emperor Continues still a Jove. [Exit.]

Eno. I am alone the villain of the earth,
 And feel I am so most. O Antony,³¹
 Thou mine of bounty, how wouldst thou have paid

My better service, when my turpitude Thou dost so crown with gold! This blows my heart.

If swift thought break it not, a swifter mean³⁶ Shall outstrike thought; but thought will do't, I feel.

I fight against thee? No! I will go seek Some ditch wherein to die; the foul'st best fits

My latter part of life. [Exit.]

SCENE VII. Field of battle between the camps.

Alarum. Drums and trumpets. Enter
AGRIPPA and Others.

Agr. Retire. We have engag'd ourselves too far.

Cæsar himself has work, and our oppression
 Exceeds what we expected. [Exeunt.]

Alarums. Enter ANTONY, and SCARUS wounded.

Scar. O my brave Emperor, this is fought
 indeed!

Had we done so at first, we had droven them home⁵

With clouts about their heads.

Ant. Thou bleed'st apace.

Scar. I had a wound here that was like a T,

But now 'tis made an H.

Ant. They do retire.

Scar. We'll beat 'em into bench-holes. I have yet Room for six scotches more. 10

Enter EROS.

Eros. They are beaten, sir, and our advantage serves
For a fair victory.

Scar. Let us score their backs
And snatch 'em up, as we take hares, behind.
'Tis sport to maul a runner.

Ant. I will reward thee
Once for thy sprightly comfort, and tenfold
For thy good valour. Come thee on.

Scar. I'll halt after. [Exeunt.]

SCENE VIII. Under the walls of Alexandria.

Alarum. Enter ANTONY, again in a march ;
SCARUS with Others.

Ant. We have beat him to his camp. Run one before

And let the Queen know of our gests.
To-morrow,

Before the sun shall see's, we'll spill the
blood

That has to-day escap'd. I thank you all ;
For doughty-handed are you, and have
fought 5

Not as you serv'd the cause, but as't had been

Each man's like mine ; you have shown all Hectors.

Enter the city, clip your wives, your friends,
Tell them your feats ; whilst they with joyful tears

Wash the congealment from your wounds and kiss 10

The honour'd gashes whole.

Enter CLEOPATRA, attended.

[To Scarus] Give me thy hand.—
To this great fairy I'll commend thy acts,

Make her thanks bless thee. O thou day o'
th' world,

Chain mine arm'd neck. Leap thou, attire
and all,

Through proof of harness to my heart, and
there 15

Ride on the pants triumphing.

Cleo. Lord of lords !
O infinite virtue, com'st thou smiling from
The world's great snare uncaught ?

Ant. Mine nightingale,
We have beat them to their beds. What, girl ! though grey

Do something mingle with our younger brown, yet ha' we 20

A brain that nourishes our nerves, and can Get goal for goal of youth. Behold this man ; Commend unto his lips thy favouring
hand—

Kiss it, my warrior—he hath fought today

As if a god in hate of mankind had Destroyed in such a shape. 25

Cleo. I'll give thee, friend,
An armour all of gold ; it was a king's.

Ant. He has deserv'd it, were it carbuncled

Like holy Phœbus' car. Give me thy hand.
Through Alexandria make a jolly march ;
Bear our hack'd targets like the men that owe them. 31

Had our great palace the capacity
To camp this host, we all would sup
together,

And drink carouses to the next day's fate,
Which promises royal peril. Trumpeters, 35
With brazen din blast you the city's ear ;
Make mingle with our rattling tabourines,
That heaven and earth may strike their sounds together,

Applauding our approach. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IX. Cæsar's camp.

Enter a Centurion and his Company ;
ENOBARBUS follows.

Cent. If we be not reliev'd within this hour,

We must return to th' court of guard. The
night

Is shiny, and they say we shall embattle
By th' second hour i' th' morn.

1 Watch. This last day was A shrewd one to's.

Eno. O, bear me witness, night— 5
2 Watch. What man is this ?

1 Watch Stand close and list him.
Eno. Be witness to me, O thou blessed
moon,

When men revolted shall upon record
Bear hateful memory, poor Enobarbus did Before thy face repent !

Cent. Enobarbus ?
2 Watch. Peace ! 10

Hark further.
Eno. O sovereign mistress of true
melancholy,

The poisonous damp of night disponge upon
me,

That life, a very rebel to my will,
May hang no longer on me. Throw my
heart 15

Against the flint and hardness of my fault,

Which, being dried with grief, will break
to powder,

And finish all foul thoughts. O Antony,
Nobler than my revolt is infamous,
Forgive me in thine own particular, 20

But let the world rank me in register
A master-leaver and a fugitive !

O Antony ! O Antony ! [Dies.]
1 Watch. Let's speak to him.

Cent. Let's hear him, for the things he speaks ²⁴

May concern Cæsar.

2 Watch. Let's do so. But he sleeps.

Cent. Swoons rather; for so bad a prayer as his

Was never yet for sleep.

1 Watch. Go we to him.

2 Watch. Awake, sir, awake; speak to us.

1 Watch. Hear you, sir?

Cent. The hand of death hath raught him.

[Drums afar off] Hark! the drums

Demurely wake the sleepers. Let us bear him ³⁰

To th' court of guard; he is of note. Our hour

Is fully out.

2 Watch. Come on, then;

He may recover yet. [Exeunt with the body.]

SCENE X. Between the two camps.

Enter ANTONY and SCARUS, with their Army.

Ant. Their preparation is to-day by sea; We please them not by land.

Scar. For both, my lord.

Ant. I would they'd fight i' th' fire or i' th' air;

We'd fight there too. But this it is, our foot Upon the hills adjoining to the city ⁵

Shall stay with us—Order for sea is given; They have put forth the haven—

Where their appointment we may best discover

And look on their endeavour. [Exeunt.]

SCENE XI. Between the camps.

Enter CÆSAR and his Army.

Cæs. But being charg'd, we will be still by land,

Which, as I take't, we shall; for his best force

Is forth to man his galleys. To the vales, And hold our best advantage. [Exeunt.]

SCENE XII. A hill near Alexandria.

Enter ANTONY and SCARUS.

Ant. Yet they are not join'd. Where yond pine does stand

I shall discover all. I'll bring thee word Straight how 'tis like to go. [Exit.]

Scar. Swallows have built In Cleopatra's sails their nests. The augurers

Say they know not, they cannot tell; look grimly, ⁵

And dare not speak their knowledge. Antony

Is valiant and dejected; and by starts His fretted fortunes give him hope and fear

Of what he has and has not.

[Alarum afar off, as at a sea-fight.]

Re-enter ANTONY.

Ant. All is lost!

This foul Egyptian hath betrayed me. ¹⁰ My fleet hath yielded to the foe, and yonder

They cast their caps up and carouse together

Like friends long lost. Triple-turn'd whore! 'tis thou

Hast sold me to this novice; and my heart Makes only wars on thee. Bid them all fly;

For when I am reveng'd upon my charm, I have done all. Bid them all fly; begone.

[Exit Scarus.]

O sun, thy uprise shall I see no more!

Fortune and Antony part here; even here Do we shake hands. All come to this? The hearts ²⁰

That spaniel'd me at heels, to whom I gave Their wishes, do discandy, melt their sweets

On blossoming Cæsar; and this pine is bark'd

That overtopp'd them all. Betray'd I am. O this false soul of Egypt! this grave charm— ²⁵

Whose eye beck'd forth my wars and call'd them home,

Whose bosom was my crownet, my chief end—

Like a right gipsy hath at fast and loose Beguil'd me to the very heart of loss.

What, Eros, Eros!

Enter CLEOPATRA.

Ah, thou spell! Avaunt! ³⁰

Cleo. Why is my lord enrag'd against his love?

Ant. Vanish, or I shall give thee thy deserving

And blemish Cæsar's triumph. Let him take thee

And hoist thee up to the shouting plebeians; Follow his chariot, like the greatest spot ³⁵

Of all thy sex; most monster-like, be shown

For poor'st diminutives, for doits, and let Patient Octavia plough thy visage up

With her prepared nails. [Exit Cleopatra.] 'Tis well th'art gone,

If it be well to live; but better 'twere ⁴⁰ Thou tell'st into my fury, for one death

Might have prevented many. Eros, ho! The shirt of Nessus is upon me; teach

me,

Alcides, thou mine ancestor, thy rage; Let me lodge Lichas on the horns o' th' ⁴⁵

moon,

And with those hands that grasp'd the heaviest club

Subdue my worthiest self. The witch shall die.

To the young Roman boy she hath sold me, and I fall

Under this plot. She dies for't. Eros, ho!
[Exit.]

SCENE XIII. Alexandria. Cleopatra's palace.

Enter CLEOPATRA, CHARMIAN, IRAS, and MARDIAN.

Cleo. Help me, my women. O, he is more mad
Than Telamon for his shield; the boar of Thessaly
Was never so emboss'd.

Char. To th' monument!
There lock yourself, and send him word you are dead.

The soul and body rive not more in parting
Than greatness going off.

Cleo. To th' monument!
Mardian, go tell him I have slain myself;
Say that the last I spoke was 'Antony'
And word it, prithee, piteously. Hence,
Mardian,

And bring me how he takes my death. To th' monument! [Exeunt.]

SCENE XIV. Cleopatra's palace.

Enter ANTONY and EROS.

Ant. Eros, thou yet behold'st me?

Eros. Ay, noble lord.

Ant. Sometime we see a cloud that's dragonish;

A vapour sometime like a bear or lion,
A tower'd citadel, a pendent rock,
A forked mountain, or blue promontory
With trees upon't that nod unto the world

And mock our eyes with air. Thou hast seen these signs;
They are black vesper's pageants.

Eros. Ay, my lord.

Ant. That which is now a horse, even with a thought

The rack dislimns, and makes it indistinct,
As water is in water.

Eros. It does, my lord.

Ant. My good knave Eros, now thy captain is

Even such a body. Here I am Antony; Yet cannot hold this visible shape, my knave.

I made these wars for Egypt; and the Queen—

Whose heart I thought I had, for she had
mine,

Which, whilst it was mine, had annex'd unto't

A million moe, now lost—she, Eros, has Pack'd cards with Cæsar, and false-play'd my glory

Unto an enemy's triumph.

Nay, weep not, gentle Eros; there is left us
Ourselves to end ourselves.

Enter MARDIAN.

O, thy vile lady!
She has robb'd me of my sword.

Mar. No, Antony;
My mistress lov'd thee, and her fortunes mingled
With thine entirely.

Ant. Hence, saucy eunuch; peace!
She hath betray'd me, and shall die the
death.

Mar. Death of one person can be paid but
once,
And that she has discharg'd. What thou wouldst do

Is done unto thy hand. The last she spake
Was 'Antony! most noble Antony!'
Then in the midst a tearing groan did break
The name of Antony; it was divided Between her heart and lips. She rend'ed
life,

Thy name so buried in her.

Ant.

Dead then?

Mar.

Dead.

Ant. Unarm, Eros; the long day's task is
done,
And we must sleep. That thou depart'st
hence safe

Does pay thy labour richly. Go.

[Exit Mardian.]

Off, pluck off!

The sevenfold shield of Ajax cannot keep The battery from my heart. O, cleave, my sides!

Heart, once be stronger than thy continent,
Crack thy frail case. Apace, Eros, apace.—
No more a soldier. Bruised pieces, go;
You have been nobly borne.—From me awhile. [Exit Eros.]

I will o'ertake thee, Cleopatra, and Weep for my pardon. So it must be, for
now

All length is torture. Since the torch is out, Lie down, and stray no farther. Now all labour

Mars what it does; yea, very force entangles

Itself with strength. Seal then, and all is done.

Eros!—I come, my queen.—Eros!—Stay
for me;

Where souls do couch on flowers, we'll hand in hand,

And with our sprightly port make the ghosts gaze.

Dido and her Æneas shall want troops,
And all the haunt be ours.—Come, Eros,
Eros!

Re-enter EROS.

Eros. What would my lord?

Ant. Since Cleopatra died,
I have liv'd in such dishonour that the gods
Detest my baseness. I, that with my sword

Quarter'd the world, and o'er green Neptune's back
 With ships made cities, condemn myself to lack ⁵⁹
 The courage of a woman; less noble mind
 Than she which by her death our Cæsar tells
 'I am conqueror of myself'. Thou art
 sworn, Eros,
 That, when the exigent should come—which now
 Is come indeed—when I should see behind
 me
 Th' inevitable prosecution of ⁶⁵
 Disgrace and horror, that, on my command, Thou then wouldst kill me. Do't; the time is come.
 Thou strik'st not me; 'tis Cæsar thou defeat'st.
 Put colour in thy cheek.
 Eros. The gods withhold me!
 Shall I do that which all the Parthian darts,
 Though enemy, lost aim and could not?
 Ant. Eros,
 Wouldst thou be window'd in great Rome and see ⁷²
 Thy master thus with pleach'd arms, bending down
 His corrigible neck, his face subdu'd
 To penetrative shame, whilst the wheel'd seat ⁷⁵
 Of fortunate Cæsar, drawn before him, branded
 His baseness that ensued?
 Eros. I would not see't.
 Ant. Come, then; for with a wound I must be cur'd.
 Draw that thy honest sword, which thou hast worn
 Most useful for thy country.
 Eros. O, sir, pardon me! ⁸⁰
 Ant. When I did make thee free, swor'st thou not then
 To do this when I bade thee? Do it at once,
 Or thy precedent services are all But accidents unpurpos'd. Draw, and
 come.
 Eros. Turn from me then that noble countenance, ⁸⁵
 Wherein the worship of the whole world
 lies.
 Ant. Lo thee! [Turning from him.
 Eros. My sword is drawn.
 Ant. Then let it do at once
 The thing why thou hast drawn it.
 Eros. My dear master,
 My captain and my emperor, let me say, ⁹⁰
 Before I strike this bloody stroke, farewell.
 Ant. 'Tis said, man; and farewell.
 Eros. Farewell, great chief. Shall I strike
 now?
 Ant. Now, Eros.
 Eros. Why, there then! Thus do I escape
 the sorrow ⁹⁴

Of Antony's death. [Kills himself.
 Ant. Thrice nobler than myself!
 Thou teachest me, O valiant Eros, what I should, and thou couldst not. My queen and Eros
 Have, by their brave instruction, got upon
 me
 A nobleness in record. But I will be ⁹⁹
 A bridegroom in my death, and run into't
 As to a lover's bed. Come, then; and,
 Eros,
 Thy master dies thy scholar. To do thus [Falling on his sword.
 I learn'd of thee. How? not dead? not
 dead?—
 The guard, ho! O, dispatch me!
 Enter DERCETAS and a Guard.
 1 Guard. What's the noise?
 Ant. I have done my work ill, friends. O, make an end ¹⁰⁵
 Of what I have begun.
 2 Guard. The star is fall'n.
 1 Guard. And time is at his period.
 All. Alas, and woe!
 Ant. Let him that loves me, strike me
 dead.
 1 Guard. Not I.
 2 Guard. Nor I. ¹⁰⁹
 3 Guard. Nor any one. [Exeunt Guard.
 Der. Thy death and fortunes bid thy followers fly.
 This sword but shown to Cæsar, with this tidings,
 Shall enter me with him.
 Enter DIOMEDES.
 Dio. Where's Antony?
 Der. There, Diomed, there.
 Dio. Lives he?
 Wilt thou not answer, man? ¹¹⁵
 [Exit Dercetas.
 Ant. Art thou there, Diomed? Draw thy sword and give me
 Sufficing strokes for death.
 Dio. Most absolute lord,
 My mistress Cleopatra sent me to thee.
 Ant. When did she send thee?
 Dio. Now, my lord.
 Ant. Where is she?
 Dio. Lock'd in her monument. She had a prophesying fear ¹²⁰
 Of what hath come to pass; for when she saw—
 Which never shall be found—you did suspect
 She had dispos'd with Cæsar, and that your rage
 Would not be purg'd, she sent you word she was dead;
 But fearing since how it might work, hath sent ¹²⁵
 Me to proclaim the truth; and I am come,
 I dread, too late.

Ant. Too late, good Diomed. Call my guard, I prithee.

Dio. What, ho! the Emperor's guard! The guard, what ho!

Come, your lord calls! 130

Enter four or five of the Guard of Antony.

Ant. Bear me, good friends, where Cleopatra bides;

'Tis the last service that I shall command you.

1 Guard. Woe, woe are we, sir, you may not live to wear

All your true followers out.

All. Most heavy day!

Ant. Nay, good my fellows, do not please sharp fate 135

To grace it with your sorrows. Bid that welcome

Which comes to punish us, and we punish it,

Seeming to bear it lightly. Take me up.

I have led you oft; carry me now, good friends,

And have my thanks for all. 140

[Exeunt, bearing Antony.]

SCENE XV. Alexandria. A monument.

Enter CLEOPATRA and her Maids aloft, with CHARMIAN and IRAS.

Cleo. O Charmian, I will never go from hence!

Char. Be comforted, dear madam.

Cleo. No, I will not.

All strange and terrible events are welcome, But comforts we despise; our size of

sorrow, 4

Proportion'd to our cause, must be as great As that which makes it.

Enter DIOMEDES, below.

How now! Is he dead?

Dio. His death's upon him, but not dead.

Look out o' th' other side your monument; His guard have brought him thither.

Enter, below, ANTONY, borne by the Guard.

Cleo. O sun, Burn the great sphere thou mov'st in!

Darkling stand 10

The varying shore o' th' world. O Antony,

Antony, Antony! Help, Charmian; help,

Irás, help;

Help, friends below! Let's draw him hither.

Ant. Peace!

Not Cæsar's valour hath o'erthrown Antony, But Antony's hath triumph'd on itself. 15

Cleo. So it should be, that none but Antony

Should conquer Antony; but woe 'tis so!

Ant. I am dying, Egypt, dying; only here importune death awhile, until

Of many thousand kisses the poor last 20 I lay upon thy lips.

Cleo. I dare not, dear.

Dear my lord, pardon! I dare not,

Lest I be taken. Not th' imperious show

Of the full-fortun'd Cæsar ever shall

Be brooch'd with me. If knife, drugs, 25 serpents, have Edge, sting, or operation, I am safe.

Your wife Octavia, with her modest eyes

And still conclusion, shall acquire no honour

Demuring upon me. But come, come, Antony—

Help me, my women—we must draw thee up; 30

Assist, good friends.

Ant. O, quick, or I am gone.

Cleo. Here's sport indeed! How heavy weighs my lord!

Our strength is all gone into heaviness;

That makes the weight. Had I great Juno's power,

The strong-wing'd Mercury should fetch thee up, 35

And set thee by Jove's side. Yet come a little.

Wishers were ever fools. O come, come, come,

[They heave Antony aloft to Cleopatra.]

And welcome, welcome! Die where thou hast liv'd.

Quicken with kissing. Had my lips that power,

Thus would I wear them out.

All. A heavy sight! 40

Ant. I am dying, Egypt, dying.

Give me some wine, and let me speak a little.

Cleo. No, let me speak; and let me rail so high

That the false huswife Fortune break her wheel, 44

Provok'd by my offence.

Ant. One word, sweet queen:

Of Cæsar seek your honour, with your safety. O!

Cleo. They do not go together.

Ant. Gentle, hear me:

None about Cæsar trust but Proculeius.

Cleo. My resolution and my hands I'll trust;

None about Cæsar. 50

Ant. The miserable change now at my end

Lament nor sorrow at; but please your thoughts

In feeding them with those my former fortunes

Wherein I liv'd the greatest prince o' th' world,

The noblest; and do now not basely die, 55

Not cowardly put off my helmet to

My countryman—a Roman by a Roman

Valiantly vanquish'd. Now my spirit is going ;

I can no more.

Cleo. Noblest of men, woo't die ?
Hast thou no care of me ? Shall I abide ⁶⁰
In this dull world, which in thy absence is No better than a sty ? O, see, my women,

[Antony dies.]

The crown o' th' earth doth melt. My lord !
O, wither'd is the garland of the war,
The soldier's pole is fall'n ! Young boys and ⁶⁵ girls

Are level now with men. The odds is gone,
And there is nothing left remarkable Beneath the visiting moon. [Swoons.]

Char. O, quietness, lady !

Iras. She's dead too, our sovereign.

Char. Lady !

Iras. Madam !

Char. O madam, madam, madam ! ⁷⁰

Iras. Royal Egypt, Empress !

Char. Peace, peace, Iras !

Cleo. No more but e'en a woman, and commanded

By such poor passion as the maid that milks
And does the meanest chares. It were for me ⁷⁵

To throw my sceptre at the injurious gods ;
To tell them that this world did equal theirs Till they had stol'n our jewel. All's but nought ;

Patience is sottish, and impatience does
Become a dog that's mad. Then is it sin ⁸⁰
To rush into the secret house of death Ere death dare come to us ? How do you, women ?

What, what ! good cheer ! Why, how now,
Charmian !

My noble girls ! Ah, women, women, look,
Our lamp is spent, it's out ! Good sirs, take heart. ⁸⁵

We'll bury him ; and then, what's brave,
what's noble,

Let's do it after the high Roman fashion,
And make death proud to take us. Come,
away ;

This case of that huge spirit now is cold.

Ah, women, women ! Come ; we have no friend ⁹⁰

But resolution and the briefest end.

[Exeunt; those above bearing off Antony's body.]

ACT FIVE

SCENE I. Alexandria. Cæsar's camp.

Enter CÆSAR, AGRIPPA, DOLABELLA, MÆ-CENAS, GALLUS, PROCULEIUS, and Others, his Council of War.

Cæs. Go to him, Dolabella, bid him yield ;
Being so frustrate, tell him he mocks
The pauses that he makes.

Dol.

Cæsar, I shall. [Exit.]

Enter DERCETAS with the sword of Antony.

Cæs. Wherefore is that ? And what art thou that dar'st

Appear thus to us ?

Der. I am call'd Dercetas ; ⁵

Mark Antony I serv'd, who best was worthy

Best to be serv'd. Whilst he stood up and spoke,

He was my master, and I wore my life
To spend upon his haters. If thou please
To take me to thee, as I was to him ¹⁰
I'll be to Cæsar ; if thou pleasest not,
I yield thee up my life.

Cæs. What is't thou say'st ?

Der. I say, O Cæsar, Antony is dead.

Cæs. The breaking of so great a thing should make

A greater crack. The round world ¹⁵
Should have shook lions into civil streets,
And citizens to their dens. The death of
Antony

Is not a single doom : in the name lay
A moiety of the world.

Der. He is dead, Cæsar, ²⁰

Not by a public minister of justice,
Nor by a hired knife ; but that self hand
Which writ his honour in the acts it did Hath, with the courage which the heart did lend it,

Split the heart. This is his sword ; ²⁴
I robb'd his wound of it ; behold it stain'd
With his most noble blood.

Cæs. Look you sad, friends ?

The gods rebuke me, but it is tidings

To wash the eyes of kings.

Agr. And strange it is

That nature must compel us to lament ²⁹
Our most persisted deeds.

Mæc. His taints and honours

Wag'd equal with him.

Agr. A rarer spirit never Did steer humanity. But you gods will give us

Some faults to make us men. Cæsar is touch'd.

Mæc. When such a spacious mirror's set before him,

He needs must see himself.

Cæs. O Antony, ³⁵

I have follow'd thee to this ! But we do lance

Diseases in our bodies. I must perforce
Have shown to thee such a declining day Or look on thine ; we could not stall
together

In the whole world. But yet let me lament, With tears as sovereign as the blood of hearts, ⁴¹

That thou, my brother, my competitor
In top of all design, my mate in empire,
Friend and companion in the front of war,
The arm of mine own body, and the heart

Where mine his thoughts did kindle—that our stars, 46
Unreconcilable, should divide
Our equalness to this. Hear me, good
friends—

Enter an Egyptian.

But I will tell you at some meeter season.
The business of this man looks out of him ;
We'll hear him what he says. Whence are
you ? 51

Egypt. A poor Egyptian, yet the Queen,
my mistress,
Confin'd in all she has, her monument,
Of thy intents desires instruction,
That she preparedly may frame herself 55
To th' way she's forc'd to.

Cæs. Bid her have good heart.
She soon shall know of us, by some of ours,
How honourable and how kindly we 58
Determine for her ; for Cæsar cannot learn
To be ungentle.

Egypt. So the gods preserve thee ! [Exit.
Cæs. Come hither, Proculeius. Go and
say 61

We purpose her no shame. Give her what comforts

The quality of her passion shall require,
Lest, in her greatness, by some mortal stroke

She do defeat us ; for her life in Rome 65
Would be eternal in our triumph. Go,
And with your speediest bring us what she says,

And how you find of her.

Pro. Cæsar, I shall. [Exit.

Cæs. Gallus, go you along. [Exit Gallus.
Where's Dolabella,

To second Proculeius ?

All. Dolabella ! 70

Cæs. Let him alone, for I remember now How he's employ'd ; he shall in time be ready.

Go with me to my tent, where you shall see
How hardly I was drawn into this war,
How calm and gentle I proceeded still 75
In all my writings. Go with me, and see What I can show in this. [Exeunt.

SCENE II. Alexandria. The monument.

MARDIAN.*

Cleo. My desolation does begin to make
A better life. 'Tis paltry to be Cæsar :
Not being Fortune, he's but Fortune's
knave,

A minister of her will ; and it is great
To do that thing that ends all other deeds,
Which shackles accidents and bolts up
change, 6

Which sleeps, and never palates more the dug,

The beggar's nurse and Cæsar's.

Enter, to the gates of the monument, PROCULEIUS, GALLUS, and Soldiers.

Pro. Cæsar sends greeting to the Queen of Egypt, 9

And bids thee study on what fair demands
Thou mean'st to have him grant thee.

Cleo.

What's thy name ?

Pro. My name is Proculeius.

Cleo.

Antony

Did tell me of you, bade me trust you ; but I do not greatly care to be deceiv'd,

That have no use for trusting. If your
master 15

Would have a queen his beggar, you must tell him

That majesty, to keep decorum, must
No less beg than a kingdom. If he please
To give me conquer'd Egypt for my son,
He gives me so much of mine own as I 20
Will kneel to him with thanks.

Pro.

Be of good cheer ;

Y'are fall'n into a princely hand ; fear
nothing.

Make your full reference freely to my lord,
Who is so full of grace that it flows over

On all that need. Let me report to him 25

Your sweet dependency, and you shall find A conqueror that will pray in aid for kindness

Where he for grace is kneel'd to.

Cleo.

Pray you tell him

I am his fortune's vassal and I send him

The greatness he has got. I hourly learn 30

A doctrine of obedience, and would gladly
Look him i' th' face.

Pro.

This I'll report, dear lady.

Have comfort, for I know your plight is pitied

Of him that caus'd it.

Gal. You see how easily she may be surpris'd. 35

[Here Proculeius and two of the Guard ascend the monument by a ladder placed against a window, and come behind Cleopatra. Some of the Guard unbar and open the gates.

Guard her till Cæsar come. [Exit.

Irás. Royal Queen !

Char. O Cleopatra ! thou art taken,
Queen !

Cleo. Quick, quick, good hands.

[Drawing a dagger.

Pro.

Hold, worthy lady, hold,

[Disarms her.

Do not yourself such wrong, who are in this Reliev'd, but not betray'd.

Cleo.

What, of death too,

That rids our dogs of languish ?

Pro.

Cleopatra,

Do not abuse my master's bounty by 43

Th' undoing of yourself. Let the world see

His nobleness well acted, which your death
Will never let come forth.

Cleo.

Where art thou, death ?

Come hither, come ! Come, come, and take a queen

Worth many babes and beggars !

Pro. O, temperance, lady !

Cleo. Sir, I will eat no meat ; I'll not drink, sir ;

If idle talk will once be necessary, 50
I'll not sleep neither. This mortal house
I'll ruin,

Do Cæsar what he can. Know, sir, that I Will not wait pinion'd at your master's
court,

Nor once be chastis'd with the sober eye
Of dull Octavia. Shall they hoist me up, 55
And show me to the shouting varletry Of censuring Rome ? Rather a ditch in Egypt

Be gentle grave unto me ! Rather on Nilus' mud

Lay me stark-nak'd, and let the water-flies Blow me into abhorring ! Rather make 60
My country's high pyramids my gibbet,
And hang me up in chains !

Pro. You do extend
These thoughts of horror further than you shall

Find cause in Cæsar.

Enter DOLABELLA.

Dol. Proculeius,
What thou hast done thy master Cæsar
knows, 65
And he hath sent for thee. For the Queen,
I'll take her to my guard.

Pro. So, Dolabella,
It shall content me best. Be gentle to her.
[To Cleopatra] To Cæsar I will speak what you shall please,

If you'll employ me to him.

Cleo. Say I would die. 70
[Exeunt Proculeius and Soldiers.]

Dol. Most noble Empress, you have heard of me ?

Cleo. I cannot tell.

Dol. Assuredly you know me.

Cleo. No matter, sir, what I have heard or known.

You laugh when boys or women tell their dreams ;

Is't not your trick ?

Dol. I understand not, madam. 75

Cleo. I dreamt there was an Emperor
Antony—

O, such another sleep, that I might see
But such another man !

Dol. If it might please ye—

Cleo. His face was as the heav'ns, and therein stuck

A sun and moon, which kept their course and lighted 80

The little O, the earth.

Dol. Most sovereign creature—

Cleo. His legs bestrid the ocean ; his rear'd arm

Crested the world. His voice was property'd As all the tuned spheres, and that to
friends ;

But when he meant to quail and shake the orb, 85

He was as rattling thunder. For his bounty,
There was no winter in't ; an autumn
'twas

That grew the more by reaping. His delights

Were dolphin-like : they show'd his back above

The element they liv'd in. In his livery 90 Walk'd crowns and crownets ; realms and islands were

As plates dropp'd from his pocket.

Dol. Cleopatra—

Cleo. Think you there was or might be such a man

As this I dreamt of ?

Dol. Gentle madam, no.

Cleo. You lie, up to the hearing of the gods. 95

But if there be nor ever were one such,
It's past the size of dreaming. Nature wants stuff

To vie strange forms with fancy ; yet t'
imagine

An Antony were nature's piece 'gainst fancy,

Condemning shadows quite.

Dol. Hear me, good madam. 100

Your loss is, as yourself, great ; and you bear it

As answering to the weight. Would I might never

O'ertake pursu'd success, but I do feel,
By the rebound of yours, a grief that smites
My very heart at root.

Cleo. I thank you, sir. 105

Know you what Cæsar means to do with
me ?

Dol. I am loath to tell you what I would you knew.

Cleo. Nay, pray you, sir.

Dol. Though he be honourable—

Cleo. He'll lead me, then, in triumph ?

Dol. Madam, he will. I know't. 110

[Flourish.]

Within. Make way there—Cæsar !

Enter CÆSAR ; GALLUS, PROCULEIUS, MÆCENAS, SELEUCUS, and others of his Train.

Cæs. Which is the Queen of Egypt ?

Dol. It is the Emperor, madam.

[Cleopatra kneels.]

Cæs. Arise, you shall not kneel.

I pray you, rise ; rise, Egypt.

Cleo. Sir, the gods

Will have it thus ; my master and my lord
I must obey.

Cæs. Take to you no hard thoughts.
The record of what injuries you did us, 117

Though written in our flesh, we shall remember

As things but done by chance.

Cleo. Sole sir o' th' world,
I cannot project mine own cause so well ¹²⁰
To make it clear, but do confess I have Been laden with like frailties which before
Have often sham'd our sex.

Cæs. Cleopatra, know
We will extenuate rather than enforce.
If you apply yourself to our intents— ¹²⁵
Which towards you are most gentle—you shall find

A benefit in this change; but if you seek
To lay on me a cruelty by taking Antony's course, you shall bereave yourself
Of my good purposes, and put your children ¹³⁰

To that destruction which I'll guard them from,

If thereon you rely. I'll take my leave.

Cleo. And may, through all the world.
'Tis yours, and we,

Your scutcheons and your signs of conquest, shall

Hang in what place you please. Here, my good lord. ¹³⁵

Cæs. You shall advise me in all for Cleopatra.

Cleo. This is the brief of money, plate, and jewels,

I am possess'd of. 'Tis exactly valued,
Not petty things admitted. Where's Seleucus?

Sel. Here, madam. ¹⁴⁰

Cleo. This is my treasurer; let him speak,
my lord,

Upon his peril, that I have reserv'd
To myself nothing. Speak the truth,
Seleucus.

Sel. Madam, ¹⁴⁴
I had rather seal my lips than to my peril
Speak that which is not.

Cleo. What have I kept back?

Sel. Enough to purchase what you have made known.

Cæs. Nay, blush not, Cleopatra; I approve

Your wisdom in the deed.

Cleo. See, Cæsar! O, behold,
How pomp is followed! Mine will now be yours; ¹⁵⁰

And, should we shift estates, yours would be mine.

The ingratitude of this Seleucus does Even make me wild. O slave, of no more trust

Than love that's hir'd! What, goest thou back? Thou shalt

Go back, I warrant thee; but I'll catch thine eyes ¹⁵⁵

Though they had wings. Slave, soulless villain, dog!

O rarely base!

Cæs. Good Queen, let us entreat you.

Cleo. O Cæsar, what a wounding shame is this,

That thou vouchsafing here to visit me,
Doing the honour of thy lordliness ¹⁶⁰
To one so meek, that mine own servant should

Parcel the sum of my disgraces by Addition of his envy! Say, good Cæsar,
That I some lady trifles have reserv'd,
Immoment toys, things of such dignity ¹⁶⁵
As we greet modern friends withal; and
say

Some nobler token I have kept apart
For Livia and Octavia, to induce
Their mediation—must I be unfolded With one that I have bred? The gods! It smites me ¹⁷⁰

Beneath the fall I have. [To Seleucus]
Prithee go hence;

Or I shall show the cinders of my spirits Through th' ashes of my chance. Wert thou a man,

Thou wouldst have mercy on me.

Cæs. Forbear, Seleucus.
[Exit Seleucus.]

Cleo. Be it known that we, the greatest, are misthought ¹⁷⁵

For things that others do; and when we fall

We answer others' merits in our name,
Are therefore to be pitied.

Cæs. Cleopatra,
Not what you have reserv'd, nor what acknowledg'd,

Put we i' th' roll of conquest. Still be't yours, ¹⁸⁰

Bestow it at your pleasure; and believe Cæsar's no merchant, to make prize with
you

Of things that merchants sold. Therefore be cheer'd;

Make not your thoughts your prisons. No,
dear Queen;

For we intend so to dispose you as ¹⁸⁵ Yourself shall give us counsel. Feed and sleep.

Our care and pity is so much upon you
That we remain your friend; and so,
adieu.

Cleo. My master and my lord!

Cæs. Not so. Adieu.
[Flourish. Exeunt Cæsar and his Train.]

Cleo. He words me, girls, he words me, that I should not ¹⁹⁰

Be noble to myself. But hark thee,
Charmian! [Whispers Charmian.]

Iras. Finish, good lady; the bright day is done,

And we are for the dark.

Cleo. Hie thee again.
I have spoke already, and it is provided;

Go put it to the haste.

Char. Madam, I will. ¹⁹⁵

Re-enter DOLABELLA.

Dol. Where's the Queen ?

Char. Behold, sir. [Exit.

Cleo. Dolabella !

Dol. Madam, as thereto sworn by your command,

Which my love makes religion to obey,
I tell you this : Cæsar through Syria Intends his journey, and within three days

You with your children will he send
before.

Make your best use of this ; I have
perform'd

Your pleasure and my promise.

Cleo. Dolabella,
I shall remain your debtor.

Dol. I your servant.
Adieu, good Queen ; I must attend on Cæsar.

Cleo. Farewell, and thanks.

[Exit Dolabella.

Now, Iras, what think'st thou ?
Thou an Egyptian puppet shall be shown
In Rome as well as I. Mechanic slaves, With greasy aprons, rules, and hammers,
shall

Uplift us to the view ; in their thick breaths,

Rank of gross diet, shall we be enclouded,
And forc'd to drink their vapour.

Iras. The gods forbid !

Cleo. Nay, 'tis most certain, Iras. Saucy lictors

Will catch at us like strumpets, and scald rhymers

Ballad us out o' tune ; the quick comedians
Extemporally will stage us, and present
Our Alexandrian revels ; Antony Shall be brought drunken forth, and I shall see

Some squeaking Cleopatra boy my greatness

I' th' posture of a whore.

Iras. O the good gods !

Cleo. Nay, that's certain.

Iras. I'll never see't, for I am sure mine
nails

Are stronger than mine eyes.

Cleo. Why, that's the way
To fool their preparation and to conquer
Their most absurd intents.

Enter CHARMIAN.

Now, Charmian !
Show me, my women, like a queen. Go fetch

My best attires. I am again for Cydnus,
To meet Mark Antony. Sirrah, Iras, go.
Now, noble Charmian, we'll dispatch
indeed ;

And when thou hast done this chare, I'll give thee leave

To play till doomsday. Bring our crown
and all.

[Exit Iras. A noise within.
Wherefore's this noise ?

Enter a Guardsman.

Guard. Here is a rural fellow
That will not be denied your Highness'
presence.

He brings you figs.

Cleo. Let him come in. [Exit Guardsman.

What poor an instrument
May do a noble deed ! He brings me liberty.
My resolution's plac'd, and I have nothing
Of woman in me. Now from head to foot
I am marble-constant ; now the fleeting
moon

No planet is of mine.

Re-enter Guardsman and Clown, with a basket.

Guard. This is the man.

Cleo. Avoid, and leave him.

[Exit Guardsman.

Hast thou the pretty worm of Nilus there
That kills and pains not ?

Clown. Truly, I have him. But I would not be the party that should desire you to touch him, for his biting is immortal ; those that do die of it do seldom or never recover.

Cleo. Remember'st thou any that have died on't ?

Clown. Very many, men and women too.
I heard of one of them no longer than yesterday : a very honest woman, but something given to lie, as a woman should not do but in the way of honesty ; how she died of the biting of it, what pain she felt—truly she makes a very good report o' th' worm. But he that will believe all that they say shall never be saved by half that they do. 'But this is most falliable, the worm's an odd worm.

Cleo. Get thee hence ; farewell.

Clown. I wish you all joy of the worm.

[Sets down the basket.

Cleo. Farewell.

Clown. You must think this, look you, that the worm will do his kind.

Cleo. Ay, ay ; farewell.

Clown. Look you, the worm is not to be trusted but in the keeping of wise people ;
for indeed there is no goodness in the worm.

Cleo. Take thou no care ; it shall be heeded.

Clown. Very good. Give it nothing, I pray you, for it is not worth the feeding.

Cleo. Will it eat me ?

Clown. You must not think I am so simple but I know the devil himself will not eat a woman. I know that a woman is a dish for the gods, if the devil dress her not. But truly, these same whoreson devils do the gods great harm in their women, for in every ten that they make the devils mar five. ²⁷⁵

Cleo. Well, get thee gone ; farewell.

Clown. Yes, forsooth. I wish you joy o' th' worm. [Exit.

Re-enter IRAS, with a robe, crown, &c.

Cleo. Give me my robe, put on my crown ; I have Immortal longings in me. Now no more

The juice of Egypt's grape shall moist this lip. ²⁸⁰

Yare, yare, good Iras ; quick. Methinks I hear

Antony call. I see him rouse himself
To praise my noble act. I hear him mock
The luck of Cæsar, which the gods give men
To excuse their after wrath. Husband, I come. ²⁸⁵

Now to that name my courage prove my title !

I am fire and air ; my other elements
I give to baser life. So, have you done ?
Come then, and take the last warmth of my lips.

Farewell, kind Charmian. Iras, long farewell. ²⁹⁰

[Kisses them. Iras falls and dies.
Have I the aspic in my lips ? Dost fall ?

If thou and nature can so gently part,
The stroke of death is as a lover's pinch,
Which hurts and is desir'd. Dost thou lie still ?

If thus thou vanishest, thou tell'st the world ²⁹⁵

It is not worth leave-taking.

Char. Dissolve, thick cloud, and rain, that I may say

The gods themselves do weep.

Cleo. This proves me base.
If she first meet the curled Antony,

He'll make demand of her, and spend that kiss ³⁰⁰

Which is my heaven to have. Come, thou mortal wretch,

[To an asp, which she applies to her breast.
With thy sharp teeth this knot intricate

Of life at once untie. Poor venomous fool, Be angry, and dispatch. O couldst thou speak, ³⁰⁴

That I might hear thee call great Cæsar ass Unpolicied !

Char. O Eastern star !

Cleo. Peace, peace !
Dost thou not see my baby at my breast

That sucks the nurse asleep ?

Char. O, break ! O, break !
Cleo. As sweet as balm, as soft as air, as gentle—

O Antony ! Nay, I will take thee too : ³¹⁰ [Applying another asp to her arm.

What should I stay— [Dies.
Char. In this vile world ? So, fare thee well.

Now boast thee, death, in thy possession lies

A lass unparallel'd. Downy windows, close ;
And golden Phœbus never be beheld ³¹⁵
Of eyes again so royal ! Your crown's awry ;

I'll mend it and then play—

Enter the Guard, rushing in.

1 Guard. Where's the Queen ?

Char. Speak softly, wake her not.

1 Guard. Cæsar hath sent—

Char. Too slow a messenger.
[Applies an asp.

O, come apace, dispatch. I partly feel thee.

1 Guard. Approach, ho ! All's not well :
Cæsar's beguil'd. ³²¹

2 Guard. There's Dolabella sent from Cæsar ; call him.

1 Guard. What work is here ! Charmian, is this well done ?

Char. It is well done, and fitting for a princess

Descended of so many royal kings. ³²⁵
Ah, soldier ! [Charmian dies.

Re-enter DOLABELLA.

Dol. How goes it here ?

2 Guard. All dead.

Dol. Cæsar, thy thoughts Touch their effects in this. Thyself art

coming
To see perform'd the dreaded act which thou

So sought'st to hinder. ³³⁰
Within. A way there, a way for Cæsar !

Re-enter CÆSAR and all his Train.

Dol. O sir, you are too sure an augurer :
That you did fear is done.

Cæs. Bravest at the last,
She level'd at our purposes, and being royal,

Took her own way. The manner of their deaths ? ³³⁴

I do not see them bleed.

Dol. Who was last with them ?

1 Guard. A simple countryman that brought her figs.

This was his basket.

Cæs. Poison'd then.

1 Guard. O Cæsar,
This Charmian liv'd but now ; she stood and spake.

I found her trimming up the diadem

On her dead mistress. Tremblingly she stood, ³⁴⁰

And on the sudden dropp'd.

Cæs. O noble weakness !
If they had swallow'd poison 'twould

appear
By external swelling ; but she looks like
sleep,

As she would catch another Antony

In her strong toil of grace.

Dol. Here on her breast 345
There is a vent of blood, and something blown ;

The like is on her arm.

1 Guard. This is an aspic's trail ; and these fig-leaves

Have slime upon them, such as th' aspic
leaves

Upon the caves of Nile.

Cæs. Most probable 350
That so she died ; for her physician tells
me

She hath pursu'd conclusions infinite

Of easy ways to die. Take up her bed,
And bear her women from the monument.
She shall be buried by her Antony ; 355
No grave upon the earth shall clip in it
A pair so famous. High events as these Strike those that make them ; and their story is

No less in pity than his glory which Brought them to be lamented. Our army
shall 360

In solemn show attend this funeral,
And then to Rome. Come, Doiabella, see
High order in this great solemnity.

[Exeunt.]

THE SCENE : Britain ; Italy.

ACT ONE

SCENE I. Britain. The garden of Cymbeline's palace.

1 Gent. You do not meet a man but frowns ; our bloods
 No more obey the heavens than our courtiers Still seem as does the King's.

2 Gent. But what's the matter ?
 1 Gent. His daughter, and the heir of's kingdom, whom

He purpos'd to his wife's sole son—a widow

That late he married—hath referr'd herself Unto a poor but worthy gentleman. She's wedded ;

Her husband banish'd ; she imprison'd. All

Is outward sorrow, though I think the King Be touch'd at very heart.

2 Gent. None but the King ?

1 Gent. He that hath lost her too. So is the Queen,

That most desir'd the match. But not a courtier,

Although they wear their faces to the bent Of the King's looks, hath a heart that is not Glad at the thing they scowl at.

2 Gent. And why so ?

1 Gent. He that hath miss'd the Princess is a thing

Too bad for bad report ; and he that hath her—

I mean that married her, alack, good man ! And therefore banish'd—is a creature such As, to seek through the regions of the earth

For one his like, there would be something failing

In him that should compare. I do not think

So fair an outward and such stuff within Endows a man but he.

2 Gent. You speak him far.

1 Gent. I do extend him, sir, within himself ;

Crush him together rather than unfold His measure duly.

2 Gent. What's his name and birth ?

1 Gent. I cannot delve him to the root ; his father

Was call'd Sicilius, who did join his honour

Against the Romans with Cassibelan, But had his titles by Tenantius, whom

He serv'd with glory and admir'd success, So gain'd the sur-addition Leonatus ;

And had, besides this gentleman in question,

Two other sons, who, in the wars o' th' time,

Died with their swords in hand ; for which their father,

Then old and fond of issue, took such sorrow

That he quit being ; and his gentle lady, Big of this gentleman, our theme, deceas'd

As he was born. The King he takes the babe

To his protection, calls him Posthumus Leonatus,

Breeds him and makes him of his bed-chamber,

Puts to him all the learnings that his time

Could make him the receiver of ; which he took,

As we do air, fast as 'twas minist'ed, 45
And in's spring became a harvest, liv'd in court—

Which rare it is to do—most prais'd, most lov'd,

A sample to the youngest ; to th' more mature

A glass that feated them ; and to the graver

A child that guided dotards. To his mistress, 50

For whom he now is banish'd—her own price

Proclaims how she esteem'd him and his virtue ;

By her election may be truly read
What kind of man he is.

2 Gent. I honour him
Even out of your report. But pray you tell me, 55

Is she sole child to th' King ?

1 Gent. His only child.
He had two sons—if this be worth your hearing,

Mark it—the eldest of them at three years old,

I' th' swathing clothes the other, from their nursery

Were stol'n ; and to this hour no guess in knowledge 60

Which way they went.

2 Gent. How long is this ago ?

1 Gent. Some twenty years.

2 Gent. That a king's children should be so convey'd,

So slackly guarded, and the search so slow
That could not trace them !

1 Gent. Howsoe'er 'tis strange, 65
Or that the negligence may well be laugh'd at,

Yet is it true, sir.

2 Gent. I do well believe you.

1 Gent. We must forbear ; here comes the gentleman,

The Queen, and Princess. [Exeunt.

Enter the QUEEN, POSTHUMUS, and IMOGEN.

Queen. No, be assur'd you shall not find me, daughter,

After the slander of most stepmothers, 71 Evil-ey'd unto you. You're my prisoner, but

Your gaoler shall deliver you the keys
That lock up your restraint. For you,

Posthumus,

So soon as I can win th' offended King, 75
I will be known your advocate. Marry, yet

The fire of rage is in him, and 'twere good
You lean'd unto his sentence with what patience

Your wisdom may inform you.

Post. Please your Highness,
I will from hence to-day.

Queen. You know the peril. 80
I'll fetch a turn about the garden, pitying
The pangs of barr'd affections, though the

King
Hath charg'd you should not speak together. [Exit.

O
Imo. Dissembling courtesies ! How fine this tyrant

Can tickle where she wounds ! My dearest husband, 85

I something fear my father's wrath, but nothing—

Always reserv'd my holy duty—what His rage can do on me. You must be gone ;

And I shall here abide the hourly shot
Of angry eyes, not comforted to live 90

But that there is this jewel in the world
That I may see again.

Post. My queen ! my mistress !
O lady, weep no more, lest I give cause

To be suspected of more tenderness
Than doth become a man. I will remain 95

The loyal'st husband that did e'er plight troth ;

My residence in Rome at one Philario's,
Who to my father was a friend, to me

Known but by letter ; thither write, my queen,

And with mine eyes I'll drink the words you send, 100

Though ink be made of gall.

Re-enter QUEEN.

Queen. Be brief, I pray you.
If the King come, I shall incur I know not

How much of his displeasure. [Aside] Yet
I'll move him 103

To walk this way. I never do him wrong
But he does buy my injuries, to be friends ;

Pays dear for my offences. [Exit.

Post. Should we be taking leave
As long a term as yet we have to live,

The loathness to depart would grow.
Adieu !

Imo. Nay, stay a little. 109
Were you but riding forth to air yourself,

Such parting were too petty. Look here, love :

This diamond was my mother's ; take it, heart ;

But keep it till you woo another wife,
When Imogen is dead.

Post. How, how ? Another ? 114
You gentle gods, give me but this I have,

And cere up my embracements from a next With bonds of death ! Remain, remain thou here [Puts on the ring.

While sense can keep it on. And, sweetest, fairest,

As I my poor self did exchange for you,

To your so infinite loss, so in our trifles 120

I still win of you. For my sake wear this ;

It is a manacle of love ; I'll place it Upon this fairest prisoner.

[Puts a bracelet on her arm.

O the gods !

When shall we see again ?

Enter CYMBELINE and Lords.

Alack, the King !

Thou basest thing, avoid ; hence from my sight !

If after this command thou fraught the court

With thy unworthiness, thou diest. Away ! Thou'rt poison to my blood.

The gods protect you, And bless the good remainders of the court !

I am gone. [Exit.

There cannot be a pinch in death More sharp than this is.

O disloyal thing, That shouldst repair my youth, thou heap'st

A years' age on me !

I beseech you, sir, Harm not yourself with your vexation. I am senseless of your wrath ; a touch more rare Subdues all pangs, all fears.

Past grace ? obedience ?

Past hope, and in despair ; that way past grace.

That mightst have had the sole son of my queen !

O blessed that I might not ! I chose an eagle,

And did avoid a puttock.

Thou took'st a beggar, wouldst have made my throne

A seat for baseness.

No ; I rather added

A lustre to it.

O thou vile one !

Sir,

It is your fault that I have lov'd Posthumus.

You bred him as my playfellow, and he is A man worth any woman ; overbuys me Almost the sum he pays.

What, art thou mad ?

Heaven restore me ! Would I were

A neat-herd's daughter, and my Leonatus Our neighbour shepherd's son !

Re-enter QUEEN.

Thou foolish thing !

[To the Queen] They were again together. You have done

Not after our command. Away with her, And pen her up.

Beseech your patience.—Peace,

Dear lady daughter, peace !—Sweet sovereign,

Leave us to ourselves, and make yourself some comfort

Out of your best advice.

Nay, let her languish

A drop of blood a day and, being aged, Die of this folly. [Exit, with Lords.

Enter PISANIO.

Fie ! you must give way. Here is your servant. How now, sir ! What news ?

My lord your son drew on my master.

No harm, I trust, is done ?

There might have been, But that my master rather play'd than fought, And had no help of anger ; they were parted By gentlemen at hand.

I am very glad on't.

Your son's my father's friend ; he takes his part

To draw upon an exile ! O brave sir !

I would they were in Afric both together ; Myself by with a needle, that I might prick The goer-back. Why came you from your master ?

On his command. He would not suffer me

To bring him to the haven ; left these notes Of what commands I should be subject to, When't pleas'd you to employ me.

This hath been Your faithful servant. I dare lay mine honour He will remain so.

I humbly thank your Highness.

Pray walk awhile.

About some half-hour hence, Pray you speak with me. You shall at least Go see my lord aboard. For this time leave me.

[Exeunt.

SCENE II. Britain. A public place.

Enter CLOTEN and two Lords.

1 Lord. Sir, I would advise you to shift a shirt ; the violence of action hath made you reek as a sacrifice. Where air comes out, air comes in ; there's none abroad so wholesome as that you vent.

If my shirt were bloody, then to shift it. Have I hurt him ?

2 Lord. [Aside] No, faith ; not so much as his patience.

1 Lord. Hurt him ! His body's a passable carcass if he be not hurt. It is a throughfare for steel if it be not hurt.

2 Lord. [Aside] His steel was in debt ; it went o' th' back side the town.

Clo. The villain would not stand me.

2 Lord. [Aside] No ; but he fled forward still, toward your face. 15

1 Lord. Stand you ? You have land enough of your own ; but he added to your having, gave you some ground.

2 Lord. [Aside] As many inches as you have oceans. Puppies ! 20

Clo. I would they had not come between us.

2 Lord. [Aside] So would I, till you had measur'd how long a fool you were upon the ground.

Clo. And that she should love this fellow, and refuse me ! 25

2 Lord. [Aside] If it be a sin to make a true election, she is damn'd.

1 Lord. Sir, as I told you always, her beauty and her brain go not together ; she's a good sign, but I have seen small reflection of her wit. 30

2 Lord. [Aside] She shines not upon fools, lest the reflection should hurt her.

Clo. Come, I'll to my chamber. Would there had been some hurt done !

2 Lord. [Aside] I wish not so ; unless it had been the fall of an ass, which is no great hurt. 36

Clo. You'll go with us ?

1 Lord. I'll attend your lordship.

Clo. Nay, come, let's go together.

2 Lord. Well, my lord. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III. Britain. Cymbeline's palace.

Enter IMOGEN and PISANIO.

Imo. I would thou grew'st unto the shores o' th' haven,

And questioned'st every sail ; if he should write,

And I not have it, 'twere a paper lost, As offer'd mercy is. What was the last That he spake to thee ?

Pis. It was : his queen, his queen ! 5

Imo. Then wav'd his handkerchief ?

Pis. And kiss'd it, madam.

Imo. Senseless linen, happier therein than I !

And that was all ?

Pis. No, madam ; for so long As he could make me with his eye, or care Distinguish him from others, he did keep The deck, with glove, or hat, or handkerchief, 11

Still waving, as the fits and stirs of's mind Could best express how slow his soul sail'd on,

How swift his ship.

Imo. Thou shouldst have made him As little as a crow, or less, ere left 15 To after-eye him.

Pis. Madam, so I did.

Imo. I would have broke mine eye-strings, crack'd them but To look upon him, till the diminution Of space had pointed him sharp as my needle ; 19

Nay, followed him till he had melted from The smallness of a gnat to air, and then Have turn'd mine eye and wept. But, good Pisanio,

When shall we hear from him ?

Pis. Be assur'd, madam, With his next vantage.

Imo. I did not take my leave of him, but had 25

Most pretty things to say. Ere I could tell him

How I would think on him at certain hours Such thoughts and such ; or I could make him swear

The shes of Italy should not betray

Mine interest and his honour ; or have charg'd him, 30

At the sixth hour of morn, at noon, at midnight,

T' encounter me with orisons, for then

I am in heaven for him ; or ere I could Give him that parting kiss which I had set

Betwixt two charming words, comes in my father, 35

And like the tyrannous breathing of the north

Shakes all our buds from growing.

Enter a Lady.

Lady. The Queen, madam, Desires your Highness' company.

Imo. Those things I bid you do, get them dispatch'd. 39

I will attend the Queen.

Pis. Madam, I shall. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV. Rome. Philario's house.

Enter PHILARIO, IACHIMO, a Frenchman, a Dutchman, and a Spaniard.

Iach. Believe it, sir, I have seen him in Britain. He was then of a crescent note, expected to prove so worthy as since he hath been allowed the name of. But I could then have look'd on him without the help of admiration, though the catalogue of his endowments had been tabled by his side, and I to peruse him by items. 6

Phi. You speak of him when he was less furnish'd than now he is with that which makes him both without and within. 9

French. I have seen him in France ; we had very many there could behold the sun with as firm eyes as he.

Iach. This matter of marrying his king's daughter, wherein he must be weighed rather by her value than his own, words him, I doubt not, a great deal from the matter. 13

French. And then his banishment.

Iach. Ay, and the approbation of those that weep this lamentable divorce under her colours are wonderfully to extend him, be it but to fortify her judgment, which else an easy battery might lay flat, for taking a beggar, without less quality. But how comes it he is to sojourn with you? How creeps acquaintance? 22

Phi. His father and I were soldiers together, to whom I have been often bound for no less than my life.

Enter POSTHUMUS.

Here comes the Briton. Let him be so entertained amongst you as suits with gentlemen of your knowing to a stranger of his quality. I beseech you all be better known to this gentleman, whom I commend to you as a noble friend of mine. How worthy he is I will leave to appear hereafter, rather than story him in his own hearing. 31

French. Sir, we have known together in Orleans.

Post. Since when I have been debtor to you for courtesies, which I will be ever to pay and yet pay still. 31

French. Sir, you o'errate my poor kindness. I was glad I did atone my countryman and you; it had been pity you should have been put together with so mortal a purpose as then each bore, upon importance of so slight and trivial a nature. 39

Post. By your pardon, sir, I was then a young traveller; rather shunn'd to go even with what I heard than in my every action to be guided by others' experiences; but upon my mended judgment—if I offend not to say it is mended—my quarrel was not altogether slight. 44

French. Faith, yes, to be put to the arbitrement of swords, and by such two that would by all likelihood have confounded one the other or have fall'n both.

Iach. Can we, with manners, ask what was the difference? 49

French. Safely, I think. 'Twas a contention in public, which may, without contradiction, suffer the report. It was much like an argument that fell out last night, where each of us fell in praise of our country mistresses; this gentleman at that time vouching—and upon warrant of bloody affirmation—his to be more fair, virtuous, wise, chaste, constant, qualified, and less attemptable, than any the rarest of our ladies in France. 57

Iach. That lady is not now living, or this gentleman's opinion, by this, worn out.

Post. She holds her virtue still, and I my mind. 60

Iach. You must not so far prefer her foreours of Italy.

Post. Being so far provok'd as I was in France, I would abate her nothing, though I profess myself her adorer, not her friend.

Iach. As fair and as good—a kind of hand-in-hand comparison—had been something too fair and too good for any lady in Britain. If she went before others I have seen as that diamond of yours outlustres many I have beheld, I could not but believe she excelled many; but I have not seen the most precious diamond that is, nor you the lady. 72

Post. I prais'd her as I rated her. So do I my stone.

Iach. What do you esteem it at?

Post. More than the world enjoys. 75

Iach. Either your unparagon'd mistress is dead, or she's outpriz'd by a trifle.

Post. You are mistaken: the one may be sold or given, if there were wealth enough for the purchase or merit for the gift; the other is not a thing for sale, and only the gift of the gods. 81

Iach. Which the gods have given you?

Post. Which by their graces I will keep.

Iach. You may wear her in title yours; but you know strange fowl light upon neighbouring ponds. Your ring may be stol'n too. So your brace of unprizable estimations, the one is but frail and the other casual; a cunning thief, or a that-way-accomplish'd courtier, would hazard the winning both of first and last. 89

Post. Your Italy contains none so accomplish'd a courtier to convince the honour of my mistress, if in the holding or loss of that you term her frail. I do nothing doubt you have store of thieves; notwithstanding, I fear not my ring.

Phi. Let us leave here, gentlemen. 95

Post. Sir, with all my heart. This worthy signior, I thank him, makes no stranger of me; we are familiar at first.

Iach. With five times so much conversation I should get ground of your fair mistress; make her go back even to the yielding, had I admittance and opportunity to friend. 102

Post. No, no.

Iach. I dare thereupon pawn the moiety of my estate to your ring, which, in my opinion, o'ervalues it something. But I make my wager rather against your confidence than her reputation; and, to bar your offence herein too, I durst attempt it against any lady in the world.

Post. You are a great deal abus'd in too bold a persuasion, and I doubt not you sustain what y'are worthy of by your attempt. 111

Iach. What's that?

Post. A repulse; though your attempt, as you call it, deserve more—a punishment too.

Phi. Gentlemen, enough of this. It came in too suddenly ; let it die as it was born, and I pray you be better acquainted. 117

Iach. Would I had put my estate and my neighbour's on th' approbation of what I have spoke !

Post. What lady would you choose to assail ? 120

Iach. Yours, whom in constancy you think stands so safe. I will lay you ten thousand ducats to your ring that, commend me to the court where your lady is, with no more advantage than the opportunity of a second conference, and I will bring from thence that honour of hers which you imagine so reserv'd. 126

Post. I will wage against your gold gold to it. My ring I hold dear as my finger ; 'tis part of it.

Iach. You are a friend, and therein the wiser. If you buy ladies' flesh at a million a dram, you cannot preserve it from tainting. But I see you have some religion in you, that you fear. 132

Post. This is but a custom in your tongue ; you bear a graver purpose, I hope.

Iach. I am the master of my speeches, and would undergo what's spoken, I swear.

Post. Will you ? I shall but lend my diamond till your return. Let there be covenants drawn between's. My mistress exceeds in goodness the hugeness of your unworthy thinking. I dare you to this match : here's my ring. 141

Phi. I will have it no lay.

Iach. By the gods, it is one. If I bring you no sufficient testimony that I have enjoy'd the dearest bodily part of your mistress, my ten thousand ducats are yours ; so is your diamond too. If I come off, and leave her in such honour as you have trust in, she your jewel, this your jewel, and my gold are yours—provided I have your commendation for my more free entertainment. 149

Post. I embrace these conditions ; let us have articles betwixt us. Only, thus far you shall answer : if you make your voyage upon her, and give me directly to understand you have prevail'd, I am no further your enemy—she is not worth our debate ; if she remain uneduc'd, you not making it appear otherwise, for your ill opinion and th' assault you have made to her chastity you shall answer me with your sword. 157

Iach. Your hand—a covenant ! We will have these things set down by lawful counsel, and straight away for Britain, lest the bargain should catch cold and starve. I will fetch my gold and have our two wagers recorded. 161

Post. Agreed.

[Exeunt Posthumus and Iachimo.]

French. Will this hold, think you ? 164

Phi. Signior Iachimo will not from it. Pray let us follow 'em. [Exeunt.]

SCENE V. Britain. Cymbeline's palace.

Enter QUEEN, Ladies, and CORNELIUS.

Queen. Whiles yet the dew's on ground gather those flowers ;
Make haste ; who has the note of them ?

Lady. I, madam.

Queen. Dispatch. [Exeunt Ladies.]
Now, Master Doctor, have you brought those drugs ?

Cor. Pleaseth your Highness, ay. Here they are, madam. 5

[Presenting a box.]

But I beseech your Grace, without offence—
My conscience bids me ask—wherefore you have Commanded of me these most poisonous compounds,

Which are the movers of a languishing death,

But, though slow, deadly ?

Queen. I wonder, Doctor, 10
Thou ask'st me such a question. Have I not been Thy pupil long ? Hast thou not learn'd me how

To make perfumes ? distil ? preserve ? yea, so

That our great king himself doth woo me oft

For my confections ? Having thus far proceeded— 15

Unless thou think'st me devilish—is't not meet

That I did amplify my judgment in Other conclusions ? I will try the forces Of these thy compounds on such creatures as

We count not worth the hanging—but none human— 20

To try the vigour of them, and apply Allayments to their act, and by them gather

Their several virtues and effects.

Cor. Your Highness
Shall from this practice but make hard your heart ;

Besides, the seeing these effects will be 25
Both noisome and infectious.

Queen. O, content thee.

Enter PISANIO.

[Aside] Here comes a flattering rascal ; upon him

Will I first work. He's for his master, And enemy to my son.—How now, Pisanio !
Doctor, your service for this time is ended ; Take your own way.

Cor. [Aside] I do suspect you, madam ; But you shall do no harm.

Queen. [To Pisanio] Hark thee, a word.

Cor. [Aside] I do not like her. She doth think she has Strange ling'ring poisons. I do know her spirit,

And will not trust one of her malice with 35
A drug of such damn'd nature. Those she has

Will stupefy and dull the sense awhile,
Which first perchance she'll prove on cats and dogs,

Then afterward up higher; but there is No danger in what show of death it makes,
More than the locking up the spirits a time,
To be more fresh, reviving. She is fool'd
With a most false effect; and I the truer
So to be false with her.

Queen. No further service, Doctor,
Until I send for thee.

Cor. I humbly take my leave. 45

[Exit.

Queen. Weeps she still, say'st thou?
Dost thou think in time

She will not quench, and let instructions enter

Where folly now possesses? Do thou work.
When thou shalt bring me word she loves
my son,

I'll tell thee on the instant thou art then 50
As great as is thy master; greater, for His fortunes all lie speechless, and his name Is at last gasp. Return he cannot, nor Continue where he is. To shift his being
Is to exchange one misery with another, 55
And every day that comes comes to decay
A day's work in him. What shalt thou expect

To be depender on a thing that leans,
Who cannot be new built, nor has no
friends

So much as but to prop him?

[The Queen drops the box.

Pisanio takes it up.

Thou tak'st up 60

Thou know'st not what; but take it for thy labour.

It is a thing I made, which hath the King Five times redeem'd from death. I do not know

What is more cordial. Nay, I prithee take it;

It is an earnest of a further good 65
That I mean to thee. Tell thy mistress how The case stands with her; do't as from thyself.

Think what a chance thou changest on;
but think

Thou hast thy mistress still; to boot, my
son,

Who shall take notice of thee. I'll move the
King 70

To any shape of thy preferment, such As thou'lt desire; and then myself, I chiefly,

That set thee on to this desert, am bound

To load thy merit richly. Call my women.
Think on my words. [Exit Pisanio.

A sly and constant knave, 75
Not to be shak'd; the agent for his master,
And the remembrancer of her to hold The hand-fast to her lord. I have given him
that

Which, if he take, shall quite unpeople her Of leigers for her sweet; and which she
after, 80

Except she bend her humour, shall be assur'd

To taste of too.

Re-enter PISANIO and Ladies.

So, so. Well done, well done.
The violets, cowslips, and the primroses,
Bear to my closet. Fare thee well, Pisanio;
Think on my words.

[Exeunt Queen and Ladies.
Pis. And shall do. 85

But when to my good lord I prove untrue
I'll choke myself—there's all I'll do for you.
[Exit.

SCENE VI. Britain. The palace.

Enter IMOGEN alone.

Imo. A father cruel and a step-dame
false;

A foolish suitor to a wedded lady That hath her husband banish'd. O, that husband!

My supreme crown of grief! and those repeated

Vexations of it! Had I been thief-stol'n, 5
As my two brothers, happy! but most miserable

Is the desire that's glorious. Blessed be those,

How mean soe'er, that have their honest
wills,

Which seasons comfort. Who may this be?
Fie! 9

Enter PISANIO and IACHIMO.

Pis. Madam, a noble gentleman of Rome
Comes from my lord with letters.

Iach. Change you, madam?
The worthy Leonatus is in safety,
And greets your Highness dearly.

[Presents a letter.
Imo. Thanks, good sir.

You're kindly welcome.

Iach. [Aside] All of her that is out of door most rich! 15

If she be furnish'd with a mind so rare,
She is alone th' Arabian bird, and I Have lost the wager. Boldness be my friend!

Arm me, audacity, from head to foot! 19
Or, like the Parthian, I shall flying fight;
Rather, directly fly.

Imo. [Reads] 'He is one of the noblest note, to whose kindnesses I am most infinitely tied. Reflect upon him accordingly, as you value your trust. LEONATUS.

So far I read aloud ;
But even the very middle of my heart
Is warm'd by th' rest and takes it thankfully.
You are as welcome, worthy sir, as I Have words to bid you ; and shall find it so
In all that I can do.

Iach. Thanks, fairest lady.
What, are men mad ? Hath nature given them eyes

To see this vaulted arch and the rich crop
Of sea and land, which can distinguish
'twixt

The fiery orbs above and the twinn'd stones Upon the number'd beach, and can we
not

Partition make with spectacles so precious
'Twixt fair and foul ?

Imo. What makes your admiration ?

Iach. It cannot be i' th' eye, for apes and
monkeys,

'Twixt two such shes, would chatter this way and

Contemn with mows the other ; nor i' th'
judgment,

For idiots in this case of favour would
Be wisely definite ; nor i' th' appetite ;
Sluttery, to such neat excellence oppos'd,
Should make desire vomit emptiness,
Not so allur'd to feed.

Imo. What is the matter, trow ?

Iach. The cloyed will—
That satiate yet unsatisfied desire, that tub Both fill'd and running—ravening first the lamb,

Longs after for the garbage.

Imo. What, dear sir,
Thus raps you ? Are you well ?

Iach. Thanks, madam ; well.—Beseech
you, sir,

Desire my man's abode where I did leave
him.

He's strange and peevish.

Pis. I was going, sir,
To give him welcome. [Exit.

Imo. Continues well my lord ? His health beseech you ?

Iach. Well, madam.

Imo. Is he dispos'd to mirth ? I hope he is.

Iach. Exceeding pleasant ; none a stranger there

So merry and so gamesome. He is call'd
The Britain reveller.

Imo. When he was here
He did incline to sadness, and oft-times
Not knowing why.

Iach. I never saw him sad.
There is a Frenchman his companion, one
An eminent monsieur that, it seems, much loves

A Gallian girl at home. He furnaces
The thick sighs from him ; whiles the jolly Briton—

Your lord, I mean—laughs from's free lungs, cries 'O,
Can my sides hold, to think that man—
who knows

By history, report, or his own proof,
What woman is, yea, what she cannot choose

But must be—will's free hours languish for Assured bondage ?

Imo. Will my lord say so ?

Iach. Ay, madam, with his eyes in flood with laughter.

It is a recreation to be by
And hear him mock the Frenchman. But heavens know

Some men are much to blame.

Imo. Not he, I hope.

Iach. Not he ; but yet heaven's bounty towards him might

Be us'd more thankfully. In himself, 'tis
much ;

In you, which I account his, beyond all talents.

Whilst I am bound to wonder, I am bound
To pity too.

Imo. What do you pity, sir ?

Iach. Two creatures heartily.

Imo. Am I one, sir ?

You look on me : what wreck discern you in me

Deserves your pity ?

Iach. Lamentable ! What,
To hide me from the radiant sun and solace

I' th' dungeon by a snuff ?

Imo. I pray you, sir,
Deliver with more openness your answers
To my demands. Why do you pity me ?

Iach. That others do,

I was about to say, enjoy your—But
It is an office of the gods to venge it,
Not mine to speak on't.

Imo. You do seem to know Something of me, or what concerns me ;
pray you—

Since doubting things go ill often hurts
more

Than to be sure they do ; for certainties Either are past remedies, or, timely knowing,

The remedy then born—discover to me
What both you spur and stop.

Iach. Had I this cheek
To bathe my lips upon ; this hand, whose
touch,

Whose every touch, would force the feeler's
soul

To th' oath of loyalty ; this object, which Takes prisoner the wild motion of mine eye,
Fixing it only here ; should I, damn'd then,
Slaver with lips as common as the stairs

That mount the Capitol ; join gripes with hands 105
Made hard with hourly falsehood—falsehood as
With labour ; then by-peeping in an eye
Base and illustrious as the smoky light
That's fed with stinking tallow—it were fit
That all the plagues of hell should at one
time 110

Encounter such revolt.

Imo. My lord, I fear,
Has forgot Britain.

Iach. And himself. Not I
Inclin'd to this intelligence pronounce The beggary of his change ; but 'tis your graces

That from my mutest conscience to my
tongue 115

Charms this report out.

Imo. Let me hear no more.

Iach. O dearest soul, your cause doth strike my heart

With pity that doth make me sick ! A lady
So fair, and fasten'd to an empery, Would make the great'st king double, to be partner'd 120

With tomboys hir'd with that self exhibition

Which your own coffers yield ! with diseas'd ventures

That play with all infirmities for gold Which rottenness can lend nature ! such boil'd stuff 124

As well might poison poison ! Be reveng'd ;
Or she that bore you was no queen, and you
Recoil from your great stock.

Imo. Reveng'd ?
How should I be reveng'd ? If this be true—

As I have such a heart that both mine ears
Must not in haste abuse—if it be true, 130
How should I be reveng'd ?

Iach. Should he make me
Live like Diana's priest betwixt cold sheets, Whiles he is vaulting variable ramps,
In your despite, upon your purse ? Revenge it. 131

I dedicate myself to your sweet pleasure,
More noble than that runagate to your bed,
And will continue fast to your affection,
Still close as sure.

Imo. What ho, Pisanio !

Iach. Let me my service tender on your lips.

Imo. Away ! I do condemn mine ears that have 140

So long attended thee. If thou wert honourable,

Thou wouldst have told this tale for virtue,
not

For such an end thou seek'st, as base as strange.

Thou wrong'st a gentleman who is as far
From thy report as thou from honour ; and

Solicits here a lady that disdains 146
Thee and the devil alike.—What ho,
Pisanio !—

The King my father shall be made acquainted

Of thy assault. If he shall think it fit
A saucy stranger in his court to mart 150
As in a Romish stew, and to expound
His beastly mind to us, he hath a court
He little cares for, and a daughter who
He not respects at all.—What ho, Pisanio !

Iach. O happy Leonatus ! I may say 155
The credit that thy lady hath of thee Deserves thy trust, and thy most perfect goodness

Her assur'd credit. Blessed live you long,
A lady to the worthiest sir that ever Country call'd his ! and you his mistress,
only 160

For the most worthiest fit ! Give me your pardon.

I have spoke this to know if your affiance
Were deeply rooted, and shall make your lord

That which he is new o'er ; and he is one
The truest manner'd, such a holy witch 165
That he enchants societies into him,
Half all men's hearts are his.

Imo. You make amends.

Iach. He sits 'mongst men like a descended god :

He hath a kind of honour sets him off 169
More than a mortal seeming. Be not angry, Most mighty Princess, that I have ad-ventur'd

To try your taking of a false report, which hath

Honour'd with confirmation your great judgment

In the election of a sir so rare,
Which you know cannot err. The love I bear him 175

Made me to fan you thus ; but the gods made you,

Unlike all others, chaffless. Pray your pardon.

Imo. All's well, sir ; take my pow'r i' th' court for yours.

Iach. My humble thanks. I had almost forgot

T' entreat your Grace but in a small request, 180

And yet of moment too, for it concerns
Your lord ; myself and other noble friends
Are partners in the business.

Imo. Pray what is't ?

Iach. Some dozen Romans of us, and your lord—

The best feather of our wing—have mingled sums 185

To buy a present for the Emperor ;
Which I, the factor for the rest, have done
In France. 'Tis plate of rare device, and jewels

Of rich and exquisite form, their values
 great;
 And I am something curious, being
 strange,
 To have them in safe stowage. May it please you
 To take them in protection?

Imo. Willingly;

And pawn mine honour for their safety.
 Since

My lord hath interest in them, I will keep
 them

In my bedchamber.

Iach. They are in a trunk, 195
 Attended by my men. I will make bold
 To send them to you only for this night;
 I must aboard to-morrow.

Imo. O, no, no.

Iach. Yes, I beseech; or I shall short my word

By length'ning my return. From Gallia 200
 I cross'd the seas on purpose and on promise

To see your Grace.

Imo. I thank you for your pains.
 But not away to-morrow!

Iach. O, I must, madam.
 Therefore I shall beseech you, if you please To greet your lord with writing, do't to-
 night. 205

I have outstod my time, which is material
 To th' tender of our present.

Imo. I will write.

Send your trunk to me; it shall safe be kept

And truly yielded you. You're very welcome. [Exeunt.]

ACT TWO

SCENE I. *Britain. Before Cymbeline's
 palace.*

Enter CLOTEN and the two Lords.

Clo. Was there ever man had such luck!
 When I kiss'd the jack, upon an up-cast to be hit away! I had a hundred pound on't; and then a whoreson jackanapes must take me up for swearing, as if I borrowed mine oaths of him, and might not spend them at my pleasure. 5

1 Lord. What got he by that? You have broke his pate with your bowl. 7

2 Lord. [Aside] If his wit had been like him that broke it, it would have run all out.

Clo. When a gentleman is dispos'd to swear, it is not for any standers-by to curtail his oaths. Ha? 11

2 Lord. No, my lord; [Aside] nor crop the ears of them.

Clo. Whoreson dog! I give him satisfaction? Would he had been one of my rank!

2 Lord. [Aside] To have smell'd like a fool. 16

Clo. I am not vex'd more at anything in th' earth. A pox on't! I had rather not be so noble as I am; they dare not fight with me, because of the Queen my mother.
 Every jackslave hath his bellyfull of fighting, and I must go up and down like a cock that nobody can match. 21

2 Lord. [Aside] You are cock and capon too; and you crow, cock, with your comb
 on.

Clo. Sayest thou?

2 Lord. It is not fit your lordship should undertake every companion that you give offence to. 26

Clo. No, I know that; but it is fit I should commit offence to my inferiors.

2 Lord. Ay, it is fit for your lordship
 only.

Clo. Why, so I say. 30

1 Lord. Did you hear of a stranger that's come to court to-night?

Clo. A stranger, and I not know on't?

2 Lord. [Aside] He's a strange fellow himself, and knows it not. 35

1 Lord. There's an Italian come, and, 'tis thought, one of Leonatus' friends.

Clo. Leonatus? A banish'd rascal; and he's another, whatsoever he be. Who told you of this stranger?

1 Lord. One of your lordship's pages. 40

Clo. Is it fit I went to look upon him? Is there no derogation in't?

2 Lord. You cannot derogate, my lord.

Clo. Not easily, I think.

2 Lord. [Aside] You are a fool granted; therefore your issues, being foolish, do not derogate. 46

Clo. Come, I'll go see this Italian. What I have lost to-day at bowls I'll win to-night of him. Come, go.

2 Lord. I'll attend your lordship.

[Exeunt Cloten and First Lord.]

That such a crafty devil as is his mother 50 Should yield the world this ass! A woman
 that

Bears all down with her brain; and this her son

Cannot take two from twenty, for his
 heart,

And leave eighteen. Alas, poor princess,
 Thou divine Imogen, what thou endur'st, Betwixt a father by thy step-dame
 govern'd, 56

A mother hourly coining plots, a wooer
 More hateful than the foul expulsion is
 Of thy dear husband, than that horrid act
 Of the divorce he'd make! The heavens hold firm 60

The walls of thy dear honour, keep un-shak'd

That temple, thy fair mind, that thou mayst
 stand

T' enjoy thy banish'd lord and this great land! [Exit.]

SCENE II. Britain. Imogen's bedchamber in Cymbeline's palace; a trunk in one corner.

Enter IMOGEN in her bed, and a Lady attending.

Imo. Who's there? My woman? Helen?

Lady. Please you, madam.

Imo. What hour is it?

Lady. Almost midnight, madam.

Imo. I have read three hours then. Mine eyes are weak;

Fold down the leaf where I have left. To bed.

Take not away the taper, leave it burning; And if thou canst awake by four o' th' clock,

I prithee call me. Sleep hath seiz'd me wholly.

[Exit Lady.]

To your protection I commend me, gods. From fairies and the tempters of the night Guard me, beseech ye!

[Sleeps. Iachimo comes from the trunk.]

Iach. The crickets sing, and man's o'er-labour'd sense

Repairs itself by rest. Our Tarquin thus Did softly press the rushes ere he waken'd The chastity he wounded. Cytherea, How bravely thou becom'st thy bed! fresh lily,

And whiter than the sheets! That I might touch!

But kiss; one kiss! Rubies unparagon'd, How dearly they do't! 'Tis her breathing that Perfumes the chamber thus. The flame o' th' taper

Bows toward her and would under-peep her lids

To see th' enclosed lights, now canopied Under these windows white and azure, lac'd

With blue of heaven's own tinct. But my design

To note the chamber. I will write all down: Such and such pictures; there the window; such

Th' adornment of her bed; the arras, figures—

Why, such and such; and the contents o' th' story.

Ah, but some natural notes about her body Above ten thousand meaner movables Would testify, t' enrich mine inventory. O sleep, thou ape of death, lie dull upon her!

And be her sense but as a monument, Thus in a chapel lying! Come off, come off;

[Taking off her bracelet.]

As slippery as the Gordian knot was hard! 'Tis mine; and this will witness outwardly, As strongly as the conscience does within,

To th' madding of her lord. On her left breast

A mole cinque-spotted, like the crimson drops

I' th' bottom of a cowslip. Here's a voucher Stronger than ever law could make; this secret

Will force him think I have pick'd the lock and ta'en

The treasure of her honour. No more. To what end?

Why should I write this down that's riveted,

Screw'd to my memory? She hath been reading late

The tale of Tereus; here the leaf's turn'd down

Where Philomel gave up. I have enough. To th' trunk again, and shut the spring of it.

Swift, swift, you dragons of the night, that dawning

May bare the raven's eye! I lodge in fear; Though this a heavenly angel, hell is here.

[Clock strikes.]

One, two, three. Time, time!

[Exit into the trunk.]

SCENE III. Cymbeline's palace. An ante-chamber adjoining Imogen's apartments.

Enter CLOTEN and Lords.

1 Lord. Your lordship is the most patient man in loss, the most coldest that ever turn'd up ace.

Clo. It would make any man cold to lose.

1 Lord. But not every man patient after the noble temper of your lordship. You are most hot and furious when you win.

Clo. Winning will put any man into courage. If I could get this foolish Imogen, I should have gold enough. It's almost morning, is't not?

1 Lord. Day, my lord.

Clo. I would this music would come. I am advised to give her music a mornings; they say it will penetrate.

Enter Musicians.

Come on, tune. If you can penetrate her with your fingering, so. We'll try with tongue too. If none will do, let her remain; but I'll never give o'er. First, a very excellent good-conceited thing; after, a wonderful sweet air, with admirable rich words to it—and then let her consider.

Song.

Hark, hark! the lark at heaven's gate sings,
And Phœbus 'gins arise,
His steeds to water at those springs
On chalic'd flow'rs that lies;
And winking Mary-buds begin

To ope their golden eyes.
With everything that pretty bin,
My lady sweet, arise;
Arise, arise!

So, get you gone. If this penetrate, I will consider your music the better; if it do not, it is a vice in her ears which horsehairs and calves' guts, nor the voice of unpaved eunuch to boot, can never amend.

[Exeunt Musicians.]

Enter CYMBELINE and QUEEN.

2 Lord. Here comes the King.

Clo. I am glad I was up so late, for that's the reason I was up so early. He cannot choose but take this service I have done fatherly.—Good morrow to your Majesty and to my gracious mother.

Cym. Attend you here the door of our stern daughter?
Will she not forth?

Clo. I have assail'd her with musics, but she vouchsafes no notice.

Cym. The exile of her minion is too new;
She hath not yet forgot him; some more
time

Must wear the print of his remembrance
out,

And then she's yours.

Queen. You are most bound to th' King,
Who lets go by no vantages that may Prefer you to his daughter. Frame yourself
To orderly soliciting, and be friended
With aptness of the season; make denials Increase your services; so seem as if You were inspir'd to do those duties which
You tender to her; that you in all obey her,
Save when command to your dismission tends,

And therein you are senseless.

Clo. Senseless? Not so.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. So like you, sir, ambassadors from Rome;

The one is Caius Lucius.

Cym. A worthy fellow,
Albeit he comes on angry purpose now;
But that's no fault of his. We must receive
him

According to the honour of his sender;
And towards himself, his goodness fore-spent on us,

We must extend our notice. Our dear son,
When you have given good morning to your mistress,

Attend the Queen and us; we shall have need

T'employ you towards this Roman. Come, our queen. [Exeunt all but Cloten.]

Clo. If she be up, I'll speak with her;
if not,

Let her lie still and dream. By your leave,
ho!

[Knocks.]
I know her women are about her; what
If I do line one of their hands? 'Tis gold Which buys admittance; oft it doth—yea, and makes

Diana's rangers false themselves, yield up Their deer to th' stand o' th' stealer; and
'tis gold

Which makes the true man kill'd and saves
the thief;

Nay, sometime hangs both thief and true man. What

Can it not do and undo? I will make
One of her women lawyer to me, for
I yet not understand the case myself.
By your leave.

Enter a Lady.

Lady. Who's there that knocks?

Clo. A gentleman.

Lady. No more?

Clo. Yes, and a gentlewoman's son.

Lady. That's more

Than some whose tailors are as dear as yours

Can justly boast of. What's your lordship's pleasure?

Clo. Your lady's person; is she ready?

Lady. Ay,

To keep her chamber.

Clo. There is gold for you; sell me your good report.

Lady. How? My good name? or to report of you

What I shall think is good? The Princess!

Enter IMOGEN.

Clo. Good morrow, fairest sister. Your sweet hand.

Imo. Good morrow, sir. You lay out too much pains

For purchasing but trouble. The thanks I give

Is telling you that I am poor of thanks,
And scarce can spare them.

Clo. Still I swear I love you.

Imo. If you but said so, 'twere as deep
with me.

If you swear still, your recompense is still
That I regard it not.

Clo. This is no answer.

Imo. But that you shall not say I yield,
being silent,

I would not speak. I pray you spare me.
Faith,

I shall unfold equal discourtesy
To your best kindness; one of your great knowing

Should learn, being taught, forbearance.

Clo. To leave you in your madness 'twere
my sin;

I will not.

Imo. Fools are not mad folks.

Clo. Do you call me fool?

Imo. As I am mad, I do;
If you'll be patient, I'll no more be mad;
That cures us both. I am much sorry, sir,
You put me to forget a lady's manners ¹⁰⁵
By being so verbal; and learn now, for al',
That I, which know my heart, do here pronounce,
By th' very truth of it, I care not for you,
And am so near the lack of charity
To accuse myself I hate you; which I had rather ¹¹⁰
You felt than make't my boast.

Clo. You sin against Obedience, which you owe your father. For The contract you pretend with that base
wretch,
One bred of alms and foster'd with cold dishes,
With scraps o' th' court—it is no contract,
none. ¹¹⁵

And though it be allowed in meaner parties—

Yet who than he more mean?—to knit
their souls—

On whom there is no more dependency
But brats and beggary—in self-figur'd knot, Yet you are curb'd from that enlargement
by ¹²⁰

The consequence o' th' crown, and must not foil

The precious note of it with a base slave,
A hilding for a livery, a squire's cloth,
A pantler—not so eminent!

Imo. Profane fellow!
Wert thou the son of Jupiter, and no more
But what thou art besides, thou wert too base ¹²⁶

To be his groom. Thou wert dignified
enough,

Even to the point of envy, if 'twere made Comparative for your virtues to be styl'd
The under-hangman of his kingdom, and hated ¹³⁰

For being preferr'd so well.

Clo. The south fog rot him!

Imo. He never can meet more mischance than come

To be but nam'd of thee. His mean'st garment

That ever hath but clipp'd his body is dearer ¹³⁴

In my respect than all the hairs above thee,
Were they all made such men. How now,
Pisanio!

Enter PISANIO.

Clo. 'His garments'! Now the devil—
Imo. To Dorothy my woman hie thee
presently.

Clo. 'His garment'!

Imo. I am sprited with a fool; Frighted, and ang'red worse. Go bid my woman ¹⁴⁰

Search for a jewel that too casual.y
Hath left mine arm. It was thy master's;
shrew me,

If I would lose it for a revenue
Of any king's in Europe! I do think
I saw't this morning; confident I am ¹⁴⁵
Last night 'twas on mine arm; I kiss'd it.
I hope it be not gone to tell my lord
That I kiss aught but he.

Pis. 'Twill not be lost.

Imo. I hope so. Go and search.

[Exit Pisanio.]

Clo. You have abus'd me.
'His meanest garment'!

Imo. Ay, I said so, sir. ¹⁵⁰
If you will make 't an action, call witness
to 't.

Clo. I will inform your father.

Imo. Your mother too.
She's my good lady and will conceive, I
hope,

But the worst of me. So I leave you, sir,
To th' worst of discontent. [Exit.]

Clo. I'll be reveng'd. ¹⁵⁵
'His mean'st garment'! Well. [Exit.]

SCENE IV. Rome. Philario's house.

Enter POSTHUMUS and PHILARIO.

Post. Fear it not, sir; I would I were so sure

To win the King as I am bold her honour
Will remain hers.

Phi. What means do you make to him?

Post. Not any; but abide the change of
time,

Quake in the present winter's state, and wish ⁵

That warmer days would come. In these fear'd hopes

I barely gratify your love; they failing,
I must die much your debtor.

Phi. Your very goodness and your company

O'erpays all I can do. By this your king ¹⁰ Hath heard of great Augustus. Caius
Lucius

Will do's commission throughly; and I think

He'll grant the tribute, send th' arrearsages,
Or look upon our Romans, whose remembrance

Is yet fresh in their grief.

Post. I do believe, ¹⁵ Statist though I am none, nor like to be,
That this will prove a war; and you shall hear

The legions now in Gallia sooner landed In our not-fearing Britain than have tidings

Of any penny tribute paid. Our countrymen ²⁰

Are men more order'd than when Julius
Cæsar

Smil'd at their lack of skill, but found their courage

Worthy his frowning at. Their discipline, Now mingled with their courages, will make known

To their approvers they are people such 25
That mend upon the world.

Enter IACHIMO.

Phi. See! Iachimo!

Post. The swiftest harts have posted you by land,

And winds of all the corners kiss'd your sails,

To make your vessel nimble.

Phi. Welcome, sir.

Post. I hope the briefness of your answer
made 30

The speediness of your return.

Iach. Your lady

Is one of the fairest that I have look'd
upon.

Post. And therewithal the best; or let her beauty

Look through a casement to allure false hearts, 34

And be false with them.

Iach. Here are letters for you.

Post. Their tenour good, I trust.

Iach. 'Tis very like.

Phi. Was Caius Lucius in the Britain
court

When you were there?

Iach. He was expected then,
But not approach'd.

Post. All is well yet.

Sparkles this stone as it was wont, or is't
not 40

Too dull for your good wearing?

Iach. If I have lost it,
I should have lost the worth of it in gold.

I'll make a journey twice as far t' enjoy
A second night of such sweet shortness which 44

Was mine in Britain; for the ring is won.

Post. The stone's too hard to come by.

Iach. Not a whit,
Your lady being so easy.

Post. Make not, sir,

Your loss your sport. I hope you know that we 45

Must not continue friends.

Iach. Good sir, we must,
If you keep covenant. Had I not brought The knowledge of your mistress home, I grant

We were to question farther; but I now
Profess myself the winner of her honour, Together with your ring; and not the
wronger

Of her or you, having proceeded but 55
By both your wills.

Post. If you can make't apparent
That you have tasted her in bed, my hand

And ring is yours. If not, the foul opinion
You had of her pure honour gains or loses
Your sword or mine, or masterless leaves
both 60

To who shall find them.

Iach. Sir, my circumstances, Being so near the truth as I will make
them,

Must first induce you to believe—whose strength

I will confirm with oath; which I doubt
not

You'll give me leave to spare when you shall find 65

You need it not.

Post. Proceed.

Iach. First, her bedchamber,
Where I confess I slept not, but profess Had that was well worth watching—it was hang'd 68

With tapestry of silk and silver; the story,
Proud Cleopatra when she met her Roman
And Cydnus swell'd above the banks, or for The press of boats or pride. A piece of work

So bravely done, so rich, that it did strive
In workmanship and value; which I wonder'd

Could be so rarely and exactly wrought, 75
Since the true life on't was—

Post. This is true;
And this you might have heard of here, by
me

Or by some other.

Iach. More particulars
Must justify my knowledge.

Post. So they must,
Or do your honour injury.

Iach. The chimney 80
Is south the chamber, and the chimney-piece

Chaste Dian bathing. Never saw I figures
So likely to report themselves. The cutter
Was as another nature, dumb; outwent
her,

Motion and breath left out.

Post. This is a thing 85
Which you might from relation likewise reap,

Being, as it is, much spoke of.

Iach. The roof o' th' chamber With golden cherubins is fretted; her andirons—

I had forgot them—were two winking
Cupids 89

Of silver, each on one foot standing, nicely
Depending on their brands.

Post. This is her honour!
Let it be granted you have seen all this, and praise

Be given to your remembrance; the description

Of what is in her chamber nothing saves
The wager you have laid.

Iach. Then, if you can, ⁹⁵
 [Shows the bracelet.
Be pale. I beg but leave to air this jewel.
See!
And now 'tis up again. It must be married
To that your diamond; I'll keep them.
Post. Jove!
Once more let me behold it. Is it that
Which I left with her?
Iach. Sir—I thank her—that. ¹⁰⁰
She stripp'd it from her arm; I see her yet;
Her pretty action did outsell her gift,
And yet enrich'd it too. She gave it me, and said
She priz'd it once.
Post. May be she pluck'd it off
To send it me.
Iach. She writes so to you, doth she?
Post. O, no, no, no! 'tis true. Here, take this too; [Gives the ring.
It is a basilisk unto mine eye, ¹⁰⁷ Kills me to look on't. Let there be no
honour
Where there is beauty; truth where semblance; love
Where there's another man. The vows of women ¹¹⁰
Of no more bondage be to where they are
made
Than they are to their virtues, which is nothing.
O, above measure false!
Phi. Have patience, sir,
And take your ring again; 'tis not yet won.
It may be probable she lost it, or ¹¹⁵
Who knows if one her women, being corrupted,
Hath stol'n it from her?
Post. Very true;
And so I hope he came by't. Back my ring. ¹¹⁸
Render to me some corporal sign about her,
More evident than this; for this was stol'n.
Iach. By Jupiter, I had it from her arm!
Post. Hark you, he swears; by Jupiter
he swears.
'Tis true—nay, keep the ring, 'tis true. I am sure
She would not lose it. Her attendants are All sworn and honourable—they induc'd to steal it! ¹²⁵
And by a stranger! No, he hath enjoy'd
her.
The cognizance of her incontinency Is this: she hath bought the name of whore thus dearly.
There, take thy hire; and all the fiends of hell
Divide themselves between you!
Phi. Sir, be patient; ¹³⁰
This is not strong enough to be believ'd
Of one persuaded well of.
Post. Never talk on't;

She hath been colted by him.
Iach. If you seek
For further satisfying, under her breast—Worthy the pressing—lies a mole, right proud ¹³⁵
Of that most delicate lodging. By my life,
I kiss'd it; and it gave me present hunger
To feed again, though full. You do remember
This stain upon her?
Post. Ay, and it doth confirm
Another stain, as big as hell can hold, ¹⁴⁰
Were there no more but it.
Iach. Will you hear more?
Post. Spare your arithmetic; never count
the turns.
Once, and a million!
Iach. I'll be sworn—
Post. No swearing.
If you will swear you have not done't,
you lie;
And I will kill thee if thou dost deny ¹⁴⁵
Thou'st made me cuckold.
Iach. I'll deny nothing.
Post. O that I had her here to tear her limb-meal!
I will go there and do't, i' th' court, before Her father. I'll do something— [Exit.
Phi. Quite besides
The government of patience! You have won. ¹⁵⁰
Let's follow him and pervert the present
wrath
He hath against himself.
Iach. With all my heart.
[Exeunt.

SCENE V. Rome. Another room in Philario's
house.
Enter POSTHUMUS.
Post. Is there no way for men to be, but
women
Must be half-workers? We are all bastards,
And that most venerable man which I Did call my father was I know not where When I was stamp'd. Some coiner with his tools ⁵
Made me a counterfeit; yet my mother seem'd
The Dian of that time. So doth my wife
The nonpareil of this. O, vengeance, vengeance!
Me of my lawful pleasure she restrain'd,
And pray'd me oft forbearance; did it with ¹⁰
A pudency so rosy, the sweet view on't Might well have warm'd old Saturn; that I thought her
As chaste as unsunn'd snow. O, all the devils!
This yellow Iachimo in an hour—was't not?
Or less!—at first? Perchance he spoke not, but, ¹⁵

Like a full-acorn'd boar, a German one, Cried 'O!' and mounted; found no opposition
 But what he look'd for should oppose and she Should from encounter guard. Could I find out
 The woman's part in me! For there's no
 motion 20
 That tends to vice in man but I affirm
 It is the woman's part. Be it lying, note it,
 The woman's; flattering, hers; deceiving,
 hers;
 Lust and rank thoughts, hers, hers;
 revenges, hers;
 Ambitions, covetings, change of prides,
 disdain, 25
 Nice longing, slanders, mutability,
 All faults that man may name, nay, that hell knows,
 Why, hers, in part or all; but rather all;
 For even to vice
 They are not constant, but are changing
 still 30
 One vice but of a minute old for one Not half so old as that. I'll write against
 them,
 Detest them, curse them. Yet 'tis greater
 skill 33
 In a true hate to pray they have their will:
 The very devils cannot plague them better.
 [Exit.]

ACT THREE

SCENE I. *Britain. A hall in Cymbeline's
 palace.*

Enter in state, CYMBELINE, QUEEN, CLOTEN, and Lords a one door, and at another CAIUS LUCIUS and Attendants.

Cym. Now say, what would Augustus Cæsar with us?

Luc. When Julius Cæsar—whose remembrance yet

Lives in men's eyes, and will to ears and tongues

Be theme and hearing ever—was in this Britain,

And conquer'd it, Cassibelan, thine uncle, 5
 Famous in Cæsar's praises no whit less Than in his feats deserving it, for him
 And his succession granted Rome a tribute, Yearly three thousand pounds, which by thee lately

Is left untender'd.

Queen. And, to kill the marvel, 10
 Shall be so ever.

Clo. There be many Cæsars
 Ere such another Julius. Britain is A world by itself, and we will nothing pay
 For wearing our own noses.

Queen. That opportunity, Which then they had to take from 's, to resume 15

We have again. Remember, sir, my liege,
 The kings your ancestors, together with The natural bravery of your isle, which stands

As Neptune's park, ribb'd and pal'd in
 With rocks unscalable and roaring waters,
 With sands that will not bear your enemies' boats 21

But suck them up to th' top-mast. A kind of conquest

Cæsar made here; but made not here his brag

Of 'came, and saw, and overcame'. With
 shame—

The first that ever touch'd him—he was carried 25

From off our coast, twice beaten; and his shipping—

Poor ignorant baubles!—on our terrible seas,
 Like egg-shells mov'd upon their surges, crack'd

As easily 'gainst our rocks; for joy whereof
 The fam'd Cassibelan, who was once at point— 30

O, giglot fortune!—to master Cæsar's
 sword,

Made Lud's Town with rejoicing fires bright
 And Britons strut with courage.

Clo. Come, there's no more tribute to be paid. Our kingdom is stronger than it was at that time; and, as I said, there is no more such Cæsars. Other of them may have crook'd noses; but to owe such straight arms, none.

Cym. Son, let your mother end. 38

Clo. We have yet many among us can gripe as hard as Cassibelan. I do not say
 I am one; but I have a hand. Why tribute?
 Why should we pay tribute? If Cæsar can hide the sun from us with a blanket, or put the moon in his pocket, we will pay him tribute for light; else, sir, no more tribute, pray you now.

Cym. You must know, 45
 Till the injurious Romans did extort
 This tribute from us, we were free. Cæsar's ambition—

Which swell'd so much that it did almost stretch

The sides o' th' world—against all colour
 here

Did put the yoke upon's; which to shake off 50

Becomes a warlike people, whom we reckon Ourselves to be.

Clo. We do.

Cym. Say then to Cæsar,
 Our ancestor was that Mulmutius which Ordain'd our laws—whose use the sword of Cæsar

Hath too much mangled; whose repair and franchise 55

Shall, by the power we hold, be our good
 deed,

Though Rome be therefore angry. Mulmutius made our laws,
Who was the first of Britain which did put His brows within a golden crown, and call'd
Himself a king.

Luc. I am sorry, Cymbeline, 60
That I am to pronounce Augustus Cæsar—Cæsar, that hath moe kings his servants than
Thyself domestic officers—thine enemy.
Receive it from me, then: war and confusion

In Cæsar's name pronounce I 'gainst thee;
look 65
For fury not to be resisted. Thus defied,
I thank thee for myself.

Cym. Thou art welcome, Caius.
Thy Cæsar knighted me; my youth I spent Much under him; of him I gather'd honour,
Which he to seek of me again, perforce, 70
Behoves me keep at utterance. I am perfect That the Pannonians and Dalmatians for Their liberties are now in arms, a precedent
Which not to read would show the Britons
cold;

So Cæsar shall not find them.

Luc. Let proof speak. 75
Clo. His Majesty bids you welcome.
Make pastime with us a day or two, or longer. If you seek us afterwards in other terms, you shall find us in our salt-water girdle. If you beat us out of it, it is yours;
if you fall in the adventure, our crows shall fare the better for you; and there's an end.

Luc. So, sir. 82
Cym. I know your master's pleasure, and he mine;
All the remain is, welcome. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II. Britain. Another room in Cymbeline's palace.

Enter PISANIO reading of a letter.

Pis. How? of adultery? Wherefore write you not
What monsters her accuse? Leonatus!
O master, what a strange infection
Is fall'n into thy ear! What false Italian—As poisonous-tongu'd as handed—hath prevail'd 5
On thy too ready hearing? Disloyal? No.
She's punish'd for her truth, and undergoes,
More goddess-like than wife-like, such assaults
As would take in some virtue. O my master!
Thy mind to her is now as low as were 10
Thy fortunes. How? that I should murder
her?
Upon the love, and truth, and vows, which I Have made to thy command? I, her? Her
blood?
If it be so to do good service, never

Let me be counted serviceable. How look I
That I should seem to lack humanity 16
So much as this fact comes to? [Reads]
'Do't. The letter

That I have sent her, by her own command Shall give thee opportunity.' O damn'd paper,

Black as the ink that's on thee! Senseless
bauble, 20

Art thou a fedary for this act, and look'st
So virgin-like without? Lo here she comes.

Enter IMOGEN.

I am ignorant in what I am commanded.

Imo. How now, Pisanio!

Pis. Madam, here is a letter from my
lord. 25

Imo. Who? thy lord? That is my lord—
Leonatus?

O, learn'd indeed were that astronomer
That knew the stars as I his characters—
He'd lay the future open. You good gods,
Let what is here contain'd relish of love, 30
Of my lord's health, of his content; yet
not

That we two are asunder—let that grieve
him!

Some griefs are med'cinable; that is one of
them,

For it doth physic love—of his content,
All but in that. Good wax, thy leave.

Blest be 35
You bees that make these locks of counsel!
Lovers

And men in dangerous bonds pray not alike;

Though forfeiters you cast in prison, yet 38
You clasp young Cupid's tables. Good news, gods! [Reads.]

'Justice, and your father's wrath, should he take me in his dominion, could not be so cruel to me as you, O the dearest of creatures, would even renew me with your eyes.
Take notice that I am in Cambria, at Milford Haven. What your own love will out of this advise you, follow. So he wishes you all happiness that remains loyal to his vow, and your increasing in love 45

LEONATUS POSTHUMUS.'

O for a horse with wings! Hear'st thou,
Pisanio?

He is at Milford Haven. Read, and tell me
How far 'tis thither. If one of mean affairs
May plod it in a week, why may not I 50
Glide thither in a day? Then, true
Pisanio—

Who long'st like me to see thy lord, who long'st—

O, let me 'bate!—but not like me, yet
long'st,

But in a fainter kind—O, not like me,
For mine's beyond beyond!—say, and speak thick— 55

Love's counsellor should fill the bores of hearing
 To th' smothering of the sense—how far it is
 To this same blessed Milford. And by th'
 way
 Tell me how Wales was made so happy as T' inherit such a haven. But first of all, ⁶⁰
 How we may steal from hence ; and for the gap
 That we shall make in time from our hence-going
 And our return, to excuse. But first, how get hence.
 Why should excuse be born or ere begot ?
 We'll talk of that hereafter. Prithee speak,
 How many score of miles may we well ride
 'Twixt hour and hour ?
 Pis. One score 'twixt sun and sun,
 Madam, 's enough for you, and too much too. ⁶⁸
 Imo. Why, one that rode to's execution,
 man,
 Could never go so slow. I have heard of riding wagers
 Where horses have been nimbler than the sands ⁷¹
 That run i' th' clock's behalf. But this is fool'ry.
 Go bid my woman feign a sickness ; say She'll home to her father ; and provide me
 presently
 A riding suit, no costlier than would fit ⁷⁵
 A franklin's huswife.
 Pis. Madam, you're best consider.
 Imo. I see before me, man. Nor here, nor
 here,
 Nor what ensues, but have a fog in them That I cannot look through. Away, I prithee ;
 Do as I bid thee. There's no more to say ;
 Accessible is none but Milford way. ⁸¹
 [Exeunt.]

SCENE III. Wales. A mountainous country with a cave.

Enter from the cave BELARIUS, GUIDERIUS, and ARVIRAGUS.

Bel. A goodly day not to keep house with such Whose roof's as low as ours ! Stoop, boys ;
 this gate
 Instructs you how t' adore the heavens, and bows you
 To a morning's holy office. The gates of monarchs
 Are arch'd so high that giants may jet through ⁵
 And keep their impious turbans on without Good morrow to the sun. Hail, thou fair
 heaven !
 We house i' th' rock, yet use thee not so hardly

As prouder livers do.

Gui. Hail, heaven !

Arv. Hail, heaven !

Bel. Now for our mountain sport. Up to yond hill, ¹⁰

Your legs are young ; I'll tread these flats.
 Consider,

When you above perceive me like a crow,
 That it is place which lessens and sets off ;
 And you may then revolve what tales I have told you

Of courts, of princes, of the tricks in war. ¹⁵

This service is not service so being done,
 But being so allow'd. To apprehend thus

Draws us a profit from all things we see,
 And often to our comfort shall we find

The sharded beetle in a safer hold ²⁰

Than is the full-wing'd eagle. O, this life

Is nobler than attending for a check, Richer than doing nothing for a br be,

Prouder than rustling in unpaid-for silk :

Such gain the cap of him that makes him fine, ²⁵

Yet keeps his book uncross'd. No life to ours !

Gui. Out of your proof you speak. We,

poor unfledg'd,

Have never wing'd from view o' th' nest, nor know not

What air's from home. Haply this life is best,

If quiet life be best ; sweeter to you ³⁰

That have a sharper known ; well corresponding

With your stiff age. But unto us it is

A cell of ignorance, travelling abed,
 A prison for a debtor that not dares

To stride a limit.

Arv. What should we speak of ³⁵

When we are old as you ? When we shall hear

The rain and wind beat dark December,
 how,

In this our pinching cave, shall we discourse

The freezing hours away ? We have seen nothing ; ³⁹

We are beastly : subtle as the fox for prey,
 Like warlike as the wolf for what we eat.

Our valour is to chase what flies ; our cage
 We make a choir, as doth the prison'd bird,
 And sing our bondage freely.

Bel. How you speak !

Did you but know the city's usuries, ⁴⁵

And felt them knowingly—the art o' th'
 court,

As hard to leave as keep, whose top to climb

Is certain falling, or so slipp'ry that

The fear's as bad as falling ; the toil o' th' war, ⁴⁹

A pain that only seems to seek out danger

I' th' name of fame and honour, which dies
 i' th' search,

And hath as oft a sland'rous epitaph
 As record of fair act; nay, many times, Doth ill deserve by doing well; what's worse—
 Must curtsy at the censure. O, boys, this story 55
 The world may read in me; my body's mark'd
 With Roman swords, and my report was once
 First with the best of note. Cymbeline lov'd me;
 And when a soldier was the theme, my
 name
 Was not far off. Then was I as a tree 60 Whose boughs did bend with fruit; but in one night
 A storm, or robbery, call it what you will,
 Shook down my mellow hangings, nay, my
 leaves,
 And left me bare to weather.
 Gui. Uncertain favour!
 Bel. My fault being nothing—as I have told you oft— 65
 But that two villains, whose false oaths
 prevail'd
 Before my perfect honour, swore to Cymbeline
 I was confederate with the Romans. So Follow'd my banishment, and this twenty years
 This rock and these demesnes have been my
 world, 70
 Where I have liv'd at honest freedom, paid
 More pious debts to heaven than in all The fore-end of my time. But up to th' mountains!
 This is not hunters' language. He that strikes
 The venison first shall be the lord o' th'
 feast; 75
 To him the other two shall minister;
 And we will fear no poison, which attends In place of greater state. I'll meet you in the valleys.
 [Exeunt Guiderius and Arviragus.
 How hard it is to hide the sparks of nature!
 These boys know little they are sons to th'
 King, 80
 Nor Cymbeline dreams that they are alive.
 They think they are mine; and though train'd up thus meanly
 I' th' cave wherein they bow, their thoughts do hit
 The roofs of palaces, and nature prompts
 them 84
 In simple and low things to prince it much Beyond the trick of others. This Polydore,
 The heir of Cymbeline and Britain, who
 The King his father call'd Guiderius—Jove!
 When on my three-foot stool I sit and tell The warlike feats I have done, his spirits fly out 90
 Into my story; say ' Thus mine enemy fell,

And thus I set my foot on's neck'; even then
 The princely blood flows in his cheek, he sweats,
 Strains his young nerves, and puts himself in posture
 That acts my words. The younger brother,
 Cadwal, 95
 Once Arviragus, in as like a figure Strikes life into my speech, and shows much more
 His own conceiving. Hark, the game is rous'd!
 O Cymbeline, heaven and my conscience
 knows 99
 Thou didst unjustly banish me! Whereon, At three and two years old, I stole these babes,
 Thinking to bar thee of succession as Thou refts me of my lands. Euriphile, Thou wast their nurse; they took thee for their mother,
 And every day do honour to her grave. 105
 Myself, Belarius, that am Morgan call'd, They take for natural father. The game is up. [Exit.

SCENE IV. Wales, near Milford Haven.

Enter PISANIO and IMOGEN.

Imo. Thou told'st me, when we came from horse, the place Was near at hand. Ne'er long'd my mother
 so
 To see me first as I have now. Pisanio!
 Man!
 Where is Posthumus? What is in thy mind That makes thee stare thus? Wherefore breaks that sigh 5
 From th' inward of thee? One but painted
 thus
 Would be interpreted a thing perplex'd
 Beyond self-explication. Put thyself
 Into a haviour of less fear, ere wildness Vanquish my staid senses. What's the matter? 10
 Why tender'st thou that paper to me with A look untender? If't be summer news,
 Smile to't before; if winterly, thou need'st
 But keep that count'nance still. My husband's hand?
 That drug-damn'd Italy hath out-craftied
 him, 15
 And he's at some hard point. Speak, man;
 thy tongue
 May take off some extremity, which to read
 Would be even mortal to me.
 Pis. Please you read,
 And you shall find me, wretched man, a
 thing
 The most disdain'd of fortune. 20
 Imo. [Reads] 'Thy mistress, Pisanio, hath play'd the strumpet in my bed, the testimonies whereof lie bleeding in me. I speak not out of weak surmises, but from proof as strong as my grief and as certain as I expect my revenge. That part thou, Pisanio, must act for me, if thy faith be not tainted with the breach of hers. Let thine own hands take away her life; I shall give thee opportunity at Milford Haven; she hath my letter for the purpose; where, if thou fear to strike, and to make me certain it is done, thou art the pander to her dishonour, and equally to me disloyal.' 29

Pis. What shall I need to draw my sword? The paper

Hath cut her throat already. No, 'tis slander, 31

Whose edge is sharper than the sword, whose tongue

Outvenoms all the worms of Nile, whose breath

Rides on the posting winds and doth belie All corners of the world. Kings, queens, and states, 35

Maids, matrons, nay, the secrets of the grave,

This viperous slander enters. What cheer, madam?

Imo. False to his bed? What is it to be false?

To lie in watch there, and to think on him? To weep twixt clock and clock? If sleep charge nature,

To break it with a fearful dream of him, 41 And cry myself awake? That's false to's bed,

Is it?

Pis. Alas, good lady!

Imo. I false! Thy conscience witness! Iachimo,

Thou didst accuse him of incontinency; 45 Thou then look'dst like a villain; now, methinks,

Thy favour's good enough. Some jay of Italy,

Whose mother was her painting, hath betray'd him.

Poor I am stale, a garment out of fashion, And for I am richer than to hang by th' walls 50

I must be ripp'd. To pieces with me! O, Men's vows are women's traitors! All good seeming,

By thy revolt, O husband, shall be thought Put on for villainy; not born where't grows,

But worn a bait for ladies.

Pis. Good madam, hear me. 55

Imo. True honest men being heard, like false Æneas,

Were, in his time, thought false; and Sinon's weeping

Did scandal many a holy tear, took pity From most true wretchedness. So thou,

Posthumus,

Wilt lay the leaven on all proper men: 60

Goodly and gallant shall be false and perjur'd

From thy great fail. Come, fellow, be thou honest;

Do thou thy master's bidding; when thou seest him,

A little witness my obedience. Look! 64

I draw the sword myself; take it, and hit The innocent mansion of my love, my heart.

Fear not; 'tis empty of all things but grief;

Thy master is not there, who was indeed The riches of it. Do his bidding; strike.

Thou mayst be valiant in a better cause, 70 But now thou seem'st a coward.

Pis. Hence, vile instrument! Thou shalt not damn my hand.

Imo. Why, I must die; And if I do not by thy hand, thou art

No servant of thy master's. Against self-slaughter

There is a prohibition so divine 75 That cravens my weak hand. Come, here's my heart—

Something's afore't. Soft, soft! we'll no defence!—

Obedient as the scabbard. What is here? The scriptures of the loyal Leonatus

All turn'd to heresy? Away, away, 80

Corrupters of my faith! you shall no more Be stomachers to my heart. Thus may poor fools Believe false teachers; though those that are betray'd

Do feel the treason sharply, yet the traitor Stands in worse case of woe. And thou,

Posthumus,

That didst set up my disobedience 'gainst the King

My father, and make me put into contempt the suits

Of princely fellows, shalt hereafter find It is no act of common passage but 90

A strain of rareness; and I grieve myself To think, when thou shalt be disedg'd by her

That now thou tirest on, how thy memory Will then be pang'd by me. Prithee dispatch.

The lamb entreats the butcher. Where's thy knife? 95

Thou art too slow to do thy master's bidding,

When I desire it too.

Pis. O gracious lady, Since I receiv'd command to do this business

I have not slept one wink.

Imo. Do't, and to bed then.

Pis. I'll wake mine eyeballs first.

Imo. Wherefore then Didst undertake it? Why hast thou abus'd 101

So many miles with a pretence? This place?

Mine action and thine own? our horses' labour?

The time inviting thee? the perturb'd court,

For my being absent?—whereunto I never Purpose return. Why hast thou gone so far To be unbent when thou hast ta'en thy stand,

Th' elected deer before thee?

Pis. But to win time To lose so bad employment, in the which I have consider'd of a course. Good lady, Hear me with patience.

Imo. Talk thy tongue weary—speak. I have heard I am a strumpet, and mine ear,

Therein false struck, can take no greater wound,

Nor tent to bottom that. But speak.

Pis. Then, madam, I thought you would not back again.

Imo. Most like—
Bringing me here to kill me.

Pis. Not so, neither; But if I were as wise as honest, then My purpose would prove well. It cannot be But that my master is abus'd. Some villain,

Ay, and singular in his art, hath done you both

This cursed injury.

Imo. Some Roman courtesan!

Pis. No, on my life! I'll give but notice you are dead, and send him

Some bloody sign of it, for 'tis commanded I should do so. You shall be miss'd at court,

And that will well confirm it.

Imo. Why, good fellow, What shall I do the while? where bide? how live?

Or in my life what comfort, when I am Dead to my husband?

Pis. If you'll back to th' court—

Imo. No court, no father, nor no more ado

With that harsh, noble, simple nothing— That Cloten, whose love-suit hath been to me

As fearful as a siege.

Pis. If not at court, Then not in Britain must you bide.

Imo. Where then? Hath Britain all the sun that shines? Day,

Are they not but in Brita'n? I' th' world's volume

Our Britain seems as of it, but not n't; a great pool a swan's nest. Prithee think Where's livers out of Britain.

Pis. I am most glad you think of other place. Th' ambassador,

Lucius the Roman, comes to Milford Haven

To-morrow. Now, if you could wear a mind

Dark as your fortune is, and but disguise That which t' appear itself must not yet be But by self-danger, you should tread a course

Pretty and full of view; yea, happily, near The residence of Posthumus; so nigh, at least,

That though his actions were not visible, yet Report should render him hourly to your ear

As truly as he moves.

Imo. O! for such means, Though peril to my modesty, not death on't,

I would adventure.

Pis. Well then, here's the point: You must forget to be a woman; change Command into obedience; fear and nice-ness—

The handmaids of all women, or, more truly,

Woman it pretty self—into a waggish courage;

Ready in gibes, quick-answer'd, saucy, and As quarrelous as the weasel. Nay, you must Forget that rarest treasure of your cheek, Exposing it—but, O, the harder heart! Alack, no remedy!—to the greedy touch Of common-kissing Titan, and forget Your laboursome and dainty trims wherein You made great Juno angry.

Imo. Nay, be brief; I see into thy end, and am almost A man already.

Pis. First, make yourself but like one. Fore-thinking this, I have already fit— 'Tis in my cloak-bag—doublet, hat, hose, all That answer to them. Would you, in their serving,

And with what imitation you can borrow From youth of such a season, fore noble Lucius

Present yourself, desire his service, tell him Wherein you're happy—which will make him know

If that his head have ear in music; doubtless

With joy he will embrace you; for he's honourable,

And, doubling that, most holy. Your means abroad—

You have me, rich; and I will never fail Beginning nor supplyment.

Imo. Thou art all the comfort The gods will diet me with. Prithee away! There's more to be consider'd; but we'll even

All that good time will give us. This attempt

I am soldier to, and will abide it with A prince's courage. Away, I prithee.

Pis. Well, madam, we must take a short
farewell,

Lest, being miss'd, I be suspected of ¹⁸⁵
Your carriage from the court. My noble
mistress,

Here is a box ; I had it from the Queen.
What's in't is precious. If you are sick at sea

Or stomach-qualm'd at land, a dram of this Will drive away distemper. To some shade,
And fit you to your manhood. May the gods
Direct you to the best !

Imo. Amen. I thank thee.
[Exeunt severally.]

SCENE V. Britain. Cymbeline's palace.

Enter CYMBELINE, QUEEN, CLOTEN, LUCIUS, and Lords.

Cym. Thus far ; and so farewell.

Luc. Thanks, royal sir.
My emperor hath wrote ; I must from
hence,

And am right sorry that I must report ye
My master's enemy.

Cym. Our subjects, sir, ⁴
Will not endure his yoke ; and for ourself
To show less sovereignty than they, must needs

Appear unkinglike.

Luc. So, sir. I desire of you
A conduct overland to Milford Haven.
Madam, all joy befall your Grace, and you !

Cym. My lords, you are appointed for that office ; ¹⁰
The due of honour in no point omit.
So farewell, noble Lucius.

Luc. Your hand, my lord.

Clo. Receive it friendly ; but from this time forth

I wear it as your enemy.

Luc. Sir, the event ¹⁴
Is yet to name the winner. Fare you well.

Cym. Leave not the worthy Lucius, good my lords,

Till he have cross'd the Severn. Happiness !
[Exeunt Lucius and Lords.]

Queen. He goes hence frowning ; but it honours us
That we have given him cause.

Clo. 'Tis all the better ;
Your valiant Britons have their wishes in it.

Cym. Lucius hath wrote already to the Emperor ²¹
How it goes here. It fits us therefore ripely Our chariots and our horsemen be in readiness.

The pow'rs that he already hath in Gallia
Will soon be drawn to head, from whence he moves ²⁵

His war for Britain.

Queen. 'Tis not sleepy business,

But must be look'd to speedily and strongly.

Cym. Our expectation that it would be
thus

Hath made us forward. But, my gentle
queen,

Where is our daughter ? She hath not appear'd ³⁰

Before the Roman, nor to us hath tender'd
The duty of the day. She looks us like
A thing more made of malice than of duty ;
We have noted it. Call her before us, for
We have been too slight in sufferance.

[Exit a Messenger.]

Queen. Royal sir,
Since the exile of Posthumus, most retir'd Hath her life been ; the cure whereof, my lord, ³⁷

'Tis time must do. Beseech your Majesty,
Forbear sharp speeches to her ; she's a lady
So tender of rebukes that words are strokes,
And strokes death to her.

Re-enter Messenger.

Cym. Where is she, sir ? How Can her contempt be answer'd ?

Mess. Please you, sir,
Her chambers are all lock'd, and there's no
answer

That will be given to th' loud noise we make.

Queen. My lord, when last I went to visit her, ⁴¹

She pray'd me to excuse her keeping close ;
Whereto constrain'd by her infirmity
She should that duty leave unpaid to you
Which daily she was bound to proffer. This She wish'd me to make known ; but our great court ⁵⁰

Made me to blame in memory.

Cym. Her doors lock'd ?
Not seen of late ? Grant, heavens, that which I fear

Prove false ! [Exit.]

Queen. Son, I say, follow the King.

Clo. That man of hers, Pisanio, her old servant ; ⁵

I have not seen these two days.

Queen. Go, look after.
[Exit Cloten.]

Pisanio, thou that stand'st so for Posthumus !

He hath a drug of mine. I pray his absence Proceed by swallowing that ; for he believes

It is a thing most precious. But for her, ⁶⁰
Where is she gone ? Haply despair hath seiz'd her ;

Or, wing'd with fervour of her love, she's flown

To her desir'd Posthumus. Gone she is To death or to dishonour, and my end Can make good use of either. She being down, ⁶⁵

I have the placing of the British crown.

Re-enter CLOTEN.

How now, my son ?

Clo. 'Tis certain she is fled.
Go in and cheer the King. He rages ; none Dare come about him.

Queen. All the better. May
This night forestall him of the coming day !
[Exit.]

Clo. I love and hate her ; for she's fair and royal,
And that she hath all courtly parts more exquisite

Than lady, ladies, woman. From every one
The best she hath, and she, of all compounded,

Outsells them all. I love her therefore ; but Disdaining me and throwing favours on The low Posthumus slanders so her judgment

That what's else rare is chok'd ; and in that point

I will conclude to hate her, nay, indeed,
To be reveng'd upon her. For when fools
Shall—

Enter PISANIO.

Who is here ? What, are you packing, sirrah ?

Come hither. Ah, you precious pander !
Villain,

Where is thy lady ? In a word, or else
Thou art straightway with the fiends.

Pis. O good my lord !

Clo. Where is thy lady ? or, by Jupiter—
I will not ask again. Close villain,
I'll have this secret from thy heart, or rip Thy heart to find it. Is she with Posthumus ?

From whose so many weights of baseness cannot

A dram of worth be drawn.

Pis. Alas, my lord, How can she be with him ? When was she miss'd ?

He is in Rome.

Clo. Where is she, sir ? Come nearer.
No farther halting ! Satisfy me home
What is become of her.

Pis. O my all-worthy lord !

Clo. All-worthy villain !
Discover where thy mistress is at once,
At the next word. No more of ' worthy
lord ' !

Speak, or thy silence on the instant is Thy condemnation and thy death.

Pis. Then, sir,
This paper is the history of my knowledge
Touching her flight. [Presenting a letter.]

Clo. Let's see't. I will pursue her
Even to Augustus' throne.

Pis. [Aside] Or this or perish.
She's far enough ; and what he learns by
this

May prove his travel, not her danger.

Clo. Humh !

Pis. [Aside] I'll write to my lord she's dead. O Imogen,

Safe mayst thou wander, safe return again !

Clo. Sirrah, is this letter true ?

Pis. Sir, as I think.

Clo. It is Posthumus' hand ; I know't.
Sirrah, if thou wouldst not be a villain, but do me true service, undergo those employments wherein I should have cause to use thee with a serious industry—that is, what villainy soe'er I bid thee do, to perform it directly and truly—I would think thee an honest man ; thou shouldst neither want my means for thy relief nor my voice for thy preferment.

Pis. Well, my good lord.

Clo. Wilt thou serve me ? For since patiently and constantly thou hast stuck to the bare fortune of that beggar Posthumus, thou canst not, in the course of gratitude, but be a diligent follower of mine. Wilt thou serve me ?

Pis. Sir, I will.

Clo. Give me thy hand ; here's my purse.
Hast any of thy late master's garments in thy possession ?

Pis. I have, my lord, at my lodging, the same suit he wore when he took leave of my lady and mistress.

Clo. The first service thou dost me, fetch that suit hither. Let it be thy first service ;
go.

Pis. I shall, my lord.

[Exit.]
Clo. Meet thee at Milford Haven ! I forgot to ask him one thing ; I'll remember't anon. Even there, thou villain Posthumus, will I kill thee. I would these garments were come. She said upon a time —the bitterness of it I now belch from my heart—that she held the very garment of Posthumus in more respect than my noble and natural person, together with the adornment of my qualities. With that suit upon my back will I ravish her ; first kill him, and in her eyes. There shall she see my valour, which will then be a torment to her contempt. He on the ground, my speech of insultment ended on his dead body, and when my lust hath dined—which, as I say, to vex her I will execute in the clothes that she so prais'd—to the court I'll knock her back, foot her home again. She hath despis'd me rejoicingly, and I'll be merry in my revenge.

Re-enter PISANIO, with the clothes.

Be those the garments ?

Pis. Ay, my noble lord.

Clo. How long is't since she went to Milford Haven ?

Pis. She can scarce be there yet.

Clo. Bring this apparel to my chamber ;

that is the second thing that I have commanded thee. The third is that thou wilt be a voluntary mute to my design. Be but duteous and true, preferment shall tender itself to thee. My revenge is now at Milford; would I had wings to follow it! Come, and be true. [Exit.]

Pis. Thou bid'st me to my loss; for true to thee
Were to prove false, which I will never be,
To him that is most true. To Milford go,
And find not her whom thou pursuest.
Flow, flow, ¹⁶⁰
You heavenly blessings, on her! This fool's speed
Be cross'd with slowness! Labour be his meed! [Exit.]

SCENE VI. Wales. Before the cave of Belarius.

Enter IMOGEN alone, in boy's clothes.

Imo. I see a man's life is a tedious one. I have tir'd myself, and for two nights together
Have made the ground my bed. I should be sick
But that my resolution helps me. Milford, When from the mountain-top Pisanio show'd thee, ⁵
Thou wast within a ken. O Jove! I think Foundations fly the wretched; such, I mean,
Where they should be reliev'd. Two beggars told me
I could not miss my way. Will poor folks lie, ⁹
That have afflictions on them, knowing 'tis A punishment or trial? Yes; no wonder, When rich ones scarce tell true. To lapse in fulness Is sorer than to lie for need; and falsehood Is worse in kings than beggars. My dear lord!
Thou art one o' th' false ones. Now I think on thee ¹⁵
My hunger's gone; but even before, I was At point to sink for food. But what is this? Here is a path to't; 'tis some savage hold. I were best not call; I dare not call. Yet famine, Ere clean it o'erthrow nature, makes it valiant. ²⁰
Plenty and peace breeds cowards; hardness ever
Of hardness is mother. Ho! who's here? If anything that's civil, speak; if savage, Take or lend. Ho! No answer? Then I'll enter. ²⁴
Best draw my sword; and if mine enemy But fear the sword, like me, he'll scarcely look on't.
Such a foe, good heavens!

[Exit into the cave.]

Enter BELARIUS, GUIDERIUS, and ARVIRAGUS.

Bel. You, Polydore, have prov'd best woodman and
Are master of the feast. Cadwal and I Will play the cook and servant; 'tis our match. ³⁰
The sweat of industry would dry and die But for the end it works to. Come, our stomachs
Will make what's homely savoury; weariness
Can snore upon the flint, when resty sloth Finds the down pillow hard. Now, peace be here, ³⁵
Poor house, that keep'st thyself!
Gui. I am thoroughly weary.
Arv. I am weak with toil, yet strong in appetite.
Gui. There is cold meat i' th' cave; we'll browse on that Whilst what we have kill'd be cook'd.
Bel. [Looking into the cave] Stay, come not in. ³⁹
But that it eats our victuals, I should think Here were a fairy.
Gui. What's the matter, sir?
Bel. By Jupiter, an angel! or, if not, An earthly paragon! Behold divineness No elder than a boy!

Re-enter IMOGEN.

Imo. Good masters, harm me not. ⁴⁵
Before I enter'd here I call'd, and thought To have begg'd or bought what I have took. Good troth,
I have stol'n nought; nor would not though I had found Gold strew'd i' th' floor. Here's money for my meat.
I would have left it on the board, so soon ⁵⁰
As I had made my meal, and parted With pray'rs for the provider.
Gui. Money, youth?
Arv. All gold and silver rather turn to dirt,
As 'tis no better reckon'd but of those ⁵⁴
Who worship dirty gods.
Imo. I see you're angry. Know, if you kill me for my fault, I should Have died had I not made it.
Bel. Whither bound?
Imo. To Milford Haven.
Bel. What's your name?
Imo. Fidele, sir. I have a kinsman who Is bound for Italy; he embark'd at Milford; ⁶¹
To whom being going, almost spent with hunger,
I am fall'n in this offence.
Bel. Prithee, fair youth, Think us no churls, nor measure our good minds

By this rude place we live in. Well encounter'd ! 65

'Tis almost night ; you shall have better cheer

Ere you depart, and thanks to stay and eat it.

Boys, bid him welcome.

Gui. Were you a woman, youth, I should woo hard but be your groom. In honesty

I bid for you as I'd buy.

Arv. I'll make't my comfort 70

He is a man. I'll love him as my brother ; And such a welcome as I'd give to him

After long absence, such is yours. Most welcome !

Be sprightly, for you fall 'mongst friends.

Imo. 'Mongst friends,

If brothers. [Aside] Would it had been so that they 75

Had been my father's sons ! Then had my prize

Been less, and so more equal ballasting

To thee, Posthumus.

Bel. He wrings at some distress.

Gui. Would I could free't !

Arv. Or I, whate'er it be,

What pain it cost, what danger ! Gods !

Bel. [Whispering] Hark, boys. 80

Imo. [Aside] Great men,

That had a court no bigger than this cave, That did attend themselves, and had the virtue

Which their own conscience seal'd them, laying by 84

That nothing-gift of differing multitudes, Could not out-peer these twain. Pardon me, gods !

I'd change my sex to be companion with them,

Since Leonatus' false.

Bel. It shall be so.

Boys, we'll go dress our hunt. Fair youth, come in.

Discourse is heavy, fasting ; when we have supp'd, 90

We'll mannerly demand thee of thy story, So far as thou wilt speak it.

Gui. Pray draw near.

Arv. The night to th' owl and morn to th' lark less welcome.

Imo. Thanks, sir. 94

Arv. I pray draw near. [Exeunt.]

SCENE VII. Rome. A public place.

Enter two Roman Senators and Tribunes.

1 Sen. This is the tenour of the Emperor's writ :

That since the common men are now in action

'Gainst the Pannonians and Dalmatians, And that the legions now in Gallia are Full weak to undertake our wars against 5

The fall'n-off Britons, that we do incite The gentry to this business. He creates Lucius proconsul ; and to you, the tribunes,

For this immediate levy, he commands 9 His absolute commission. Long live Cæsar !

Tri. Is Lucius general of the forces ?

2 Sen. Ay.

Tri. Remaining now in Gallia ?

1 Sen. With those legions

Which I have spoke of, whereunto your levy

Must be supplyant. The words of your commission

Will tie you to the numbers and the time 15 Of their dispatch.

Tri. We will discharge our duty. [Exeunt.]

ACT FOUR

SCENE I. Wales. Near the cave of Belarius.

Enter CLOTEN alone.

Clo. I am near to th' place where they should meet, if Pisanio have mapp'd it truly. How fit his garments serve me ! Why should his mistress, who was made by him that made the tailor, not be fit too ? The rather—saving reverence of the word—for 'tis said a woman's fitness comes by fits. Therein I must play the workman. I dare speak it to myself, for it is not vain-glory for a man and his glass to confer in his own chamber—I mean, the lines of my body are as well drawn as his ; no less young, more strong, not beneath him in fortunes, beyond him in the advantage of the time, above him in birth, alike conversant in general services, and more remarkable in single oppositions. Yet this imperceivable thing loves him in my despite. What mortality is ! Posthumus, thy head, which now is growing upon thy shoulders, shall within this hour be off ; thy mistress enforced ; thy garments cut to pieces before her face ; and all this done, spurn her home to her father, who may, haply, be a little angry for my so rough usage ; but my mother, having power of his testiness, shall turn all into my commendations. My horse is tied up safe. Out, sword, and to a sore purpose ! Fortune, put them into my hand. This is the very description of their meeting-place ; and the fellow dares not deceive me. [Exit.]

SCENE II. Wales. Before the cave of Belarius.

Enter, from the cave, BELARIUS, GUIDERIUS, ARVIRAGUS, and IMOGEN.

Bel. [To Imogen] You are not well. Remain here in the cave ;

We'll come to you after hunting.

Arv. [To Imogen] Brother, stay here.
Are we not brothers ?

Imo. So man and man should be ;
But clay and clay differs in dignity,
Whose dust is both alike. I am very sick. 5

Gui. Go you to hunting ; I'll abide with
him.

Imo. So sick I am not, yet I am not well ;
But not so citizen a wanton as To seem to die ere sick. So please you, leave
me ;

Stick to your journal course. The breach of custom 10
Is breach of all. I am ill, but your being by me

Cannot amend me ; society is no comfort
To one not sociable. I am not very sick, Since I can reason of it. Pray you trust me
here.

I'll rob none but myself ; and let me die, 15
Stealing so poorly.

Gui. I love thee ; I have spoke it.
How much the quantity, the weight as
much

As I do love my father.

Bel. What ? how ? how ?

Arv. If it be sin to say so, sir, I yoke me
In my good brother's fault. I know not why 20

I love this youth, and I have heard you say Love's reason's without reason. The bier at door,

And a demand who is't shall die, I'd say
'My father, not this youth'.

Bel. [Aside] O noble strain !
O worthiness of nature ! breed of great-
ness ! 25

Cowards father cowards and base things sire base.

Nature hath meal and bran, contempt and
grace.

I'm not their father ; yet who this should
be

Doth miracle itself, lov'd before me.—

'Tis the ninth hour o' th' morn.

Arv. Brother, farewell. 30

Imo. I wish ye sport.

Arv. You health. [To Belarius] So please
you, sir.

Imo. [Aside] These are kind creatures.
Gods, what lies I have heard !

Our courtiers say all's savage but at
court.

Experience, O, thou disprov'st report !
Th' imperious seas breed monsters ; for the dish, 35

Poor tributary rivers as sweet fish.

I am sick still ; heart-sick. Pisanio,

I'll now taste of thy drug. [Swallows some.

Gui. I could not stir him.

He said he was gentle, but unfortunate ;
Dishonestly afflicted, but yet honest. 40

Arv. Thus did he answer me ; yet said hereafter

I might know more.

Bel. To th' field, to th' field !
We'll leave you for this time. Go in and rest.

Arv. We'll not be long away.

Bel. Pray be not sick,
For you must be our huswife.

Imo. Well, or ill, 45
I am bound to you.

Bel. And shalt be ever.

[Exit Imogen into the cave.

This youth, howe'er distress'd, appears he hath had

Good ancestors.

Arv. How angel-like he sings !

Gui. But his neat cookery ! He cut our roots in characters, 50

And sauc'd our broths as Juno had been sick,

And he her dieter.

Arv. Nobly he yokes
A smiling with a sigh, as if the sigh
Was that it was for not being such a smile ;
The smile mocking the sigh that it would fly 55

From so divine a temple to commix
With winds that sailors rail at.

Gui. I do note
That grief and patience, rooted in him both,
Mingle their spurs together.

Arv. Grow patience !
And let the stinking elder, grief, untwine 60
His perishing root with the increasing vine !

Bel. It is great morning. Come, away !
Who's there ?

Enter CLOTEN.

Clo. I cannot find those runagates ; that villain

Hath mock'd me. I am faint.

Bel. Those runagates ?
Means he not us ? I partly know him ; 'tis Cloten, the son o' th' Queen. I fear some ambush. 66

I saw him not these many years, and yet
I know 'tis he. We are held as outlaws.
Hence !

Gui. He is but one ; you and my brother search

What companies are near. Pray you away ;
Let me alone with him.

[Exeunt Belarius and Arviragus.

Clo. Soft ! What are you
That fly me thus ? Some villain mountaineers ? 72

I have heard of such. What slave art thou ?

Gui. A thing
More slavish did I ne'er than answering
'A slave' without a knock.

Clo. Thou art a robber, 75
A law-breaker, a villain. Yield thee, thief.

Gui. To who ? To thee ? What art thou ? Have not I

An arm as big as thine, a heart as big ?

Thy words, I grant, are bigger, for I wear
not My dagger in my mouth. Say what thou
art ; 80
Why I should yield to thee.
Clo. Thou villain base,
Know'st me not by my clothes ?
Gui. No, nor thy tailor, rascal,
Who is thy grandfather ; he made those clothes,
Which, as it seems, make thee.
Clo. Thou precious varlet,
My tailor made them not.
Gui. Hence, then, and thank 85
The man that gave them thee. Thou art some fool ;
I am loath to beat thee.
Clo. Thou injurious thief,
Hear but my name, and tremble.
Gui. What's thy name ?
Clo. Cloten, thou villain.
Gui. Cloten, thou double villain, be thy
name, 90
I cannot tremble at it. Were it toad, or adder, spider,
'Twould move me sooner.
Clo. To thy further fear,
Nay, to thy mere confusion, thou shalt
know
I am son to th' Queen.
Gui. I'm sorry for't ; not seeming
So worthy as thy birth.
Clo. Art not afeard ? 95
Gui. Those that I reverence, those I fear—
the wise :
At fools I laugh, not fear them.
Clo. Die the death.
When I have slain thee with my proper
hand,
I'll follow those that even now fled hence,
And on the gates of Lud's Town set your heads. 100
Yield, rustic mountaineer.

[Exeunt, fighting.]

Re-enter BELARIUS and ARVIRAGUS.

Bel. No company's abroad.
Arv. None in the world ; you did mistake him, sure.
Bel. I cannot tell ; long is it since I saw
him,
But time hath nothing blurr'd those lines of favour 105
Which then he wore ; the snatches in his voice,
And burst of speaking, were as his. I am absolute
'Twas very Cloten.
Arv. In this place we left them.
I wish my brother make good time with
him,
You say he is so fell.
Bel. Being scarce made up, 110
I mean to man, he had not apprehension

Of roaring terrors ; for defect of judgment
Is oft the cease of fear.

Re-enter GUIDERIUS with Cloten's head.

But, see, thy brother.
Gui. This Cloten was a fool, an empty
purse ;
There was no money in't. Not Hercules Could have knock'd out his brains, for he had none ; 116
Yet I not doing this, the fool had borne
My head as I do his.
Bel. What hast thou done ?
Gui. I am perfect what : cut off one Cloten's head,
Son to the Queen, after his own report ; 120
Who call'd me traitor, mountaineer, and swore
With his own single hand he'd take us in, Displace our heads where—thank the gods !—they grow,
And set them on Lud's Town.
Bel. We are all undone.
Gui. Why, worthy father, what have we to lose 125
But that he swore to take, our lives ? The law
Protects not us ; then why should we be tender
To let an arrogant piece of flesh threat us,
Play judge and executioner all himself,
For we do fear the law ? What company
Discover you abroad ?
Bel. No single soul 131
Can we set eye on, but in all safe reason
He must have some attendants. Though his humour
Was nothing but mutation—ay, and that
From one bad thing to worse—not frenzy,
not 135
Absolute madness could so far have rav'd,
To bring him here alone. Although perhaps
It may be heard at court that such as we Cave here, hunt here, are outlaws, and in
time
May make some stronger head—the which he hearing, 141
As it is like him, might break out and swear
He'd fetch us in ; yet is't not probable
To come alone, either he so undertaking Or they so suffering. Then on good ground we fear,
If we do fear this body hath a tail 145
More perilous than the head.
Arv. Let ordinance
Come as the gods foresay it. Howsoe'er,
My brother hath done well.
Bel. I had no mind
To hunt this day ; the boy Fidele's sickness
Did make my way long forth.
Gui. With his own sword,
Which he did wave against my throat, I have ta'en 151

His head from him. I'll throw't into the creek Behind our rock, and let it to the sea
 And tell the fishes he's the Queen's son,
 Cloten.
 That's all I reck. [Exit.
 Bel. I fear 'twill be reveng'd. 155
 Would, Polydore, thou hadst not done't!
 though valour
 Becomes thee well enough.
 Arr. Would I had done't,
 So the revenge alone pursu'd me! Polydore,
 I love thee brotherly, but envy much Thou hast robb'd me of this deed. I would revenges, 160
 That possible strength might meet, would seek us through,
 And put us to our answer.
 Bel. Well, 'tis done.
 We'll hunt no more to-day, nor seek for danger
 Where there's no profit. I prithee to our rock. 164
 You and Fidele play the cooks; I'll stay
 Till hasty Polydore return, and bring him
 To dinner presently.
 Arr. Poor sick Fidele!
 I'll willingly to him; to gain his colour
 I'd let a parish of such Clotens' blood,
 And praise myself for charity. [Exit.
 Bel. O thou goddess, 170
 Thou divine Nature, thou thyself thou blazon'st
 In these two princely boys! They are as gentle
 As zephyrs blowing below the violet, Not wagging his sweet head; and yet as rough,
 Their royal blood enchaf'd, as the rud'st
 wind 175
 That by the top doth take the mountain pine
 And make him stoop to th' vale. 'Tis wonder
 That an invisible instinct should frame
 them
 To royalty unlearn'd, honour untaught,
 Civility not seen from other, valour 180
 That wildly grows in them, but yields a crop
 As if it had been sow'd. Yet still it's strange
 What Cloten's being here to us portends,
 Or what his death will bring us.

Re-enter GUIDERIUS.

Gui. Where's my brother?
 I have sent Cloten's clotpoll down the stream, 185
 In embassy to his mother; his body's hostage
 For his return. [Solemn music.
 Bel. My ingenious instrument!

Hark, Polydore, it sounds. But what occasion
 Hath Cadwal now to give it motion?
 Hark!
 Gui. Is he at home?
 Bel. He went hence even now. 190
 Gui. What does he mean? Since death of my dear'st mother
 It did not speak before. All solemn things Should answer solemn accidents. The matter?
 Triumphs for nothing and lamenting toys
 Is jollity for apes and grief for boys. 195
 Is Cadwal mad?

Re-enter ARVIRAGUS, with IMOGEN as dead, bearing her in his arms.

Bel. Look, here he comes,
 And brings the dire occasion in his arms
 Of what we blame him for!
 Arr. The bird is dead
 That we have made so much on. I had rather
 Have skip'd from sixteen years of age to sixty, 200
 To have turn'd my leaping time into a crutch,
 Than have seen this.
 Gui. O sweetest, fairest lily!
 My brother wears thee not the one half so
 well
 As when thou grew'st thyself.
 Bel. O melancholy!
 Who ever yet could sound thy bottom?
 find 205
 The ooze to show what coast thy sluggish crare Might'st easiliest harbour in? Thou blessed thing!
 Jove knows what man thou mightst have made; but I,
 Thou diedst, a most rare boy, of melancholy.
 How found you him?
 Arr. Stark, as you see; 210
 Thus smiling, as some fly had tickled slumber,
 Not as death's dart, being laugh'd at; his right cheek
 Reposing on a cushion.
 Gui. Where?
 Arr. O' th' floor;
 His arms thus leagu'd. I thought he slept, and put My clouted brogues from off my feet, whose rudeness 215
 Answer'd my steps too loud.
 Gui. Why, he but sleeps.
 If he be gone he'll make his grave a bed;
 With female fairies will his tomb be haunted,
 And worms will not come to thee.
 Arr. With fairest flowers,
 Whilst summer lasts and I live here, Fidele,

I'll sweeten thy sad grave. Thou shalt not lack 221

The flower that's like thy face, pale primrose ; nor

The azur'd hare-bell, like thy veins ; no, nor The leaf of eglantine, whom not to slander, Out-sweet'ned not thy breath. The rud-dock would, 225

With charitable bill—O bill, sore shaming Those rich-left heirs that let their fathers lie

Without a monument !—bring thee all this ; Yea, and furr'd moss besides, when flow'rs are none,

To winter-ground thy corse—

Gui. Prithee have done, 230

And do not play in wench-like words with that

Which is so serious. Let us bury him, And not protract with admiration what Is now due debt. To th' grave.

Arv. Say, where shall's lay him ?

Gui. By good Euriphile, our mother.

Arv. Be't so ;

And let us, Polydore, though now our voices 236

Have got the mannish crack, sing him to th' ground,

As once to our mother ; use like note and words,

Save that Euriphile must be Fidele.

Gui. Cadwal, 240

I cannot sing. I'll weep, and word it with thee ;

For notes of sorrow out of tune are worse Than priests and fanes that lie.

Arv. We'll speak it, then.

Bel. Great griefs, I see, med'cine the less, for Cloten

Is quite forgot. He was a queen's son, boys ; 245

And though he came our enemy, remember He was paid for that. Though mean and mighty rotting

Together have one dust, yet reverence— That angel of the world—doth make distinction

Of place 'tween high and low. Our foe was princely ; 250

And though you took his life, as being our foe,

Yet bury him as a prince.

Gui. Pray you fetch him hither.

Thersites' body is as good as Ajax', When neither are alive.

Arv. If you'll go fetch him, We'll say our song the whilst. Brother, begin. [Exit Belarius.]

Gui. Nay, Cadwal, we must lay his head to th' East ; 256

My father hath a reason for't.

Arv. 'Tis true.

Gui. Come on, then, and remove him.

Arv. So. Begin.

Song.

Gui. Fear no more the heat o' th' sun
Nor the furious winter's rages ; 260
Thou thy worldly task hast done,
Home art gone, and ta'en thy wages.

Golden lads and girls all must,
As chimney-sweepers, come to dust.

Arv. Fear no more the frown o' th' great ;
Thou art past the tyrant's stroke.
Care no more to clothe and eat ;
To thee the reed is as the oak.
The sceptre, learning, physic, must
All follow this and come to dust. 270

Gui. Fear no more the lightning flash,
Arv. Nor th' all-dreaded thunder-stone ;

Gui. Fear not slander, censure rash ;
Arv. Thou hast finish'd joy and moan.

Both. All lovers young, all lovers must 275
Consign to thee and come to dust.

Gui. No exorciser harm thee !

Arv. Nor no witchcraft charm thee !

Gui. Ghost unlaid forbear thee !

Arv. Nothing ill come near thee ! 280

Both. Quiet consummation have,
And renowned be thy grave !

Re-enter BELARIUS with the body of Cloten.

Gui. We have done our obsequies. Come, lay him down.

Bel. Here's a few flowers ; but 'bout midnight, more.

The herbs that have on them cold dew o' th' night 285

Are strewings fit'st for graves. Upon their faces.

You were as flow'rs, now wither'd. Even so These herblets shall which we upon you strew.

Come on, away. Apart upon our knees. The ground that gave them first has them again. 290

Their pleasures here are past, so is their pain. [Exeunt all but Imogen.]

Imo. [Awaking] Yes, sir, to Milford Haven. Which is the way ?

I thank you. By yond bush ? Pray, how far thither ?

'Ods pittikins ! can it be six mile yet ? I have gone all night. Faith, I'll lie down and sleep. 295

But, soft ! no bedfellow. O gods and goddesses ! [Seeing the body.]

These flow'rs are like the pleasures of the world ;

This bloody man, the care on't. I hope I dream ;

For so I thought I was a cave-keeper, And cook to honest creatures. But 'tis not so ; 300

'Twas but a bolt of nothing, shot at nothing,

Which the brain makes of fumes. Our very
 eyes
 Are sometimes, like our judgments, blind.
 Good faith,
 I tremble still with fear ; but if there be Yet left in heaven as small a drop of pity
 As a wren's eye, fear'd gods, a part of it !
 The dream's here still. Even when I wake
 it is Without me, as within me ; not imagin'd, felt.
 A headless man ? The garments of
 Posthumus ? 309
 I know the shape of's leg ; this is his hand,
 His foot Mercurial, his Martial thigh,
 The brawns of Hercules ; but his Jovial
 face—
 Murder in heaven ! How ! 'Tis gone.
 Pisanio,
 All curses madd'd Hecuba gave the Greeks,
 And mine to boot, be darted on thee !
 Thou, 315
 Conspir'd with that irregulous devil,
 Cloten,
 Hath here cut off my lord. To write and read
 Be henceforth treacherous ! Damn'd
 Pisanio
 Hath with his forged letters—damn'd
 Pisanio— 319
 From this most bravest vessel of the world
 Struck the main-top. O Posthumus ! alas, Where is thy head ? Where's that ? Ay me !
 where's that ?
 Pisanio might have kill'd thee at the heart,
 And left this head on. How should this be ?
 Pisanio ?
 'Tis he and Cloten ; malice and lucre in
 them 325
 Have laid this woe here. O, 'tis pregnant, pregnant !
 The drug he gave me, which he said was precious
 And cordial to me, have I not found it Murd'rous to th' senses ? That confirms it home. 329
 This is Pisanio's deed, and Cloten. O !
 Give colour to my pale cheek with thy
 blood,
 That we the horridier may seem to those Which chance to find us. O, my lord, my lord ! [Falls fainting on the body.]
Enter LUCIUS, Captains, and a Soothsayer.
Cap. To them the legions garrison'd in Gallia,
 After your will, have cross'd the sea,
 attending 335
 You here at Milford Haven ; with your ships,
 They are in readiness.
Luc. But what from Rome ?
Cap. The Senate hath stirr'd up the confiners

And gentlemen of Italy, most willing spirits, 339
 That promise noble service ; and they
 come
 Under the conduct of bold Iachimo, Sienna's brother.
Luc. When expect you them ?
Cap. With the next benefit o' th' wind.
Luc. This forwardness Makes our hopes fair. Command our present numbers
 Be muster'd ; bid the captains look to't.
 Now, sir, 345
 What have you dream'd of late of this war's
 purpose ?
Sooth. Last night the very gods show'd me a vision—
 I fast and pray'd for their intelligence—
 thus :
 I saw Jove's bird, the Roman eagle, wing'd
 From the spongy south to this part of the west, 350
 There vanish'd in the sunbeams ; which portends,
 Unless my sins abuse my divination,
 Success to th' Roman host.
Luc. Dream often so,
 And never false. Soft, ho ! what trunk is
 here
 Without his top ? The ruin speaks that sometime 355
 It was a worthy building. How ? a page ?
 Or dead or sleeping on him ? But dead,
 rather ;
 For nature doth abhor to make his bed
 With the defunct, or sleep upon the dead.
 Let's see the boy's face.
Cap. He's alive, my lord. 360
Luc. He'll then instruct us of this body.
 Young one,
 Inform us of thy fortunes ; for it seems
 They crave to be demanded. Who is this Thou mak'st thy bloody pillow ? Or who was he
 That, otherwise than noble nature did, 365 Hath alter'd that good picture ? What's thy interest
 In this sad wreck ? How came't ? Who is't ? What art thou ?
Imo. I am nothing ; or if not,
 Nothing to be were better. This was my
 master,
 A very valiant Briton and a good, 370
 That here by mountaineers lies slain. Alas !
 There is no more such masters. I may wander
 From east to occident ; cry out for service ;
 Try many, all good ; serve truly ; never Find such another master.
Luc. 'Lack, good youth ! 375
 Thou mov'st no less with thy complaining
 than Thy master in bleeding. Say his name, good friend.

Imo. Richard du Champ. [Aside] If I do lie, and do 3;8
 No harm by it, though the gods hear, I hope They'll pardon it.—Say you, sir?
Luc. Thy name?
Imo. Fidele, sir.
Luc. Thou dost approve thyself the very same;
 Thy name well fits thy faith, thy faith thy name.
 Wilt take thy chance with me? I will not say 385
 Thou shalt be so well master'd; but, be sure,
 No less below'd. The Roman Emperor's letters, Sent by a consul to me, should not sooner
 Than thine own worth prefer thee. Go with me.
Imo. I'll follow, sir. But first, an't please the gods, 390
 I'll hide my master from the flies, as deep
 As these poor pickaxes can dig; and when
 With wild wood-leaves and weeds I ha' strew'd his grave,
 And on it said a century of prayers,
 Such as I can, twice o'er, I'll weep and sigh;
 And leaving so his service, follow you, 396
 So please you entertain me.
Luc. Ay, good youth;
 And rather father thee than master thee.
 My friends,
 The boy hath taught us manly duties; let us 400
 Find out the prettiest daisied plot we can,
 And make him with our pikes and partisans
 A grave. Come, arm him. Boy, he is preferr'd
 By thee to us; and he shall be interr'd
 As soldiers can. Be cheerful; wipe thine eyes. 405
 Some falls are means the happier to arise.
 [Exeunt.]

SCENE III. Britain. Cymbeline's palace.

Enter CYMBELINE, Lords, PISANIO, and Attendants.

Cym. Again! and bring me word how 'tis with her. [Exit an Attendant.]
 A fever with the absence of her son;
 A madness, of which her life's in danger.
 Heavens,
 How deeply you at once do touch me!
 Imogen,
 The great part of my comfort, gone; my queen 5
 Upon a desperate bed, and in a time
 When fearful wars point at me; her son
 gone,
 So needful for this present. It strikes me
 past
 The hope of comfort. But for thee, fellow,

Who needs must know of her departure
 and 10
 Dost seem so ignorant, we'll enforce it from
 thee
 By a sharp torture.
Pis. Sir, my life is yours;
 I humbly set it at your will; but for my
 mistress,
 I nothing know where she remains, why
 gone,
 Nor when she purposes return. Beseech your Highness, 15
 Hold me your loyal servant.
Lord. Good my liege,
 The day that she was missing he was here.
 I dare be bound he's true and shall perform
 All parts of his subjection loyally. For Cloten, 19
 There wants no diligence in seeking him,
 And will no doubt be found.
Cym. The time is troublesome.
 [To Pisanio] We'll slip you for a season;
 but our jealousy
 Does yet depend.
Lord. So please your Majesty,
 The Roman legions, all from Gallia drawn,
 Are landed on your coast, with a supply 25
 Of Roman gentlemen by the Senate sent.
Cym. Now for the counsel of my son and
 queen!
 I am amaz'd with matter.
Lord. Good my liege,
 Your preparation can affront no less Than what you hear of. Come more, for more you're ready. 30
 The want is but to put those pow'rs in motion
 That long to move.
Cym. I thank you. Let's withdraw,
 And meet the time as it seeks us. We fear
 not
 What can from Italy annoy us; but We grieve at chances here. Away! 35
 [Exeunt all but Pisanio.]
Pis. I heard no letter from my master
 since
 I wrote him Imogen was slain. 'Tis strange.
 Nor hear I from my mistress, who did promise
 To yield me often tidings. Neither know I
 What is betid to Cloten, but remain 40 Perplex'd in all. The heavens still must work.
 Wherein I am false I am honest; not true,
 to be true.
 These present wars shall find I love my country,
 Even to the note o' th' King, or I'll fall in
 them.
 All other doubts, by time let them be clear'd: 45
 Fortune brings in some boats that are not steer'd. [Exit.]

SCENE IV. Wales. Before the cave of Belarius.Enter BELARIUS, GUIDERIUS, and ARVIRAGUS.Gui. The noise is round about us.Bel. Let us from it.Arv. What pleasure, sir, find we in life, to lock it

From action and adventure?

Gui. Nay, what hope Have we in hiding us? This way the RomansMust or for Britons slay us, or receive us 5
For barbarous and unnatural revolts
During their use, and slay us after.Bel. Sons, We'll higher to the mountains; there secure us.

To the King's party there's no going. Newness

Of Cloten's death—we being not known, not muster'd 10

Among the bands—may drive us to a render

Where we have liv'd, and so extort from's that

Which we have done, whose answer would be death,

Drawn on with torture.

Gui. This is, sir, a doubt In such a time nothing becoming you 15
Nor satisfying us.Arv. It is not likely That when they hear the Roman horses neigh,

Behold their quarter'd fires, have both their eyes

And ears so cloy'd importantly as now, That they will waste their time upon our note, 20

To know from whence we are.

Bel. O, I am known Of many in the army. Many years, Though Cloten then but young, you see, not wore him

From my remembrance. And, besides, the King

Hath not deserv'd my service nor your loves, 25

Who find in my exile the want of breeding, The certainty of this hard life; aye hopeless

To have the courtesy your cradle promis'd, But to be still hot summer's tanlings and The shrinking slaves of winter.

Gui. Than be so, 30
Better to cease to be. Pray, sir, to th' army.

I and my brother are not known; yourself So out of thought, and thereto so o'ergrown, Cannot be question'd.

Arv. By this sun that shines,I'll thither. What thing is't that I never 35
Did see man die! scarce ever look'd on blood

But that of coward hares, hot goats, and venison!

Never bestrid a horse, save one that had A rider like myself, who ne'er wore rowel Nor iron on his heel! I am asham'd 40

To look upon the holy sun, to have The benefit of his blest beams, remaining So long a poor unknown.

Gui. By heavens, I'll go! If you will bless me, sir, and give me leave, I'll take the better care; but if you will not, 45

The hazard therefore due fall on me by The hands of Romans!

Arv. So say I. Amen.Bel. No reason I, since of your lives you set

So slight a valuation, should reserve My crack'd one to more care. Have with you, boys! 50

If in your country wars you chance to die, That is my bed too, lads, and there I'll lie.

Lead, lead. [Aside] The time seems long; their blood thinks scorn

Till it fly out and show them princes born. [Exeunt.]

ACT FIVE

SCENE I. Britain. The Roman camp.Enter POSTHUMUS alone, with a bloody handkerchief.Post. Yea, bloody cloth, I'll keep thee; for I wish'd

Thou shouldst be colour'd thus. You married ones,

If each of you should take this course, how many

Must murder wives much better than themselves

For wrying but a little! O Pisanio! 5
Every good servant does not all commands;

No bond but to do just ones. Gods! if you Should have ta'en vengeance on my faults.

I never Had liv'd to put on this; so had you saved

The noble Imogen to repent, and struck 10
Me, wretch more worth your vengeance.

But alack, You snatch some hence for little faults; that's love,

To have them fall no more. You some permit

To second ills with ills, each elder worse, And make them dread it, to the doers' 15

thriff. But Imogen is your own. Do your best wills,

And make me blest to obey. I am brought hither

Among th' Italian gentry, and to fight Against my lady's kingdom. 'Tis enough That, Britain, I have kill'd thy mistress ;

peace ! 20
I'll give no wound to thee. Therefore, good
heavens,
Hear patiently my purpose. I'll disrobe me
Of these Italian weeds, and suit myself
As does a Britain peasant. So I'll fight Against the part I come with ; so I'll die 25
For thee, O Imogen, even for whom my life Is every breath a death. And thus unknown,
Pitied nor hated, to the face of peril Myself I'll dedicate. Let me make men
know
More valour in me than my habits show. 30
Gods, put the strength o' th' Leonati in me !
To shame the guise o' th' world, I will begin
The fashion—less without and more within. [Exit.

SCENE II. Britain. A field of battle between the British and Roman camps.

*Enter LUCIUS, IACHIMO, and the Roman Army at one door, and the Britain Army at another, LEONATUS POSTHUMUS following like a poor soldier. They march over and go out. Alarums. Then enter again, in skirmish, IACHIMO and POSTHUMUS.
He vanquisheth and disarmeth Iachimo, and then leaves him.*

Iach. The heaviness and guilt within my bosom
Takes off my manhood. I have belied a lady,
The Princess of this country, and the air
on't Revengingly enfeebles me ; or could this carl, 4
A very drudge of nature's, have subdu'd me In my profession ? Knighthoods and honours borne
As I wear mine are titles but of scorn.
If that thy gentry, Britain, go before
This lout as he exceeds our lords, the odds
Is that we scarce are men, and you are gods. [Exit.

The battle continues ; the Britons fly ; CYM-BELINE is taken. Then enter to his rescue BELARIUS, GUIDERIUS, and ARVIRAGUS.

Bel. Stand, stand ! We have th' advantage of the ground ; 11
*The lane is guarded ; nothing routs us but
The villainy of our fears.*

Gui. and Arv. Stand, stand, and fight !

Re-enter POSTHUMUS, and seconds the Britons ; they rescue Cymbeline, and exeunt. Then re-enter LUCIUS and IACHIMO, with IMOGEN.

Luc. Away, boy, from the troops, and save thyself ;

For friends kill friends, and the disorder's such 15

As war were hoodwink'd.

Iach. 'Tis their fresh supplies.

Luc. It is a day turn'd strangely. Or betimes

Let's reinforce or fly. [Exeunt.

SCENE III. Another part of the field.

Enter POSTHUMUS and a Britain Lord.

Lord. Cam'st thou from where they made the stand ?

Post. I did :

Though you, it seems, come from the fliers.

Lord. I did.

Post. No blame be to you, sir, for all was lost,

But that the heavens fought. The King himself

Of his wings destitute, the army broken, 5
And but the backs of Britons seen, all flying,

Through a strait lane—the enemy full-hearted,

Lolling the tongue with slaught'ring, having work

More plentiful than tools to do't, struck down

Some mortally, some slightly touch'd, some falling 10

Merely through fear, that the strait path was damm'd

With dead men hurt behind, and cowards living

To die with length'ned shame.

Lord. Where was this lane ?

Post. Close by the battle, ditch'd, and wall'd with turf,

Which gave advantage to an ancient
soldier— 15

An honest one, I warrant, who deserv'd
So long a breeding as his white beard came
to,

In doing this for's country. Athwart the lane

He, with two striplings—lads more like to run

The country base than to commit such slaughter ; 20

With faces fit for masks, or rather fairer Than those for preservation cas'd or
shame—

Made good the passage, cried to those that fled

' Our Britain's harts die flying, not our
men.

To darkness fleet souls that fly backwards !
Stand ; 25

Or we are Romans and will give you that,
Like beasts, which you shun beastly, and may save

But to look back in frown. Stand, stand !'
These three,

Three thousand confident, in act as many—
For three performers are the file when all³⁰
The rest do nothing—with this word ‘Stand, stand!’

Accommodated by the place, more charming

With their own nobleness, which could have turn’d

A distaff to a lance, gilded pale looks, Part shame, part spirit renew’d; that some turn’d coward³⁵

But by example—O, a sin in war
Damn’d in the first beginners!—gan to look

The way that they did and to grin like lions

Upon the pikes o’ th’ hunters. Then began
A stop i’ th’ chaser, a retire; anon⁴⁰
A rout, confusion thick. Forthwith they fly,

Chickens, the way which they stoop’d
eagles; slaves,

The strides they victors made; and now
our cowards,

Like fragments in hard voyages, became The life o’ th’ need. Having found the back-door open⁴⁵

Of the unguarded hearts, heavens, how they wound!

Some slain before, some dying, some their
friends

O’erborne i’ th’ former wave. Ten chas’d by one

Are now each one the slaughterman of twenty.

Those that would die or ere resist are grown⁵⁰

The mortal bugs o’ th’ field.

Lord. This was strange chance:
A narrow lane, an old man, and two boys.

Post. Nay, do not wonder at it; you are made⁵³

Rather to wonder at the things you hear
Than to work any. Will you rhyme upon’t,

And vent it for a mock’ry? Here is one:
‘Two boys, an old man (twice a boy), a
lane,

Preserv’d the Britons, was the Romans’
bane’.

Lord. Nay, be not angry, sir.

Post. ‘Lack, to what end?
Who dares not stand his foe I’ll be his friend;⁶⁰

For if he’ll do as he is made to do,
I know he’ll quickly fly my friendship too.
You have put me into rhyme.

Lord. Farewell; you’re angry.

[Exit.]

Post. Still going? This is a lord! O
noble misery,

To be i’ th’ field and ask ‘What news?’ of me!⁶⁵

To-day how many would have given their honours

To have sav’d their carcasses! took heel
to do’t,

And yet died too! I, in mine own woe charm’d,

Could not find death where I did hear him
groan,

Nor feel him where he struck. Being an ugly monster,⁷⁰

’Tis strange he hides him in fresh cups, soft beds,

Sweet words; or hath moe ministers than
we

That draw his knives i’ th’ war. Well, I will find him;

For being now a favourer to the Briton,
No more a Briton, I have resum’d again⁷⁵

The part I came in. Fight I will no more,
But yield me to the veriest hind that shall Once touch my shoulder. Great the slaughter is

Here made by th’ Roman; great the answer be

Britons must take. For me, my ransom’s death;⁸⁰

On either side I come to spend my breath,
Which neither here I’ll keep nor bear
again,

But end it by some means for Imogen.

Enter two British Captains and Soldiers.

1 Cap. Great Jupiter be prais’d! Lucius is taken.

’Tis thought the old man and his sons were angels.⁸⁵

2 Cap. There was a fourth man, in a silly habit,

That gave th’ affront with them.
1 Cap. So ’tis reported;

But none of ’em can be found. Stand!
who’s there?

Post. A Roman,
Who had not now been drooping here if seconds⁹⁰

Had answer’d him.

2 Cap. Lay hands on him; a dog!
A leg of Rome shall not return to tell

What crows have peck’d them here. He brags his service,

As if he were of note. Bring him to th’
King.

Enter CYMBELINE, BELARIUS, GUIDERIUS, ARVIRAGUS, PISANIO, and Roman Captives. The Captains present Posthumus to Cymbeline, who delivers him over to a Gaoler. Exeunt omnes.

SCENE IV. Britain. A prison.

Enter POSTHUMUS and two Gaolers.

1 Gaol. You shall not now be stol’n, you have locks upon you;
So graze as you find pasture.

2 Gaol. Ay, or a stomach.
[Exeunt Gaolers.]

Post. Most welcome, bondage! for thou art a way,

I think, to liberty. Yet am I better Than one that's sick o' th' gout, since he had rather 5

Groan so in perpetuity than be cur'd
By th' sure physician death, who is the key T' unbar these locks. My conscience, thou art fetter'd

More than my shanks and wrists; you good gods, give me 9

The penitent instrument to pick that bolt, Then, free for ever! Is't enough I am sorry?

So children temporal fathers do appease;
Gods are more full of mercy. Must I
repent,

I cannot do it better than in gyves, 14
Desir'd more than constrain'd. To satisfy,
If of my freedom 'tis the main part, take
No stricter render of me than my all.

I know you are more clement than vile
men, 18

Who of their broken debtors take a third,
A sixth, a tenth, letting them thrive again
On their abatement; that's not my desire.
For Imogen's dear life take mine; and though

'Tis not so dear, yet 'tis a life; you coin'd
it.

'Tween man and man they weigh not every stamp;

Though light, take pieces for the figure's sake; 25

You rather mine, being yours. And so,
great pow'rs,

If you will take this audit, take this life,
And cancel these cold bonds. O Imogen!
I'll speak to thee in silence. [Sleeps.]

Solemn Music. Enter, as in an apparition, SICILIUS LEONATUS, father to Posthumus, an old man attired like a warrior; leading in his hand an ancient matron, his Wife, and mother to Posthumus, with music before them. Then, after other music, follows the two young LEONATI, brothers to Posthumus, with wounds, as they died in the wars. They circle Posthumus round as he lies sleeping.

Sici. No more, thou thunder-master,
show 30

Thy spite on mortal flies.

With Mars fall out, with Juno chide,
That thy adulteries

Rates and revenges.

Hath my poor boy done aught but well, 35
Whose face I never saw?

I died whilst in the womb he stay'd
Attending nature's law;

Whose father then, as men report
Thou orphans' father art, 40

Thou shouldst have been, and shielded him
From this earth-vexing smart.

Mother. Lucina lent not me her aid,
But took me in my throes,
That from me was Posthumus ripp'd, 45
Came crying 'mongst his foes,
A thing of pity.

Sici. Great Nature like his ancestry
Moulded the stuff so fair
That he deserv'd the praise o' th' world 50
As great Sicilius' heir.

1 Bro. When once he was mature for man,
In Britain where was he
That could stand up his parallel,
Or fruitful object be 55
In eye of Imogen, that best
Could deem his dignity?

Mother. With marriage wherefore was he mock'd,
To be exil'd and thrown
From Leonati seat and cast 60
From her his dearest one,
Sweet Imogen?

Sici. Why did you suffer Iachimo,
Slight thing of Italy,
To taint his nobler heart and brain 65
With needless jealousy,
And to become the geck and scorn
O' th' other's villainy?

2 Bro. For this from stiller seats we came,
Our parents and us twain, 70
That, striking in our country's cause,
Fell bravely and were slain,
Our fealty and Tenantius' right
With honour to maintain.

1 Bro. Like hardiment Posthumus hath
To Cymbeline perform'd. 76
Then, Jupiter, thou king of gods,
Why hast thou thus adjourn'd
The graces for his merits due,
Being all to dolours turn'd? 80

Sici. Thy crystal window ope; look out;
No longer exercise
Upon a valiant race thy harsh
And potent injuries.

Mother. Since, Jupiter, our son is good,
Take off his miseries. 86

Sici. Peep through thy marble mansion.
Help!
Or we poor ghosts will cry
To th' shining synod of the rest
Against thy deity. 90

Brothers. Help, Jupiter! or we appeal,
And from thy justice fly.

JUPITER descends in thunder and lightning, sitting upon an eagle. He throws a thunderbolt. The Ghosts fall on their knees.

Jup. No more, you petty spirits of region low,
Offend our hearing ; hush ! How dare you ghosts⁹⁴
Accuse the Thunderer whose bolt, you know,
Sky-planted, batters all rebelling coasts ?
Poor shadows of Elysium, hence, and rest Upon your never-withering banks of flow'rs.

Be not with mortal accidents opprest :⁹⁹
No care of yours it is ; you know 'tis ours.

Whom best I love I cross ; to make my gift,

The more delay'd, delighted. Be content ;
Your low-laid son our godhead will uplift ;
His comforts thrive, his trials well are spent.¹⁰⁴

Our Jovial star reign'd at his birth, and in Our temple was he married. Rise, and fade !
He shall be lord of Lady Imogen,
And happier much by his affliction made.
This tablet lay upon his breast, wherein
Our pleasure his full fortune doth confine ;
And so, away ; no farther with your din
Express impatience, lest you stir up mine.
Mount, eagle, to my palace crystalline.

[Ascends.

Sici. He came in thunder ; his celestial breath¹¹⁴

Was sulphurous to smell ; the holy eagle Stoop'd, as to foot us. His ascension is More sweet than our blest fields. His royal bird

Prunes the immortal wing, and cloyes his beak,

As when his god is pleas'd.

All. Thanks, Jupiter !

Sici. The marble pavement closes, he is enter'd¹²⁰

His radiant roof. Away ! and, to be blest, Let us with care perform his great behest.

[Ghosts vanish.

Post. [Waking] Sleep, thou hast been a grandsire and begot

A father to me ; and thou hast created
A mother and two brothers. But, O scorn, Gone ! They went hence so soon as they were born.¹²⁶

And so I am awake. Poor wretches, that depend

On greatness' favour, dream as I have
done ;

Wake and find nothing. But, alas, I swerve ;
Many dream not to find, neither deserve,
And yet are steep'd in favours ; so am I,
That have this golden chance, and know not why.¹³²

What fairies haunt this ground ? A book ?
O rare one !

Be not, as is our fangled world, a garment
Nobler than that it covers. Let thy effects
So follow to be most unlike our courtiers,
As good as promise.¹³⁷

[Reads] ' When as a lion's whelp shall, to himself unknown, without seeking find, and be embrac'd by a piece of tender air ; and when from a stately cedar shall be lopp'd branches which, being dead many years, shall after revive, be jointed to the old stock, and freshly grow ; then shall Posthumus end his miseries, Britain be fortunate and flourish in peace and plenty.'

'Tis stil' a dream, or else such stuff as madmen

Tongue, and brain not ; either both or nothing,¹⁴⁵

Or senseless speaking, or a speaking such As sense cannot untie. Be what it is,
The action of my life is like it, which I'll keep, if but for sympathy.

Re-enter Gaoler.

Gaol. Come, sir, are you ready for death ?

Post. Over-roasted rather ; ready long ago.¹⁵¹

Gaol. Hanging is the word, sir ; if you be ready for that, you are well cook'd.

Post. So, if I prove a good repast to the spectators, the dish pays the shot.¹⁵⁵

Gaol. A heavy reckoning for you, sir.
But the comfort is, you shall be called to no more payments, fear no more tavern bills, which are often the sadness of parting, as the procuring of mirth. You come in faint for want of meat, depart reeling with too much drink ; sorry that you have paid too much, and sorry that you are paid too much ; purse and brain both empty ; the brain the heavier for being too light, the purse too light, being drawn of heaviness.
O, of this contradiction you shall now be quit. O, the charity of a penny cord ! It sums up thousands in a trice. You have no true debtor and creditor but it ; of what's past, is, and to come, the discharge. Your neck, sir, is pen, book, and counters ; so the acquittance follows.

Post. I am merrier to die than thou art to live.¹⁷⁰

Gaol. Indeed, sir, he that sleeps feels not the toothache. But a man that were to sleep your sleep, and a hangman to help him to bed, I think he would change places with his officer ; for look you, sir, you know not which way you shall go.¹⁷⁵

Post. Yes indeed do I, fellow.

Gaol. Your death has eyes in's head, then ; I have not seen him so pictur'd. You must either be directed by some that take upon them to know, or to take upon yourself that which I am sure you do not know, or jump the after-inquiry on your own peril.
And how you shall speed in your journey's end, I think you'll never return to tell one.

Post. I tell thee, fellow, there are none want eyes to direct them the way I am going, but such as wink and will not use them. ¹⁸⁶

Gaol. What an infinite mock is this, that a man should have the best use of eyes to see the way of blindness! I am sure hanging's the way of winking.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Knock off his manacles; bring your prisoner to the King. ¹⁹¹

Post. Thou bring'st good news: I am call'd to be made free.

Gaol. I'll be hang'd, then.

Post. Thou shalt be then freer than a gaoler; no bolts for the dead. ¹⁹⁶

[Exeunt Posthumus and Messenger.]

Gaol. Unless a man would marry a gallows and beget young gibbets, I never saw one so prone. Yet, on my conscience, there are verier knaves desire to live, for all he be a Roman; and there be some of them too that die against their wills; so should I, if I were one. I would we were all of one mind, and one mind good. O, there were desolation of gaolers and gallowses! I speak against my present profit, but my wish hath a preferment in't. [Exit.]

SCENE V. Britain. Cymbeline's tent.

Enter CYMBELINE, BELARIUS, GUIDERIUS, ARVIRAGUS, PISANIO, Lords, Officers, and Attendants.

Cym. Stand by my side, you whom the gods have made Preservers of my throne. Woe is my heart

That the poor soldier that so richly fought, Whose rags sham'd gilded arms, whose naked breast

Stepp'd before targes of proof, cannot be found. ⁵

He shall be happy that can find him, if Our grace can make him so.

Bel. I never saw Such noble fury in so poor a thing; Such precious deeds in one that promis'd nought

But beggary and poor looks.

Cym. No tidings of him? ¹⁰

Pis. He hath been search'd among the dead and living,

But no trace of him.

Cym. To my grief, I am The heir of his reward; [To Belarius, Guiderius and Arviragus] which I will add To you, the liver, heart, and brain, of Britain,

By whom I grant she lives. 'Tis now the time ¹⁵

To ask of whence you are. Report it.

Bel. Sir, In Cambria are we born, and gentlemen;

Further to boast were neither true nor modest, ¹⁸

Unless I add we are honest.

Cym.

Bow your knees.

Arise my knights o' th' battle; I create you Companions to our person, and will fit you With dignities becoming your estates.

Enter CORNELIUS and Ladies.

There's business in these faces. Why so sadly

Greet you our victory? You look like Romans,

And not o' th' court of Britain.

Cor.

Hail, great King! ²⁵

To sour your happiness I must report The Queen is dead.

Cym.

Who worse than a physician Would this report become? But I consider By med'cine life may be prolong'd, yet death

Will seize the doctor too. How ended she?

Cor. With horror, madly dying, like her life; ³¹

Which, being cruel to the world, concluded Most cruel to herself. What she confess'd I will report, so please you; these her women

Can trip me if I err, who with wet cheeks ³⁵ Were present when she finish'd.

Cym.

Prithee say.

Cor. First, she confess'd she never lov'd you; only Affected greatness got by you, not you; Married your royalty, was wife to your place;

Abhor'd your person.

Cym.

She alone knew this; ⁴⁰ And but she spoke it dying, I would not Believe her lips in opening it. Proceed.

Cor. Your daughter, whom she bore in hand to love

With such integrity, she did confess. ⁴⁴ Was as a scorpion to her sight; whose life, But that her flight prevented it, she had Ta'en off by poison.

Cym.

O most delicate fiend!

Who is't can read a woman? Is there more?

Cor. More, sir, and worse. She did confess she had

For you a mortal mineral, which, being took, ⁵⁰

Should by the minute feed on life, and, ling'ring,

By inches waste you. In which time she purpos'd,

By watching, weeping, tendance, kissing, to O'ercome you with her show; and in time, When she had fitted you with her craft, to work ⁵⁵

Her son into th' adoption of the crown; But failing of her end by his strange absence,

CYMBELINE

Grew shameless-desperate, open'd, in des-spite

Of heaven and men, her purposes, repent⁵⁹

The evils she hatch'd were not effected ; so,
Despairing, died.

Cym. Heard you all this, her women ?

Lady. We did, so please your Highness.

Cym. Mine eyes

Were not in fault, for she was beautiful ;
Mine ears, that heard her flattery ; nor my
heart,

That thought her like her seeming. It had been vicious⁶⁵

To have mistrusted her ; yet, O my daughter !

That it was folly in me thou mayst say,
And prove it in thy feeling. Heaven mend
all !

Enter LUCIUS, IACHIMO, the Soothsayer, and other Roman Prisoners, guarded ; Pos-THUMUS behind, and IMOGEN.

Thou com'st not, Caius, now for tribute ;
that

The Britons have raz'd out, though with the loss⁷⁰

Of many a bold one, whose kinsmen have made suit

That their good souls may be pleas'd with slaughter

Of you their captives, which ourself have granted ;

So think of your estate.

Luc. Consider, sir, the chance of war. The day⁷⁵

Was yours by accident ; had it gone with
us,

We should not ; when the blood was cool,
have threaten'd

Our prisoners with the sword. But since the gods

Will have it thus, that nothing but our lives
May be call'd ransom, let it come. Sufficeth

A Roman with a Roman's heart can suffer.
Augustus lives to think on't ; and so much

For my peculiar care. This one thing only
I will entreat : my boy, a Briton born,

Let him be ransom'd. Never master had⁸⁵
A page so kind, so duteous, diligent,

So tender over his occasions, true,
So feat, so nurse-like ; let his virtue join

With my request, which I'll make bold
your Highness

Cannot deny ; he hath done no Briton harm⁹⁰

Though he have serv'd a Roman. Save
him, sir,

And spare no blood beside.

Cym. I have surely seen him ;

His favour is familiar to me. Boy,

Thou hast look'd thyself into my grace,

And art mine own. I know not why, wherefore⁹⁵

To say 'Live, boy'. Ne'er thank thy master. Live ;

And ask of Cymbeline what boon thou wilt, Fitting my bounty and thy state, I'll give
it ;

Yea, though thou do demand a prisoner,
The noblest ta'en.

Imo. I humbly thank your Highness.

Luc. I do not bid thee beg my life, good lad,¹⁰¹

And yet I know thou wilt.

Imo. No, no ! Alack,

There's other work in hand. I see a
thing

Bitter to me as death ; your life, good
master,

Must shuffle for itself.

Luc. The boy disdains me,¹⁰⁵

He leaves me, scorns me. Briefly die their joys

That place them on the truth of girls and boys.

Why stands he so perplex'd ?

Cym. What wouldst thou, boy ?

I love thee more and more ; think more and more

What's best to ask. Know'st him thou look'st on ? Speak,¹¹⁰

Wilt have him live ? Is he thy kin ? thy fr'end ?

Imo. He is a Roman, no more kin to me Than I to your Highness ; who, being born your vassal,

Am something nearer.

Cym. Wherefore ey'st him so ?

Imo. I'll tell you, sir, in private, if you please¹¹⁵

To give me hearing.

Cym. Ay, with all my heart,

And lend my best attention. What's thy name ?

Imo. Fidele, sir.

Cym. Thou'rt my good youth, my page ;

I'll be thy master. Walk with me ; speak freely.¹¹⁹

[Cymbeline and Imogen converse apart.]

Bel. Is not this boy reviv'd from death ?

Arr. One sand another

Not more resembles—that sweet rosy lad Who died, and was Fidele. What think
you ?

Gui. The same dead thing alive.

Bel. Peace, peace ! see further. He eyes us not ; forbear.

Creatures may be alike ; were't he, I am sure¹²⁵

He would have spoke to us.

Gui. But we saw him dead.

Bel. Be silent ; let's see further.

Pis. [Aside] It is my mistress.

Since she is living, let the time run on
To good or bad.

[Cymbeline and Imogen advance.]

Cym. Come, stand thou by our side ;¹²⁹

Make thy demand aloud. [To Iachimo] Sir, step you forth ;

Give answer to this boy, and do it freely, Or, by our greatness and the grace of it, Which is our honour, bitter torture shall Winnow the truth from falsehood. On, speak to him.

Imo. My boon is that this gentleman may render 135

Of whom he had this ring.

Post. [Aside] What's that to him ?

Cym. That diamond upon your finger, say

How came it yours ?

Iach. Thou'lt torture me to leave unspoken that

Which to be spoke would torture thee.

Cym. How ? me ? 140

Iach. I am glad to be constrain'd to utter that

Which torments me to conceal. By villainy I got this ring ; 'twas Leonatus' jewel, Whom thou didst banish ; and—which more may grieve thee,

As it doth me—a nobler sir ne'er liv'd 145 'Twixt sky and ground. Wilt thou hear more, my lord ?

Cym. All that belongs to this.

Iach. That paragon, thy daughter, For whom my heart drops blood and my false spirits

Quail to remember—Give me leave, I faint.

Cym. My daughter ? What of her ? Renew thy strength ; 150

I had rather thou shouldst live while nature will

Than die ere I hear more. Strive, man, and speak.

Iach. Upon a time—unhappy was the clock

That struck the hour !—it was in Rome—accurs'd

The mansion where !—'twas at a feast—O, would 155

Our viands had been poison'd, or at least Those which I heav'd to head !—the good Posthumus—

What should I say ? he was too good to be Where ill men were, and was the best of all Amongst the rar'st of good ones—sitting sadly, 160

Hearing us praise our loves of Italy For beauty that made barren the swell'd boast

Of him that best could speak ; for feature, laming

The shrine of Venus or straight-pight Minerva,

Postures beyond brief nature ; for condition, 165

A shop of all the qualities that man Loves woman for ; besides that hook of wiving,

Fairness which strikes the eye—

Cym.

I stand on fire.

Come to the matter.

Iach. All too soon I shall, Unless thou wouldst grieve quickly. This Posthumus, 170

Most like a noble lord in love and one That had a royal lover, took his hint ; And not dispraising whom we prais'd—therein

He was as calm as virtue—he began His mistress' picture ; which by his tongue being made, 175

And then a mind put in't, either our brags Were crack'd of kitchen trulls, or his description

Prov'd us unspeaking sots.

Cym. Nay, nay, to th' purpose.

Iach. Your daughter's chastity—there it begins.

He spake of her as Dian had hot dreams 180 And she alone were cold ; whereat I, wretch,

Made scruple of his praise, and wager'd with him

Pieces of gold 'gainst this which then he wore

Upon his honour'd finger, to attain 184

In suit the place of's bed, and win this ring By hers and mine adultery. He, true knight,

No lesser of her honour confident Than I did truly find her, stakes this ring ; And would so, had it been a carbuncle

Of Phœbus' wheel ; and might so safely, had it 190

Been all the worth of's car. Away to Britain

Post I in this design. Well may you, sir, Remember me at court, where I was taught Of your chaste daughter the wide difference 'Twixt amorous and villainous. Being thus quench'd 195

Of hope, not longing, mine Italian brain Gan in your duller Britain operate

Most vilely ; for my vantage, excellent ; And, to be brief, my practice so prevail'd

That I return'd with simular proof enough To make the noble Leonatus mad, 201

By wounding his belief in her renown With tokens thus and thus ; averring notes

Of chamber-hanging, pictures, this her bracelet— 204

O cunning, how I got it !—nay, some marks Of secret on her person, that he could not But think her bond of chastity quite crack'd,

I having ta'en the forfeit. Whereupon—Methinks I see him now—

Post. [Coming forward] Ay, so thou dost, Italian fiend ! Ay me, most credulous fool, Egregious murderer, thief, anything 211 That's due to all the villains past, in being, To come ! O, give me cord, or knife, or poison,

Some upright justicer! Thou, King, send out
 For torturers ingenious. It is I ²¹⁵
 That all th' abhorred things o' th' earth amend
 By being worse than they. I am Posthu-
 mus,
 That kill'd thy daughter; villain-like, I lie— ²¹⁸
 That caus'd a lesser villain than myself,
 A sacrilegious thief, to do't. The temple
 Of virtue was she; yea, and she herself.
 Spit, and throw stones, cast mire upon me,
 set
 The dogs o' th' street to bay me. Every villain
 Be call'd Posthumus Leonatus, and
 Be villainy less than 'twas! O Imogen! ²²⁵
 My queen, my life, my wife! O Imogen, Imogen, Imogen!
Imo. Peace, my lord. Hear, hear!
Post. Shall's have a play of this? Thou scornful page,
 There lie thy part. [Strikes her. She falls.]
Pis. O gentlemen, help!
 Mine and your mistress! O, my lord
 Posthumus! ²³⁰
 You ne'er kill'd Imogen till now. Help,
 help!
 Mine honour'd lady!
Cym. Does the world go round?
Post. How comes these staggers on me?
Pis. Wake, my mistress!
Cym. If this be so, the gods do mean to strike me
 To death with mortal joy.
Pis. How fares my mistress?
Imo. O, get thee from my sight; ²³⁶
 Thou gav'st me poison. Dangerous fellow,
 hence!
 Breathe not where princes are.
Cym. The tune of Imogen!
Pis. Lady, ²³⁷
 The gods throw stones of sulphur on me, if
 That box I gave you was not thought by me
 A precious thing! I had it from the Queen.
Cym. New matter still?
Imo. It poison'd me.
Cor. O gods!
 I left out one thing which the Queen
 confess'd,
 Which must approve thee honest. 'If Pisanio ²⁴⁵
 Have' said she 'given his mistress that confection
 Which I gave him for cordial, she is serv'd
 As I would serve a rat.'
Cym. What's this, Cornelius?
Cor. The Queen, sir, very oft importun'd me ²⁴⁹
 To temper poisons for her; still pretending
 The satisfaction of her knowledge only
 In killing creatures vile, as cats and dogs,
 Of no esteem. I, dreading that her purpose

Was of more danger, did compound for her A certain stuff, which, being ta'en, would cease ²⁵¹
 The present pow'r of life, but in short time
 All offices of nature should again
 Do their due functions. Have you ta'en
 of it?
Imo. Most like I did, for I was dead.
Bel. My boys,
 There was our error.
Gui. This is sure Fidele. ²⁶⁰
Imo. Why did you throw your wedded lady from you?
 Think that you are upon a rock, and now
 Throw me again. [Embracing him.]
Post. Hang there like fruit, my soul,
 Till the tree die!
Cym. How now, my flesh? my child?
 What, mak'st thou me a dullard in this act? ²⁶⁵
 Wilt thou not speak to me?
Imo. [Kneeling] Your blessing, sir.
Bel. [To Guiderius and Arviragus]
 Though you did love this youth, I blame ye not;
 You had a motive for't.
Cym. My tears that fall
 Prove holy water on thee! Imogen, ²⁶⁹
 Thy mother's dead.
Imo. I am sorry for't, my lord.
Cym. O, she was naught, and long of her it was
 That we meet here so strangely; but her
 son
 Is gone, we know not how nor where.
Pis. My lord,
 Now fear is from me, I'll speak troth.
 Lord Cloten,
 Upon my lady's missing, came to me ²⁷⁵
 With his sword drawn, foam'd at the mouth, and swore,
 If I discover'd not which way she was gone,
 It was my instant death. By accident
 I had a feigned letter of my master's
 Then in my pocket, which directed him ²⁸⁰
 To seek her on the mountains near to Milford;
 Where, in a frenzy, in my master's garments,
 Which he enforc'd from me, away he posts
 With unchaste purpose, and with oath to violate
 My lady's honour. What became of him ²⁸⁵
 I further know not.
Gui. Let me end the story:
 I slew him there.
Cym. Marry, the gods forfend!
 I would not thy good deeds should from my lips
 Pluck a hard sentence. Prithee, valiant youth,
 Deny't again.
Gui. I have spoke it, and I did it. ²⁹⁰
Cym. He was a prince.

Gui. A most incivil one. The wrongs he did me
Were nothing prince-like ; for he did provoke me
With language that would make me spurn the sea,
If it could so roar to me. I cut off's head,
And am right glad he is not standing here
To tell this tale of mine.

Cym. I am sorry for thee.
By thine own tongue thou art condemn'd, and must

Endure our law. Thou'rt dead.

Imo. That headless man
I thought had been my lord.

Cym. Bind the offender,
And take him from our presence.

Bel. Stay, sir King.
This man is better than the man he slew,
As well descended as thyself, and hath More of thee merited than a band of Clotens

Had ever scar for. [To the Guard] Let his arms alone ;

They were not born for bondage.

Cym. Why, old soldier,
Wilt thou undo the worth thou art unpaid for

By tasting of our wrath ? How of descent
As good as we ?

Arv. In that he spake too far.

Cym. And thou shalt die for't.

Bel. We will die all three ;
But I will prove that two on's are as good As I have given out him. My sons, I must For mine own part unfold a dangerous speech,

Though haply well for you.

Arv. Your danger's ours.

Gui. And our good his.

Bel. Have at it then by leave !
Thou hadst, great King, a subject who Was call'd Belarius.

Cym. What of him ? He is A banish'd traitor.

Bel. He it is that hath Assum'd this age ; indeed a banish'd man ;
I know not how a traitor.

Cym. Take him hence,
The whole world shall not save him.

Bel. Not too hot.

First pay me for the nursing of thy sons,
And let it be confiscate all, so soon
As I have receiv'd it.

Cym. Nursing of my sons ?

Bel. I am too blunt and saucy : here's my knee.

Ere I arise I will prefer my sons ;
Then spare not the old father. Mighty sir,
These two young gentlemen that call me
father,

And think they are my sons, are none of
mine ;

They are the issue of your loins, my liege,

And blood of your begetting.

Cym. How ? my issue ?

Bel. So sure as you your father's. I, old Morgan,

Am that Belarius whom you sometime banish'd.

Your pleasure was my mere offence, my punishment

Itself, and all my treason ; that I suffer'd Was all the harm I did. These gentle princes—

For such and so they are—these twenty years

Have I train'd up ; those arts they have as I

Could put into them. My breeding was, sir, as

Your Highness knows. Their nurse,
Euriphile,

Whom for the theft I wedded, stole these children

Upon my banishment ; I mov'd her to't,
Having receiv'd the punishment before

For that which I did then. Beaten for loyalty

Excited me to treason. Their dear loss,
The more of you 'twas felt, the more it shap'd

Unto my end of stealing them. But,
gracious sir,

Here are your sons again, and I must lose
Two of the sweet'st companions in the world.

The benediction of these covering heavens Fall on their heads like dew ! for they are worthy

To inlay heaven with stars.

Cym. Thou weep'st and speak'st.
The service that you three have done is
more

Unlike than this thou tell'st. I lost my children.

If these be they, I know not how to wish
A pair of worthier sons.

Bel. Be pleas'd awhile.

This gentleman, whom I call Polydore,
Most worthy prince, as yours, is true

Guiderius ;

This gentleman, my Cadwal, Arviragus, Your younger princely son ; he, sir, was lapp'd

In a most curious mantle, wrought by th'
hand

Of his queen mother, which for more probation

I can with ease produce.

Cym. Guiderius had Upon his neck a mole, a sanguine star ;
It was a mark of wonder.

Bel. This is he,
Who hath upon him still that natural
stamp.

It was wise nature's end in the donation,
To be his evidence now.

Cym. O, what am I ?
 A mother to the birth of three ? Ne'er
 mother
 Rejoic'd deliverance more. Blest pray you
 be, 370
 That, after this strange starting from your orbs,
 You may reign in them now ! O Imogen,
 Thou hast lost by this a kingdom.
 Imo. No, my lord ;
 I have got two worlds by't. O my gentle
 brothers, 374
 Have we thus met ? O, never say hereafter
 But I am truest speaker ! You call'd me
 brother,
 When I was but your sister : I you brothers,
 When we were so indeed.
 Cym. Did you e'er meet ?
 Arr. Ay, my good lord.
 Gui. And at first meeting lov'd,
 Continu'd so until we thought he died. 380
 Cor. By the Queen's dram she swallow'd !
 Cym. O rare instinct !
 When shall I hear all through ? This fierce abridgment
 Hath to it circumstantial branches, which Distinction should be rich in. Where ? how liv'd you ?
 And when came you to serve our Roman captive ? 385
 How parted with your brothers ? how first met them ?
 Why fled you from the court ? and whither ?
 These,
 And your three motives to the battle, with I know not how much more, should be demanded,
 And all the other by-dependances, 390
 From chance to chance ; but nor the time nor place
 Will serve our long interrogatories. See,
 Posthumus anchors upon Imogen ;
 And she, like harmless lightning, throws her eye
 On him, her brothers, me, her master, hitting 395
 Each object with a joy ; the counterchange
 Is severally in all. Let's quit this ground,
 And smoke the temple with our sacrifices.
 [To Belarius] Thou art my brother ; so we'll hold thee ever.
 Imo. You are my father too, and did relieve me 400
 To see this gracious season.
 Cym. All o'erjoy'd
 Save these in bonds. Let them be joyful
 too,
 For they shall taste our comfort.
 Imo. My good master,
 I will yet do you service.
 Luc. Happy be you !
 Cym. The forlorn soldier, that so nobly
 fought, 405

He would have well becom'd this place and grac'd
 The thankings of a king.
 Post I am, sir,
 The soldier that did company these three
 In poor beseeching ; 'twas a fitment for
 The purpose I then follow'd. That I was he, Speak, Iachimo. I had you down, and might 411
 Have made you finish.
 Iach. [Kneeling] I am down again ;
 But now my heavy conscience sinks my knee,
 As then your force did. Take that life,
 beseech you, 414
 Which I so often owe ; but your ring first,
 And here the bracelet of the truest princess
 That ever swore her faith.
 Post. Kneel not to me.
 The pow'r that I have on you is to spare
 you ;
 The malice towards you to forgive you.
 Live,
 And deal with others better.
 Cym. Nobly doom'd ! 420
 We'll learn our freeness of a son-in-law ;
 Pardon's the word to all.
 Arr. You help us, sir,
 As you did mean indeed to be our brother ;
 Joy'd are we that you are. 424 Post. Your servant, Princes. Good my lord of Rome,
 Call forth your soothsayer. As I slept, me-
 thought
 Great Jupiter, upon his eagle back'd,
 Appear'd to me, with other spritely shows Of mine own kindred. When I wak'd, I found 429
 This label on my bosom ; whose containing Is so from sense in hardness that I can Make no collection of it. Let him show
 His skill in the construction.
 Luc. Philarmonus !
 Sooth. Here, my good lord.
 Luc. Read, and declare the meaning.
 Sooth. [Reads] ' When as a lion's whelp shall, to himself unknown, without seeking find, and be embrac'd by a piece of tender air ; and when from a stately cedar shall be lopp'd branches which, being dead many years, shall after revive, be jointed to the old stock, and freshly grow ; then shall Posthumus end his miseries, Britain be fortunate and flourish in peace and plenty.'
 Thou, Leonatus, art the lion's whelp ; 441
 The fit and apt construction of thy name,
 Being Leo-natus, doth import so much.
 [To Cymbeline] The piece of tender air, thy virtuous daughter,
 Which we call ' mollis aer', and ' mollis aer'
 We term it ' mulier' ; which ' mulier' I divine 446
 Is this most constant wife, who even now

Answering the letter of the oracle, Unknown to you, unsought, were clipp'd about With this most tender air. Cym. This hath some seeming. 450 Sooth. The lofty cedar, royal Cymbeline, Personates thee ; and thy lopp'd branches point Thy two sons forth, who, by Belarius stol'n, For many years thought dead, are now reviv'd, 454 To the majestic cedar join'd, whose issue Promises Britain peace and plenty. Cym. Well, My peace we will begin. And, Caius Lucius, Although the victor, we submit to Cæsar And to the Roman empire, promising 459 To pay our wonted tribute, from the which We were dissuaded by our wicked queen, Whom heavens in justice, both on her and hers, Have laid most heavy hand. Sooth. The fingers of the pow'rs above do tune The harmony of this peace. The vision 465	Which I made known to Lucius ere the stroke Of yet this scarce-cold battle, at this instant Is full accomplish'd ; for the Roman eagle, From south to west on wing soaring aloft, Lessen'd herself and in the beams o' th' sun 470 So vanish'd ; which foreshow'd our princely eagle, Th' imperial Cæsar, should again unite His favour with the radiant Cymbeline, Which shines here in the west. Cym. Laud we the gods ; And let our crooked smokes climb to their nostrils 475 From our bless'd altars. Publish we this peace To all our subjects. Set we forward ; let A Roman and a British ensign wave Friendly together. So through Lud's Town march ; And in the temple of great Jupiter 480 Our peace we'll ratify ; seal it with feasts. Set on there ! Never was a war did cease, Ere bloody hands were wash'd, with such a peace. [Exeunt.

THE SCENE : Dispersedly in various countries.

ACT ONE

Antioch. Before the palace.

Enter GOWER.

To sing a song that old was sung,
From ashes ancient Gower is come,
Assuming man's infirmities,
To glad your ear and please your eyes.
It hath been sung at festivals,
On ember-eyes and holy-ales ;
And lords and ladies in their lives
Have read it for restoratives.
The purchase is to make men glorious ;
Et bonum quo antiquius, eo melius. 10
If you, born in those latter times,
When wit's more ripe, accept my rhymes,
And that to hear an old man sing
May to your wishes pleasure bring,
I life would wish, and that I might 15
Waste it for you, like taper-light.
This Antioch, then, Antiochus the Great
Built up, this city, for his chiefest seat ;
The fairest in all Syria—
I tell you what mine authors say. 20
This king unto him took a fere,
Who died and left a female heir,
So buxom, blithe, and full of face,
As heaven had lent her all his grace ;
With whom the father liking took, 25
And her to incest did provoke.
Bad child! Worse father! To entice his own
To evil should be done by none.
But custom what they did begin
Was with long use account no sin. 30
The beauty of this sinful dame
Made many princes thither frame
To seek her as a bed-fellow,
In marriage-pleasures play-fellow ;
Which to prevent he made a law— 35

To keep her still, and men in awe—
That whoso ask'd her for his wife,
His riddle told not, lost his life.
So for her many a wight did die,
As yon grim looks do testify. 40
What now ensues to the judgment of your
eye

I give, my cause who best can justify.

[Exit.

SCENE I. Antioch. The palace.

Enter ANTIOCHUS, PRINCE PERICLES, and Followers.

Ant. Young Prince of Tyre, you have at large received

The danger of the task you undertake.

Per. I have, Antiochus, and, with a soul
Embold'ned with the glory of her praise,
Think death no hazard in this enterprise. 5

Ant. Bring in our daughter, clothed like a bride [Music.

For the embracements even of Jove himself ;

At whose conception, till Lucina reigned, Nature this dowry gave to glad her
presence ;

The senate-house of planets all did sit, 10
To knit in her their best perfections.

Enter the Daughter of Antiochus.

Per. See where she comes, apparell'd like the spring,
Graces her subjects, and her thoughts the
king

Of every virtue gives renown to men. 14
Her face the book of praises, where is read

Nothing but curious pleasures, as from thence

Sorrow were ever raz'd, and testy wrath
Could never be her mild companion. 35

You gods that made me man, and sway
in love,
That have inflam'd desire in my breast 20
To taste the fruit of yon celestial tree,
Or die in the adventure, be my helps,
As I am son and servant to your will,
To compass such a boundless happiness !
Ant. Prince Pericles— 25 Per. That would be son to great Antiochus.
Ant. Before thee stands this fair
Hesperides,
With golden fruit, but dangerous to be touch'd ;
For death-like dragons here affright thee
hard. 29
Her face, like heaven, enticeth thee to view
Her countless glory, which desert must gain ;
And which, without desert, because thine eye Presumes to reach, all the whole heap must die.
Yon sometimes famous princes, like thyself,
Drawn by report, advent'rous by desire, 35 Tell thee, with speechless tongues and semblance pale,
That, without covering, save yon field of
stars,
Here they stand martyrs, slain in Cupid's
wars ; 38
And with dead cheeks advise thee to desist
For going on death's net, whom none resist.
Per. Antiochus, I thank thee, who hath taught
My frail mortality to know itself,
And by those fearful objects to prepare
This body, like to them, to what I must ;
For death remembered should be like a mirror, 45
Who tells us life's but breath, to trust it error.
I'll make my will then, and, as sick men do,
Who know the world, see heaven, but,
feeling woe,
Gripe not at earthly joys as erst they did ;
So I bequeath a happy peace to you 50
And all good men, as every prince should
do ;
My riches to the earth from whence they came ;
[To the Princess] But my unspotted fire of love to you.
Thus ready for the way of life or death,
I wait the sharpest blow, Antiochus. 55
Ant. Scorning advice, read the conclusion then :
Which read and not expounded, 'tis decreed,
As these before thee, thou thyself shalt bleed.
Daugh. Of all 'say'd yet, mayst thou prove prosperous !
Of all 'say'd yet, I wish thee happiness ! 60 Per. Like a bold champion I assume the lists,

Nor ask advice of any other thought
But faithfulness and courage. [Reads.
The Riddle.
I am no viper, yet I feed 64
On mother's flesh which did me breed.
I sought a husband, in which labour
I found that kindness in a father.
He's father, son, and husband mild ;
I mother, wife, and yet his child.
How they may be, and yet in two, 70
As you will live, resolve it you.
[Aside] Sharp physic is the last. But, O you powers
That give heaven countless eyes to view
men's acts,
Why cloud they not their sights perpetually,
If this be true, which makes me pale to read it ? 75
Fair glass of light, I lov'd you, and could still,
Were not this glorious casket stor'd with ill.
But I must tell you now my thoughts
revolt ;
For he's no man on whom perfections wait
That, knowing sin within, will touch the gate. 80
You are a fair viol, and your sense the
strings ;
Who, finger'd to make man his lawful
music,
Would draw heaven down, and all the gods,
to hearken ;
But, being play'd upon before your time,
Hell only danceth at so harsh a chime. 85
Good sooth, I care not for you.
Ant. Prince Pericles, touch not, upon thy
life,
For that's an article within our law
As dangerous as the rest. Your time's expir'd :
Either expound now, or receive your sentence. 90
Per. Great King,
Few love to hear the sins they love to act ;
'Twould braid yourself too near for me to tell it.
Who has a book of all that monarchs do, He's more secure to keep it shut than shown ; 95
For vice repeated is like the wand'ring
wind,
Blows dust in others' eyes, to spread itself ;
And yet the end of all is bought thus dear,
The breath is gone, and the sore eyes see
clear
To stop the air would hurt them. The blind mole casts 100
Copp'd hills towards heaven, to tell the earth is throng'd
By man's oppression, and the poor worm doth die for't.
Kings are earth's gods ; in vice their law's their will ;

And if Jove stray, who dares say Jove doth ill ?

It is enough you know ; and it is fit, ¹⁰⁵
What being more known grows worse, to smother it.

All love the womb that their first being bred ;

Then give my tongue like leave to love my head.

Ant. [Aside] Heaven, that I had thy head ! He has found the meaning.
But I will gloze with him.—Young Prince of Tyre, ¹¹⁰

Though by the tenour of our strict edict,
Your exposition misinterpreting,
We might proceed to cancel of your days ;
Yet hope, succeeding from so fair a tree
As your fair self, doth tune us otherwise. ¹¹⁵
Forty days longer we do respite you ;
If by which time our secret be undone,
This mercy shows we'll joy in such a son ;
And until then your entertain shall be ¹¹⁹
As doth befit our honour and your worth.

[Exeunt all but Pericles.]

Per. How courtesy would seem to cover sin,

When what is done is like an hypocrite,
The which is good in nothing but in sight !
If it be true that I interpret false,
Then were it certain you were not so bad ¹²⁵
As with foul incest to abuse your soul ;
Where now you're both a father and a son
By your untimely clasplings with your child—

Which pleasure fits a husband, not a father—

And she an eater of her mother's flesh ¹³⁰
By the defiling of her parent's bed ;
And both like serpents are, who, though they feed

On sweetest flowers, yet they poison breed.
Antioch, farewell ! for wisdom sees those men ¹³⁴

Blush not in actions blacker than the night
Will shun no course to keep them from the light.

One sin I know another doth provoke :
Murder's as near to lust as flame to smoke.
Poison and treason are the hands of sin,
Ay, and the targets to put off the shame. ¹⁴⁰
Then, lest my life be cropp'd to keep you clear,

By flight I'll shun the danger which I fear.
[Exit.]

Re-enter ANTIOCHUS.

Ant. He hath found the meaning,
For which we mean to have his head.
He must not live to trumpet forth my infamy, ¹⁴⁵
Nor tell the world Antiochus doth sin
In such a loathed manner ;
And therefore instantly this prince must die ;

For by his fall my honour must keep high.
Who attends us there ? ¹⁵⁰

Enter THALIARD.

Thal. Doth your Highness call ?

Ant. Thaliard, you are of our chamber, and our mind partakes

Her private actions to your secrecy ;
And for your faithfulness we will advance you. ¹⁵⁵

Thaliard, behold here's poison and here's gold ;

We hate the Prince of Tyre, and thou must kill him.

It fits thee not to ask the reason why,
Because we bid it. Say, is it done ?

Thal. My lord,
'Tis done. ¹⁶⁰

Ant. Enough.

Enter a Messenger.

Let your breath cool yourself, telling your haste.

Mess. My lord, Prince Pericles is fled. [Exit.]

Ant. As thou wilt live, fly after ; and like an arrow shot from a well-experienc'd archer hits the mark his eye doth level at, so thou never return unless thou say Prince Pericles is dead.

Thal. My lord, if I can get him within my pistol's length I'll make him sure enough.
So, farewell to your Highness. ¹⁷⁰

Ant. Thaliard, adieu ! [Exit Thaliard] Till Pericles be dead

My heart can lend no succour to my head. [Exit.]

SCENE II. Tyre. The palace.

Enter PERICLES with his Lords.

Per. Let none disturb us. [Exeunt Lords.]
Why should this change of thoughts,
The sad companion, dull-ey'd melancholy,
Be my so us'd a guest as not an hour
In the day's glorious walk, or peaceful night,

The tomb where grief should sleep, can breed me quiet ? ⁵

Here pleasures court mine eyes, and mine eyes shun them,

And danger, which I fear'd, is at Antioch,
Whose arm seems far too short to hit me here.

Yet neither pleasure's art can joy my spirits,

Nor yet the other's distance comfort me. ¹⁰

Then it is thus : the passions of the mind,
That have their first conception by mis-dread,

Have after-nourishment and life by care ;
And what was first but fear what might be done ¹⁴

Grows elder now, and cares it be not done.
And so with me. The great Antiochus—

'Gainst whom I am too little to contend,
Since he's so great can make his will his act—
Will think me speaking, though I swear to silence ;

Nor boots it me to say I honour him, 20
If he suspect I may dishonour him ;
And what may make him blush in being
known,
He'll stop the course by which it might be known.

With hostile forces he'll o'erspread the land,
And with th' ostent of war will look so huge Amazement shall drive courage from the
state ; 26

Our men be vanquish'd ere they do resist,
And subjects punish'd that ne'er thought
offence ;

Which care of them, not pity of myself—
Who am no more but as the tops of trees 30 Which fence the roots they grow by and defend them—

Makes both my body pine and soul to languish,
And punish that before that he would punish.

Enter HELICANUS and all the Lords.

1 Lord. Joy and all comfort in your sacred breast !

2 Lord. And keep your mind till you return to us, 35

Peaceful and comfortable !

Hel. Peace, peace, and give experience
tongue.

They do abuse the king that flatter him,
For flattery is the bellows blows up sin ;
The thing the which is flattered but a spark,
To which that blast gives heat and stronger glowing ; 41

Whereas reproof, obedient, and in order,
Fits kings as they are men, for they may err.
When Signior Sooth here does proclaim a
peace,

He flatters you, makes war upon your life.
Prince, pardon me, or strike me if you
please ; 46

I cannot be much lower than my knees.
[Kneels.]

Per. All leave us else ; but let your cares o'erlook

What shipping and what lading's in our haven,

And then return to us. [Exeunt Lords]
Helicanus, thou 50

Hast moved us. What seest thou in our looks ?

Hel. An angry brow, dread lord.

Per. If there be such a dart in princes'
frowns,

How durst thy tongue move anger to our
face ?

Hel. How dare the plants look up to heaven, from whence 55

They have their nourishment ?

Per. Thou know'st I have power
To take thy life from thee.

Hel. I have ground the axe myself ;
Do but you strike the blow.

Per. Rise, prithee, rise.
Sit down. Thou art no flatterer. 60
I thank thee for't ; and heaven forbid That kings should let their ears hear their faults hid !

Fit counsellor and servant for a prince,
Who by thy wisdom mak'st a prince thy servant, 64

What wouldst thou have me do ?

Hel. To bear with patience
Such griefs as you yourself do lay upon yourself.

Per. Thou speak'st like a physician,
Helicanus,

That ministers a potion unto me
That thou wouldst tremble to receive thyself.

Attend me, then : I went to Antioch, 70
Where, as thou know'st, against the face of
death,

I sought the purchase of a glorious beauty,
From whence an issue I might propagate Are arms to princes and bring joys to subjects.

Her face was to mine eye beyond all
wonder ; 75

The rest—hark in thine ear—as black as incest ;

Which by my knowledge found, the sinful
father

Seem'd not to strike, but smooth. But thou know'st this,

'Tis time to fear when tyrants seem to kiss.
Which fear so grew in me I hither fled 80

Under the covering of a careful night,
Who seem'd my good protector ; and, being here,

Bethought me what was past, what might succeed.

I knew him tyrannous ; and tyrants' fears Decrease not, but grow faster than the
years ; 85

And should he doubt it, as no doubt he doth,

That I should open to the list'ning air
How many worthy princes' bloods were shed

To keep his bed of blackness unlaid ope,
To lop that doubt, he'll fill this land with
arms, 90

And make pretence of wrong that I have done him ;

When all, for mine, if I may call offence, Must feel war's blow, who spares not innocence ;

Which love to all, of which thyself art one,
Who now reprov'dst me for't—

Hel. Alas, sir ! 95

Per. Drew sleep out of mine eyes, blood from my cheeks,

Musings into my mind, with thousand doubts

How I might stop this tempest ere it came ;
And, finding little comfort to relieve them,
I thought it princely charity to grieve them.

Hel. Well, my lord, since you have given me leave to speak, 101

Freely will I speak. Antiochus you fear,
And justly too, I think, you fear the tyrant,
Who either by public war or private treason
Will take away your life. 105

Therefore, my lord, go travel for a while Till that his rage and anger be forgot,
Or till the Destinies do cut his thread of life.
Your rule direct to any ; if to me,
Day serves not light more faithful than I'll be. 110

Per. I do not doubt thy faith ;
But should he wrong my liberties in my absence ?

Hel. We'll mingle our bloods together in the earth,
From whence we had our being and our birth.

Per. Tyre, I now look from thee then,
and to Tharsus 115

Intend my travel, where I'll hear from thee ;
And by whose letters I'll dispose myself.
The care I had and have of subjects' good
On thee I lay, whose wisdom's strength can bear it.

I'll take thy word for faith, not ask thine oath : 120

Who shuns not to break one will sure crack both.

But in our orbs we'll live so round and safe
That time of both this truth shall ne'er convince,

Thou show'dst a subject's shine, I a true prince. [Exeunt.]

SCENE III. Tyre. The palace.

Enter THALIARD.

Thal. So, this is Tyre, and this the court.
Here must I kill King Pericles ; and if I do it not, I am sure to be hang'd at home. 'Tis dangerous. Well, I perceive he was a wise fellow and had good discretion that, being bid to ask what he would of the king, desired he might know none of his secrets. Now do I see he had some reason for't ; for if a king bid a man be a villain, he's bound by the indenture of his oath to be one. Husht ! here comes the lords of Tyre.

Enter HELICANUS, ESCANES, with other Lords.

Hel. You shall not need, my fellow peers of Tyre, 10
Further to question me of your king's departure :

His seal'd commission, left in trust with me,
Does speak sufficiently he's gone to travel.

Thal. [Aside] How ! the king gone !

Hel. If further yet you will be satisfied 15
Why, as it were unlicens'd of your loves,
He would depart, I'll give some light unto you.

Being at Antioch—

Thal. [Aside] What from Antioch ?

Hel. Royal Antiochus, on what cause I know not, 20

Took some displeasure at him ; at least he judg'd so ;

And doubting lest that he had err'd or sinn'd,

To show his sorrow, he'd correct himself ;
So puts himself unto the shipman's toil,
With whom each minute threatens life or death. 24

Thal. [Aside] Well, I perceive
I shall not be hang'd now although I would ;
But since he's gone, the King's seas must please

He scap'd the land to perish at the seas.
I'll present myself.—Peace to the Lords of Tyre !

Hel. Lord Thaliard from Antiochus is welcome. 30

Thal. From him I come
With message unto princely Pericles ;
But since my landing I have understood
Your lord has betook himself to unknown travels,
Now message must return from whence it came.

Hel. We have no reason to desire it, 35
Commended to our master, not to us ;
Yet, ere you shall depart, this we desire—
As friends to Antioch, we may feast in Tyre. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV. Tharsus. The Governor's house.

Enter CLEON the Governor of Tharsus, with DIONYZA his wife, and Others.

Cle. My Dionyza, shall we rest us here,
And by relating tales of others' griefs
See if 'twill teach us to forget our own ?

Dio. That were to blow at fire in hope to quench it ;

For who digs hills because they do aspire ;
Throws down one mountain to cast up a higher.

O my distressed lord, even such our griefs are !

Here they are but felt and seen with mischief's eyes,

But like to groves, being topp'd, they higher rise.

Cle. O Dionyza, 10
Who wanteth food, and will not say he wants it,

Or can conceal his hunger till he famish ?
Our tongues and sorrows to sound deep

Our woes into the air ; our eyes to weep ?
Till tongues fetch breath that may proclaim them louder ; 15

That, if heaven slumber while their creatures want,
They may awake their helps to comfort them.
I'll then discourse our woes, felt several
years,
And, wanting breath to speak, help me
with tears.
Dio. I'll do my best, sir. 20
Cle. This Tharsus, o'er which I have the government,
A city on whom plenty held full hand,
For Riches strew'd herself even in her
streets;
Whose towers bore heads so high they kiss'd the clouds, 24
And strangers ne'er beheld but wond' red at;
Whose men and dames so jetted and adorn'd,
Like one another's glass to trim them by;
Their tables were stor'd full, to glad the
sight,
And not so much to feed on as delight; 29
All poverty was scorn'd, and pride so great
The name of help grew odious to repeat.
Dio. O, 'tis too true!
Cle. But see what heaven can do! By this our change
These mouths who but of late earth, sea,
and air,
Were all too little to content and please, 35
Although they gave their creatures in abundance,
As houses are defil'd for want of use,
They are now starv'd for want of exercise.
Those palates who, not yet two summers younger, 39
Must have inventions to delight the taste,
Would now be glad of bread, and beg for it.
Those mothers who to nouzle up their babes
Thought nought too curious are ready now
To eat those little darlings whom they lov'd.
So sharp are hunger's teeth that man and
wife 45
Draw lots who first shall die to lengthen life.
Here stands a lord, and there a lady
weeping;
Here many sink, yet those which see them
fall
Have scarce strength left to give them burial.
Is not this true? 50
Dio. Our cheeks and hollow eyes do witness it.
Cle. O, let those cities that of Plenty's cup
And her prosperities so largely taste,
With their superfluous riots, hear these tears!
The misery of Tharsus may be theirs. 55

Enter a Lord.

Lord. Where's the Lord Governor?

Cle. Here.

Speak out thy sorrows which thou bring'st
in haste,

For comfort is too far for us to expect.

Lord. We have descried, upon our neighbouring shore, 60

A portly sail of ships make hitherward.

Cle. I thought as much.

One sorrow never comes but brings an heir
That may succeed as his inheritor;

And so in ours: some neighbouring nation,
Taking advantage of our misery, 66

Hath stuff'd the hollow vessels with their power,

To beat us down, the which are down
already;

And make a conquest of unhappy me,
Whereas no glory's got to overcome. 70

Lord. That's the least fear; for by the semblance

Of their white flags display'd, they bring us peace,

And come to us as favourers, not as foes.

Cle. Thou speak'st like him's untutor'd to repeat:

Who makes the fairest show means most deceit. 75

But bring they what they will and what they can,

What need we fear?

Our ground's the lowest, and we are halfway there.

Go tell their general we attend him here,
To know for what he comes, and whence he comes, 80

And what he craves.

Lord. I go, my lord. [Exit.

Cle. Welcome is peace, if he on peace consist;

If wars, we are unable to resist.

Enter PERICLES, with Attendants.

Per. Lord Governor, for so we hear you
are, 85

Let not our ships and number of our men
Be like a beacon fir'd t' amaze your eyes.

We have heard your miseries as far as Tyre,
And seen the desolation of your streets; 89

Nor come we to add sorrow to your tears,
But to relieve them of their heavy load;

And these our ships you happily may think
Are like the Trojan horse was stuff'd

within

With bloody veins, expecting overthrow,
Are stor'd with corn to make your needy bread, 95

And give them life whom hunger starv'd half dead.

All. The gods of Greece protect you!

And we'll pray for you. [They kneel.

Per. Arise, I pray you, rise.

We do not look for reverence, but for love,
And harbourage for ourself, our ships, and

men. 100

Cle. The which when any shall not gratify,
Or pay you with unthankfulness in thought,
Be it our wives, our children, or ourselves,

The curse of heaven and men succeed their evils !
Till when—the which I hope shall ne'er be seen—¹⁰⁵
Your Grace is welcome to our town and us.
Per. Which welcome we'll accept ; feast
here awhile,
Until our stars that frown lend us a smile.
[Exeunt.]

ACT TWO

Enter GOWER.

Gow. Here have you seen a mighty king
His child iwis to incest bring ;
A better prince and benign lord,
That will prove awful both in deed and
word.
Be quiet then, as men should be, ⁵
Till he hath pass'd necessity.
I'll show you those in troubles reign,
Losing a mite, a mountain gain.
The good in conversation,
To whom I give my benison, ¹⁰
Is still at Tharsus, where each man
'Thinks all is writ he spoken can ;
And, to remember what he does,
Build his statue to make him glorious.
But tidings to the contrary ¹⁵
Are brought your eyes. What need speak I ?

Dumb show.

Enter, at one door, PERICLES, talking with CLEON ; all the Train with them. Enter, at another door, a Gentleman with a letter to Pericles ; Pericles shows the letter to Cleon.
Pericles gives the Messenger a reward, and knight's him. Exit Pericles at one door and Cleon at another.

Good Helicane, that stay'd at home,
Not to eat honey like a drone
From others' labours ; for though he strive
To killen bad, keep good alive ; ²⁰
And, to fulfil his prince' desire,
Sends word of all that haps in Tyre :
How Thaliard came full bent with sin
And had intent to murder him ;
And that in Tharsus was not best ²⁵
Longer for him to make his rest.
He, doing so, put forth to seas,
Where when men been, there's seldom ease ;
For now the wind begins to blow ;
Thunder above and deeps below ³⁰
Makes such unquiet that the ship
Should house him safe is wreck'd and split ;
And he, good prince, having all lost,
By waves from coast to coast is toss'd.
All perishen of man, of pelf, ³⁵
Ne aught escapen but himself ;
Till fortune, tir'd with doing bad,
Threw him ashore, to give him glad.
And here he comes. What shall be next,
Pardon old Gower—this longs the text. ⁴⁰

[Exit.]

SCENE I. Pentapolis. An open place by the seaside.

Enter PERICLES, wet.

Per. Yet cease your ire, you angry stars of heaven !
Wind, rain, and thunder, remember earthly
man
Is but a substance that must yield to you
And I, as fits my nature, do obey you.
Alas, the sea hath cast me on the rocks, ⁵
Wash'd me from shore to shore, and left me
breath
Nothing to think on but ensuing death.
Let it suffice the greatness of your powers
To have bereft a prince of all his fortunes ;
And having thrown him from your wat'ry grave, ¹⁰
Here to have death in peace is all he'll crave.

Enter three Fishermen.

1 Fish. What, ho, Pilch !

2 Fish. Ha, come and bring away the nets.

1 Fish. What, Patchbreech, I say !

3 Fish. What say you, master ? ¹⁵

1 Fish. Look how thou stirr'st now.
Come away, or I'll fetch thee with a wanion.

3 Fish. Faith, master, I am thinking of the poor men that were cast away before us even now. ¹⁹

1 Fish. Alas, poor souls ! It grieved my heart to hear what pitiful cries they made to us to help them, when, well-a-day, we could scarce help ourselves.

3 Fish. Nay, master, said not I as much when I saw the porpas how he bounc'd and tumbled ? They say they're half fish, half flesh. A plague on them ! They ne'er come but I look to be wash'd. Master, I marvel how the fishes live in the sea. ²⁷

1 Fish. Why, as men do a-land—the great ones eat up the little ones. I can compare our rich misers to nothing so fitly as to a whale : 'a plays and tumbles, driving the poor fry before him, and at last devours them all at a mouthful. Such whales have I heard on a'th' land, who never leave gaping till they've swallow'd the whole parish, church, steeple, bells, and all.

Per. [Aside] A pretty moral. ³⁵

3 Fish. But, master, if I had been the sexton, I would have been that day in the belfry.

2 Fish. Why, man ?

3 Fish. Because he should have swallowed me too ; and when I had been in his belly
I would have kept such a jangling of the bells that he should never have left till he cast bells, steeple, church, and parish up again. But if the good King Simonides were of my mind—

Per. [Aside] Simonides ! ⁴⁵

3 Fish. We would purge the land of these drones that rob the bee of her honey.

Per. [Aside] How from the finny subject of the sea

These fishers tell the infirmities of men,
And from their wat'ry empire recollect
All that may men approve or men detect!—
Peace be at your labour, honest fishermen!

2 Fish. Honest—good fellow! What's that? If it be a day fits you, scratch't out of the calendar, and nobody look after it.

Per. May see the sea hath cast upon your coast—

2 Fish. What a drunken knave was the sea to cast thee in our way!

Per. A man whom both the waters and the wind

In that vast tennis-court hath made the ball

For them to play upon entreats you pity him;

He asks of you that never us'd to beg.

1 Fish. No, friend, cannot you beg? Here's them in our country of Greece gets more with begging than we can do with working.

2 Fish. Canst thou catch any fishes, then?

Per. I never practis'd it.

2 Fish. Nay, then thou wilt starve, sure; for here's nothing to be got now-a-days unless thou canst fish for't.

Per. What I have been I have forgot to know;

But what I am want teaches me to think on:

A man throng'd up with cold; my veins are chill,

And have no more of life than may suffice
To give my tongue that heat to ask your help;

Which if you shall refuse, when I am dead,
For that I am a man, pray see me buried.

1 Fish. Die quoth-a? Now gods forbid't! And I have a gown here! Come, put it on; keep thee warm. Now, afore me, a handsome fellow! Come, thou shalt go home, and we'll have flesh for holidays, fish for fasting days, and moreo'er puddings and flapjacks; and thou shalt be welcome.

Per. I thank you, sir.

2 Fish. Hark you, my friend; you said you could not beg.

Per. I did but crave.

2 Fish. But crave! Then I'll turn craver too, and so I shall scape whipping.

Per. Why, are all your beggars whipp'd, then?

2 Fish. O, not all, my friend, not all! For all your beggars were whipp'd, I would wish no better office than to be beadle. But, master, I'll go draw up the net.

[Exit with Third Fisherman.

Per. [Aside] How well this honest mirth becomes their labour!

1 Fish. Hark you, sir; do you know where ye are?

Per. Not well.

1 Fish. Why, I'll tell you: this is call'd Pentapolis, and our king the good Simonides.

Per. The good Simonides, do you call him?

1 Fish. Ay, sir; and he deserves so to be call'd for his peaceable reign and good government.

Per. He is a happy king, since he gains from his subjects the name of good by his government. How far is his court distant from this shore?

1 Fish. Marry, sir, half a day's journey; and I'll tell you, he hath a fair daughter, and to-morrow is her birthday, and there are princes and knights come from all parts of the world to joust and tourney for her love.

Per. Were my fortunes equal to my desires, I could wish to make one there.

1 Fish. O sir, things must be as they may; and what a man cannot get he may lawfully deal for—his wife's soul.

Re-enter Second and Third Fishermen, drawing up a net.

2 Fish. Help, master, help! Here's a fish hangs in the net like a poor man's right in the law; 'twill hardly come out. Ha! Bots on't! 'Tis come at last, and 'tis turn'd to a rusty armour.

Per. An armour, friends! I pray you let me see it.

Thanks, Fortune, yet, that after all my crosses

Thou givest me somewhat to repair myself;

And though it was mine own, part of my heritage

Which my dead father did bequeath to me,
With this strict charge, even as he left his life:

'Keep it, my Pericles. It hath been a shield
'Twixt me and death;' and pointed to this brace

'For that it sav'd me, keep it. In like necessity—

The which the gods protect thee from!— may't defend thee!'

It kept where I kept, I so dearly lov'd it;
Till the rough seas, that spare not any man,
Took it in rage, though calm'd have given't
again—

I thank thee for't. My shipwreck now's no ill,

Since I have here my father's gift in his will.

1 Fish. What mean you, sir?

Per. To beg of you, kind friends, this coat of worth,

For it was sometime target to a king;

I know it by this mark. He lov'd me dearly,
And for his sake I wish the having of it ;
And that you'd guide me to your sovereign's
court,
Where with it I may appear a gentleman ;
And if that ever my low fortune's better, ¹⁴⁰
I'll pay your bounties ; till then rest your debtor.

1 Fish. Why, wilt thou tourney for the lady ?

Per. I'll show the virtue I have borne in arms.

1 Fish. Why, do'e take it, and the gods give thee good on't ! ¹⁴⁵

2 Fish. Ay, but hark you, my friend ;
'twas we that made up this garment through the rough seams of the waters ;
there are certain condolences, certain vails. I hope, sir, if you thrive, you'll remember from whence you had them. ¹⁵⁰

Per. Believe't, I will.

By your furtherance I am cloth'd in steel ;
And spite of all the rapture of the sea
This jewel holds his building on my arm.
Unto thy value I will mount myself ¹⁵⁵
Upon a courser whose delightful steps
Shall make the gazer joy to see him tread.
Only, my friend, I yet am unprovided
Of a pair of bases. ¹⁵⁹

2 Fish. We'll sure provide. Thou shalt have my best gown to make thee a pair ;
and I'll bring thee to the court myself.

Per. Then honour be but a goal to my will ; ¹⁶³

This day I'll rise, or else add ill to ill.

[Exeunt.

SCENE II. Pentapolis. A public way or platform leading to the lists. A pavilion by the side of it for the reception of the King, Princess, Lords, &c.

Enter SIMONIDES, THAISA, Lords, and Attendants.

Sim. Are the knights ready to begin the triumph ?

1 Lord. They are, my liege ;
And stay your coming to present themselves.

Sim. Return them we are ready ; and our daughter here,
In honour of whose birth these triumphs are, ⁵
Sits here like beauty's child, whom nature gat
For men to see, and seeing wonder at.

[Exit a Lord.

Thai. It pleaseth you, my royal father, to express
My commendations great, whose merit's less.

Sim. It's fit it should be so ; for princes are ¹⁰

A model which heaven makes like to itself :
As jewels lose their glory if neglected,
So princes their renowns if not respected.
'Tis now your honour, daughter, to entertain

The labour of each knight in his device. ¹⁵

Thai. Which, to preserve mine honour,
I'll perform.

Enter a Knight ; he passes over, and his Squire presents his shield to the Princess.

Sim. Who is the first that doth prefer himself ?

Thai. A knight of Sparta, my renowned
father ;

And the device he bears upon his shield
Is a black Ethiop reaching at the sun ; 20
The word, ' Lux tua vita mihi '.

Sim. He loves you well that holds his life
of you.

The Second Knight passes by.

Who is the second that presents himself ?

Thai. A prince of Macedon, my royal
father ;

And the device he bears upon his shield ²⁵
Is an arm'd knight that's conquer'd by a
lady ;

The motto thus, in Spanish, ' Piu por dulzura que por fuerza '.

The Third Knight passes by.

Sim. And what's the third ?

Thai. The third of Antioch ;
And his device a wreath of chivalry ;
The word, ' Me pompæ provexit apex '.

The Fourth Knight passes by.

Sim. What is the fourth ?

Thai. A burning torch that's turned upside down ;

The word, ' Quod me alit, me extinguit '.

Sim. Which shows that beauty hath his power and will,

Whch can as well inflame as it can kill. ³⁵

The Fifth Knight passes by.

Thai. The fifth, an hand environed with clouds,

Holding out gold that's by the touchstone
tried ;

The motto thus, ' Sic spectanda fides '.

PERICLES as Sixth Knight passes by.

Sim. And what's the sixth and last, the which the knight himself ⁴⁰

With such a graceful courtesy deliver'd ?

Thai. He seems to be a stranger ; but his present is

A withered branch, that's only green at top ;

The motto, ' In hac spe vivo '.

Sim. A pretty moral ; ⁴⁵
From the dejected state wherein he is,

He hopes by you his fortunes yet may flourish.

1 Lord. He had need mean better than his outward show
Can any way speak in his just commend ;
For by his rusty outside he appears 50
To have practis'd more the whipstock than the lance.

2 Lord. He well may be a stranger, for he comes
To an honour'd triumph strangely furnished.

3 Lord. And on set purpose let his armour rust

Until this day, to scour it in the dust. 55

Sim. Opinion's but a fool, that makes us scan

The outward habit by the inward man.

But stay, the knights are coming. We will withdraw

Into the gallery. [Exeunt.

[Great shouts within, and all cry
'The mean knight!']

SCENE III. Pentapolis. A hall of state. A banquet prepared.

Enter KING SIMONIDES, THAISA, Ladies, Lords, Knights, from tilting, and Attendants.

Sim. Knights!

To say you're welcome were superfluous.
To place upon the volume of your deeds,
As in a title-page, your worth in arms
Were more than you expect, or more than's 5
fit,

Since every worth in show commends itself.
Prepare for mirth, for mirth becomes a feast;
You are princes and my guests.

Thai. But you my knight and guest ;
To whom this wreath of victory I give, 10
And crown you king of this day's happiness.

Per. 'Tis more by fortune, lady, than my merit.

Sim. Call it by what you will, the day is yours ;

And here I hope is none that envies it. 14
In framing an artist, art hath thus decreed,
To make some good, but others to exceed ;
And you are her labour'd scholar. Come, queen o' th' feast—

For, daughter, so you are—here take your place.

Marshal the rest as they deserve their grace.

Knights. We are honour'd much by good Simonides. 20

Sim. Your presence glads our days.
Honour we love ;

For who hates honour hates the gods above.
Marshal. Sir, yonder is your place.

Per. Some other is more fit.

1 Knight. Contend not, sir ; for we are gentlemen 24

That neither in our hearts nor outward eyes

Envy the great nor shall the low despise.

Per. You are right courteous knights.

Sim. Sit, sir, sit.

[Aside] By Jove, I wonder, that is king of thoughts, 28

These cates resist me, he not thought upon.

Thai. [Aside] By Juno, that is queen of marriage,

All viands that I eat do seem unsavoury,
Wishing him my meat.—Sure he's a gallant gentleman.

Sim. He's but a country gentleman ;
Has done no more than other knights have done ;

Has broken a staff or so ; so let it pass. 35

Thai. [Aside] To me he seems like diamond to glass.

Per. [Aside] Yon king's to me like to my father's picture,

Which tells me in that glory once he was ;
Had princes sit like stars about his throne,
And he the sun, for them to reverence ; 40
None that beheld him but, like lesser lights,
Did veil their crowns to his supremacy :

Where now his son's like a glowworm in the night,

The which hath fire in darkness, none in light. 44

Whereby I see that Time's the king of men ;
He's both their parent, and he is their grave,

And gives them what he will, not what they crave.

Sim. What, are you merry, knights ?

1 Knight. Who can be other in this royal presence ?

Sim. Here, with a cup that's stor'd unto the brim— 50

As you do love, fill to your mistress' lips—
We drink this health to you.

Knights. We thank your Grace.

Sim. Yet pause awhile.

Yon knight doth sit too melancholy,
As if the entertainment in our court 55
Had not a show might countervail his worth.

Note it not you, Thaisa ?

Thai. What is't

To me, my father ?

Sim. O, attend, my daughter :

Princes, in this, should live like gods above,
Who freely give to every one that comes 61
To honour them ;

And princes not doing so are like to gnats,
Which make a sound, but kill'd are wond' red at. 64

Therefore to make his entertain more sweet,
Here, say we drink this standing-bowl of wine to him.

Thai. Alas, my father, it befits not me
Unto a stranger knight to be so bold :

He may my proffer take for an offence,
Since men take women's gifts for impud- 70

ence.

Sim. How !
Do as I bid you, or you'll move me else.
Thai. [Aside] Now, by the gods, he could not please me better.
Sim. And furthermore tell him we desire to know of him
Of whence he is, his name and parentage. 75
Thai. The King my father, sir, has drunk to you.
Per. I thank him.
Thai. Wishing it so much blood unto your life.
Per. I thank both him and you, and pledge him freely.
Thai. And further he desires to know of you 80
Of whence you are, your name and parentage.
Per. A gentleman of Tyre—my name, Pericles ;
My education been in arts and arms ; 83
Who, looking for adventures in the world,
Was by the rough seas reft of ships and men,
And after shipwreck driven upon this shore.
Thai. He thanks your Grace ; names himself Pericles,
A gentleman of Tyre,
Who only by misfortune of the seas, 89
Bereft of ships and men, cast on this shore.
Sim. Now, by the gods, I pity his misfortune,
And will awake him from his melancholy.
Come, gentlemen, we sit too long on trifles
And waste the time which looks for other revels. 94
Even in your armours, as you are address'd,
Will very well become a soldier's dance.
I will not have excuse, with saying this Loud music is too harsh for ladies' heads,
Since they love men in arms as well as beds.
[They dance.]
So, this was well ask'd, 'twas so well perform'd. 100
Come, sir ;
Here is a lady that wants breathing too ;
And I have heard you knights of Tyre
Are excellent in making ladies trip ;
And that their measures are as excellent.
Per. In those that practise them they are, my lord. 105
Sim. O, that's as much as you would be denied
Of your fair courtesy. [The Knights and Ladies dance] Unclasp, unclasp.
Thanks, gentlemen, to all ; all have done well,
[To Pericles] But you the best.—Pages and lights, to conduct
These knights unto their several lodgings!—
Yours, sir, 110
We have given order to be next our own.
Per. I am at your Grace's pleasure.
Sim. Princes, it is too late to talk of love,
And that's the mark I know you level at.

Therefore each one betake him to his rest ;
To-morrow all for speeding do their best.
[Exeunt.]
SCENE IV. Tyre. The Governor's house.
Enter HELICANUS and ESCANES.
Hel. No, Escanes ; know this of me—
Antiochus from incest liv'd not free ;
For which, the most high gods not minding longer
To withhold the vengeance that they had in store,
Due to this heinous capital offence, 5
Even in the height and pride of all his glory,
When he was seated in a chariot
Of an inestimable value, and his daughter with him,
A fire from heaven came and shrivell'd up
Their bodies, even to loathing ; for they so stunk 10
That all those eyes ador'd them ere their fall
Scorn now their hand should give them burial.
Esca. 'Twas very strange.
Hel. And yet but justice ; for though
This king were great, his greatness was no guard
To bar heaven's shaft, but sin had his reward. 15
Esca. 'Tis very true.
Enter two or three Lords.
1 Lord. See, not a man in private conference
Or council has respect with him but he.
2 Lord. It shall no longer grieve without reproof.
3 Lord. And curs'd be he that will not second it ! 20
1 Lord. Follow me, then. Lord Helicane, a word.
Hel. With me ? and welcome. Happy day, my lords.
1 Lord. Know that our griefs are risen to the top,
And now at length they overflow their banks.
Hel. Your griefs ! for what ? Wrong not your prince you love. 25
1 Lord. Wrong not yourself, then, noble Helicane ;
But if the prince do live, let us salute him,
Or know what ground's made happy by his breath.
If in the world he live, we'll seek him out ;
If in his grave he rest, we'll find him there ;
And be resolv'd he lives to govern us, 30
Or, dead, give's cause to mourn his funeral.
And leave us to our free election.
2 Lord. Whose death's indeed the strongest in our censure ;

And knowing this kingdom, if without a
head,
Like goodly buildings left without a roof,
Soon fall to ruin, your noble self,
That best know how to rule and how to reign,
We thus submit unto—our sovereign.

All. Live, noble Helicane!

Hel. By honour's cause, forbear your suffrages.

If that you love Prince Pericles, forbear.
Take I your wish, I leap into the seas,
Where's hourly trouble for a minute's ease.
A twelvemonth longer let me entreat you
To forbear the absence of your king;
If in which time expir'd he not return,
I shall with aged patience bear your yoke.
But if I cannot win you to this love,
Go search like nobles, like noble subjects,
And in your search spend your adventurous
worth;

Whom if you find, and win unto return,
You shall like diamonds sit about his crown.

1 Lord. To wisdom he's a fool that will not yield;

And since Lord Helicane enjoineeth us,
We with our travels will endeavour it.

Hel. Then you love us, we you, and we'll clasp hands:

When peers thus knit, a kingdom ever stands. [Exeunt.]

SCENE V. Pentapolis. The palace.

Enter SIMONIDES, reading of a letter, at one door. The Knights meet him.

1 Knight. Good morrow to the good Simonides.

Sim. Knights, from my daughter this I let you know,

That for this twelvemonth she'll not undertake

A married life.

Her reason to herself is only known,
Which from her by no means can I get.

2 Knight. May we not get access to her,
my lord?

Sim. Faith, by no means; she hath so strictly tied her

To her chamber that it is impossible.

One twelve moons more she'll wear Diana's livery.

This by the eye of Cynthia hath she vow'd,
And on her virgin honour will not break it.

3 Knight. Loath to bid farewell, we take our leaves. [Exeunt Knights.]

Sim. So,

They are well despatch'd. Now to my daughter's letter.

She tells me here she'll wed the stranger knight,

Or never more to view nor day nor light.

'Tis well, mistress; your choice agrees with mine;

like that well. Nay, how absolute she's in't,

Not minding whether I dislike or no!
Well, I do commend her choice;
And will no longer have it be delay'd.
Soft! here he comes: I must dissemble it.

Enter PERICLES.

Per. All fortune to the good Simonides!

Sim. To you as much, sir! I am beholding to you

For your sweet music this last night. I do Protest my ears were never better fed
With such delightful pleasing harmony.

Per. It is your Grace's pleasure to commend;

Not my desert.

Sim. Sir, you are music's master.

Per. The worst of all her scholars, my good lord.

Sim. Let me ask you one thing:

What do you think of my daughter, sir?

Per. A most virtuous princess.

Sim. And she is fair too, is she not?

Per. As a fair day in summer—wondrous fair.

Sim. Sir, my daughter thinks very well
of you;

Ay, so well that you must be her master,
And she will be your scholar; therefore look to it.

Per. I am unworthy for her schoolmaster.

Sim. She thinks not so; peruse this writing else.

Per. [Aside] What's here?

A letter, that she loves the knight of Tyre.

'Tis the king's subtlety to have my life.—

O, seek not to entrap me, gracious lord,

A stranger and distressed gentleman,

That never aim'd so high to love your
daughter,

But bent all offices to honour her!

Sim. Thou hast bewitch'd my daughter, and thou art

A villain.

Per. By the gods, I have not.

Never did thought of mine levy offence;

Nor never did my actions yet commence

A deed might gain her love or your displeasure.

Sim. Traitor, thou liest.

Per.

Traitor!

Sim.

Ay, traitor.

Per. Even in his throat—unless it be the
King—

That calls me traitor I return the lie.

Sim. [Aside] Now, by the gods, I do applaud his courage.

Per. My actions are as noble as my
thoughts,

That never relish'd of a base descent.

I came unto your court for honour's cause,

And not to be a rebel to her state;

And he that otherwise accounts of me,

This sword shall prove he's honour's enemy.

Sim. No ?
Here comes my daughter, she can witness
it. 65

Enter THAISA.

Per. Then, as you are as virtuous as fair,
Resolve your angry father if my tongue
Did e'er solicit, or my hand subscribe
To any syllable that made love to you.

Thai. Why, sir, say if you had, 70
Who takes offence at that would make me
glad ?

Sim. Yea, mistress, are you so peremp-tory ?

[Aside] I am glad on't with all my heart.—
I'll tame you ; I'll bring you in subjection.
Will you, not having my consent, 75
Bestow your love and your affections
Upon a stranger ?—[Aside] who, for aught
I know,

May be, nor can I think the contrary,
As great in blood as I myself.— 79
Therefore, hear you, mistress : either frame
Your will to mine—and you, sir, hear you, Either be rul'd by me—or I will make
you—

Man and wife.

Nay, come, your hands and lips must seal
it too ;

And being join'd, I'll thus your hopes destroy, 85

And for further grief—God give you joy !
What, are you both pleas'd ?

Thai. Yes, if you love me, sir.

Per. Even as my life my blood that fosters it.

Sim. What, are you both agreed ?

Both. Yes, if't please your Majesty. 90

Sim. It pleaseth me so well that I will see you wed ;

And then, with what haste you can, get you to bed. [Exeunt.

ACT THREE

Enter GOWER.

Gow. Now sleep yslaked hath the rout ;
No din but snores the house about,
Made louder by the o'er-fed breast
Of this most pompous marriage feast.
The cat, with eyne of burning coal, 5
Now couches fore the mouse's hole ;
And crickets sing at the oven's mouth,
Aye the blither for their drouth.
Hymen hath brought the bride to bed,
Where, by the loss of maidenhead, 10
A babe is moulded. Be attent,
And time that is so briefly spent
With your fine fancies quaintly eche.
What's dumb in show I'll plain with speech.

Dumb Show.

Enter PERICLES and SIMONIDES at one door, with Attendants ; a Messenger meets them, kneels, and gives Pericles a letter.

Pericles shows it Simonides ; the Lords kneel to Pericles. Then enter THAISA, with child, with Lychorida, a nurse. The King shows her the letter ; she rejoices.
She and Pericles take leave of her father, and depart with Lychorida and their Attendants. Then exeunt Simonides and the rest.

By many a dern and painful perch 15
Of Pericles the careful search,
By the four opposing coigns
Which the world together joins,
Is made with all due diligence
That horse and sail and high expense 20
Can stead the quest. At last from Tyre—
Fame answering the most strange inquire—
To the court of King Simonides
Are letters brought, the tenour these :
Antiochus and his daughter dead, 25
The men of Tyrus on the head Of Helicanus would set on
The crown of Tyre, but he will none.
The mutiny he there hastes t' oppress ;
Says to 'em, if King Pericles 30
Come not home in twice six moons,
He, obedient to their dooms,
Will take the crown. The sum of this,
Brought hither to Pentapolis,
Y-ravished the regions round, 35
And every one with claps can sound
' Our heir-apparent is a king !
Who dream'd, who thought of such a thing ?

Brief, he must hence depart to Tyre.
His queen with child makes her desire— 40
Which who shall cross ?—along to go.
Omit we all their dole and woe.
Lychorida, her nurse, she takes,
And so to sea. Their vessel shakes
On Neptune's billow ; half the flood 45
Hath their keel cut : but fortune's mood
Varies again ; the grizzled north Disgorges such a tempest forth
That, as a duck for life that dives, 50
So up and down the poor ship drives.
The lady shrieks, and, well-a-need,
Does fall in travail with her fear ;
And what ensues in this fell storm
Shall for itself itself perform.
I nill relate, action may 55
Conveniently the rest convey ;
Which might not what by me is told.
In your imagination hold
This stage the ship, upon whose deck
The sea-toss'd Pericles appears to speak. 60

[Exit

SCENE I. Enter PERICLES, a-shipboard.

Per. Thou god of this great vast, rebuke
these surges,
Which wash both heaven and hell ; and thou that hast

Upon the winds command, bind them in brass,
Having call'd them from the deep ! O, still Thy deaf'ning dreadful thunders ; gently quench
Thy nimble sulphurous flashes !—O, how,
Lychorida,
How does my queen ?—Thou stormest
venomously ;
Wilt thou spit all thyself ? The seaman's whistle
Is as a whisper in the ears of death,
Unheard.—Lychorida !—Lucina, O
Divinest patroness, and midwife gentle
To those that cry by night, convey thy deity
Aboard our dancing boat ; make swift the pangs
Of my queen's travails !

Enter LYCHORIDA, with an Infant.

Now, Lychorida !

Lyc. Here is a thing too young for such a place,
Who, if it had conceit, would die, as I Am like to do. Take in your arms this piece
Of your dead queen.

Per. How, how, Lychorida ?
Lyc. Patience, good sir ; do not assist the storm.

Here's all that is left living of your queen—
A little daughter. For the sake of it,
Be manly, and take comfort.

Per. O you gods !
Why do you make us love your goodly gifts,
And snatch them straight away ? We here below

Recall not what we give, and therein may Use honour with you.

Lyc. Patience, good sir, even for this charge.

Per. Now, mild may be thy life !
For a more blusterous birth had never babe ;
Quiet and gentle thy conditions ! for Thou art the rudeliest welcome to this world

That ever was prince's child. Happy what follows !

Thou hast as chiding a nativity
As fire, air, water, earth, and heaven, can make,

To herald thee from the womb.
Even at the first thy loss is more than can Thy portage quit with all thou canst find
here.

Now the good gods throw their best eyes upon't !

Enter two Sailors.

1 Sail. What courage, sir ? God save you !
Per. Courage enough : I do not fear the
flaw ;
t hath done to me the worst. Yet, for the
love

Of this poor infant, this fresh-new seafarer,
I would it would be quiet.

1 Sail. Slack the bolins there.—Thou wilt not, wilt thou ? Blow, and split thyself.

2 Sail. But sea-room, an the brine and cloudy billow kiss the moon, I care not.

1 Sail. Sir, your queen must overboard :
the sea works high, the wind is loud, and will not lie till the ship be clear'd of the dead.

Per. That's your superstition.

1 Sail. Pardon us, sir ; with us at sea it hath been still observed, and we are strong in custom. Therefore briefly yield'er ; for she must overboard straight.

Per. As you think meet. Most wretched
queen !

Lyc. Here she lies, sir.

Per. A terrible childbed hast thou had,
my dear ;

No light, no fire. Th' unfriendly elements
Forgot thee utterly ; nor have I time To give thee hallow'd to thy grave, but straight

Must cast thee, scarcely coffin'd, in the ooze ;

Where, for a monument upon thy bones,
And aye-remaining lamps, the belching whale

And humming water must o'erwhelm thy corpse,

Lying with simple shells. O Lychorida,
Bid Nestor bring me spices, ink and paper,
My casket and my jewels ; and bid
Nicander

Bring me the satin coffer. Lay the babe
Upon the pillow. Hie thee, whiles I say A priestly farewell to her. Suddenly, woman. [Exit Lychorida.]

2 Sail. Sir, we have a chest beneath the hatches, caulk'd and bitumed ready.

Per. I thank thee. Mariner, say what coast is this ?

2 Sail. We are near Tharsus.

Per. Thither, gentle mariner, Alter thy course for Tyre. When canst thou reach it ?

2 Sail. By break of day, if the wind cease.

Per. O, make for Tharsus !

There will I visit Cleon, for the babe
Cannot hold out to Tyrus ; there I'll leave it At careful nursing. Go thy ways, good mariner :

I'll bring the body presently. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II. Ephesus. Cerimon's house.

Enter CERIMON, with a Servant, and some Persons who have been shipwrecked.

Cer. Philemon, ho !

Enter PHILEMON.

Phil. Doth my lord call ?

Cer. Get fire and meat for these poor men.
'T'as been a turbulent and stormy night.

Serv. I have been in many ; but such a night as this,
Till now, I ne'er endured. 6

Cer. Your master will be dead ere you return ;
There's nothing can be minist'ed to nature
That can recover him. [To Philemon] Give this to the pothecary,
And tell me how it works.

[Exeunt all but Cerimon.]

Enter two Gentlemen.

1 Gent. Good morrow. 10

2 Gent. Good morrow to your lordship.

Cer. Gentlemen, why do you stir so early ?

1 Gent. Sir,

Our lodgings, standing bleak upon the sea,
Shook as the earth did quake ; 15
The very principals did seem to rend,
And all to topple. Pure surprise and fear
Made me to quit the house.

2 Gent. That is the cause we trouble you so early ;

'Tis not our husbandry.

Cer. O, you say well. 20

1 Gent. But I much marvel that your lordship, having

Rich t're about you, should at these early
hours

Shake off the golden slumber of repose.

'Tis most strange 24
Nature should be so conversant with pain,
Being thereto not compell'd.

Cer. I hold it ever Virtue and cunning were endowments
greater

Than nobleness and riches : careless heirs
May the two latter darken and expend ;
But immortality attends the former, 30
Making a man a god. 'Tis known I ever Have studied physic, through which secret
art,

By turning o'er authorities, I have,
Together with my practice, made familiar
To me and to my aid the blest infusions 35
That dwell in vegetives, in metals, stones ;
And I can speak of the disturbances That nature works, and of her cures ; which doth give me

A more content in course of true delight
Than to be thirsty after tottering honour,
Or tie my treasure up in silken bags, 41
To please the fool and death.

2 Gent. Your honour has through Ephesus pour'd forth
Your charity, and hundreds call themselves
Your creatures, who by you have been restor'd : 45

And not your knowledge, your personal pain, but even

Your purse, still open, hath built Lord
Cerimon

Such strong renown as time shall never raze.

Enter two or three Servants with a chest.

1 Ser. So, lift there.

Cer. What's that ? 50

1 Serv. Sir, even now did the sea toss up upon our shore this chest. 'Tis of some wreck.

Cer. Set't down, let's look upon't.

2 Gent. 'Tis like a coffin, sir.

Cer. Whate'er it be, 55
'Tis wondrous heavy. Wrench it open
straight.

If the sea's stomach be o'ercharg'd with
gold,

'Tis a good constraint of fortune it belches upon us.

2 Gent. 'Tis so, my lord.

Cer. How close 'tis caulk'd and bitumed !

Did the sea cast it up ? 61

1 Serv. I never saw so huge a billow, sir, as toss'd it up upon shore.

Cer. Wrench it open. Soft ! It smells most sweetly in my sense.

2 Gent. A delicate odour. 66

Cer. As ever hit my nostril. So, up with it.
O you most potent gods ! What's here ?
A corse !

1 Gent. Most strange ! 69

Cer. Shrouded in cloth of state ; balm'd and entreasur'd with full bags of spices.
A passport too. Apollo, perfect me in the characters ! [Reads from a scroll.]

Here I give to understand—

If e'er this coffin drives a-land—

I, King Pericles, have lost 75

This queen, worth all our mundane cost.

Who finds her, give her burying ;

She was the daughter of a king.

Besides this treasure for a fee, 80

The gods requite his charity !

If thou livest, Pericles, thou hast a heart
That ever cracks for woe ! This chance'd
to-night.

2 Gent. Most likely, sir.

Cer. Nay, certainly to-night ;

For look how fresh she looks ! They were too rough

That threw her in the sea. Make a fire
within. 85

Fetch hither all my boxes in my closet.

[Exit a servant.]

Death may usurp on nature many hours,
And yet the fire of life kindle again

The o'erpress'd spirits. I heard of an Egyptian

That had nine hours lien dead, 90
Who was by good appliance recovered.

Re-enter a Servant, with boxes, napkins, and fire.

Well said, well said ! The fire and cloths.
The rough and woeful music that we have,

Cause it to sound, beseech you.
 The vial once more. How thou stirr'st, thou
 block ! 95
 The music there ! I pray you give her air.
 Gentlemen,
 This queen may live ; nature awakes ; a warmth Breathes out of her. She hath not been entranc'd 99
 Above five hours. See how she gins to blow
 Into life's flower again !
 1 Gent. The heavens,
 Through you, increase our wonder, and set up
 Your fame for ever.
Cer. She is alive. Behold,
 Her eyelids, cases to those heavenly jewels
 Which Pericles hath lost, begin to part 105
 Their fringes of bright gold ; the diamonds
 Of a most praised water do appear,
 To make the world twice rich. Live, and make
 Us weep to hear your fate, fair creature,
 Rare as you seem to be. [She moves.
Thai. O dear Diana, where am I ?
 Where's my lord ? What world is this ? 111
 2 Gent. Is not this strange ?
 1 Gent. Most rare.
Cer. Hush, my gentle neighbours !
 Lend me your hands : to the next chamber bear her ; 115
 Get linen. Now this matter must be look'd
 to,
 For her relapse is mortal.
 Come, come ; and Æsculapius guide us !
 [Exeunt, carrying her away.]

SCENE III. Tharsus. Cleon's house.

Enter PERICLES, CLEON, DIONYZA, and LYCHORIDA with MARINA in her arms.

Per. Most honour'd Cleon, I must needs
 be gone ;
 My twelve months are expir'd, and Tyrus
 stands
 In a litigious peace. You and your lady Take from my heart all thankfulness ! The gods
 Make up the rest upon you ! 5 Cle. Your shafts of fortune, though they hurt you mortally,
 Yet glance full wand'ringly on us.
Dio. O your sweet queen !
 That the strict Fates had pleas'd you had brought her hither,
 To have bless'd mine eyes with her !
Per. We cannot but obey
 The powers above us. Could I rage and rear 10
 As doth the sea she lies in, yet the end
 Must be as 'tis. My gentle babe Marina, whom,
 For she was born at sea, I have nam'd so,
 here
 charge you her charity withal, leaving her

The infant of your care ; beseeching you 15
 To give her princely training, that she may Be manner'd as she is born.

Cle. Fear not, my lord, but think Your grace, that fed my country with your corn,
 For which the people's prayers still fall
 upon you, Must in your child be thought on. If neglection 20
 Should therein make me vile, the common
 body,
 By you reliev'd, would force me to my duty.
 But if to that my nature need a spur,
 The gods revenge it upon me and mine
 To the end of generation !

Per. I believe you ; 25
 Your honour and your goodness teach me
 to't

Without your vows. Till she be married,
 madam,
 By bright Diana, whom we honour all, 28
 Unscissor'd shall this hair of mine remain, Though I show ill in't. So I take my
 leave.

Good madam, make me blessed in your care
 In bringing up my child.

Dio. I have one myself,
 Who shall not be more dear to my respect
 Than yours, my lord.

Per. Madam, my thanks and prayers.
Cle. We'll bring your Grace e'en to the edge o' th' shore, 35

Then give you up to the mask'd Neptune and
 The gentlest winds of heaven.

Per. I will embrace
 Your offer. Come, dearest madam. O, no
 tears,

Lychorida, no tears.
 Look to your little mistress, on whose grace 40

You may depend hereafter. Come, my lord.
 [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV. Ephesus. Cerimon's house.

Enter CERIMON and THAISA.

Cer. Madam, this letter, and some certain
 jewels,
 Lay with you in your coffer ; which are At your command. Know you the character ?

Thai. It is my lord's. 4
 That I was shipp'd at sea I well remember, Even on my eaning time ; but whether
 there

Delivered, by the holy gods,
 I cannot rightly say. But since King
 Pericles,

My wedded lord, I ne'er shall see again,
 A vestal livery will I take me to, 10
 And never more have joy.

Cer. Madam, if this your purpose as ye
 speak,

Diana's temple is not distant far,
Where you may abide till your date expire.

Moreover, if you please, a niece of mine 15
Shall there attend you.

Thai. My recompense is thanks, that's all;
Yet my good will is great, though the gift small. [Exeunt.]

ACT FOUR

Enter GOWER.

Gow. Imagine Pericles arriv'd at Tyre,
Welcom'd and settled to his own desire.
His woeful queen we leave at Ephesus,
Unto Diana there a votaress.
Now to Marina bend your mind, 5
Whom our fast-growing scene must find
At Tharsus, and by Cleon train'd
In music, letters; who hath gain'd
Of education all the grace, 9
Which makes her both the heart and place
Of general wonder. But, alack,
That monster Envy, oft the wrack
Of earned praise, Marina's life
Seeks to take off by treason's knife.
And in this kind hath our Cleon 15
One daughter, and a wench full grown,
Even ripe for marriage-rite; this maid
Hight Philoten; and it is said
For certain in our story, she Would ever with Marina be. 20
Be't when she weav'd the sleided silk
With fingers long, small, white as milk;
Or when she would with sharp needle wound
The cambric, which she made more sound
By hurting it; or when to th' lute 25
She sung, and made the night-bird mute,
That still records with moan; or when
She would with rich and constant pen
Vail to her mistress Dian; still
This Philoten contends in skill 30
With absolute Marina. So
The dove of Paphos might with the crow Vie feathers white. Marina gets
All praises, which are paid as debts,
And not as given. This so darks 35
In Philoten all graceful marks
That Cleon's wife, with envy rare,
A present murderer does prepare
For good Marina, that her daughter Might stand peerless by this slaughter. 40
The sooner her vile thoughts to stead,
Lychorida, our nurse, is dead;
And curs'd Dionyza hath
The pregnant instrument of wrath
Prest for this blow. The unborn event 45
I do commend to your content;
Only I carry winged time
Post on the lame feet of my rhyme;
Which never could I so convey Unless your thoughts went on my way. 50
Dionyza does appear,
With Leonine, a murderer. [Exit.]

SCENE I. Tharsus. An open place near the seashore.

Enter DIONYZA and LEONINE.

Dio. Thy oath remember; thou has sworn to do't.

'Tis but a blow, which never shall be known Thou canst not do a thing in the world so soon

To yield thee so much profit. Let not co-science,

Which is but cold, inflaming love in thy
bosom,

Inflame too nicely; nor let pity, which Even women have cast off, melt thee, but b-
A soldier to thy purpose.

Leon. I will do't; but yet she is a goodly creature.

Dio. The fitter, then, the gods should have her.

Here she comes weeping for her on-mistress' death.

Thou art resolv'd?

Leon. I am resolv'd.

Enter MARINA with a basket of flowers.

Mar. No, I will rob Tellus of her weed
To strew thy green with flowers. 'Th yellows, blues,

The purple violets, and marigolds,
Shall as a carpet hang upon thy grave
While summer days do last. Ay me! poor 20
maid,

Born in a tempest, when my mother died
This world to me is like a lasting storm,
Whirring me from my friends.

Dio. How now, Marina! Why do you keep alone?

How chance my daughter is not with you?
Do not

Consume your blood with sorrowing; you have

A nurse of me. Lord, how your favour
chang'd

With this unprofitable woe! Come,
Give me your flowers. On the sea margin 35
Walk with Leonine; the air is quick there
And it pierces and sharpens the stomach.
Come,

Leonine, take her by the arm, walk with
her.

Mar. No, I pray you;

I'll not bereave you of your servant.

Dio. Come, come,

I love the king your father, and yourself
With more than foreign heart. We ever day

Expect him here. When he shall come, and find

Our paragon to all reports thus blasted,
He will repent the breadth of his grevoyage;

Blame both my lord and me that we have taken

No care to your best courses. Go, I pray
you, 40
Walk, and be cheerful once again; reserve
That excellent complexion which did steal
The eyes of young and old. Care not for me;
I can go home alone.

Mar. Well, I will go;
But yet I have no desire to it. 45
Dio. Come, come, I know 'tis good for
you.

Walk half an hour, Leonine, at the least.
Remember what I have said.

Leon. I warrant you, madam.

Dio. I'll leave you, my sweet lady, for a while. 49

Pray walk softly; do not heat your blood.
What! I must have care of you.

Mar. My thanks, sweet madam.
[Exit Dionysa.]

Is this wind westerly that blows?

Leon. South-west.

Mar. When I was born the wind was north.

Leon. Was't so?

Mar. My father, as nurse says, did never
fear,

But cried 'Good seamen!' to the sailors,
galling 55

His kingly hands hauling ropes;
And, clasping to the mast, endur'd a sea
That almost burst the deck.

Leon. When was this?

Mar. When I was born. 60

Never was waves nor wind more violent;
And from the ladder-tackle washes off
A canvas-climber. 'Ha!' says one 'wolt
out?'

And with a dropping industry they skip From stern to stern; the boatswain whistles, and 65

The master calls, and trebles their confusion.

Leon. Come, say your prayers.

Mar. What mean you?

Leon. If you require a little space for prayer,

I grant it. Pray; but be not tedious, for 70
The gods are quick of ear, and I am sworn
To do my work with haste.

Mar. Why will you kill me?

Leon. To satisfy my lady.

Mar. Why would she have me kill'd?

Now, as I can remember, by my troth, 75
I never did her hurt in all my life.

I never spake bad word, nor did ill turn
To any living creature. Believe me, la,
I never kill'd a mouse, nor hurt a fly;
I trod upon a worm against my will, 80

But I wept for it. How have I offended,
Wherein my death might yield her any profit,
Or my life imply her any danger?

Leon. My commission

Is not to reason of the deed, but do't. 85

Mar. You will not do't for all the world,
I hope.

You are well-favour'd, and your looks fore-
show

You have a gentle heart. I saw you lately
When you caught hurt in parting two that fought.

Good sooth, it show'd well in you. Do so
now: 90

Your lady seeks my life; come you between,

And save poor me, the weaker.

Leon. I am sworn,
And will dispatch. [Seizes her.]

Enter Pirates.

1 Pirate. Hold, villain!

[Leonine runs away.]

2 Pirate. A prize! a prize! 95

3 Pirate. Half part, mates, half part!
Come, let's have her aboard suddenly.

[Exeunt Pirates with Marina.]

Re-enter LEONINE.

Leon. These roguing thieves serve the great pirate Valdes,
And they have seiz'd Marina. Let her go;
There's no hope she will return. I'll swear she's dead 100

And thrown into the sea. But I'll see further.

Perhaps they will but please themselves upon her,

Not carry her aboard. If she remain, Whom they have ravish'd must by me be slain. [Exit.]

SCENE II. Mytilene. A brothel.

Enter Pander, Bawd, and BOULT.

Pand. Boul't!

Boul't. Sir?

Pand. Search the market narrowly.
Mytilene is full of gallants. We lost too much money this mart by being too wenchless. 5

Bawd. We were never so much out of creatures. We have but poor three, and they can do no more than they can do;
and they with continual action are even as good as rotten. 9

Pand. Therefore let's have fresh ones, whate'er we pay for them. If there be not a conscience to be us'd in every trade, we shall never prosper.

Bawd. Thou say'st true; 'tis not our bringing up of poor bastards—as, I think,
I have brought up some eleven— 15

Boul't. Ay, to eleven; and brought them down again. But shall I search the market?

Bawd. What else, man? The stuff we have, a strong wind will blow it to pieces, they are so pitifully sodden.

Pand. Thou sayest true; they are too unwholesome, o' conscience. The poor Transylvanian is dead that lay with the little baggage. 22

Boult. Ay, she quickly poop'd him ; she made him roast meat for worms. But I'll go search the market. [Exit.]

Pand. Three or four thousand chequins were as pretty a proportion to live quietly, and so give over.

Bawd. Why to give over, I pray you ? Is it a shame to get when we are old ? 28

Pand. O, our credit comes not in like the commodity, nor the commodity wages not with the danger ; therefore, if in our youths we could pick up some pretty estate, 'twere not amiss to keep our door hatch'd. Besides, the sore terms we stand upon with the gods will be strong with us for giving o'er.

Bawd. Come, other sorts offend as well as we. 35

Pand. As well as we ! Ay, and better too ; we offend worse. Neither is our profession any trade ; it's no calling. But here comes Boult.

Re-enter BOULT, with the Pirates and MARINA.

Boult. [To Marina] Come your ways.—My masters, you say she's a virgin ? 40

1 Pirate. O, sir, we doubt it not.

Boult. Master, I have gone through for this piece you see. If you like her, so ; if not, I have lost my earnest.

Bawd. Boult, has she any qualities ? 45

Boult. She has a good face, speaks well, and has excellent good clothes ; there's no farther necessity of qualities can make her be refus'd.

Bawd. What's her price, Boult ?

Boult. I cannot be bated one doit of a thousand pieces. 51

Pand. Well, follow me, my masters ; you shall have your money presently. Wife, take her in ; instruct her what she has to do, that she may not be raw in her entertainment. [Exit Pand and Pirates.]

Bawd. Boult, take you the marks of her—the colour of her hair, complexion, height, her age, with warrant of her virginity ; and cry ' He that will give most shall have her first '. Such a maidenhead were no cheap thing, if men were as they have been. Get this done as I command you. 61

Boult. Performance shall follow. [Exit.]

Mar. Alack that Leonine was so slack, so slow !

He should have struck, not spoke ; or that these pirates,
Not enough barbarous, had not o'erboard thrown me

For to seek my mother ! 66

Bawd. Why lament you, pretty one ?

Mar. That I am pretty.

Bawd. Come, the gods have done their part in you.

Mar. I accuse them not. 70

Bawd. You are light into my hands, where you are like to live.

Mar. The more my fault
To scape his hands where I was like to die.

Bawd. Ay, and you shall live in pleasure.

Mar. No. 76

Bawd. Yes, indeed shall you, and taste gentlemen of all fashions. You shall fare well ; you shall have the difference of all complexions. What ! do you stop your ears ? 80

Mar. Are you a woman ?

Bawd. What would you have me be, an I be not a woman ? 83

Mar. An honest woman, or not a woman.

Bawd. Marry, whip thee, gosling ! I think I shall have something to do with you. Come, you're a young foolish sapling, and must be bow'd as I would have you.

Mar. The gods defend me ! 89

Bawd. If it please the gods to defend you by men, then men must comfort you, men must feed you, men must stir you up. Boult's return'd.

Re-enter BOULT.

Now, sir, hast thou cried her through the market ?

Boult. I have cried her almost to the number of her hairs ; I have drawn her picture with my voice. 95

Bawd. And I prithee tell me how dost thou find the inclination of the people, especially of the younger sort ?

Boult. Faith, they listened to me as they would have hearkened to their father's testament. There was a Spaniard's mouth so wat'ed that he went to bed to her very description. 102

Bawd. We shall have him here to-morrow with his best ruff on.

Boult. To-night, to-night. But, mistress, do you know the French knight that cowers i' th' hams ? 106

Bawd. Who ? Monsieur Veroles ?

Boult. Ay, he ; he offered to cut a caper at the proclamation ; but he made a groan at it, and swore he would see her to-morrow. 110

Bawd. Well, well ; as for him, he brought his disease hither : here he does but repair it. I know he will come in our shadow to scatter his crowns in the sun.

Boult. Well, if we had of every nation a traveller, we should lodge them with this sign. 115

Bawd. [To Marina] Pray you, come hither awhile. You have fortunes coming upon you. Mark me : you must seem to do that fearfully which you commit willingly ; to despise profit where you have most gain. To weep that you live as ye do makes pity in your lovers ; seldom but that pity begets you a good opinion, and that opinion a mere profit. 122

Mar. I understand you not.

Boult. O, take her home, mistress, take her home. These blushes of hers must be quench'd with some present practice. 126

Bawd. Thou sayest true, i' faith, so they must; for your bride goes to that with shame which is her way to go with warrant.

Boult. Faith, some do, and some do not.
But, mistress, if I have bargain'd for the joint— 131

Bawd. Thou mayst cut a morsel off the spit.

Boult. I may so.

Bawd. Who should deny it? Come, young one, I like the manner of your garments well. 135

Boult. Ay, by my faith, they shall not be chang'd yet.

Bawd. Boult, spend thou that in the town; report what a sojourner we have; you'll lose nothing by custom. When nature fram'd this piece she meant thee a good turn; therefore say what a paragon she is, and thou hast the harvest out of thine own report. 142

Boult. I warrant you, mistress, thunder shall not so awake the beds of eels as my giving out her beauty stir up the lewdly inclined. I'll bring home some
to-night.

Bawd. Come your ways; follow me.

Mar. If fires be hot, knives sharp, or waters deep,
Untied I still my virgin knot will keep.
Diana aid my purpose! 149

Bawd. What have we to do with Diana?
Pray you will you go with us? [Exeunt.]

SCENE III. Tharsus. Cleon's house.

Enter CLEON and DIONYZA.

Dio. Why are you foolish? Can it be undone?

Cle. O Dionyza, such a piece of slaughter
The sun and moon ne'er look'd upon!

Dio. I think
You'll turn a child again.

Cle. Were I chief lord of all this spacious
world, 5

I'd give it to undo the deed. O lady, Much less in blood than virtue, yet a princess

To equal any single crown o' th' earth
I' th' justice of compare! O villain Leonine!

Whom thou hast pois'ned too. 10
If thou hadst drunk to him, 't had been a kindness

Becoming well thy fact. What canst thou say

When noble Pericles shall demand his child?

Dio. That she is dead. Nurses are not the Fates,

To foster it, nor ever to preserve. 15
She died at night; I'll say so. Who can cross it?

Unless you play the pious innocent,
And for an honest attribute cry out
'She died by foul play'.

Cle. O, go to. Well, well.
Of all the faults beneath the heavens the
gods 20

Do like this worst.

Dio. Be one of those that thinks
The petty wrens of Tharsus will fly hence,
And open this to Pericles. I do shame
To think of what a noble strain you are,
And of how coward a spirit.

Cle. To such proceeding
Who ever but his approbation added, 26
Though not his prime consent, he did not flow

From honourable sources.

Dio. Be it so, then.
Yet none does know, but you, how she came dead,

Nor none can know, Leonine being gone.
She did distain my child, and stood between 31

Her and her fortunes. None would look on
her,

But cast their gazes on Marina's face;
Whilst ours was blurted at, and held a mawkin,

Not worth the time of day. It pierc'd me thorough; 35

And though you call my course unnatural,
You not your child well loving, yet I find
It greets me as an enterprise of kindness
Perform'd to your sole daughter.

Cle. Heavens forgive it!

Dio. And as for Pericles, 40
What should he say? We wept after her hearse,

And yet we mourn; her monument
Is almost finish'd, and her epitaphs
In glittering golden characters express

A general praise to her, and care in us 45
At whose expense 'tis done.

Cle. Thou art like the harpy,
Which, to betray, dost, with thine angel's
face,

Seize with thine eagle's talons.

Dio. You are like one that superstitiously Doth swear to the gods that winter kills the flies; 50

But yet I know you'll do as I advise.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE IV. Before Marina's monument at Tharsus.

Enter GOWER.

Gow. Thus time we waste, and longest leagues make short;

Sail seas in cockles, have an wish but for't ;
 Making, to take our imagination,
 From bourn to bourn, region to region.
 By you being pardon'd, we commit no crime 5
 To use one language in each several clime
 Where our scenes seem to live. I do beseech
 you
 To learn of me, who stand i' th' gaps to teach you
 The stages of our story. Pericles 9
 Is now again thwarting the wayward seas,
 Attended on by many a lord and knight,
 To see his daughter, all his life's delight.
 Old Helicanus goes along. Behind
 Is left to govern it, you bear in mind,
 Old Escanes, whom Helicanus late 15
 Advanc'd in time to great and high estate.
 Well-sailing ships and bounteous winds have brought
 This king to Tharsus—think this pilot
 thought ;
 So with his steerage shall your thoughts grow on—
 To fetch his daughter home, who first is
 gone. 20
 Like motes and shadows see them move
 awhile ;
 Your ears unto your eyes I'll reconcile.

Dumb show.

*Enter PERICLES, at one door, with all his Train : CLEON and DIONYZA at the other.
 Cleon shows Pericles the tomb of Marina, whereto Pericles makes lamentation, puts on sackcloth, and in a mighty passion departs.
 Then exeunt Cleon and Dionyza.*

See how belief may suffer by foul show !
 This borrowed passion stands for true old
 woe ;
 And Pericles, in sorrow all devour'd, 25
 With sighs shot through and biggest tears
 o'erhower'd,
 Leaves Tharsus, and again embarks. He swears
 Never to wash his face nor cut his hairs ;
 He puts on sackcloth, and to sea. He bears
 A tempest which his mortal vessel tears, 30
 And yet he rides it out. Now please you wit
 The epitaph is for Marina writ
 By wicked Dionyza. [Reads the inscription on Marina's monument.
 'The fairest, sweetest, and best lies here,
 Who withered in her spring of year. 35
 She was of Tyrus the King's daughter,
 On whom foul death hath made this
 slaughter ;
 Marina was she call'd ; and at her birth,
 Thetis, being proud, swallowed some part o'
 th' earth ;
 Therefore the earth, fearing to be o'er-flowed, 40
 Hath Thetis' birth-child on the heavens
 bestowed ;

Wherefore she does—and swears she'll never stint—
 Make raging battery upon shores of flint.'
 No visor does become black villainy
 So well as soft and tender flattery. 45
 Let Pericles believe his daughter's dead,
 And bear his courses to be ordered By Lady Fortune ; while our scene must play
 His daughter's woe and heavy well-a-day
 In her unholy service. Patience, then, 50
 And think you now are all in Mytilen.
 [Exit.]

SCENE V. - Mytilene. A street before the brothel.

Enter, from the brothel, two Gentlemen.

1 Gent. Did you ever hear the like ?
 2 Gent. No, nor never shall do in such a place as this, she being once gone. 3 1 Gent. But to have divinity preach'd there ! Did you ever dream of such a thing ?
 2 Gent. No, no. Come, I am for no more bawdy-houses. Shall's go hear the vestals sing ?
 1 Gent. I'll do anything now that is virtuous ; but I am out of the road of rutting for ever. [Exeunt.]

SCENE VI. Mytilene. A room in the brothel.

Enter Pander, Bawd, and BOULT.

Pand. Well, I had rather than twice the worth of her she had ne'er come here.

Bawd. Fie, fie, upon her ! She's able to freeze the god Priapus, and undo a whole generation. We must either get her ravished or be rid of her. When she should do for clients her fitment, and do me the kindness of our profession, she has me her quirks, her reasons, her master-reasons, her prayers, her knees ; that she would make a puritan of the devil, if he should cheapen a kiss of her. 10

Boult. Faith, I must ravish her, or she'll disfigure us of all our cavalleria and make our swearers priests.

Pand. Now the pox upon her green-sickness for me !

Bawd. Faith there's no way to be rid on't but by the way to the pox. Here comes the Lord Lysimachus disguised. 10

Boult. We should have both lord and down, if the peevish baggage would but give way to customers.

Enter LYSIMACHUS.

Lys. How now ! How a dozen of virginities ?

Bawd. Now, the gods to bless your
 Honour ! 20

Boult. I am glad to see your Honour in good health.

Lys. You may so ; 'tis the better for you that your resorters stand upon sound legs. How now ! Wholesome iniquity have you, that a man may deal withal and defy the surgeon ?

Bawd. We have here one, sir, if she would—but there never came her like in Mytilene.

Lys. If she'd do the deed of darkness, thou wouldst say.

Bawd. Your Honour knows what 'tis to say well enough.

Lys. Well, call forth, call forth.

Boult. For flesh and blood, sir, white and red, you shall see a rose ; and she were a rose indeed, if she had but—

Lys. What, prithee ?

Boult. O, sir, I can be modest.

Lys. That dignifies the renown of a bawd no less than it gives a good report to a number to be chaste.

[Exit Boult.

Bawd. Here comes that which grows to the stalk—never plucked yet, I can assure you.

Re-enter BOULT with MARINA.

Is she not a fair creature ?

Lys. Faith, she would serve after a long voyage at sea. Well, there's for you. Leave us.

Bawd. I beseech your Honour, give me leave : a word, and I'll have done presently.

Lys. I beseech you, do.

Bawd. [Aside to Marina] First, I would have you note this is an honourable man.

Mar. I desire to find him so, that I may worthily note him.

Bawd. Next, he's the governor of this country, and a man whom I am bound to.

Mar. If he govern the country, you are bound to him indeed ; but how honourable he is in that I know not.

Bawd. Pray you, without any more virginal fencing, will you use him kindly ? He will line your apron with gold.

Mar. What he will do graciously I will thankfully receive.

Lys. Ha' you done ?

Bawd. My lord, she's not pac'd yet ; you must take some pains to work her to your manage. Come, we will leave his Honour and her together. Go thy ways.

[Exeunt Bawd, Pander, and Boult.

Lys. Now, pretty one, how long have you been at this trade ?

Mar. What trade, sir ?

Lys. Why, I cannot name't but I shall offend.

Mar. I cannot be offended with my trade. Please you to name it.

Lys. How long have you been of this profession ?

Mar. E'er since I can remember.

Lys. Did you go to't so young ? Were you a gamester at five or at seven ?

Mar. Earlier too, sir, if now I be one.

Lys. Why, the house you dwell in proclaims you to be a creature of sale.

Mar. Do you know this house to be a place of such resort, and will come into't ? I hear say you're of honourable parts, and are the governor of this place.

Lys. Why, hath your principal made known unto you who I am ?

Mar. Who is my principal ?

Lys. Why, your herb-woman ; she that sets seeds and roots of shame and iniquity. O, you have heard something of my power, and so stand aloof for more serious wooing. But I protest to thee, pretty one, my authority shall not see thee, or else look friendly upon thee. Come, bring me to some private place. Come, come.

Mar. If you were born to honour, show it now ;

If put upon you, make the judgment good That thought you worthy of it.

Lys. How's this ? how's this ? Some more ; be sage.

Mar.

For me,

That am a maid, though most ungentle fortune

Have plac'd me in this sty, where, since I came,

Diseases have been sold dearer than physic—

That the gods

Would set me free from this unhallowed place,

Though they did change me to the meanest bird

That flies i' th' purer air !

Lys.

I did not think

Thou couldst have spoke so well ; ne'er dreamt thou couldst.

Had I brought hither a corrupted mind, Thy speech had altered it. Hold, here's gold for thee :

Persever in that clear way thou goest, And the gods strengthen thee !

Mar. The good gods preserve you !

Lys. For me, be you thoughten

That I came with no ill intent ; for to'me The very doors and windows savour vilely. Fare thee well. Thou art a piece of virtue, and

I doubt not but thy training hath been noble.

Hold, here's more gold for thee.

A curse upon him, die he like a thief, That robs thee of thy goodness ! If thou dost Hear from me, it shall be for thy good.

Re-enter BOULT.

Boult. I beseech your Honour, one piece for me.

Lys. Avaunt, thou damned door keeper!
Your house, but for this virgin that doth prop it, 113
Would sink and overwhelm you. Away!

[Exit.

Boult. How's this? We must take another course with you. If your peevish chastity, which is not worth a breakfast in the cheapest country under the cope, shall undo a whole household, let me be gelded like a spaniel. Come your ways.

Mar. Whither would you have me? 125

Boult. I must have your maidenhead taken off, or the common hangman shall execute it. Come your ways. We'll have no more gentlemen driven away. Come your ways, I say. 129

Re-enter BAWD.

Bawd. How now! What's the matter?

Boult. Worse and worse, mistress; she has here spoken holy words to the Lord Lysimachus.

Bawd. O abominable!

Boult. She makes our profession as it were to stink afore the face of the gods. 135

Bawd. Marry, hang her up for ever!

Boult. The nobleman would have dealt with her like a nobleman, and she sent him away as cold as a snowball; saying his prayers too. 139

Bawd. Boult, take her away; use her at thy pleasure. Crack the glass of her virginity, and make the rest malleable.

Boult. An if she were a thornier piece of ground than she is, she shall be ploughed.

Mar. Hark, hark, you gods! 145

Bawd. She conjures. Away with her. Would she had never come within my doors! Marry, hang you! She's born to undo us. Will you not go the way of womenkind? Marry, come up, my dish of chastity with rosemary and bays! [Exit.

Boult. Come, mistress; come your ways with me. 151

Mar. Whither wilt thou have me?

Boult. To take from you the jewel you hold so dear.

Mar. Prithee tell me one thing first.

Boult. Come now, your one thing. 155

Mar. What canst thou wish thine enemy to be?

Boult. Why, I could wish him to be my master, or, rather, my mistress.

Mar. Neither of these are so bad as thou art, 159

Since they do better thee in their command. Thou hold'st a place for which the pained'st fiend

Of hell would not in reputation change; Thou art the damned doorkeeper to every Coistrel that comes inquiring for his Tib; To the choleric fisting of every rogue 165
Thy ear is liable; thy food is such

As hath been belch'd on by infected lungs.

Boult. What would you have me do? Go to the wars, would you, where a man may serve seven years for the loss of a leg, and have not money enough in the end to buy him a wooden one? 171

Mar. Do anything but this thou doest.

Empty

Old receptacles, or common shores, of filth
Serve by indenture to the common hangman. 174

Any of these ways are yet better than this; For what thou professest, a baboon, could he speak,

Would own a name too dear. That the gods Would safely deliver me from this place!

Here, here's gold for thee.

If that thy master would gain by me, 180
Proclaim that I can sing, weave, sew, and dance,

With other virtues which I'll keep from boast;

And I will undertake all these to teach.

I doubt not but this populous city will Yield many scholars. 185

Boult. But can you teach all this you speak of?

Mar. Prove that I cannot, take me home again

And prostitute me to the basest groom That doth frequent your house.

Boult. Well, I will see what I can do for thee. If I can place thee, I will. 191

Mar. But amongst honest women?

Boult. Faith, my acquaintance lies little amongst them. But since my master and mistress have bought you, there's no going but by their consent. Therefore I will make them acquainted with your purpose, and I doubt not but I shall find them tractable enough. Come, I'll do for thee what I can; come your ways. [Exeunt.

ACT FIVE

Enter GOWER.

Gow. Marina thus the brothel scapes and chances

Into an honest house, our story says. She sings like one immortal, and she dances As goddess-like to her admired lays; Deep clerks she dumbs; and with her needle composes 5

Nature's own shape of bud, bird, branch, or berry,

That even her art sisters the natural roses; Her inkle, silk, twin with the rubied cherry; That pupils lacks she none of noble race. Who pour their bounty on her; and her gain 10

She gives the cursed bawd. Here we her place;

And to her father turn our thoughts again,

Where we left him on the sea. We there him
lost ;
Whence, driven before the winds, he is arriv'd
Here where his daughter dwells ; and on this coast 15
Suppose him now at anchor. The city striv'd
God Neptune's annual feast to keep ; from whence Lysimachus our Tyrian ship espies,
His banners sable, trimm'd with rich expense ; 19
And to him in his barge with fervour hies.
In your supposing once more put your
sight.
Of heavy Pericles, think this his bark ;
Where what is done in action, more, if
might,
Shall be discover'd ; please you sit and hark. [Exit.

SCENE I. On board Pericles' ship, off Mytilene. A pavilion on deck with a curtain before it ; Pericles within it, reclining on a couch. A barge lying beside the Tyrian vessel.
Enter two Sailors, one belonging to the Tyrian vessel, the other to the barge ; to them HELICANUS.

Tyr. Sail. [To the Sailor of Mytilene]
Where is Lord Helicanus ? He can resolve
you.
O, here he is.
Sir, there is a barge put off from Mytilene,
And in it is Lysimachus the Governor, Who craves to come aboard. What is your
will ? 5
Hel. That he have his. Call up some gentlemen.
Tyr. Sail. Ho, gentlemen ! my lord calls.
Enter two or three Gentlemen.

1 Gent. Doth your lordship call ?
Hel. Gentlemen, there is some of worth would come aboard ;
I pray greet him fairly. 10
[The Gentlemen and the two Sailors descend, and go on board the barge.
Enter, from thence, LYSIMACHUS and Lords, with the Gentlemen and the two Sailors.

Tyr. Sail. Sir,
This is the man that can, in aught you
would,
Resolve you.
Lys. Hail, reverend sir ! The gods preserve you ! 14
Hel. And you, sir, to outlive the age I am,
And die as I would do.
Lys. You wish me well.
Being on shore, honouring of Neptune's triumphs,
Seeing this goodly vessel ride before us,

I made to it, to know of whence you are. 19
Hel. First, what is your place ?
Lys. I am the Governor
Of this place you lie before.
Hel. Sir,
Our vessel is of Tyre, in it the King ;
A man who for this three months hath not spoken
To any one, nor taken sustenance 25
But to prorogue his grief.
Lys. Upon what ground is his dis-temperature ?
Hel. 'Twould be too tedious to repeat ;
But the main grief springs from the loss
Of a beloved daughter and a wife. 30
Lys. May we not see him ?
Hel. You may ;
But bootless is your sight—he will not speak
To any.
Lys. Yet let me obtain my wish.
Hel. Behold him. [Pericles discovered] This was a goodly person 35
Till the disaster that, one mortal night,
Drove him to this.
Lys. Sir King, all hail ! The gods preserve you !
Hail, royal sir !
Hel. It is in vain ; he will not speak to
you. 40
1 Lord. Sir, we have a maid in Mytilene,
I durst wager,
Would win some words of him.
Lys. 'Tis well bethought.
She, questionless, with her sweet harmony
And other chosen attractions, would allure,
And make a batt'ry through his deafen'd
parts, 46
Which now are midway stopp'd.
She is all happy as the fairest of all,
And, with her fellow maids, is now upon
The leafy shelter that abuts against 50
The island's side. [He whispers First Lord, who goes off in the barge of Lysimachus.
Hel. Sure, all's effectless ; yet nothing we'll omit
That bears recovery's name. But, since your kindness
We have stretch'd thus far, let us besecch
you 54
That for our gold we may provision have,
Wherein we are not destitute for want,
But weary for the staleness.
Lys. O sir, a courtesy
Which if we should deny, the most just gods
For every graff would send a caterpillar,
And so inflict our province. Yet once more Let me entreat to know at large the cause
Of your king's sorrow.
Hel. Sit, sir, I will recount it to you. 62
But, see, I am prevented.
Re-enter, from the barge, First Lord, with MARINA and another Girl.
Lys. O, here is

The lady that I sent for. Welcome, fair one!
Is't not a goodly presence?

Hel. She's a gallant lady. 65
Lys. She's such a one that, were I well
assur'd

Came of gentle kind and noble stock, I'd wish no better choice, and think me rarely wed.

Fair one, all goodness that consists in bounty 69

Expect even here, where is a kingly patient.
If that thy prosperous and artificial feat
Can draw him but to answer thee in aught,
Thy sacred physic shall receive such pay
As thy desires can wish.

Mar. Sir, I will use
My utmost skill in his recovery,
Provided 75
That none but I and my companion maid
Be suffered to come near him.

Lys. Come, let us leave her;
And the gods make her prosperous!

[Marina sings.

Lys. Mark'd he your music?

Mar. No, nor look'd on us.

Lys. See, she will speak to him. 80

Mar. Hail sir! my lord, lend ear.

Per. Hum, ha!

Mar. I am a maid,
My lord, that ne'er before invited eyes,
But have been gaz'd on like a comet. She speaks, 85

My lord, that, may be, hath endur'd a grief Might equal yours, if both were justly
weigh'd.

Though wayward fortune did malign my
state,

My derivation was from ancestors 89
Who stood equivalent with mighty kings;
But time hath rooted out my parentage,
And to the world and awkward casualties
Bound me in servitude. [Aside] I will desist;
But there is something glows upon my cheek,
And whispers in mine ear 'Go not till he
speak'. 95

Per. My fortunes—parentage—good parentage—
To equal mine!—was it not thus? What say you?

Mar. I said, my lord, if you did know my parentage
You would not do me violence. 99

Per. I do think so. Pray you turn your eyes upon me.

You are like something that—What countrywoman?

Here of these shores?

Mar. No, nor of any shores.
Yet I was mortally brought forth, and am
No other than I appear.

Per. I am great with woe, and shall deliver weeping. 105
My dearest wife was like this maid, and such a one

My daughter might have been: my queen's square brows;

Her stature to an inch; as wand-like
straight;

As silver voic'd; her eyes as jewel-like,
And cas'd as richly; in pace another Juno;
Who starves the ears she feeds, and makes them hungry 111

The more she gives them speech. Where do you live?

Mar. Where I am but a stranger. From the deck

You may discern the place.

Per. Where were you bred?
And how achiev'd you these endowments,
which 115

You make more rich to owe?

Mar. If I should tell my history, it would seem

Like lies, disdain'd in the reporting.

Per. Prithee speak.
Falseness cannot come from thee; for thou
lookest

Modest as Justice, and thou seem'st a
palace 120

For the crown'd Truth to dwell in. I will believe thee,

And make my senses credit thy relation
To points that seem impossible; for thou
lookest

Like one I lov'd indeed. What were thy
friends?

Dost thou not say, when I did push thee
back— 125

Which was when I perceiv'd thee—that thou cam'st

From good descending?

Mar. So indeed I did.

Per. Report thy parentage. I think thou said'st

Thou hadst been toss'd from wrong to injury,

And that thou thought'st thy griefs might equal mine, 130

If both were opened.

Mar. Some such thing
I said, and said no more but what my thoughts

Did warrant me was likely.

Per. Tell thy story;
If thine consider'd prove the thousand part
Of my endurance, thou art a man, and I 135
Have suffered like a girl. Yet thou dost look Like Patience gazing on kings' graves, and smiling

Extremity out of act. What were thy
friends?

How lost thou them? Thy name, my most kind virgin?

Recount, I do beseech thee. Come, sit by
me. 140

Mar. My name is Marina.

Per. O, I am mock'd,
And thou by some incensed god sent hither

To make the world to laugh at me.

Mar. Patience, good sir,
Or here I'll cease.

Per. Nay, I'll be patient.
Thou little know'st how thou dost startle
me 145

To call thyself Marina.

Mar. The name
Was given me by one that had some power,
My father, and a king.

Per. How! a king's daughter?
And call'd Marina?

Mar. You said you would believe me;
But, not to be a troubler of your peace, 150
I will end here.

Per. But are you flesh and blood?
Have you a working pulse, and are no fairy?
Motion! Well; speak on. Where were you born?

And wherefore call'd Marina?

Mar. Call'd Marina
For I was born at sea.

Per. At sea! what mother? 155

Mar. My mother was the daughter of a
king;

Who died the minute I was born,
As my good nurse Lychorida hath oft Delivered weeping.

Per. O, stop there a little!
[Aside] This is the rarest dream that e'er dull sleep 160

Did mock sad fools withal. This cannot be:
My daughter's buried.—Well, where were you bred?

I'll hear you more, to th' bottom of your story,

And never interrupt you.

Mar. You scorn; believe me, 'twere best I did give o'er. 165

Per. I will believe you by the syllable
Of what you shall deliver. Yet give me
leave—

How came you in these parts? where were you bred?

Mar. The King my father did in Tharsus
leave me;

Till cruel Cleon, with his wicked wife, 170
Did seek to murder me; and having woo'd
A villain to attempt it, who having drawn
to do't,

A crew of pirates came and rescued me;
Brought me to Mytilene. But, good sir, Whither will you have me? Why do you weep? It may be 175

You think me an impostor. No, good faith;

I am the daughter to King Pericles,
If good King Pericles be.

Per. Ho, Helicanus!

Hel. Call's my lord? 180

Per. Thou art a grave and noble counsellor,

Most wise in general. Tell me, if thou canst,
What this maid is, or what is like to be,

That thus hath made me weep?

Hel. I know not; but Here is the regent, sir, of Mytilene 185
Speaks nobly of her.

Lys. She never would tell
Her parentage; being demanded that,
She would sit still and weep.

Per. O Helicanus, strike me, honour'd
sir;

Give me a gash, put me to present pain, 190
Lest this great sea of joys rushing upon me
O'erbear the shores of my mortality,
And drown me with their sweetness. O,
come hither,

Thou that beget'st him that did thee beget;
Thou that wast born at sea, buried at Tharsus, 195

And found at sea again! O Helicanus, Down on thy knees, thank the holy gods as loud

As thunder threatens us. This is Marina.
What was thy mother's name? Tell me but
that, 199

For truth can never be confirm'd enough,
Though doubts did ever sleep.

Mar. First, sir, I pray,
What is your title?

Per. I am Pericles of Tyre; but tell me
now

My drown'd queen's name, as in the rest
you said

Thou hast been godlike perfect, 205
The heir of kingdoms and another life
To Pericles thy father.

Mar. Is it no more to be your daughter
than

To say my mother's name was Thaisa?

Thaisa was my mother, who did end

The minute I began. 210

Per. Now blessing on thee! Rise; thou art my child.

Give me fresh garments. Mine own,
Helicanus—

She is not dead at Tharsus, as she should have been

By savage Cleon. She shall tell thee all;
When thou shalt kneel, and justify in knowledge 215

She is thy very princess. Who is this?

Hel. Sir, 'tis the Governor of Mytilene,
Who, hearing of your melancholy state,
Did come to see you.

Per. I embrace you. 220
Give me my robes. I am wild in my beholding.

O heavens bless my girl! But hark, what music?

Tell Helicanus, my Marina, tell him O'er, point by point, for yet he seems to doubt,

How sure you are my daughter. But, what music? 225

Hel. My lord, I hear none.

Per. None?

The music of the spheres! List, my Marina.

Lys. It is not good to cross him; give him way.

Per. Rarest sounds! Do ye not hear?

Lys. My lord, I hear. [Music.]

Per. Most heavenly music! 231

It nips me unto list'ning, and thick slumber Hangs upon mine eyes: let me rest. [Sleeps.]

Lys. A pillow for his head.

So, leave him all. Well, my companion-friends, 235

If this but answer to my just belief, I'll well remember you.

[Exeunt all but Pericles.]

DIANA appears to Pericles as in a vision.

Dia. My temple stands in Ephesus. Hie thee thither,

And do upon mine altar sacrifice.

There, when my maiden priests are met together, 240

Before the people all,

Reveal how thou at sea didst lose thy wife.

To mourn thy crosses, with thy daughter's, call,

And give them repetition to the life. 244

Or perform my bidding or thou liv'st in woe; Do it, and happy—by my silver bow!

Awake and tell thy dream. [Disappears.]

Per. Celestial Dian, goddess argentine, I will obey thee. Helicanus!

Re-enter HELICANUS, LYSIMACHUS, MARINA, &c.

Hel Sir?

Per. My purpose was for Tharsus, there to strike 250

The inhospitable Cleon; but I am

For other service first: toward Ephesus

Turn our blown sails; eftsoons I'll tell thee why.

[To Lysimachus] Shall we refresh us, sir, upon your shore,

And give you gold for such provision 255 As our intents will need?

Lys. Sir,

With all my heart; and when you come ashore

I have another suit.

Per. You shall prevail, 259

Were it to woo my daughter; for it seems You have been noble towards her.

Lys. Sir, lend me your arm.

Per. Come, my Marina. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II. Ephesus. Before the Temple of Diana.

Enter GOWER.

Gow. Now our sands are almost run; More a little, and then dumb. This, my last boon, give me,

For such kindness must relieve me—

That you aptly will suppose

What pageantry, what feats, what shows, 5

What minstrelsy, and pretty din,

The regent made in Mytilen

To greet the King. So he thrived,

That he is promis'd to be wived 10

To fair Marina; but in no wise

Till he had done his sacrifice,

As Dian bade; whereto being bound,

The interim, pray you, all confound.

In feather'd briefness sails are fill'd, 15

And wishes fall out as they're will'd.

At Ephesus the temple see,

Our king, and all his company.

That he can hither come so soon, 19

Is by your fancies' thankful doom. [Exit.]

SCENE III. Ephesus. The Temple of Diana; THAISA standing near the altar as High Priestess; a number of Virgins on each side; CERIMON and other Inhabitants of Ephesus attending.

Enter PERICLES, with his Train; LYSIMACHUS, HELICANUS, MARINA, and a Lady.

Per. Hail, Dian! to perform thy just command,

I here confess myself the King of Tyre;

Who, frighted from my country, did wed

At Pentapolis the fair Thaisa.

At sea in childbed died she, but brought forth

A maid-child, call'd Marina; who, O goddess,

Wears yet thy silver livery. She at Tharsus

Was nurs'd with Cleon; who at fourteen years

He sought to murder; but her better stars

Brought her to Mytilene; 'gainst whose shore 10

Riding, her fortunes brought the maid aboard us,

Where, by her own most clear remembrance, she Made known herself my daughter. Thai. Voice and favour!

You are, you are—O royal Pericles! [Swoons.]

Per. What means the nun? She dies! Help, gentlemen! 15

Cer. Noble sir,

If you have told Diana's altar true, This is your wife.

Per. Reverend appearer, no;

I threw her o'erboard with these very arms. Cer. Upon this coast, I warrant you.

Per. 'Tis most certain.

Cer. Look to the lady. O, she's but over-joy'd. 21

Early in blustering morn this lady was Thrown upon this shore. I op'd the coffin.

Found there rich jewels; recover'd her, and plac'd her

Here in Diana's temple.

Per. May we see them ?

Cer. Great sir, they shall be brought you to my house,

Whither I invite you. Look, Thaisa is Recovered.

Thai. O, let me look !

If he be none of mine, my sanctity

Will to my sense bend no licentious ear,

But curb it, spite of seeing. O, my lord,

Are you not Pericles ? Like him you spake,

Like him you are. Did you not name a tempest,

A birth and death ?

Per. The voice of dead Thaisa !

Thai. That Thaisa am I, supposed dead And drown'd.

Per. Immortal Dian !

Thai. Now I know you better.

When we with tears parted Pentapolis,

The King my father gave you such a ring.

[Shows a ring.]

Per. This, this ! No more, you gods ! your present kindness

Makes my past miseries sports. You shall do well

That on the touching of her lips I may Melt and no more be seen. O, come, be buried

A second time within these arms !

Mar. My heart

Leaps to be gone into my mother's bosom.

[Kneels to Thaisa.]

Per. Look who kneels here ! Flesh of thy flesh, Thaisa ;

Thy burden at the sea, and call'd Marina, For she was yielded there.

Thai. Blest and mine own !

Hel. Hail, madam, and my queen !

Thai. I know you not.

Per. You have heard me say, when I did fly from Tyre,

I left behind an ancient substitute.

Can you remember what I call'd the man ? I have nam'd him oft.

Thai. 'Twas Helicanus then.

Per. Still confirmation.

Embrace him, dear Thaisa ; this is he.

Now do I long to hear how you were found ;

How possibly preserv'd ; and who to thank,

Besides the gods, for this great miracle.

Thai. Lord Cerimon, my lord—this man

Through whom the gods have shown their power—that can

From first to last resolve you.

Per. Reverend sir,

The gods can have no mortal officer

More like a god than you. Will you deliver How this dead queen re-lives ?

Cer. I will, my lord.

Beseech you, first, go with me to my house,

Where shall be shown you all was found with her ;

How she came plac'd here in the temple ; No needful thing omitted.

Per. Pure Dian, bless thee for thy vision !

I

Will offer night-oblations to thee. Thaisa, This Prince, the fair-betrothed of your daughter,

Shall marry her at Pentapolis. And now, This ornament

Makes me look dismal will I clip to form ; And what this fourteen years no razor touch'd, To grace thy marriage-day I'll beautify.

Thai. Lord Cerimon hath letters of good credit, sir,

My father's dead.

Per. Heavens make a star of him ! Yet there, my queen,

We'll celebrate their nuptials, and ourselves Will in that kingdom spend our following days.

Our son and daughter shall in Tyrus reign.

Lord Cerimon, we do our longing stay

To hear the rest untold. Sir, lead's the way.

[Exeunt.]

Enter GOWER.

Gcw. In Antiochus and his daughter you have heard

Of monstrous lust the due and just reward : In Pericles, his queen, and daughter, seen,

Although assail'd with fortune fierce and keen,

Virtue preserv'd from fell destruction's blast,

Led on by heaven, and crown'd with joy at last.

In Helicanus may you well descry

A figure of truth, of faith, of loyalty ;

In reverend Cerimon there well appears

The worth that learned charity aye wears. For wicked Cleon and his wife, when fame

Had spread their cursed deed, and honour'd name

Of Pericles, to rage the city turn, That him and his they in his palace burn ;

The gods for murder seemed so content To punish—although not done, but meant.

So, on your patience evermore attending, New joy wait on you ! Here our play has ending. [Exit.]

VENUS AND ADONIS

Vilia miretur vulgus : mihi flavus Apollo Pocula Castalia plena ministret aqua.

TO THE
RIGHT HONORABLE HENRIE WRIOTHESLEY,
EARLE OF SOUTHAMPTON, AND BARON OF TITCHFIELD.

RIGHT HONOURABLE,

I KNOW not how I shall offend in dedicating my unpolisht lines to your Lordship, nor how the worlde will censure mee for choosing so strong a proppe to support so weake a burthen, onelye if your Honour seeme but pleased, I account my selfe highly praised, and vowe to take advantage of all idle houres, till I have honoured you with some graver labour. But if the first heire of my invention prove deformed, I shall be sorie it had so noble a god-father : and never after eare so barren a land, for feare it yeeld me still so bad a harvest, I leave it to your Honourable survey, and your Honor to your hearts content which I wish may alwaies answere your owne wish, and the worlds hopefull expectation.

Your Honors in all dutie,

WILLIAM SHAKESPEARE.

EVEN as the sun with purple-colour'd face
Had ta'en his last leave of the weeping
morn,
Rose-cheek'd Adonis hied him to the chase ;
Hunting he lov'd, but love he laugh'd to scorn.

Sick-thoughted Venus makes amain unto
him,
And like a bold-fac'd suitor gins to woo
him.

'Thrice fairer than myself,' thus she began,
'The field's chief flower, sweet above compare,
Stain to all nymphs, more lovely than a
man,
More white and red than doves or roses are ;
Nature that made thee, with herself at
strife,
Saith that the world hath ending with thy life.

'Vouchsafe, thou wonder, to alight thy steed,
And rein his proud head to the saddle-bow ;
If thou wilt deign this favour, for thy meed
A thousand honey secrets shalt thou know.
Here come and sit, where never serpent
hisses,
And being set, I'll smother thee with
kisses ;

'And yet not cloy thy lips with loath'd
satiety,
But rather famish them amid their plenty,
Making them red and pale with fresh variety—

Ten kisses short as one, one long as twenty.
A summer's day will seem an hour but
short,
Being wasted in such time-beguiling
sport.'

With this she seizeth on his sweating palm,
The precedent of pith and livelihood,
And, trembling in her passion, calls it balm, Earth's sovereign salve to do a goddess
good.
Being so enrag'd, desire doth lend her
force
Courageously to pluck him from his horse.

Over one arm the lusty courser's rein,
Under her other was the tender boy,
Who blush'd and pouted in a dull disdain,
With leaden appetite, unapt to toy ;
She red and hot as coals of glowing fire,
He red for shame, but frosty in desire.

The studded bridle on a ragged bough Nimble she fastens—O, how quick is
love !
The steed is stalled up, and even now
To tie the rider she begins to prove :
Backward she push'd him, as she would be thrust,
And govern'd him in strength, though not in lust.

So soon was she along as he was down,
Each leaning on their elbows and their hips ;
Now doth she stroke his cheek, now doth
he frown,

And gins to chide, but soon she stops his
lips,
And kissing speaks, with lustful language broken :
' If thou wilt chide, thy lips shall never
open '.

He burns with bashful shame ; she with her tears
Doth quench the maiden burning of his cheeks ;
Then with her windy sighs and golden hairs
To fan and blow them dry again she seeks.
He saith she is immodest, blames her
miss ;
What follows more she murders with a kiss.

Even as an empty eagle, sharp by fast, 55
Tires with her beak on feathers, flesh, and bone,
Shaking her wings, devouring all in haste,
Till either gorge be stuff'd, or prey be gone ;
Even so she kiss'd his brow, his cheek,
his chin,
And where she ends she doth anew begin. 59

Forc'd to content, but never to obey,
Panting he lies and breatheth in her face ;
She feedeth on the steam as on a prey,
And calls it heavenly moisture, air of grace, Wishing her cheeks were gardens full of flowers,
So they were dew'd with such distilling showers. 65

Look how a bird lies tangled in a net,
So fast'ned in her arms Adonis lies ;
Pure shame and aw'd resistance made him
fret,
Which bred more beauty in his angry eyes.
Rain added to a river that is rank
Perforce will force it overflow the bank. 69

Still she entreats, and prettily entreats,
For to a pretty ear she tunes her tale ;
Still is he sullen, still he lours and frets, 75
'Twixt crimson shame and anger ashy-pale ;
Being red, she loves him best ; and being
white,
Her best is better'd with a more delight.

Look how he can, she cannot choose but
love ;
And by her fair immortal hand she swears 79
From his soft bosom never to remove Till he take truce with her contending tears,
Which long have rain'd, making her cheeks all wet ;
And one sweet kiss shall pay this countless debt.

Upon this promise did he raise his chin, 85
Like a dive-dapper peering through a wave,
Who, being look'd on, ducks as quickly in ;
So offers he to give what she did crave ;

But when her lips were ready for his pay,
He winks, and turns his lips another way.

Never did passenger in summer's heat 91
More thirst for drink than she for this good turn :

Her help she sees, but help she cannot get ;
She bathes in water, yet her fire must burn.
' O, pity,' gan she cry ' flint-hearted boy !

'Tis but a kiss I beg ; why art thou coy ? 95

' I have been wooed, as I entreat thee now,
Even by the stern and direful god of war,
Whose sinewy neck in battle ne'er did bow,
Who conquers where he comes in every jar ;
Yet hath he been my captive and my
slave,
And begg'd for that which thou unask'd shalt have. 101

' Over my altars hath he hung his lance,
His batt' red shield, his uncontrolled crest,
And for my sake hath learn'd to sport and dance, 105

To toy, to wanton, dally, smile, and jest, Scorning his churlish drum and ensign
red,
Making my arms his field, his tent my bed.

' Thus he that overrul'd I overswayed,
Leading him prisoner in a red-rose chain ;
Strong-temper'd steel his stronger strength obeyed, 111

Yet was he servile to my coy disdain.
O, be not proud, nor brag not of thy
might,
For mast'ring her that foil'd the god of
fight !

' Touch but my lips with those fair lips of
thine ;
Though mine be not so fair, yet are they
red— 115

The kiss shall be thine own as well as mine.
What seest thou in the ground ? Hold up thy head ;

Look in mine eyeballs ; there thy beauty
lies.

Then why not lips on lips, since eyes in
eyes ? 120

' Art thou asham'd to kiss ? Then wink
again,
And I will wink ; so shall the day seem
night.

Love keeps his revels where there are but twain ;

Be bold to play ; our sport is not in sight.
These blue-vein'd violets whereon we lean 125

Never can blab, nor know not what we mean.

' The tender spring upon thy tempting lip Shows thee unripe ; yet mayst thou well be tasted ; 128

Make use of time, let not advantage slip;
Beauty within itself should not be wasted.

Fair flowers that are not gath'ed in their prime

Rot and consume themselves in little
time.

'Were I hard-favour'd, foul, or wrinkled-
old,

Ill-nurtur'd, crooked, churlish, harsh in
voice,

O'er-worn, despised, rheumatic, and cold,
Thick-sighted, barren, lean, and lacking juice, ¹³⁶

Then mightst thou pause, for then I were not for thee;

But having no defects, why dost abhor
me?

'Thou canst not see one wrinkle in my
brow;

Mine eyes are grey, and bright, and quick in turning; ¹⁴⁰

My beauty as the spring doth yearly grow,
My flesh is soft and plump, my marrow

burning;

My smooth moist hand, were it with thy hand felt,

Would in thy palm dissolve or seem to melt.

'Bid me discourse, I will enchant thine ear,
Or, like a fairy, trip upon the green, ¹⁴⁶

Or, like a nymph, with long dishevelled
hair,

Dance on the sands, and yet no footing
seen.

Love is a spirit all compact of fire,
Not gross to sink, but light, and will aspire. ¹⁵⁰

'Witness this primrose bank whereon I lie:
These forceless flowers like sturdy trees

support me;

Two strengthless doves will draw me through the sky

From morn till night, even where I list to sport me.

Is love so light, sweet boy, and may it be That thou should think it heavy unto thee? ¹⁵⁶

'Is thine own heart to thine own face affected?

Can thy right hand seize love upon thy left?

Then woo thyself, be of thyself rejected;
Steal thine own freedom, and complain on theft. ¹⁶⁰

Narcissus so himself himself forsook,
And died to kiss his shadow in the brook.

'Torches are made to light, jewels to wear,
Dainties to taste, fresh beauty for the use,

Herbs for their smell, and sappy plants to bear: ¹⁶⁵

Things growing to themselves are growth's abuse.

Seeds spring from seeds, and beauty
breedeth beauty;

Thou wast begot—to get it is thy duty.

'Upon the earth's increase why shouldst thou feed, ¹⁶⁹

Unless the earth with thy increase be fed?
By law of nature thou art bound to breed,

'That thine may live when thou thyself art
dead;

And so in spite of death thou dost survive,

In that thy likeness still is left alive.'

By this the love-sick queen began to sweat,
For where they lay the shadow had forsook them, ¹⁷⁶

And Titan, tired in the mid-day heat,
With burning eye did hotly overlook them;

Wishing Adonis had his team to guide,
So he were like him, and by Venus' side.

And now Adonis, with a lazy sprite, ¹⁸¹
And with a heavy, dark, disliking eye,

His louring brows o'erwhelming his fair
sight,

Like misty vapours when they blot the sky,
Souring his cheeks, cries 'Fie, no more of love! ¹⁸⁵

The sun doth burn my face; I must remove'.

'Ay me,' quoth Venus 'young, and so unkind!

What bare excuses mak'st thou to be gone!
I'll sigh celestial breath, whose gentle wind

Shall cool the heat of this descending sun; ¹⁹⁰

I'll make a shadow for thee of my hairs;

If they burn too, I'll quench them with my tears.

'The sun that shines from heaven shines
but warm,

And lo, I lie between that sun and thee;
The heat I have from thence doth little harm; ¹⁹⁵

Thine eye darts forth the fire that burneth
me;

And were I not immortal, life were done
Between this heavenly and earthly sun.

'Art thou obdurate, flinty, hard as steel?
Nay, more than flint, for stone at rain

relenteth. ²⁰⁰

Art thou a woman's son, and canst not feel What 'tis to love? how want of love

tormenteth?

O, had thy mother borne so hard a mind,
She had not brought forth thee, but died

unkind!

'What am I, that thou shouldst contemn me this? ²⁰⁵

Or what great danger dwells upon my suit?

VENUS AND ADONIS

What were thy lips the worse for one poor
kiss ?

Speak, fair ; but speak fair words, or else be mute.

Give me one kiss ; I'll give it thee again,
And one for int'rest, if thou wilt have
twain. 210

' Fie, lifeless picture, cold and senseless
stone,

Well-painted idol, image dull and dead,
Statue contenting but the eye alone,
Thing like a man, but of no woman bred !

Thou art no man, though of a man's complexion, 215

For men will kiss even by their own direction.'

This said, impatience chokes her pleading
tongue,

And swelling passion doth provoke a pause ;
Red cheeks and fiery eyes blaze forth her
wrong ;

Being judge in love, she cannot right her
cause ; 220

And now she weeps, and now she fain
would speak,

And now her sobs do her intendments
break.

Sometime she shakes her head, and then his hand ; 223

Now gazeth she on him, now on the ground ;
Sometime her arms infold him like a band ;
She would, he will not in her arms be
bound ;

And when from thence he struggles to be
gone,

She locks her lily fingers one in one.

Fondling,' she saith ' since I have hemm'd thee here

Within the circuit of this ivory pale, 230
I'll be a park, and thou shalt be my deer ;
Feed where thou wilt, on mountain or in dale ;

Graze on my lips ; and if those hills be
dry,

Stray lower, where the pleasant fountains lie.

Within this limit is relief enough, 235
Sweet bottom-grass, and high delightful
plain,

Round rising hillocks, brakes obscure and
rough,

To shelter thee from tempest and from rain ;

Then be my deer, since I am such a park ;
No dog shall rouse thee, though a thousand bark.' 240

At this Adonis smiles as in disdain,
That in each cheek appears a pretty dimple.

Love made those hollows, if himself were slain,

He might be buried in a tomb so simple ;

Foreknowing well, if there he came to lie,
Why, there Love liv'd and there he could not die. 246

These lovely caves, these round enchanting pits,

Open'd their mouths to swallow Venus'
liking.

Being mad before, how doth she now for wits ?

Struck dead at first, what needs a second striking ? 250

Poor queen of love, in thine own law
forlorn,

To love a cheek that smiles at thee in
scorn !

Now which way shall she turn ? What shall she say ?

Her words are done, her woes the more increasing ;

The time is spent, her object will away, 255
And from her twining arms doth urge releasing.

' Pity ! ' she cries ' Some favour, some remorse ! '

Away he springs, and hasteth to his horse.

But, lo, from forth a copse that neighbours
by,

A breeding jennet, lusty, young, and proud, 260

Adonis' trampling courser doth espy,
And forth she rushes, snorts, and neighs
aloud ;

The strong-neck'd steed, being tied unto
a tree,

Breaketh his rein, and to her straight goes he. 264

Imperiously he leaps, he neighs, he bounds,
And now his woven girths he breaks
asunder ;

The bearing earth with his hard hoof he wounds,

Whose hollow womb resounds like heaven's
thunder ;

The iron bit he crusheth 'tween his teeth,
Controlling what he was controlled with.

His ears up-prick'd ; his braided hanging mane 271

Upon his compass'd crest now stand on end ;
His nostrils drink the air, and forth again,

As from a furnace, vapours doth he send ;
His eye, which scornfully glisters like fire,

Shows his hot courage and his high desire. 276

Sometime he trots, as if he told the steps,
With gentle majesty and modest pride ;

Anon he rears upright, curvets, and leaps,
As who should say ' Lo, thus my strength is tried, 280

And this I do to captivate the eye
Of the fair breeder that is standing by'.

What recketh he his rider's angry stir,
His flattering 'Holla' or his 'Stand, I
say' ?
What cares he now for curb, or pricking spur ? 285
For rich caparisons, or trappings gay ?
He sees his love, and nothing else he sees,
Nor nothing else with his proud sight
agrees.
Look when a painter would surpass the
life 289
In limning out a well-proportioned steed,
His art with nature's workmanship at
strife,
As if the dead the living should exceed ;
So did this horse excel a common one In shape, in courage, colour, pace, and bone.
Round-hoof'd, short-jointed, fetlocks shag and long, 295
Broad breast, full eye, small head, and nostril wide,
High crest, short ears, straight legs and passing strong,
Thin mane, thick tail, broad buttock,
tender hide ;
Look what a horse should have he did not lack, 299
Save a proud rider on so proud a back.
Sometime he scuds far off, and there he stares ;
Anon he starts at stirring of a feather ;
To bid the wind a base he now prepares,
And whe'r he run or fly they know not whether ;
For through his mane and tail the high wind sings, 305
Fanning the hairs, who wave like feath' red wings.
He looks upon his love and neighs unto her ;
She answers him as if she knew his mind ;
Being proud, as females are, to see him woo
her,
She puts on outward strangeness, seems
unkind, 310
Spurns at his love, and scorns the heat
he feels,
Beating his kind embracements with her
heels.
Then, like a melancholy malcontent,
He vails his tail, that, like a falling plume,
Cool shadow to his melting buttock lent
He stamps, and bites the poor flies in his fume. 316
His love, perceiving how he was enrag'd,
Grew kinder, and his fury was assuag'd.
His testy master goeth about to take him,
When, lo, the unback'd breeder, full of fear,
Jealous of catching, swiftly doth forsake
him, 321
With her the horse, and left Adonis there.

As they were mad, unto the wood they hie them,
Out-stripping crows that strive to over-fly them. 324
All swol'n with chafing, down Adonis sits,
Banning his boist'rous and unruly beast ;
And now the happy season once more
fits
That love-sick Love by pleading may be blest ;
For lovers say the heart hath treble
wrong,
When it is barr'd the aidance of the
tongue. 330
An oven that is stopp'd, or river stay'd, Burneth more hotly, swelleth with more
rage ;
So of concealed sorrow may be said :
Free vent of words love's fire doth assuage ;
But when the heart's attorney once is mute, 335
The client breaks, as desperate in his suit.
He sees her coming, and begins to glow
Even as a dying coal revives with wind,
And with his bonnet hides his angry brow,
Looks on the dull earth with disturbed
mind, 340
Taking no notice that she is so nigh,
For all askance he holds her in his eye.
O what a sight it was, wistly to view
How she came stealing to the wayward boy !
To note the fighting conflict of her hue ! 345
How white and red each other did destroy !
But now her cheek was pale, and by and
by
It flash'd forth fire, as lightning from the sky.
Now was she just before him as he sat,
And like a lowly lover down she kneels ; 350
With one fair hand she heaveth up his hat,
Her other tender hand his fair cheek feels ;
His tend'rer cheek receives her soft hand's print
As apt as new-fall'n snow takes any dint.
O, what a war of looks was then between
them, 355
Her eyes, petitioners, to his eyes suing !
His eyes saw her eyes as they had not seen
them ;
Her eyes woo'd still, his eyes disdain'd the wooing ;
And all this dumb play had his acts made plain
With tears which chorus-like her eyes did
rain. 360
Full gently now she takes him by the hand,
A lily prison'd in a gaol of snow,
Or ivory in an alabaster band ;
So white a friend engirts so white a foe.

This beauteous combat, wilful and unwilling,
 Showed like two silver doves that sit abilling.
 365

Once more the engine of her thoughts began :
 ' O fairest mover on this mortal round,
 Would thou wert as I am, and I a man,
 My heart all whole as thine, thy heart my wound !
 370

For one sweet look thy help I would assure thee,
 Though nothing but my body's bane would cure thee '.

' Give me my hand ' saith he. ' Why dost thou feel it ? '
 ' Give me my heart,' saith she ' and thou shalt have it. 374

O, give it me, lest thy hard heart do steel it,
 And being steel'd, soft sighs can never grave it ;
 Then love's deep groans I never shall regard,
 Because Adonis' heart hath made mine hard.'

' For shame,' he cries ' let go, and let me go ; 379

My day's delight is past, my horse is gone,
 And 'tis your fault I am bereft him so.
 I pray you hence, and leave me here alone ;
 For all my mind, my thought, my busy care,
 Is how to get my palfrey from the mare.'

Thus she replies : ' Thy palfrey, as he should, 385

Welcomes the warm approach of sweet desire.
 Affection is a coal that must be cool'd ;
 Else, suffer'd, it will set the heart on fire.
 The sea hath bounds, but deep desire hath none,
 Therefore no marvel though thy horse be gone. 390

' How like a jade he stood, tied to the tree,
 Servilely master'd with a leathern rein !
 But when he saw his love, his youth's fair fee,
 He held such petty bondage in disdain,
 Throwing the base thong from his bending crest, 395

Enfranchising his mouth, his back, his breast.

' Who sees his true-love in her naked bed,
 Teaching the sheets a whiter hue than white,
 But, when his glutton eye so full hath fed,
 His other agents aim at like delight ? 400

Who is so faint that dares not be so bold
 To touch the fire, the weather being cold ?

' Let me excuse thy courser, gentle boy ;
 And learn of him, I heartily beseech thee,
 To take advantage on presented joy ; 405

Though I were dumb, yet his proceedings teach thee.
 O, learn to love ! The lesson is but plain,
 And once made perfect never lost again'.

' I know not love,' quoth he ' nor will not know it, Unless it be a boar, and then I chase it. 410

'Tis much to borrow, and I will not owe it.
 My love to love is love but to disgrace it ;
 For I have heard it is a life in death,
 That laughs, and weeps, and all but with a breath.

' Who wears a garment shapeless and unfinished ? 415

Who plucks the bud before one leaf put forth ?
 If springing things be any jot diminish'd,
 They wither in their prime, prove nothing worth.
 The colt that's back'd and burden'd being young Loseth his pride and never waxeth strong. 420

' You hurt my hand with wringing ; let us part,
 And leave this idle theme, this bootless chat ;
 Remove your siege from my unyielding heart ;
 To love's alarms it will not ope the gate.
 Dismiss your vows, your feigned tears,
 your flatt'ry ; 425

For where a heart is hard they make no batt'ry.'

' What ! canst thou talk ? ' quoth she
 ' Hast thou a tongue ?

O, would thou hadst not, or I had no hearing !
 Thy mermaid's voice hath done me double wrong ;
 I had my load before, now press'd with bearing : 430

Melodious discord, heavenly tune harsh sounding, Ear's deep-sweet music, and heart's deep-sore wounding.

' Had I no eyes but ears, my ears would love
 That inward beauty and invisible ;
 Or were I deaf, thy outward parts would move 435

Each part in me that were but sensible.
 Though neither eyes nor ears, to hear nor see,
 Yet should I be in love by touching thee.

' Say that the sense of feeling were bereft me,
 And that I could not see, nor hear, nor touch, 440

And nothing but the very smell were left
me,
Yet would my love to thee be still as much ;
For from the stillitory of thy face excelling
Comes breath perfum'd, that breedeth love by smelling.

' But, O, what banquet wert thou to the taste, 445
Being nurse and feeder of the other four !
Would they not wish the feast might ever
last,
And bid Suspicion double-lock the door,
Lest Jealousy, that sour unwelcome
guest,
Should by his stealing in disturb the
feast ? ' 450

Once more the ruby-colour'd portal open'd
Which to his speech did honey passage yield ;
Like a red morn, that ever yet betoken'd
Wreck to the seaman, tempest to the field,
Sorrow to shepherds, woe unto the birds, Gusts and foul flaws to herdmen and to herds. 456

This ill presage advisedly she marketh.
Even as the wind is hush'd before it raineth,
Or as the wolf doth grin before he barketh,
Or as the berry breaks before it staineth,
Or like the deadly bullet of a gun, 461
His meaning struck her ere his words began.

And at his look she flatly falleth down,
For looks kill love, and love by looks reviveth ;
A smile recures the wounding of a frown.
But blessed bankrupt that by love so thriveth ! 466
The silly boy, believing she is dead, Claps her pale cheek till clapping makes it red ;

And all-amaz'd brake off his late intent,
For sharply he did think to reprehend her,
Which cunning love did wittily prevent.
Fair fall the wit that can so well defend her !
For on the grass she lies as she were slain,
Till his breath breatheth life in her again.

He wrings her nose, he strikes her on the
cheeks, 475
He bends her fingers, holds her pulses hard,
He chafes her lips, a thousand ways he seeks
To mend the hurt that his unkindness
marr'd ;
He kisses her ; and she, by her good will,
Will never rise, so he will kiss her still. 480

The night of sorrow now is turn'd to day :
Her two blue windows faintly she upheaveth,
Like the fair sun when in his fresh array

He cheers the morn and all the earth
relieveth ; 484
And as the bright sun glorifies the sky,
So is her face illumin'd with her eye ;
Whose beams upon his hairless face are
fix'd,
As if from thence they borrowed all their shine. 488
Were never four such lamps together mix'd,
Had not his clouded with his brows' repine ;
But hers, which through the crystal tears
gave light,
Shone like the moon in water seen by
night.

' O, where am I ? ' quoth she ' in earth or
heaven,
Or in the ocean drench'd, or in the fire ?
What hour is this ? or morn, or weary even ? 495
Do I delight to die, or life desire ?
But now I liv'd, and life was death's annoy ;
But now I died, and death was lively joy.
' O, thou didst kill me ! Kill me once again.
Thy eyes' shrewd tutor, that hard heart of
thine, 500
Hath taught them scornful tricks, and such disdain
That they have murd' red this poor heart of
mine ;
And these mine eyes, true leaders to their
queen,
But for thy piteous lips no more had seen.
' Long may they kiss each other, for this cure ! 505
O, never let their crimson liveries wear !
And as they last, their verdure still endure,
To drive infection from the dangerous year !
That the star-gazers, having writ on
death,
May say the plague is banish'd by thy
breath. 510

' Pure lips, sweet seals in my soft lips
imprinted,
What bargains may I make, still to be sealing ?
To sell myself I can be well contented,
So thou wilt buy, and pay, and use good dealing ;
Which purchase if thou make, for fear of slips 515
Set thy seal manual on my wax-red lips.
' A thousand kisses buys my heart from
me ;
And pay them at thy leisure, one by one.
What is ten hundred touches unto thee ?
Are they not quickly told, and quickly
gone ? 520
Say for non-payment that the debt should double,
Is twenty hundred kisses such a trouble ?'

' Fair queen,' quoth he ' if any love you owe me,
Measure my strangeness with my unripe
years ; 524
Before I know myself, seek not to know me;
No fisher but the ungrown fry forbears.
The mellow plum doth fall, the green sticks fast,
Or being early pluck'd is sour to taste.
' Look, the world's comforter, with weary gait, 529
His day's hot task hath ended in the west ;
The owl, night's herald, shrieks ; 'tis very
late ;
The sheep are gone to fold, birds to their nest ;
And coal-black clouds that shadow heaven's light
Do summon us to part and bid good
night.
' Now let me say " good night ", and so say
you ; 535
If you will say so, you shall have a kiss.'
' Good night ' quoth she ; and, ere he says
' adieu ',
The honey fee of parting tend'red is :
Her arms do lend his neck a sweet embrace ;
Incorporate then they seem ; face grows to face. 540
Till, breathless, he disjoin'd, and backward drew
The heavenly moisture, that sweet coral
mouth,
Whose precious taste her thirsty lips well knew,
Whereon they surfeit, yet complain on drouth.
He with her plenty press'd, she faint with dearth, 545
Their lips together glued, fall to the earth.
Now quick desire hath caught the yielding prey,
And glutton-like she feeds, yet never filleth ;
Her lips are conquerors, his lips obey, 549
Paying what ransom the insulter willet ; Whose vulture thought doth pitch the price so high
That she will draw his lips' rich treasure
dry.
And having felt the sweetness of the spoil,
With blindfold fury she begins to forage ;
Her face doth reek and smoke, her blood doth boil, 555
And careless lust stirs up a desperate courage ;
Planting oblivion, beating reason back, Forgetting shame's pure blush, and honour's wrack.

Hot, faint, and weary, with her hard embracing,
Like a wild bird being tam'd with too much handling, 560
Or as the fleet-foot roe that's tir'd with chasing,
Or like the froward infant still'd with dandling,
He now obeys and now no more resisteth, While she takes all she can, not all she listeth.
What wax so frozen but dissolves with temp'ring, 565
And yields at last to every light impression?
Things out of hope are compass'd oft with vent'ring,
Chiefly in love, whose leave exceeds commission.
Affection faints not like a pale-fac'd
coward,
But then woos best when most his choice is froward. 570
When he did frown, O, had she then gave over,
Such nectar from his lips she had not suck'd.
Foul words and frowns must not repel a lover ;
What though the rose have prickles, yet 'tis pluck'd.
Were beauty under twenty locks kept fast, 575
Yet love breaks through and picks them
all at last.
For pity now she can no more detain him ;
The poor fool prays her that he may depart.
She is resolv'd no longer to restrain him ;
Bids him farewell, and look well to her
heart, 580
The which, by Cupid's bow she doth protest,
He carries thence incaged in his breast.
' Sweet boy,' she says ' this night I'll waste in sorrow,
For my sick heart commands mine eyes to watch.
Tell me, love's master, shall we meet tomorrow ? 585
Say, shall we ? shall we ? wilt thou make the match ?'
He tells her no ; to-morrow he intends To hunt the boar with certain of his friends.
' The boar ! ' quoth she, whereat a sudden pale,
Like lawn being spread upon the blushing rose, 590
Usurps her cheek ; she trembles at his
tale,
And on his neck her yoking arms she throws :

She sinketh down, still hanging by his neck,
 He on her belly falls, she on her back.
 Now is she in the very lists of love, 595
 Her champion mounted for the hot encounter.
 All is imaginary she doth prove;
 He will not manage her, although he mount her.
 That worse than Tantalus' is her annoy,
 To clip Elysium and to lack her joy. 600
 Even so poor birds, deceiv'd with painted grapes,
 Do surfeit by the eye and pine the maw;
 Even so she languisheth in her mishaps,
 As those poor birds that helpless berries saw.
 The warm effects which she in him finds missing 605
 She seeks to kindle with continual kissing.
 But all in vain; good queen, it will not be.
 She hath assay'd as much as may be prov'd;
 Her pleading hath deserv'd a greater fee;
 She's Love, she loves, and yet she is not lov'd. 610
 'Fie, fie,' he says 'you crush me; let me go;
 You have no reason to withhold me so.'
 'Thou hadst been gone,' quoth she 'sweet boy, ere this,
 But that thou told'st me thou wouldst hunt the boar. 614
 O, be advis'd! Thou know'st not what it is
 With javelin's point a churlish swine to gore, Whose tushes never sheath'd he whetteth still,
 Like to a mortal butcher bent to kill.
 'On his bow-back he hath a battle set
 Of bristly pikes that ever threat his foes;
 His eyes like glow-worms shine when he doth fret; 621
 His snout digs sepulchres where'er he goes;
 Being mov'd, he strikes whate'er is in his way,
 And whom he strikes his cruel tushes slay.
 'His brawny sides, with hairy bristles armed, 625
 Are better proof than thy spear's point can enter;
 His short thick neck cannot be easily harmed;
 Being ireful, on the lion he will venter.
 The thorny brambles and embracing bushes,
 As fearful of him, part; through whom he rushes. 630

'Alas, he nought esteems that face of thine,
 To which Love's eyes pays tributary gazes;
 Nor thy soft hands, sweet lips, and crystal eyne,
 Whose full perfection all the world amazes;
 But having thee at vantage—wondrous dread!— 635
 Would root these beauties as he roots the mead.
 'O, let him keep his loathsome cabin still!
 Beauty hath nought to do with such foul fiends.
 Come not within his danger by thy will.
 They that thrive well take counsel of their friends. 640
 When thou didst name the boar, not to dissemble,
 I fear'd thy fortune, and my joints did tremble.
 'Didst thou not mark my face? Was it not white?
 Sawest thou not signs of fear lurk in mine eye?
 Grew I not faint? And fell I not down-right? 645
 Within my bosom, whereon thou dost lie,
 My boding heart pants, beats, and takes no rest,
 But, like an earthquake, shakes thee on my breast.
 'For where Love reigns, disturbing Jealousy
 Doth call himself Affection's sentinel; 650
 Gives false alarms, suggesteth mutiny,
 And in a peaceful hour doth cry "Kill, kill!"
 Distemp'ring gentle Love in his desire,
 As air and water do abate the fire.
 'This sour informer, this bate-breeding spy, 655
 This canker that eats up Love's tender spring,
 This carry-tale, dissentious Jealousy,
 That sometime true news, sometime false doth bring,
 Knocks at my heart, and whispers in mine ear,
 That if I love thee I thy death should fear; 660
 'And, more than so, presenteth to mine eye
 The picture of an angry chafing boar,
 Under whose sharp fangs on his back doth lie
 An image like thyself, all stain'd with gore;
 Whose blood upon the fresh flowers being shed 665
 Doth make them droop with grief and hang the head.
 'What should I do, seeing thee so indeed,
 That tremble at th' imagination?

VENUS AND ADONIS

The thought of it doth make my faint heart
bleed,
And fear doth teach it divination : 670
I prophesy thy death, my living sorrow,
If thou encounter with the boar tomorrow.
‘ But if thou needs wilt hunt, be rul’d by
me ;
Uncouple at the timorous flying hare,
Or at the fox which lives by subtlety, 675
Or at the roe which no encounter dare.
Pursue these fearful creatures o’er the downs,
And on thy well-breath’d horse keep with thy hounds.
‘ And when thou hast on foot the purblind
hare,
Mark the poor wretch, to overshoot his troubles, 680
How he outruns the wind, and with what
care
He cranks and crosses with a thousand doubles.
The many musits through the which he goes
Are like a labyrinth to amaze his foes.
‘ Sometime he runs among a flock of sheep,
To make the cunning hounds mistake their smell, 686
And sometime where earth-delving conies
keep,
To stop the loud pursuers in their yell ;
And sometime sorteth with a herd of deer.
Danger deviseth shifts ; wit waits on
fear. 690
‘ For there his smell with others being mingled,
The hot scent-snuffing hounds are driven to doubt,
Ceasing their clamorous cry till they have singled
With much ado the cold fault cleanly out.
Then do they spend their mouths ; echo
replies, 695
As if another chase were in the skies.
‘ By this, poor Wat, far off upon a hill, Stands on his hinder legs with list’ning
ear,
To hearken if his foes pursue him still ;
Anon their loud alarums he doth hear ; 700
And now his grief may be compared well
To one sore sick that hears the passing-bell.
‘ Then shalt thou see the dew-bedabbled
wretch
Turn and return, indenting with the way ;
Each envious briar his weary legs do scratch, 705
Each shadow makes him stop, each murmur stay ;

For misery is trodden on by many,
And being low never reliev’d by any.
‘ Lie quietly and hear a little more ;
Nay, do not struggle, for thou shalt not rise. 710
To make thee hate the hunting of the boar,
Unlike myself thou hear’st me moralize,
Applying this to that, and so to so ;
For love can comment upon every woe.
‘ Where did I leave ? ’ ‘ No matter where ; ’
quoth he 715
‘ Leave me, and then the story aptly ends.
The night is spent.’ ‘ Why, what of that ? ’
quoth she.
‘ I am,’ quoth he ‘ expected of my friends ;
And now ’tis dark, and going I shall fall.’
‘ In night,’ quoth she ‘ desire sees best of all. 720
‘ But if thou fall, O, then imagine this,
The earth in love with thee thy footing trips,
And all is but to rob thee of a kiss.
Rich preys make true-men thieves ; so do thy lips 724
Make modest Dian cloudy and forlorn, Lest she should steal a kiss, and die
forsworn.
‘ Now of this dark night I perceive the
reason :
Cynthia for shame obscures her silver shine, Till forging Nature be condemn’d of treason
For stealing moulds from heaven that were divine, 730
Wherein she fram’d thee in high heaven’s
despite,
To shame the sun by day and her by
night.
‘ And therefore hath she brib’d the Destinies
To cross the curious workmanship of Nature,
To mingle beauty with infirmities, 735
And pure perfection with impure defeature,
Making it subject to the tyranny
Of mad mischances and much misery :
‘ As burning fevers, agues pale and faint, Life-poisoning pestilence, and frenzies
wood, 740
The marrow-eating sickness whose attaint
Disorder breeds by heating of the blood, Surfeits, imposthumes, grief, and damn’d despair,
Swear Nature’s death for framing thee
so fair.
‘ And not the least of all these maladies 745
But in one minute’s fight brings beauty under.
Both favour, savour, hue, and qualities,

Whereat th' impartial gazer late did
wonder,
Are on the sudden wasted, thaw'd, and
done,
As mountain snow melts with the midday
sun. 750

' Therefore, despite of fruitless chastity,
Love-lacking vestals, and self-loving nuns,
That on the earth would breed a scarcity
And barren dearth of daughters and of
sons,

Be prodigal: the lamp that burns by
night 755
Dries up his oil to lend the world his
light.

' What is thy body but a swallowing grave,
Seeming to bury that posterity
Which by the rights of time thou needs must have, 759
If thou destroy them not in dark obscurity?
If so, the world will hold thee in disdain,
Sith in thy pride so fair a hope is slain.

' So in thyself thyself art made away—
A mischief worse than civil home-bred
strife,

Or theirs whose desperate hands themselves
do slay, 765

Or butcher-sire that reaves his son of life.
Foul cank'ring rust the hidden treasure
frets,

But gold that's put to use more gold begets.'

' Nay, then,' quoth Adon 'you will fall
again

Into your idle over-handled theme; 770
The kiss I gave you is bestow'd in vain,
And all in vain you strive against the
stream;

For, by this black-fac'd night, desire's foul nurse,

Your treatise makes me like you worse and worse.

' If love have lent you twenty thousand tongues, 775

And every tongue more moving than your
own,

Bewitching like the wanton mermaid's songs,

Yet from mine ear the tempting tune is blown;

For know, my heart stands armed in mine ear, 779

And will not let a false sound enter there,

' Lest the deceiving harmony should run
Into the quiet closure of my breast;
And then my little heart were quite undone,
In his bedchamber to be barr'd of rest.

No, lady, no; my heart longs not to
groan, 785

But soundly sleeps, while now it sleeps
alone.

' What have you urg'd that I cannot reprove?

The path is smooth that leadeth on to danger;

I hate not love, but your device in love,
That lends embracements unto every stranger. 790

You do it for increase! O strange excuse,
When reason is the bawd to lust's abuse!

' Call it not love, for Love to heaven is fled Since sweating lust on earth usurp'd his
name;

Under whose simple semblance he hath fed
Upon fresh beauty, blotting it with blame;
Which the hot tyrant stains and soon
bereaves, 797

As caterpillars do the tender leaves.

' Love comforteth like sunshine after rain,
But Lust's effect is tempest after sun; 800
Love's gentle spring doth always fresh
remain:

Lust's winter comes ere summer half be
done.

Love surfeits not: Lust like a glutton
dies.

Love is all truth: Lust full of forged lies.

' More I could tell, but more I dare not
say; 805

The text is old, the orator too green.

Therefore, in sadness, now I will away;

My face is full of shame, my heart of teen;
Mine ears that to your wanton talk attended

Do burn themselves for having so offended.' 810

With this he breaketh from the sweet embrace

Of those fair arms which bound him to her
breast,

And homeward through the dark launc
runs apace;

Leaves Love upon her back, deeply distress'd.

Look how a bright star shooteth from the sky, 815

So glides he in the night from Venus' eye

Which after him she darts, as one on shore
Gazing upon a late-embarked friend,

Till the wild waves will have him seen no
more,

Whose ridges with the meeting cloud contend; 820

So did the merciless and pitchy night
Fold in the object that did feed her sight

Whereat amaz'd, as one that unaware Hath dropp'd a precious jewel in the flood

Or stonish'd as night-wand'ers often are Their light blown out in some mistrustful
wood; 825

Even so confounded in the dark she lay
Having lost the fair discovery of her way

VENUS AND ADONIS

And now she beats her heart, whereat it
groans,
That all the neighbour caves, as seeming
troubled, 830
Make verbal repetition of her moans ;
Passion on passion deeply is redoubled :
'Ay me!' she cries, and twenty times,
'Woe, woe!'

And twenty echoes twenty times cry so.
She, marking them, begins a wailing note,
And sings extemporally a woeful ditty—
How love makes young men thrall, and old men dote ; 837
How love is wise in folly, foolish-witty.

Her heavy anthem still concludes in woe,
And still the choir of echoes answer so.
Her song was tedious, and outwore the
night, 841
For lovers' hours are long, though seeming
short ;
If pleas'd themselves, others, they think,
delight
In such-like circumstance, with such-like sport.

Their copious stories, oftentimes begun, End without audience and are never
done. 846

For who hath she to spend the night withal
But idle sounds resembling parasites,
Like shrill-tongu'd tapsters answering every call,
Soothing the humour of fantastic wits ? 850
She says "'Tis so' ; they answer all
'Tis so' ;
And would say after her, if she said ' No '.

Lo, here the gentle lark, weary of rest,
From his moist cabinet mounts up on high,
And wakes the morning, from whose silver
breast 855

The sun ariseth in his majesty ;
Who doth the world so gloriously behold
That cedar-tops and hills seem burnish'd
gold.

Venus salutes him with this fair good-
morrow : 859
'O thou clear god, and patron of all light,
From whom each lamp and shining star
doth borrow

The beauteous influence that makes him
bright,
There lives a son that suck'd an earthly
mother
May lend thee light, as thou dost lend to other '.

This said, she hasteth to a myrtle grove, 865
Musing the morning is so much o'erworn,
And yet she hears no tidings of her love ;
She hearkens for his hounds and for his horn.

Anon she hears them chant it lustily,
And all in haste she coasteth to the cry.

And as she runs, the bushes in the way
Some catch her by the neck, some kiss her
face, 872
Some twine about her thigh to make her
stay ;

She wildly breaketh from their strict
embrace,
Like a milch doe whose swelling dugs
do ache 875
Hasting to feed her fawn hid in some brake.

By this, she hears the hounds are at a bay ;
Whereat she starts, like one that spies an adder

Wreath'd up in fatal folds just in his way,
The fear whereof doth make him shake and shudder ; 880
Even so the timorous yelping of the hounds
Appals her senses and her spirit con-founds.

For now she knows it is no gentle chase,
But the blunt boar, rough bear, or lion
proud,
Because the cry remaineth in one place, 885
Where fearfully the dogs exclaim aloud.
Finding their enemy to be so curst,
They all strain court'sy who shall cope him first.

This dismal cry rings sadly in her ear,
Through which it enters to surprise her
heart, 890

Who, overcome by doubt and bloodless
fear,

With cold-pale weakness numbs each feeling part ;

Like soldiers, when their captain once
doth yield,

They basely fly and dare not stay the field.

Thus stands she in a trembling ecstasy ; 895
Till, cheering up her senses all dismay'd,
She tells them 'tis a causeless fantasy,
And childish error that they are afraid ;

Bids them leave quaking, bids them fear
no more—

And with that word she spied the hunted
boar, 900

Whose frothy mouth, bepainted all with
red,

Like milk and blood being mingled both
together,

A second fear through all her sinews spread,
Which madly hurries her she knows not whither :

This way she runs, and now she will no
further, 905

But back retires to rate the boar for murder.

A thousand spleens bear her a thousand ways ;

She treads the path that she untreads
again ;
Her more than haste is mated with delays,
Like the proceedings of a drunken brain,
Full of respects, yet nought at all respecting, ⁹¹¹
In hand with all things, nought at all effecting.
Here kennell'd in a brake she finds a hound,
And asks the weary caitiff for his master ;
And there another licking of his wound, ⁹¹⁵
'Gainst venom'd sores the only sovereign plaster ;
And here she meets another sadly scowling,
To whom she speaks, and he replies with howling.
When he hath ceas'd his ill-resounding noise,
Another flap-mouth'd mourner, black and grim, ⁹²⁰
Against the welkin volleys out his voice ;
Another and another answer him,
Clapping their proud tails to the ground
below,
Shaking their scratch'd ears, bleeding as they go.
Look how the world's poor people are amazed ⁹²⁵
At apparitions, signs, and prodigies, Whereon with fearful eyes they long have gazed,
Infusing them with dreadful prophecies ;
So she at these sad signs draws up her breath, ⁹²⁹
And, sighing it again, exclaims on Death.
' Hard-favour'd tyrant, ugly, meagre, lean,
Hateful divorce of love,'—thus chides she
Death—
' Grim-grinning ghost, earth's worm, what dost thou mean
To stifle beauty, and to steal his breath,
Who when he liv'd, his breath and beauty set ⁹³⁵
Gloss on the rose, smell to the violet ?
' If he be dead—O no, it cannot be,
Seeing his beauty, thou shouldst strike
at it.
O yes, it may ; thou hast no eyes to see,
But hatefully at random dost thou hit. ⁹⁴⁰
Thy mark is feeble age ; but thy false dart
Mistakes that aim and cleaves an infant's
heart.
' Hadst thou but bid beware, then he had spoke,
And hearing him thy power had lost his power. ⁹⁴⁴
The Destinies will curse thee for this
stroke :

They bid thee crop a weed ; thou pluck'st a flower.
Love's golden arrow at him should have
fled,
And not Death's ebon dart, to strike him
dead.
' Dost thou drink tears, that thou provok'st such weeping ?
What may a heavy groan advantage thee ?
Why hast thou cast into eternal sleeping
Those eyes that taught all other eyes to see ?
Now Nature cares not for thy mortal vigour,
Since her best work is ruin'd with thy rigour.'
Here overcome, as one full of despair, ⁹⁵⁵
She vail'd her eyelids, who, like sluices, stopp'd
The crystal tide that from her two cheeks
fair
In the sweet channel of her bosom dropp'd ;
But through the floodgates breaks the silver rain,
And with his strong course opens them again. ⁹⁶⁰
O, how her eyes and tears did lend and borrow !
Her eye seen in the tears, tears in her eye ;
Both crystals, where they view'd each other's sorrow—
Sorrow that friendly sighs sought still to
dry ;
But like a stormy day, now wind, now rain, ⁹⁶⁵
Sighs dry her cheeks, tears make them wet again.
Variable passions throng her constant woe,
As striving who should best become her
grief ;
All entertain'd, each passion labours so
That every present sorrow seemeth chief,
But none is best. Then join they all together, ⁹⁷¹
Like many clouds consulting for foul weather.
By this, far off she hears some huntsman hollow ;
A nurse's song ne'er pleas'd her babe so
well.
The dire imagination she did follow ⁹⁷⁵
This sound of hope doth labour to expel ;
For now reviving joy bids her rejoice,
And flatters her it is Adonis' voice.
Whereat her tears began to turn their tide, Being prison'd in her eye like pearls in glass ; ⁹⁸⁰
Yet sometimes falls an orient drop beside.
Which her cheek melts, as scorning it should pass
To wash the foul face of the sluttish
ground,

Who is but drunken when she seemeth
drown'd.

O hard-believing love, how strange it
seems 985

Not to believe, and yet too credulous !

Thy weal and woe are both of them extremes ;

Despair and hope makes thee ridiculous :
The one doth flatter thee in thoughts unlikely,

In likely thoughts the other kills thee
quickly. 990

Now she unweaves the web that she hath
wrought :

Adonis lives, and Death is not to blame ;
It was not she that call'd him all to nought.
Now she adds honours to his hateful name :
She clepes him king of graves, and grave for kings, 995

Imperious supreme of all mortal things.

No, no,' quoth she ' sweet Death, I did but jest ;

Yet pardon me I felt a kind of fear
When as I met the boar, that bloody beast
Which knows no pity but is still severe. 1000

Then, gentle shadow—truth I must confess—

I rail'd on thee, fearing my love's decesse.

'Tis not my fault ; the boar provok'd my
tongue ;

He wreak'd on him, invisible commander ;
Tis he, foul creature, that hath done thee
wrong ; 1005

He did but act ; he's author of thy slander.
Grief hath two tongues, and never woman yet

Could rule them both without ten women's wit.'

Thus, hoping that Adonis is alive,
Her rash suspect she doth extenuate ; 1010

And that his beauty may the better thrive,
With Death she humbly doth insinuate ;
Tells him of trophies, statues, tombs,
and stories

His victories, his triumphs, and his glories.

O Jove,' quoth she ' how much a fool was I 1015

To be of such a weak and silly mind
To wail his death who lives, and must not die

Will mutual overthrow of mortal kind !
For he being dead, with him is beauty
slain,

And, beauty dead, black chaos comes
again. 1020

Fie, fie, fond love, thou art so full of fear
As one with treasure laden, hemm'd with thieves :

Trifles, unwitnessed with eye or ear,
Thy coward heart with false bethinking grieves.'

Even at this word she hears a merry
horn, 1025

Whereat she leaps that was but late forlorn.

As falcons to the lure away she flies ;
The grass stoops not, she treads on it so
light ;

And in her haste unfortunately spies
The foul boar's conquest on her fair
delight ; 1030

Which seen, her eyes, as murd'ed with the view,

Like stars asham'd of day, themselves withdrew ;

Or as the snail, whose tender horns being hit,

Shrinks backward in his shelly cave with pain,

And there, all smoth'ed up, in shade doth sit, 1035

Long after fearing to creep forth again ;
So at his bloody view her eyes are fled
Into the deep-dark cabins of her head ;

Where they resign their office and their
light

To the disposing of her troubled brain ; 1040

Who bids them still consort with ugly
night,

And never wound the heart with looks
again ;

Who, like a king perplexed in his throne,
By their suggestion gives a deadly groan.

Whereat each tributary subject quakes ;
As when the wind, imprison'd in the
ground, 1046

Struggling for passage, earth's foundation shakes,

Which with cold terror doth men's minds confound.

This mutiny each part doth so surprise
That from their dark beds once more leap her eyes ; 1050

And, being open'd, threw unwilling light Upon the wide wound that the boar had trench'd

In his soft flank ; whose wonted lily white With purple tears that his wound wept was drench'd.

No flow'r was nigh, no grass, herb, leaf, or weed, 1055

But stole his blood and seem'd with him to bleed.

This solemn sympathy poor Venus noteth.
Over one shoulder doth she hang her head ;
Dumbly she passions, frantically she doteth ;
She thinks he could not die, he is not dead.
Her voice is stopp'd, her joints forget to bow ; 1061

Her eyes are mad that they have wept till now.

Upon his hurt she looks so steadfastly
That her sight dazzling makes the wound seem three ; 1064

And then she reprehends her mangling eye
That makes more gashes where no breach should be.

His face seems twain, each several limb is doubled ;

For oft the eye mistakes, the brain being troubled.

' My tongue cannot express my grief for
one,

And yet' quoth she ' behold two Adons
dead. 1070

My sighs are blown away, my salt tears
gone,

Mine eyes are turn'd to fire, my heart to lead ;

Heavy heart's lead melt at mine eyes'
red fire !

So shall I die by drops of hot desire.

' Alas, poor world, what treasure hast thou
lost ! 1075

What face remains alive that's worth the viewing ?

Whose tongue is music now ? What canst thou boast

Of things long since, or any thing ensuing ?
The flowers are sweet, their colours fresh and trim ;

But true-sweet beauty liv'd and died
with him. 1080

' Bonnet nor veil henceforth no creature
wear ;

Nor sun nor wind will ever strive to kiss
you :

Having no fair to lose, you need not
fear ;

The sun doth scorn you, and the wind doth hiss you.

But when Adonis liv'd, sun and sharp air Lurk'd like two thieves to rob him of his fair ; 1086

' And therefore would he put his bonnet on,
Under whose brim the gaudy sun would
peep ;

The wind would blow it off, and, being
gone,

Play with his locks. Then would Adonis
weep ; 1090

And straight, in pity of his tender years,
They both would strive who first should dry his tears.

' To see his face the lion walk'd along Behind some hedge, because he would not fear him. 1094

To recreate himself when he hath song,
The tiger would be tame and gently hear
him.

If he had spoke, the wolf would leave his prey,

And never fright the silly lamb that day

' When he beheld his shadow in the brook,
The fishes spread on it their golden gills ;

When he was by, the birds such pleasure took 1101

That some would sing, some other in their bills

Would bring him mulberries and ripe-red cherries ;

He fed them with his sight, they him with berries.

' But this foul, grim, and urchin-snouted
boar, 1105

Whose downward eye still looketh for a grave,

Ne'er saw the beauteous livery that he wore :

Witness the entertainment that he gave.

If he did see his face, why then I know
He thought to kiss him, and hath kill'd him so. 1110

' 'Tis true, 'tis true ; thus was Adonis slain :
He ran upon the boar with his sharp spear,

Who did not whet his teeth at him again,
But by a kiss thought to persuade him
there ;

And nuzzling in his flank, the loving swine 1115

Sheath'd unaware the tusk in his soft groin.

' Had I been tooth'd like him, I must confess,

With kissing him I should have kill'd him
first ;

But he is dead, and never did he bless

My youth with his ; the more am I accurst.
With this, she falleth in the place she stood, 1121

And stains her face with his congeal'd
blood.

She looks upon his lips, and they are pale
She takes him by the hand, and that is cold ;

She whispers in his ears a heavy tale, 1125
As if they heard the woeful words she told ;

She lifts the coffer-lids that close his eyes,
Where, lo, two lamps burnt out in darkness lies ; 1128

Two glasses where herself herself beheld
A thousand times, and now no more reflect,

Their virtue lost wherein they late excell'd,
And every beauty robb'd of his effect.

' Wonder of time,' quoth she ' this is my spite, 1131

That, thou being dead, the day should yet be light.

' Since thou art dead, lo, here I prophesy
Sorrow on love hereafter shall attend :

It shall be waited on with jealousy,

Find sweet beginning but unsavoury end,
Ne'er settled equally, but high or low,
That all love's pleasure shall not match his woe. 1140

'It shall be fickle, false, and full of fraud,
Bud and be blasted in a breathing while,
The bottom poison, and the top o'erstraw'd
With sweets that shall the truest sight
beguile ;

The strongest power shall it make most weak, 1145

Strike the wise dumb, and teach the fool
to speak.

It shall be sparing, and too full of riot, Teaching decrepit age to tread the measures ;

The staring ruffian shall it keep in quiet, Pluck down the rich, enrich the poor with treasures ; 1150

It shall be raging mad, and silly mild,
Make the young old, the old become a child.

It shall suspect where is no cause of
fear ;

It shall not fear where it should most mistrust ;

It shall be merciful, and too severe, 1155
And most deceiving when it seems most
just ;

Perverse it shall be where it shows most toward,

Put fear to valour, courage to the coward.

It shall be cause of war and dire events,
And set dissension 'twixt the son and sire,
Subject and servile to all discontents, 1161
As dry combustious matter is to fire.

Sith in his prime death doth my love
destroy,

They that love best their loves shall not enjoy.' 1164

By this, the boy that by her side lay kill'd
Was melted like a vapour from her sight,

And in his blood that on the ground lay spill'd

A purple flow'r sprung up, check'ed with
white,

Resembling well his pale cheeks, and the blood

Which in round drops upon their whiteness stood. 1170

She bows her head the new-sprung flow'r to smell,

Comparing it to her Adonis' breath ;
And says within her bosom it shall dwell,

Since he himself is reft from her by death ;
She crops the stalk, and in the breach
appears 1175

Green dropping sap, which she compares to tears.

'Poor flow'r,' quoth she 'this was thy father's guise—

Sweet issue of a more sweet-smelling sire—
For every little grief to wet his eyes.

To grow unto himself was his desire, 1180
And so 'tis thine ; but know, it is as good
To wither in my breast as in his blood.

'Here was thy father's bed, here in my
breast ;

Thou art the next of blood, and 'tis thy
right.

Lo, in this hollow cradle take thy rest ; 1185
My throbbing heart shall rock thee day and
night ;

There shall not be one minute in an hour
Wherein I will not kiss my sweet love's flow'r.'

Thus weary of the world, away she hies,
And yokes her silver doves ; by whose swift aid 1190

Their mistress, mounted, through the empty skies

In her light chariot quickly is convey'd, Holding their course to Paphos, where their queen

Means to immure herself, and not be seen.

THE RAPE OF LUCRECE

TO THE
RIGHT HONOURABLE HENRY WRIOTHESLEY,
EARLE OF SOUTHAMPTON, AND BARON OF TITCHFIELD.

THE love I dedicate to your Lordship is without end : wherof this Pamphlet without beginning is but a superfluous Moity. The warrant I have of your Honourable disposition, not the worth of my untutored Lines makes it assured of acceptance. What I have done is yours, what I have to doe is yours, being part in all I have, devoted yours. Were my worth greater my duty would shew greater, meane time, as it is, it is bound to your Lordship ; To whom I wish long life still lengthned with all happinesse.

Your Lordships in all duty.

WILLIAM SHAKESPEARE.

THE ARGUMENT.

LUCIUS TARQUINIUS (for his excessive pride surnamed Superbus), after he had caused his own father-in-law, Servius Tullius, to be cruelly murd'ed, and, contrary to the Roman laws and customs, not requiring or staying for the people's suffrages, had possessed himself of the kingdom, went, accompanied with his sons and other noblemen of Rome, to besiege Ardea ; during which siege, the principal men of the army meeting one evening at the tent of Sextus Tarquinius, the King's son, in their discourses after supper every one commended the virtues of his own wife ; among whom Collatinus extolled the incomparable chastity of his wife Lucretia. In that pleasant humour they all posted to Rome ; and intending by their secret and sudden arrival to make trial of that which every one had before avouched, only Collatinus finds his wife (though it were late in the night) spinning amongst her maids ; the other ladies were all found dancing and revelling, or in several disports. Whereupon the noblemen yielded Collatinus the victory, and his wife the fame. At that time Sextus Tarquinius, being inflamed with Lucrece' beauty, yet smothering his passions for the present, departed with the rest back to the camp ; from whence he shortly after privily withdrew himself, and was (according to his estate) royally entertained and lodged by Lucrece at Collatium. The same night he treacherously stealeth into her chamber, violently ravish'd her, and early in the morning speedeth away. Lucrece, in this lamentable plight, hastily dispatcheth messengers, one to Rome for her father, another to the camp for Collatine. They came, the one accompanied with Junius Brutus, the other with Publius Valerius ; and, finding Lucrece attired in mourning habit, demanded the cause of her sorrow. She, first taking an oath of them for her revenge, revealed the actor and whole manner of his dealing, and withal suddenly stabbed herself. Which done, with one consent they all vowed to root out the whole hated family of the Tarquins ; and, bearing the dead body to Rome, Brutus acquainted the people with the doer and manner of the vile deed, with a bitter invective against the tyranny of the King ; wherewith the people were so moved, that with one consent and a general acclamation the Tarquins were all exiled, and the state government changed from kings to consuls.

From the besieged Ardea all in post,
Borne by the trustless wings of false desire,
Lust-breathed Tarquin leaves the Roman
host,

And to Collatium bears the lightless fire
Which, in pale embers hid, lurks to aspire ;
And girdle with embracing flames the waist

Of Collatine's fair love, Lucrece the chaste.

Haply that name of ' chaste ' unhap'ly set
This bateless edge on his keen appetite ;

When Collatine unwisely did not let To praise the clear unmatched red and
white

Which triumph'd in that sky of his delight,
Where mortal stars, as bright as heaven's beauties,
With pure aspects did him peculiar duties.

For he the night before, in Tarquin's tent,
Unlock'd the treasure of his happy state—
What priceless wealth the heavens had him lent

THE RAPE OF LUCRECE

In the possession of his beauteous mate ;
Reck'ning his fortune at such high-proud rate,

That kings might be espoused to more fame, 20
But king nor peer to such a peerless dame.

O happiness enjoy'd but of a few !
And, if possess'd, as soon decay'd and done
As is the morning's silver-melting dew 24
Against the golden splendour of the sun !
An expir'd date, cancell'd ere well begun :
Honour and beauty, in the owner's arms,
Are weakly fortress'd from a world of harms.

Beauty itself doth of itself persuade
The eyes of men without an orator ; 30
What needeth then apologies be made
To set forth that which is so singular ?
Or why is Collatine the publisher
Of that rich jewel he should keep unknown 34

From thievish ears, because it is his own ?

Perchance his boast of Lucrece' sov'reignty
Suggested this proud issue of a king ;
For by our ears our hearts oft tainted be.
Perchance that envy of so rich a thing,
Braving compare, disdainfully did sting 40
His high-pitch'd thoughts that meaner men should vaunt
That golden hap which their superiors
want.

But some untimely thought did instigate
His all-too-timeless speed, if none of those.
His honour, his affairs, his friends, his state,
Neglected all, with swift intent he goes 46
To quench the coal which in his liver glows.
O rask false heat, wrapp'd in repentant
cold,
Thy hasty spring still blasts and ne'er grows old ! 49

When at Collatium this false lord arrived,
Well was he welcom'd by the Roman dame,
Within whose face beauty and virtue strived
Which of them both should underprop her
fame :

When virtue bragg'd, beauty would blush
for shame ;
When beauty boasted blushes, in despite Virtue would stain that o'er with silver
white. 56

But beauty, in that white intituled,
From Venus' doves doth challenge that fair
field ;
Then virtue claims from beauty beauty's
red,
Which virtue gave the golden age to gild 60
Their silver cheeks, and call'd it then their shield ;
Teaching them thus to use it in the fight,

When shame assail'd, the red should fence the white.

This heraldry in Lucrece' face was seen, Argued by beauty's red and virtue's
white ; 65
Of either's colour was the other queen,
Proving from world's minority their right ;
Yet their ambition makes them still to fight,
The sovereignty of either being so great That oft they interchange each other's seat. 70

This silent war of lilies and of roses
Which Tarquin view'd in her fair face's
field,

In their pure ranks his traitor eye encloses ;
Where, lest between them both it should be
kill'd, 74

The coward captive vanquished doth yield
To those two armies that would let him
go

Rather than triumph in so false a foe.

Now thinks he that her husband's shallow
tongue—

The niggard prodigal that prais'd her so—
In that high task hath done her beauty
wrong, 80

Which far exceeds his barren skill to show ;
Therefore that praise which Collatine doth owe

Enchanted Tarquin answers with surmise,

In silent wonder of still-gazing eyes.

This earthly saint, adored by this devil, 85
Little suspecteth the false worshipper ;
For unstain'd thoughts do seldom dream
on evil ;

Birds never lim'd no secret bushes fear.
So guiltless she securely gives good cheer
And reverend welcome to her princely
guest, 90

Whose inward ill no outward harm
express'd ;

For that he colour'd with his high estate,
Hiding base sin in pleats of majesty ;
That nothing in him seem'd inordinate, 94
Save sometime too much wonder of his eye,
Which, having all, all could not satisfy ;
But, poorly rich, so wanteth in his store
That cloy'd with much he pineth still for
more.

But she that never cop'd with stranger eyes
Could pick no meaning from their parling
looks, 100

Nor read the subtle-shining secrecies
Writ in the glassy margents of such books.
She touch'd no unknown baits, nor fear'd
no hooks ;

Nor could she moralize his wanton sight,
More than his eyes were open'd to the
light. 105

THE RAPE OF LUCRECE

He stories to her ears her husband's fame,
 Won in the fields of fruitful Italy ;
 And decks with praises Collatine's high
 name,
 Made glorious by his manly chivalry,
 With bruised arms and wreaths of victory.
 Her joy with heav'd-up hand she doth express, ¹¹¹
 And, wordless, so greets heaven for his success.

Far from the purpose of his coming thither
 He makes excuses for his being there.
 No cloudy show of stormy blust'ring weather ¹¹⁵
 Doth yet in his fair welkin once appear ;
 Till sable Night, mother of Dread and Fear, Upon the world dim darkness doth display,
 And in her vaulty prison stows the Day.

For then is Tarquin brought unto his bed,
 Intending weariness with heavy sprite ;
 For, after supper, long he questioned ¹²²
 With modest Lucrece, and wore out the
 night.
 Now leaden slumber with life's strength
 doth fight ;
 And every one to rest themselves betake,
 Save thieves, and cares, and troubled minds that wake. ¹²⁶

As one of which doth Tarquin lie revolving
 The sundry dangers of his will's obtaining ;
 Yet ever to obtain his will resolving,
 Though weak-built hopes persuade him to abstaining ; ¹³⁰
 Despair to gain doth traffic oft for gaining ;
 And when great treasure is the meed proposed,
 Though death be adjunct, there's no death supposed.

Those that much covet are with gain so fond
 That what they have not, that which they possess ¹³⁵
 They scatter and unloose it from their bond,
 And so, by hoping more, they have but less ;
 Or, gaining more, the profit of excess
 Is but to surfeit, and such griefs sustain
 That they prove bankrupt in this poor-rich gain. ¹⁴⁰

The aim of all is but to nurse the life
 With honour, wealth, and ease in waning
 age ;
 And in this aim there is such thwarting
 strife
 That one for all or all for one we gage :
 As life for honour in fell battle's rage ; ¹⁴⁵ Honour for wealth ; and oft that wealth doth cost
 The death of all, and all together lost.

So that in vent'ring ill we leave to be
 The things we are for that which we expect ;
 1286

And this ambitious foul infirmity, ¹⁵⁰
 In having much, torments us with defect
 Of that we have ; so then we do neglect
 The thing we have and, all for want of
 wit,
 Make something nothing by augmenting
 it.

Such hazard now must doting Tarquin make, ¹⁵⁵
 Pawning his honour to obtain his lust ;
 And for himself himself he must forsake—
 Then where is truth if there be no self-trust ?
 When shall he think to find a stranger just,
 When he himself himself confounds,
 betrays ¹⁶⁰
 To sland'rous tongues and wretched hateful days ?

Now stole upon the time the dead of night,
 When heavy sleep had clos'd up mortal
 eyes ;
 No comfortable star did lend his light,
 No noise but owls' and wolves' death-boding cries ; ¹⁶⁵
 Now serves the season that they may surprise
 The silly lambs. Pure thoughts are dead and still,
 While lust and murder wake to stain and kill.

And now this lustful lord leap'd from his bed, ¹⁶⁹
 Throwing his mantle rudely o'er his arm ;
 Is madly toss'd between desire and dread ;
 Th' one sweetly flatters, th' other feareth harm ;
 But honest Fear, bewitch'd with lust's foul charm, ¹⁷³
 Doth too too oft betake him to retire,
 Beaten away by brain-sick rude desire.

His falchion on a flint he softly smiteth,
 That from the cold stone sparks of fire do
 fly, Whereat a waxen torch forthwith he lighteth,
 Which must be lode-star to his lustful eye ;
 And to the flame thus speaks advisedly : ¹⁸⁰
 ' As from this cold flint I enforc'd this
 fire,

So Lucrece must I force to my desire '.

Here pale with fear he doth premeditate
 The dangers of his loathsome enterprise,
 And in his inward mind he doth debate ¹⁸⁵
 What following sorrow may on this arise ;
 Then, looking scornfully, he doth despise
 His naked armour of still-slaughtered lust,
 And justly thus controls his thoughts
 unjust :

' Fair torch, burn out thy light, and lend it not ¹⁹⁰

- THE RAPE OF LUCRECE.

To darken her whose light excelleth thine ;
And die, unhallowed thoughts, before you blot

With your uncleanness that which is divine ;
Offer pure incense to so pure a shrine :
Let fair humanity abhor the deed 195
That spots and stains love's modest snow-white weed.

' O shame to knighthood and to shining
arms !

O foul dishonour to my household's grave !
O impious act including all foul harms !

A martial man to be soft fancy's slave ! 200
True valour still a true respect should have ;
Then my digression is so vile, so base,
That it will live engraven in my face.

' Yea, though I die, the scandal will survive
And be an eyesore in my golden coat ; 205
Some loathsome dash the herald will contrive

To cipher me how fondly I did dote ;
That my posterity, sham'd with the note, Shall curse my bones, and hold it for no sin 209

To wish that I their father had not been.

' What win I if I gain the thing I seek ?
A dream, a breath, a froth of fleeting joy.
Who buys a minute's mirth to wait a week ?
Or sells eternity to get a toy ?
For one sweet grape who will the vine
destroy ? 215

Or what fond beggar, but to touch the crown,
Would with the sceptre straight be strucken down ?

If Collatinus dream of my intent, 218
Will he not wake, and in a desp'rate rage
Post hither, this vile purpose to prevent—
This siege that hath engirt his marriage,
This blur to youth, this sorrow to the sage,
This dying virtue, this surviving shame, Whose crime will bear an ever-during blame ?

O, what excuse can my invention make When thou shalt charge me with so black a deed ? 226

Will not my tongue be mute, my frail joints
shake,

Mine eyes forgo their light, my false heart
bleed ?

The guilt being great, the fear doth still exceed ;

And extreme fear can neither fight nor
fly, 230

But coward-like with trembling terror
die.

Had Collatinus kill'd my son or sire,
Or lain in ambush to betray my life,
Or were he not my dear friend, this desire
Might have excuse to work upon his wife,
As in revenge or quittal of such strife ;

But as he is my kinsman, my dear friend,
The shame and fault finds no excuse nor
end. 238

' Shameful it is—ay, if the fact be known ;
Hateful it is—there is no hate in loving ;
I'll beg her love—but she is not her own—
The worst is but denial and reproving.
My will is strong, past reason's weak removing—

Who fears a sentence or an old man's saw
Shall by a painted cloth be kept in awe.'

Thus, graceless, holds he disputation 246
'Tween frozen conscience and hot-burning
will,

And with good thoughts makes dispensation,

Urging the worser sense for vantage still ;
Which in a moment doth confound and kill
All pure effects, and doth so far proceed
That what is vile shows like a virtuous
deed.

Quoth he ' She took me kindly by the hand
And gaz'd for tidings in my eager eyes, Fearing some hard news from the warlike band 255

Where her beloved Collatinus lies.

O how her fear did make her colour rise !
First red as roses that on lawn we lay,
Then white as lawn, the roses took away.

' And how her hand in my hand being lock'd 260

Forc'd it to tremble with her loyal fear !
Which struck her sad, and then it faster rock'd

Until her husband's welfare she did hear ;
Whereat she smiled with so sweet a cheer
That had Narcissus seen her as she stood Self-love had never drown'd him in the flood. 266

' Why hunt I then for colour or excuses ?
All orators are dumb when beauty pleadeth ;

Poor wretches have remorse in poor abuses ;
Love thrives not in the heart that shadows
dreadeth ; 270

Affection is my captain, and he leadeth ;
And when his gaudy banner is display'd,
The coward fights and will not be dis-may'd.

' Then, childish fear avaunt ! debating die !
Respect and reason wait on wrinkled age !
My heart shall never countermand mine
eye ; 276

Sad pause and deep regard beseems the sage ;

My part is youth, and beats these from the stage :

Desire my pilot is, beauty my prize ;
Then who fears sinking where such treasure lies ? ' 280

THE RAPE OF LUCRECE

As corn o'ergrown by weeds, so heedful fear
Is almost chok'd by unresisted lust.
Away he steals with open list'ning ear,
Full of foul hope, and full of fond mistrust ;
Both which, as servitors to the unjust, ²⁸⁵
So cross him with their opposite persuasion
That now he vows a league, and now invasion.

Within his thought her heavenly image sits,
And in the selfsame seat sits Collatine.
That eye which looks on her confounds his wits ; ²⁹⁰
That eye which him beholds, as more
divine,
Unto a view so false will not incline ;
But with a pure appeal seeks to the heart,
Which once corrupted takes the worser part ; ²⁹⁴

And therein heartens up his servile powers,
Who, flatt'ed by their leader's jocund
show,
Stuff up his lust, as minutes fill up hours ;
And as their captain, so their pride doth grow,
Paying more slavish tribute than they owe.
By reprobate desire thus madly led, ³⁰⁰
The Roman lord marcheth to Lucrece'
bed.

The locks between her chamber and his
will,
Each one by him enforc'd, retires his ward ;
But, as they open, they all rate his ill,
Which drives the creeping thief to some regard. ³⁰⁵
The threshold grates the door to have him
heard ;
Night-wand'ring weasels shriek to see him there ;
They fright him, yet he still pursues his
fear.

As each unwilling portal yields him way, Through little vents and crannies of the place ³¹⁰
The wind wars with his torch, to make him
stay,
And blows the smoke of it into his face,
Extinguishing his conduct in this case ;
But his hot heart, which fond desire doth scorch,
Puffs forth another wind that fires the torch ; ³¹⁵

And, being lighted, by the light he spies
Lucretia's glove, wherein her needle sticks ;
He takes it from the rushes where it lies,
And griping it, the needle his finger pricks,
As who should say ' This glove to wanton tricks ³²⁰
Is not inur'd. Return again in haste ; Thou seest our mistress' ornaments are chaste '.

But all these poor forbiddings could not stay him ;
He in the worst sense consters their denial :
The doors, the wind, the glove that did delay him, ³²⁵
He takes for accidental things of trial ;
Or as those bars which stop the hourly dial,
Who with a ling'ring stay his course doth
let,

Till every minute pays the hour his debt.
' So, so,' quoth he ' these lets attend the time, ³³⁰
Like little frosts that sometime threat the spring,
To add a more rejoicing to the prime,
And give the sneaped birds more cause to sing.
Pain pays the income of each precious
thing :
Huge rocks, high winds, strong pirates, shelves and sands, ³³⁵
The merchant fears, ere rich at home he lands.'

Now is he come unto the chamber door
That shuts him from the heaven of his
thought,
Which with a yielding latch, and with no
more,
Hath barr'd him from the blessed thing he sought. ³⁴⁰
So from himself impiety hath wrought
That for his prey to pray he doth begin,
As if the heavens should countenance his sin.

But in the midst of his unfruitful prayer,
Having solicited th' eternal power, ³⁴⁵
That his foul thoughts might compass his fair fair,
And they would stand auspicious to the
hour,
Even there he starts—quoth he ' I must deflow'r.
The powers to whom I pray abhor this fact ; ³⁴⁹
How can they then assist me in the act

' Then Love and Fortune be my gods, my guide !
My will is back'd with resolution.
Thoughts are but dreams till their effects be tried ;
The blackest sin is clear'd with absolution :
Against love's fire fear's frost hath dissolution. ³⁵⁵
The eye of heaven is out, and misty night
Covers the shame that follows sweet delight '.

This said, his guilty hand pluck'd up the latch,
And with his knee the door he opens wide.
The dove sleeps fast that this night-owl will catch. ³⁶⁰

THE RAPE OF LUCRECE

Thus treason works ere traitors be espied.
Who sees the lurking serpent steps aside ;
But she, sound sleeping, fearing no such
thing,
Lies at the mercy of his mortal sting.

Into the chamber wickedly he stalks, 365
And gazeth on her yet unstained bed.
The curtains being close, about he walks,
Rolling his greedy eyeballs in his head.
By their high treason is his heart misled,
Which gives the watchword to his hand full soon 370
To draw the cloud that hides the silver
moon.

Look as the fair and fiery-pointed sun, Rushing from forth a cloud, bereaves our
sight ;
Even so, the curtain drawn, his eyes begun
To wink, being blinded with a greater light ;
Whether it is that she reflects so bright
That dazzleth them, or else some shame supposed ; 377
But blind they are, and keep themselves
enclosed.

O, had they in that darksome prison died,
Then had they seen the period of their ill ! 380

Then Collatine again by Lucrece' side
In his clear bed might have reposed still ;
But they must ope, this blessed league to
kill ;
And holy-thoughted Lucrece to their
sight
Must sell her joy, her life, her world's
delight. 385

Her lily hand her rosy cheek lies under,
Coz'ning the pillow of a lawful kiss ;
Who, therefore angry, seems to part in sunder,
Swelling on either side to want his bliss ;
Between whose hills her head entombed is ;
Where, like a virtuous monument, she lies, 391
To be admir'd of lewd unhallowed eyes.

Without the bed her other fair hand was,
On the green coverlet ; whose perfect white
Show'd like an April daisy on the grass, 395
With pearly sweat, resembling dew of night.
Her eyes, like marigolds, had sheath'd their
light,
And canopied in darkness sweetly lay,
Till they might open to adorn the day.

Her hair, like golden threads, play'd with her breath— 400
O modest wantons ! wanton modesty !—
Showing life's triumph in the map of death,
And death's dim look in life's mortality.
Each in her sleep themselves so beautify,
As if between them twain there were no
strife, 405

But that life liv'd in death, and death in life.

Her breasts, like ivory globes circled with
blue,
A pair of maiden worlds unconquered, Save of their lord no bearing yoke they knew,
And him by oath they truly honoured. 410
These worlds in Tarquin new ambition
bred,
Who like a foul usurper went about
From this fair throne to heave the owner
out.

What could he see but mightily he noted ?
What did he note but strongly he desired ?
What he beheld, on that he firmly doted,
And in his will his wilful eye he tired. 417
With more than admiration he admired
Her azure veins, her alabaster skin,
Her coral lips, her snow-white dimpled
chin. 420

As the grim lion fawneth o'er his prey,
Sharp hunger by the conquest satisfied,
So o'er this sleeping soul doth Tarquin stay,
His rage of lust by gazing qualified ; Slack'd, not suppress'd ; for standing by her side, 425

His eye, which late this mutiny restrains,
Unto a greater uproar tempts his veins ;
And they, like stragglng slaves for pillage
fighting,
Obdurate vassals, fell exploits effecting,
In bloody death and ravishment delighting,
Nor children's tears nor mothers' groans respecting, 431

Swell in their pride, the onset still expecting.
Anon his beating heart, alarum striking,
Gives the hot charge and bids them do their liking.

His drumming heart cheers up his burning
eye, 435
His eye commends the leading to his hand ;
His hand, as proud of such a dignity, Smoking with pride, march'd on to make his stand

On her bare breast, the heart of all her land ;
Whose ranks of blue veins, as his hand did scale, 440
Left their round turrets destitute and pale.

They, must'ring to the quiet cabinet
Where their dear governess and lady lies,
Do tell her she is dreadfully beset ; 444
And fright her with confusion of their cries :
She, much amaz'd, breaks ope her lock'dup eyes,
Who, peeping forth this tumult to be-
hold,
Are by his flaming torch dimm'd and controll'd.

THE RAPE OF LUCRECE

Imagine her as one in dead of night
From forth dull sleep by dreadful fancy waking, 450
That thinks she hath beheld some ghastly sprite
Whose grim aspect sets every joint a-shaking—

What terror 'tis ! but she, in worsè taking,
From sleep disturbed, heedfully doth view
The sight which makes supposed terror
true. 455

Wrapp'd and confounded in a thousand
fears,

Like to a new-kill'd bird she trembling lies ;
She dares not look ; yet, winking, there appears

Quick-shifting antics, ugly in her eyes.
Such shadows are the weak brain's forgeries, 460

Who, angry that the eyes fly from their lights,

In darkness daunts them with more dreadful sights.

His hand, that yet remains upon her
breast—

Rude ram, to batter such an ivory wall !—
May feel her heart, poor citizen, distress'd,
Wounding itself to death, rise up and fall, Beating her bulk, that his hand shakes
withal. 467

This moves in him more rage and lesser
pity,

To make the breach and enter this sweet city.

First like a trumpet doth his tongue begin
To sound a parley to his heartless foe, 471
Who o'er the white sheet peers her whiter
chin,

The reason of this rash alarm to know,
Which he by dumb demeanour seeks to
show ;

But she with vehement prayers urgeth
still 475

Under what colour he commits this ill.

Thus he replies : ' The colour in thy face,
That even for anger makes the lily pale
And the red rose blush at her own disgrace,
Shall plead for me and tell my loving tale.
Under that colour am I come to scale 481

Thy never-conquered fort. The fault is
thine,

For those thine eyes betray thee unto
mine.

' Thus I forestall thee, if thou mean to chide : 484

Thy beauty hath ensnar'd thee to this night, Where thou with patience must my will abide,

My will that marks thee for my earth's
delight,

Which I to conquer sought with all my
might ; 488

But as reproof and reason beat it dead,
By thy bright beauty was it newly bred.

' I see what crosses my attempt will bring ;
I know what thorns the growing rose defends ;

I think the honey guarded with a sting :
All this beforehand counsel comprehends
But Will is deaf and hears no heedful
friends ; 495

Only he hath an eye to gaze on beauty,
And dotes on what he looks, 'gainst law or duty.

' I have debated, even in my soul,
What wrong, what shame, what sorrow I shall breed ; 499

But nothing can Affection's course control,
Or stop the headlong fury of his speed.

I know repentant tears ensue the deed,
Reproach, disdain, and deadly enmity ;
Yet strive I to embrace mine infamy'.

This said, he shakes aloft his Roman blade,
Which, like a falcon tow'ring in the skies,
Coucheth the fowl below with his wings'
shade,

Whose crooked beak threats if he mount he dies.

So under his insulting falchion lies 509
Harmless Lucretia, marking what he tells With trembling fear, as fowl hear falcon's bells.

' Lucrece,' quoth he ' this night I must enjoy thee.

If thou deny, then force must work my way,
For in thy bed I purpose to destroy thee ;
That done, some worthless slave of thine
I'll slay, 515

To kill thine honour with thy life's decay ;
And in thy dead arms do I mean to place
him,

Swearing I slew him, seeing thee embrace
him.

' So thy surviving husband shall remain
The scornful mark of every open eye ; 520 Thy kinsmen hang their heads at this disdain,

Thy issue blurr'd with nameless bastardy ;
And thou, the author of their obloquy, Shalt have thy trespass cited up in rhymes,

And sung by children in succeeding
times. 525

' But if thou yield, I rest thy secret friend :
The fault unknown is as a thought unacted ;
A little harm done to a great good end
For lawful policy remains enacted.

The poisonous simple sometime is compacted 530

In a pure compound ; being so applied,
His venom in effect is purified.

' Then, for thy husband and thy children's sake,

Tender my suit ; bequeath not to their lot
The shame that from them no device can take, 535

The blemish that will never be forgot ;
Worse than a slavish wipe or birth-hour's
blot ;

For marks descried in men's nativity Are nature's faults, not their own infamy.'

Here with a cockatrice' dead-killing eye 540
He rouseth up himself, and makes a pause ;
While she, the picture of pure piety,
Like a white hind under the grype's sharp
claws,

Pleads, in a wilderness where are no
laws,

To the rough beast that knows no gentle
right, 545

Nor aught obeys but his foul appetite.

But when a black-fac'd cloud the world
doth threat,

In his dim mist th' aspiring mountains
hiding,

From earth's dark womb some gentle gust doth get,

Which blows these pitchy vapours from their biding, 550

Hind'ring their present fall by this dividing ;

So his unhallowed haste her words delays,

And moody Pluto winks while Orpheus plays.

Yet, foul night-waking cat, he doth but dally,

While in his holdfast foot the weak mouse
panteth ; 555

Her sad behaviour feeds his vulture folly,
A swallowing gulf that even in plenty wanteth ;

His ear her prayers admits, but his heart
granteth

No penetrable entrance to her plaining.
Tears harden lust, though marble wear with raining. 560

Her pity-pleading eyes are sadly fixed
In the remorseless wrinkles of his face ;

Her modest eloquence with sighs is mixed,
Which to her oratory adds more grace.

She puts the period often from his place,
And midst the sentence so her accent
breaks 566

That twice she doth begin ere once she speaks.

She conjures him by high almighty Jove,
By knighthood, gentry, and sweet friend-ship's oath, 569

By her untimely tears, her husband's love,
By holy human law, and common troth,

By heaven and earth, and all the power of
both,

That to his borrowed bed he make retire,
And stoop to honour, not to foul desire.

Quoth she ' Reward not hospitality 575
With such black payment as thou hast pretended ;

Mud not the fountain that gave drink to
thee ;

Mar not the thing that cannot be amended ;
End thy ill aim before thy shoot be ended.

He is no woodman that doth bend his
bow 580

To strike a poor unseasonable doe.

' My husband is thy friend—for his sake spare me ;

Thyself art mighty—for thine own sake
leave me ;

Myself a weakling—do not then ensnare me ;
Thou look'st not like deceit—do not deceive
me. 585

My sighs like whirlwinds labour hence to heave thee.

If ever man were mov'd with woman's moans,

Be moved with my tears, my sighs, my groans ;

' All which together, like a troubled ocean,
Beat at thy rocky and wrack-threat'ning
heart ; 590

To soften it with their continual motion ;
For stones dissolv'd to water do convert.

O, if no harder than a stone thou art,
Melt at my tears, and be compassionate !

Soft pity enters at an iron gate. 595

' In Tarquin's likeness I did entertain thee ;
Hast thou put on his shape to do him
shame ?

To all the host of heaven I complain me Thou wrong'st his honour, wound'st his princely name.

Thou art not what thou seem'st ; and if the same, 600

Thou seem'st not what thou art, a god,
a king ;

For kings like gods should govern everything.

' How will thy shame be seeded in thine
age,

When thus thy vices bud before thy spring !
If in thy hope thou dar'st do such outrage,

What dar'st thou not when once thou art a
king ? 606

O, be rememb'ed, no outrageous thing
From vassal actors can be wip'd away ;

Then kings' misdeeds cannot be hid in clay.

' This deed will make thee only lov'd for
fear, 610

But happy monarchs still are fear'd for
love ;

With foul offenders thou perforce must
 bear,
 When they in thee the like offences prove.
 If but for fear of this, thy will remove ;
 For princes are the glass, the school, the
 book,
 Where subjects' eyes do learn, do read,
 do look. 616

' And wilt thou be the school where Lust shall learn ?
 Must he in thee read lectures of such
 shame ?

Wilt thou be glass wherein it shall discern Authority for sin, warrant for blame, 620
 To privilege dishonour in thy name ?

Thou back'st reproach against long-living laud,

And mak'st fair reputation but a bawd.

' Hast thou command ? By him that gave it thee, 624

From a pure heart command thy rebel will ;
 Draw not thy sword to guard iniquity,
 For it was lent thee all that brood to kill.

Thy princely office how canst thou fulfil,
 When, pattern'd by thy fault, foul Sin may say

He learn'd to sin and thou didst teach
 the way ? 630

' Think but how vile a spectacle it were
 To view thy present trespass in another.
 Men's faults do seldom to themselves
 appear ;

Their own transgressions partially they smother :

This guilt would seem death-worthy in thy
 brother. 635

O, how are they wrapp'd in with infamies
 That from their own misdeeds askance their eyes !

' To thee, to thee, my heav'd-up hands
 appeal,

Not to seducing lust, thy rash relier ;
 I sue for exil'd majesty's repeal ; 640

Let him return and flatt'ring thoughts retire :

His true respect will prison false desire,
 And wipe the dim mist from thy doting
 eyne,

That thou shalt see thy state, and pity
 mine '.

' Have done ; ' quoth he ' my uncontrolled
 tide 645

Turns not, but swells the higher by this let.
 Small lights are soon blown out ; huge fires
 abide,

And with the wind in greater fury fret.
 The petty streams that pay a daily debt

To their salt sovereign, with their fresh falls' haste, 650

Add to his flow, but alter not his taste.'

' Thou art ' quoth she ' a sea, a sovereign
 king ;

And, lo, there falls into thy boundless flood Black lust, dishonour, shame, misgovern-
 ing, 654

Who seek to stain the ocean of thy blood.
 If all these petty ills shall change thy good, Thy sea within a puddle's womb is hearsed,

And not the puddle in thy sea dispersed

' So shall these slaves be king, and thou their slave ;

Thou nobly base, they basely dignified ; 660 Thou their fair life, and they thy fouler
 grave ;

Thou loathed in their shame, they in thy
 pride.

The lesser thing should not the greater hide ;
 The cedar stoops not to the base shrub's
 foot, 664

But low shrubs wither at the cedar's root.

' So let thy thoughts, low vassals to thy
 state '—

' No more ; ' quoth he ' by heaven, I will not hear thee !

Yield to my love ; if not, enforced hate,
 Instead of love's coy touch, shall rudely tear thee ; 669

That done, despitefully I mean to bear thee
 Unto the base bed of some rascal groom,
 To be thy partner in this shameful doom.'

This said, he sets his foot upon the light,
 For light and lust are deadly enemies ; 674
 Shame folded up in blind concealing night,
 When most unseen, then most doth tyrannize.

The wolf hath seiz'd his prey ; the poor lamb cries

Till with her own white fleece her voice
 controll'd

Entombs her outcry in her lips' sweet fold ; 679

For with the nightly linen that she wears
 He pens her piteous clamours in her head.
 Cooling his hot face in the chastest tears
 That ever modest eyes with sorrow shed.
 O, that prone lust should stain so pure a
 bed ! 684

The spots whereof could weeping purify,
 Her tears should drop on them perpetually.

But she hath lost a dearer thing than
 life,

And he hath won what he would lose again.
 This forced league doth force a further
 strife, 688

This momentary joy breeds months of pain,
 This hot desire converts to cold disdain ;

Pure Chastity is rifled of her store,
 And Lust, the thief, far poorer than
 before.

THE RAPE OF LUCRECE

Look as the full-fed hound or gorged hawk,
Unapt for tender smell or speedy flight, 695
Make slow pursuit, or altogether bauk
The prey wherein by nature they delight ;
So surfeit-taking Tarquin fares this night :
His taste delicious, in digestion souring, Devours his will, that liv'd by foul devouring. 700

O, deeper sin than bottomless conceit
Can comprehend in still imagination !
Drunken Desire must vomit his receipt,
Ere he can see his own abomination. 704
While Lust is in his pride, no exclamation
Can curb his heat or rein his rash desire,
Till, like a jade, Self-will himself doth tire.

And then with lank and lean discolour'd
cheek,
With heavy eye, knit brow, and strength-less pace, 709
Feeble Desire, all recreant, poor, and meek,
Like to a bankrupt beggar wails his case.
The flesh being proud, Desire doth fight with Grace,
For there it revels ; and when that
decays,
The guilty rebel for remission prays. 714

So fares it with this faultful lord of Rome,
Who this accomplishment so hotly chased ;
For now against himself he sounds this doom,
That through the length of times he stands
disgraced ;
Besides, his soul's fair temple is defaced
To whose weak ruins muster troops of cares, 720
To ask the spotted princess how she fares.

She says her subjects with foul insurrection
Have batter'd down her consecrated wall,
And by their mortal fault brought in subjection
Her immortality, and made her thrall 725
To living death and pain perpetual ;
Which in her prescience she controlled
still,
But her foresight could not forestall their
will.

Ev'n in this thought through the dark night he stealeth,
A captive victor that hath lost in gain ; 730 Bearing away the wound that nothing
healeth,
The scar that will despite of cure remain,
Leaving his spoil perplex'd in greater pain.
She bears the load of lust he left behind,
And he the burthen of a guilty mind. 735

He like a thievish dog creeps sadly thence,
She like a wearied lamb lies panting there ;
He scowls and hates himself for his offence,
She, desperate, with her nails her flesh doth tear. 739

He faintly flies, sweating with guilty fear ;
She stays, exclaiming on the direful
night ;
He runs, and chides his vanish'd loath'd
delight.

He thence departs a heavy convertite,
She there remains a hopeless castaway ;
He in his speed looks for the morning
light ; 745
She prays she never may behold the day.
' For day ' quoth she ' night's scapes doth open lay ;
And my true eyes have never practis'd
how 748
To cloak offences with a cunning brow.

' They think not but that every eye can see
The same disgrace which they themselves
behold ;
And therefore would they still in darkness
be,
To have their unseen sin remain untold ;
For they their guilt with weeping will unfold,
And grave, like water that doth eat in
steel, 755
Upon my cheeks what helpless shame
I feel.'

Here she exclaims against repose and rest,
And bids her eyes hereafter still be blind.
She wakes her heart by beating on her
breast,
And bids it leap from thence, where it may
find 760
Some purer chest to close so pure a mind.
Frantic with grief thus breathes she forth her spite
Against the unseen secrecy of night :

' O comfort-killing Night, image of hell !
Dim register and notary of shame ! 765
Black stage for tragedies and murders fell !
Vast sin-concealing chaos ! nurse of blame !
Blind muffled bawd ! dark harbour for defame !
Grim cave of death ! whisp'ring con-
spirator,
With close-tongu'd treason and the ravisher ! 770

' O hateful, vaporous, and foggy night !
Since thou art guilty of my cureless crime,
Muster thy mists to meet the eastern light,
Make war against proportion'd course of
time ;
Or if thou wilt permit the sun to climb 775
His wonted height, yet ere he go to bed, Knit poisonous clouds about his golden
head.

' With rotten damps ravish the morning
air ;
Let their exhal'd unwholesome breaths make sick
The life of purity, the supreme fair, 780

Ere he arrive his weary noontide prick ;
And let thy musty vapours march so thick
That in their smoky ranks his smoth' red
light
May set at noon and make perpetual
night.

' Were Tarquin Night, as he is but Night's child, 785

The silver-shining queen he would distain ;
Her twinkling handmaids too, by him
defil'd,

Through Night's black bosom should not peep again ;

So should I have co-partners in my pain ;
And fellowship in woe doth woe assuage,
As palmers' chat makes short their pilgrimage. 791

' Where now I have no one to blush with
me,

To cross their arms and hang their heads
with mine,

To mask their brows and hide their infamy ;
But I alone alone must sit and pine, 795
Seasoning the earth with show'rs of silver brine,

Mingling my talk with tears, my grief
with groans,

Poor wasting monuments of lasting
moans.

' O Night, thou furnace of foul reeking smoke, 799

Let not the jealous Day behold that face
Which underneath thy black all-hiding cloak

Immodestly lies martyr'd with disgrace !
Keep still possession of thy gloomy place,

That all the faults which in thy reign are
made 804

May likewise be sepulcher'd in thy shade.

' Make me not object to the tell-tale Day.
The light will show, character'd in my brow,

The story of sweet chastity's decay,
The impious breach of holy wedlock vow ;

Yea, the illiterate, that know not how 810
To cipher what is writ in learned books,

Will quote my loathsome trespass in my looks.

' The nurse, to still her child, will tell my story,

And fright her crying babe with Tarquin's
name ;

The orator, to deck his oratory, 815
Will couple my reproach to Tarquin's
shame ;

Feast-finding minstrels, tuning my defame,
Will tie the hearers to attend each line,

How Tarquin wronged me, I Collatine.

' Let my good name, that senseless reputation, 820

For Collatine's dear love be kept unspotted ;
If that be made a theme for disputation,

The branches of another root are rotted,
And undeserv'd reproach to him allotted
That is as clear from this attain of mine
As I ere this was pure to Collatine. 826

' O unseen shame ! invisible disgrace !
O unfelt sore ! crest-wounding, private scar !
Reproach is stamp'd in Collatinus' face,
And Tarquin's eye may read the mot afar,

How he in peace is wounded, not in war.
Alas, how many bear such shameful
blows, 832

Which not themselves but he that gives them knows !

' If, Collatine, thine honour lay in me,
From me by strong assault it is bereft. 835
My honey lost, and I, a drone-like bee,
Have no perfection of my summer left,
But robb'd and ransack'd by injurious theft.

In thy weak hive a wand'ring wasp hath crept,

And suck'd the honey which thy chaste bee kept. 840

' Yet am I guilty of thy honour's wrack—
Yet for thy honour did I entertain him ;
Coming from thee, I could not put him
back,

For it had been dishonour to disdain him ;
Besides of weariness he did complain him,
And talk'd of virtue—O unlook'd-for
evil, 846

When virtue is profan'd in such a devil !

' Why should the worm intrude the maiden bud ?

Or hateful cuckoos hatch in sparrows' nests ?
Or toads infect fair founts with venom
mud ? 850

Or tyrant folly lurk in gentle breasts ?
Or kings be breakers of their own behests ?

But no perfection is so absolute
That some impurity doth not pollute.

' The aged man that coffers up his gold 855
Is plagu'd with cramps and gout and painful fits,

And scarce hath eyes his treasure to behold,
But like still-pining Tantalus he sits,

And useless barns the harvest of his wits,
Having no other pleasure of his gain 860

But torment that it cannot cure his pain.

' So then he hath it, when he cannot use
it,

And leaves it to be mast' red by his young ;
Who in their pride do presently abuse it.

Their father was too weak, and they too strong, 865

To hold their cursed-blessed fortune long.
The sweets we wish for turn to loathed sours

Even in the moment that we call them
ours.

THE RAPE OF LUCRECE

'Unruly blasts wait on the tender spring ;
Unwholesome weeds take root with precious flow'rs ; 870
The adder hisses where the sweet birds sing ;
What virtue breeds iniquity devours.
We have no good that we can say is ours,
But ill-annexed Opportunity
Or kills his life or else his quality. 875

'O Opportunity, thy guilt is great !
'Tis thou that execut'st the traitor's
treason ;
Thou sets the wolf where he the lamb may get ;
Whoever plots the sin, thou 'point'st the season ;
'Tis thou that spurn'st at right, at law, at
reason ; 880
And in thy shady cell, where none may spy him,
Sits Sin, to seize the souls that wander
by him.

'Thou makest the vestal violate her oath ;
Thou blowest the fire when temperance is thaw'd ;
Thou smotherest honesty, thou murth'rest
troth ; 885
Thou foul abettor ! thou notorious bawd !
Thou plantest scandal and displacest laud.
Thou ravisher, thou traitor, thou false thief,
Thy honey turns to gall, thy joy to grief !

'Thy secret pleasure turns to open shame,
Thy private feasting to a public fast, 891
Thy smoothing titles to a ragged name, Thy sug'red tongue to bitter wormwood
taste ;
Thy violent vanities can never last.
How comes it then, vile Opportunity, 895
Being so bad, such numbers seek for thee ?

'When wilt thou be the humble suppliant's
friend,
And bring him where his suit may be obtained ?
When wilt thou sort an hour great strifes to end ?
Or free that soul which wretchedness hath chained ? 900
Give physic to the sick, ease to the pained ?
The poor, lame, blind, halt, creep, cry out for thee ;
But they ne'er meet with Opportunity.

'The patient dies while the physician sleeps ; 904
The orphan pines while the oppressor feeds ;
Justice is feasting while the widow weeps ;
Advice is sporting while infection breeds ;
Thou grant'st no time for charitable deeds ;
Wrath, envy, treason, rape, and murder's rages,
Thy heinous hours wait on them as their pages. 910

'When Truth and Virtue have to do with
thee,
A thousand crosses keep them from thy aid ;
They buy thy help, but Sin ne'er gives a fee ; 913
He gratis comes, and thou art well apaid
As well to hear as grant what he hath said.
My Collatine would else have come to me
When Tarquin did, but he was stay'd by
thee.

'Guilty thou art of murder and of theft,
Guilty of perjury and subornation,
Guilty of treason, forgery, and shift, 920
Guilty of incest, that abomination :
An accessory by thine inclination
To all sins past, and all that are to come,
From the creation to the general doom.

'Mis-shapen Time, copesmate of ugly
Night, 925
Swift subtle post, carrier of grisly care,
Eater of youth, false slave to false delight,
Base watch of woes, sin's packhorse,
virtue's snare ;
Thou nursest all, and murd'rest all that are.
O hear me then, injurious, shifting Time !
Be guilty of my death, since of my crime.

'Why hath thy servant Opportunity 932 Betray'd the hours thou gav'st me to repose ?
Cancell'd my fortunes and enchained me
To endless date of never-ending woes ?
Time's office is to fine the hate of foes, 936
To eat up errors by opinion bred,
Not spend the dowry of a lawful bed.

'Time's glory is to calm contending kings,
To unmask falsehood, and bring truth to
light, 940
To stamp the seal of time in aged things,
To wake the morn, and sentinel the night,
To wrong the wronger till he render right ;
To ruinate proud buildings with thy
hours,
And smear with dust their glitt'ring
golden tow'rs ; 945

'To fill with worm-holes stately monuments,
To feed oblivion with decay of things,
To blot old books and alter their contents,
To pluck the quills from ancient ravens'
wings,
To dry the old oak's sap, and cherish springs ; 950
To spoil antiquities of hammer'd steel,
And turn the giddy round of Fortune's wheel ;

'To show the beldam daughters of her
daughter,
To make the child a man, the man a child,
To slay the tiger that doth live by slaughter,
To tame the unicorn and lion wild, 956
To mock the subtle in themselves beguil'd,

THE RAPE OF LUCRECE

To cheer the ploughman with increaseful crops,
And waste huge stones with little water-drops.

' Why work'st thou mischief in thy pilgrimage, ⁹⁶⁰
Unless thou couldst return to make amends?
One poor retiring minute in an age
Would purchase thee a thousand thousand
friends,
Lending him wit that to bad debtors lends.
O, this dread night, wouldst thou one hour come back,
I could prevent this storm, and shun thy wrack! ⁹⁶⁶

' Thou ceaseless lackey to Eternity,
With some mischance cross Tarquin in his flight;
Devise extremes beyond extremity
To make him curse this cursed crimeful night; ⁹⁷⁰
Let ghastly shadows his lewd eyes affright
And the dire thought of his committed
evil
Shape every bush a hideous shapeless devil.

' Disturb his hours of rest with restless trances, ⁹⁷⁴
Afflict him in his bed with bedrid groans;
Let there bechance him pitiful mischances
To make him moan, but pity not his moans.
Stone him with hard'ned hearts harder than stones;
And let mild women to him lose their
mildness,
Wildier to him than tigers in their wildness. ⁹⁸⁰

' Let him have time to tear his curled hair,
Let him have time against himself to rave, Let him have time of Time's help to
despair,
Let him have time to live a loathed slave,
Let him have time a beggar's orts to crave;
And time to see one that by alms doth live ⁹⁸⁶
Disdain to him disdained scraps to give.

' Let him have time to see his friends his foes,
And merry fools to mock at him resort;
Let him have time to mark how slow time goes ⁹⁹⁰
In time of sorrow, and how swift and short
His time of folly and his time of sport;
And ever let his unrecalling crime
Have time to wail th' abusing of his time.

' O Time, thou tutor both to good and bad,
Teach me to curse him that thou taught'st
this ill! ⁹⁹⁶
At his own shadow let the thief run mad,
Himself himself seek every hour to kill!

Such wretched hands such wretched blood should spill;
For who so base would such an office have ¹⁰⁰⁰
As sland'rous death's-man to so base a slave?

' The baser is he, coming from a king,
To shame his hope with deeds degenerate.
The mightier man, the mightier is the thing
That makes him honour'd or begets him hate; ¹⁰⁰⁵
For greatest scandal waits on greatest
state.
The moon being clouded presently is
miss'd,
But little stars may hide them when they list.

' The crow may bathe his coal-black wings
in mire ¹⁰⁰⁹
And unperceiv'd fly with the filth away;
But if the like the snow-white swan desire,
The stain upon his silver down will stay.
Poor grooms are sightless night, kings glorious day. ¹⁰¹³
Gnats are unnoted wheresoe'er they fly,
But eagles gaz'd upon with every eye.

' Out, idle words, servants to shallow fools!
Unprofitable sounds, weak arbitrators!
Busy yourselves in skill-contending schools, Debate where leisure serves with dull debaters;
To trembling clients be you mediators. ¹⁰²⁰
For me, I force not argument a straw, Since that my case is past the help of
law.

' In vain I rail at Opportunity,
At Time, at Tarquin, and uncheerful
Night;
In vain I cavil with mine infamy, ¹⁰²⁵
In vain I spurn at my confirm'd despite:
This helpless smoke of words doth me no
right.
The remedy indeed to do me good
Is to let forth my foul defiled blood.

' Poor hand, why quiver'st thou at this decree? ¹⁰³⁰
Honour thyself to rid me of this shame;
For if I die my honour lives in thee,
But if I live thou liv'st in my defame.
Since thou couldst not defend thy loyal
dame,
And wast afeard to scratch her wicked foe, ¹⁰³⁵
Kill both thyself and her for yielding so'.

This said, from her betumbled couch she starteth
To find some desp'rate instrument of death,
But this no slaughterhouse no tool imparteth
To make more vent for passage of her breath, ¹⁰⁴⁰

THE RAPE OF LUCRECE

Which thronging through her lips so vanisheth

As smoke from Ætna, that in air consumes,
Or that which from discharged cannon fumes.

'In vain,' quoth she 'I live, and seek in vain

Some happy mean to end a hapless life. 1045
I fear'd by Tarquin's falchion to be slain,
Yet for the self-same purpose seek a knife;
But when I fear'd I was a loyal wife;
So am I now—O no, that cannot be;
Of that true type hath Tarquin rifled me.

'O, that is gone for which I sought to
live,

And therefore now I need not fear to die.
To clear this spot by death, at least I give
A badge of fame to slander's livery;
A dying life to living infamy. 1055

Poor helpless help, the treasure stol'n
away,

To burn the guiltless casket where it lay!

'Well, well, dear Collatine, thou shalt not
know

The stained taste of violated troth;
I will not wrong thy true affection so 1060
To flatter thee with an infringed oath;
This bastard graff shall never come to growth;

He shall not boast who did thy stock pollute

That thou art doting father of his fruit.

'Nor shall he smile at thee in secret
thought, 1065

Nor laugh with his companions at thy state;
But thou shalt know thy interest was not bought

Basely with gold, but stol'n from forth thy gate.

For me, I am the mistress of my fate, 1069
And with my trespass never will dispense,
Till life to death acquit my forc'd offence.

'I will not poison thee with my attaint,
Nor fold my fault in cleanly coin'd excuses;
My sable ground of sin I will not paint
To hide the truth of this false night's abuses. 1075

My tongue shall utter all; mine eyes like sluices,

As from a mountain-spring that feeds a
dale,

Shall gush pure streams to purge my impure tale.'

By this, lamenting Philomel had ended
The well-tun'd warble of her nightly
sorrow, 1080

And solemn night with slow-sad gait descended

To ugly hell; when lo, the blushing
morrow

Lends light to all fair eyes that light will borrow;

But cloudy Lucrece shames herself to see,
And therefore still in night would cloist' red be. 1085

Revealing day through every cranny spies,
And seems to point her out where she sits
weeping;

To whom she sobbing speaks: 'O eye of
eyes,

Why pry'st thou through my window?
Leave thy peeping;

Mock with thy tickling beams eyes that are sleeping; 1090

Brand not my forehead with thy piercing
light,

For day hath nought to do what's done
by night'.

Thus cavils she with every thing she sees.
True grief is fond and testy as a child,
Who wayward once, his mood with nought
agrees. 1095

Old woes, not infant sorrows, bear them mild:

Continuance tames the one; the other wild,

Like an unpractis'd swimmer plunging
still

With too much labour drowns for want of skill.

So she, deep drenched in a sea of care, 1100 Holds disputation with each thing she views,

And to herself all sorrow doth compare;
No object but her passion's strength
renews,

And as one shifts, another straight ensues.
Sometime her grief is dumb and hath no
words; 1105

Sometime 'tis mad and too much talk affords.

The little birds that tune their morning's joy

Make her moans mad with their sweet melody;

For mirth doth search the bottom of annoy;
Sad souls are slain in merry company; 1110
Grief best is pleas'd with grief's society.

True sorrow then is feelingly suffic'd
When with like semblance it is sym-pathiz'd.

'Tis double death to drown in ken of shore;
He ten times pines that pines beholding
food; 1115

To see the salve doth make the wound ache
more;

Great grief grieves most at that would do it
good;

Deep woes roll forward like a gentle flood,
Who, being stopp'd, the bounding banks
o'erflows;

THE RAPE OF LUCRECE

Grief dallied with nor law nor limit
knows. 1120

'You mocking birds,' quoth she 'your tunes entomb

Within your hollow-swelling feathered breasts,

And in my hearing be you mute and dumb.
My restless discord loves no stops nor rests ;

A woeful hostess brooks not merry guests.

Relish your nimble notes to pleasing ears;

Distress likes dumps when time is kept
with tears. 1127

'Come, Philomel, that sing'st of ravish-
ment,

Make thy sad grove in my dishevell'd hair.
As the dank earth weeps at thy languish-
ment, 1130

So I at each sad strain will strain a tear,
And with deep groans the diapason bear ;

For burthen-wise I'll hum on Tarquin
still,

While thou on Tereus descants better
skill.

'And whiles against a thorn thou bear'st thy part 1135

To keep thy sharp woes waking, wretched I,
To imitate thee well, against my heart

Will fix a sharp knife to affright mine
eye ;

Who, if it wink, shall thereon fall and die.
These means, as frets upon an instrument, 1140

Shall tune our heartstrings to true languishment.

'And for, poor bird, thou sing'st not in the
day,

As shaming any eye should thee behold,
Some dark deep desert, seated from the
way,

That knows not parching heat nor freezing
cold, 1145

Will we find out ; and there we will unfold
To creatures stern sad tunes, to change their kinds.

Since men prove beasts, let beasts bear gentle minds.'

As the poor frightened deer, that stands at gaze,

Wildly determining which way to fly, 1150

Or one encompass'd with a winding maze
That cannot tread the way out readily ;

So with herself is she in mutiny,
To live or die which of the twain were
better,

When life is sham'd, and death reproach's
debtor. 1155

'To kill myself,' quoth she 'alack, what were it,

But with my body my poor soul's pollution ?
They that lose half with greater patience
bear it

Than they whose whole is swallowed in confusion. 1159

That mother tries a merciless conclusion Who, having two sweet babes, when death takes one,

Will slay the other and be nurse to none.

'My body or my soul, which was the dearer,

When the one pure, the other made divine ?
Whose love of either to myself was nearer,

When both were kept for heaven and Collatine ? 1166

Ay me ! the bark pill'd from the lofty pine,
His leaves will wither and his sap decay ;

So must my soul, her bark being pill'd
away.

'Her house is sack'd, her quiet interrupted,
Her mansion batter'd by the enemy ; 1171

Her sacred temple spotted, spoil'd, corrupted,

Grossly engirt with daring infamy ;
Then let it not be call'd impiety

If in this blemish'd fort I make some hole 1175

Through which I may convey this troubled soul.

'Yet die I will not till my Collatine Have heard the cause of my untimely
death ;

That he may vow, in that sad hour of mine, Revenge on him that made me stop my
breath. 1180

My stained blood to Tarquin I'll bequeath, Which by him tainted shall for him be spent,

And as his due writ in my testament.

'My honour I'll bequeath unto the knife
That wounds my body so dishonoured. 1185

'Tis honour to deprive dishonour'd life :
The one will live, the other being dead.

So of shame's ashes shall my fame be bred ;
For in my death I murder shameful
scorn.

My shame so dead, mine honour is new born. 1190

'Dear lord of that dear jewel I have lost,
What legacy shall I bequeath to thee ?

My resolution, love, shall be thy boast,
By whose example thou reveng'd mayst be.

How Tarquin must be us'd, read it in me :
Myself, thy friend, will kill myself, thy foe ; 1196

And for my sake serve thou false Tarquin
so.

'This brief abridgment of my will I make :
My soul and body to the skies and ground ;

My resolution, husband, do thou take ; 1200

Mine honour be the knife's that makes my wound ;

My shame be his that did my fame con-
found ;

THE RAPE OF LUCRECE

And all my fame that lives disbursed be
To those that live and think no shame of me. 1204

'Thou, Collatine, shalt oversee this will.
How was I overseen that thou shalt see it!
My blood shall wash the slander of mine ill;
My life's foul deed, my life's fair end shall free it.

Faint not, faint heart, but stoutly say
"So be it".

Yield to my hand; my hand shall conquer thee; 1210

Thou dead, both die, and both shall victors be.'

This plot of death when sadly she had laid,

And wip'd the brinish pearl from her bright
eyes,

With untun'd tongue she hoarsely calls her maid, 1214

Whose swift obedience to her mistress hies;
For fleet-wing'd duty with thought's feathers flies.

Poor Lucrece' cheeks unto her maid
seem so

As winter meads when sun doth melt their snow.

Her mistress she doth give demure good-
morrow

With soft-slow tongue, true mark of modesty, 1220

And sorts a sad look to her lady's sorrow,
For why her face wore sorrow's livery;
But durst not ask of her audaciously

Why her two suns were cloud-eclipsed so,
Nor why her fair cheeks over-wash'd
with woe. 1225

But as the earth doth weep, the sun being
set,

Each flower moist'ned like a melting eye;
Even so the maid with swelling drops gan wet

Her circled eyne, enforc'd by sympathy
Of those fair suns set in her mistress' sky,
Who in a salt-wav'd ocean quench their
light, 1231

Which makes the maid weep like the dewy night.

A pretty while these pretty creatures stand,
Like ivory conduits coral cisterns filling:
One justly weeps; the other takes in hand
No cause but company of her drops spilling. 1236

Their gentle sex to weep are often willing;
Grieving themselves to guess at others'
smarts,

And then they drown their eyes, or break their hearts.

For men have marble, women waxen minds,
And therefore are they form'd as marble
will; 1241

The weak oppress'd, th' impression of strange kinds

Is form'd in them by force, by fraud, or skill.

Then call them not the authors of their
ill,

No more than wax shall be accounted
evil 1245

Wherein is stamp'd the semblance of a devil.

Their smoothness, like a goodly champaign
plain,

Lays open all the little worms that creep;
In men, as in a rough-grown grove, remain
Cave-keeping evils that obscurely sleep.

Through crystal walls each little mote will peep. 1251

Though men can cover crimes with bold stern looks,

Poor women's faces are their own faults'
books.

No man inveigh against the withered
flow'r,

But chide rough winter that the flow'r hath
kill'd. 1255

Not that devour'd, but that which doth devour,

Is worthy blame. O, let it not be hild Poor women's faults that they are so fulfill'd

With men's abuses! those proud lords to blame

Make weak-made women tenants to their
shame. 1260

The precedent whereof in Lucrece view,
Assail'd by night with circumstances strong
Of present death and shame that might ensue

By that her death, to do her husband
wrong.

Such danger to resistance did belong 1265

That dying fear through all her body spread;

And who cannot abuse a body dead?

By this, mild patience bid fair Lucrece
speak

To the poor counterfeit of her complaining.

'My girl,' quoth she 'on what occasion
break 1270

Those tears from thee that down thy cheeks are raining?

If thou dost weep for grief of my sustaining, Know, gentle wench, it small avails my mood;

If tears could help, mine own would do me good.

'But tell me, girl, when went'—and there she stay'd 1275

Till after a deep groan—'Tarquin from
hence?'

'Madam, ere I was up,' replied the maid

THE RAPE OF LUCRECE

13933
'The more to blame my sluggard negligence.

Yet with the fault I thus far can dispense :
Myself was stirring ere the break of day,
And ere I rose was Tarquin gone away.

'But, lady, if your maid may be so bold,
She would request to know your heaviness.'
'O, peace!' quoth Lucrece 'If it should be told,

The repetition cannot make it less, 1285
For more it is than I can well express ;
And that deep torture may be call'd a hell,

When more is felt than one hath power to tell.

'Go, get me hither paper, ink, and pen—
Yet save that labour, for I have them here.
What should I say ?—One of my husband's men 1291

Bid thou be ready, by and by, to bear
A letter to my lord, my love, my dear.

Bid him with speed prepare to carry it ;
The cause craves haste, and it will soon be writ.' 1295

Her maid is gone, and she prepares to write,
First hovering o'er the paper with her quill.
Conceit and grief an eager combat fight ;
What wit sets down is blotted straight with will ; 1299

This is too curious-good, this blunt and ill :
Much like a press of people at a door,
Throng her inventions, which shall go before.

At last she thus begins : 'Thou worthy lord

Of that unworthy wife that greeteth thee,
Health to thy person ! Next vouchsafe t' afford— 1305

If ever, love, thy Lucrece thou wilt see—
Some present speed to come and visit me.

So I commend me from our house in grief ;

My woes are tedious, though my words are brief'.

Here folds she up the tenour of her woe,
Her certain sorrow writ uncertainly. 1311
By this short schedule Collatine may know
Her grief, but not her grief's true quality ;
She dares not thereof make discovery,

Lest he should hold it her own gross abuse, 1315

Ere she with blood had stain'd her stain'd excuse.

Besides, the life and feeling of her passion
She hoards, to spend when he is by to hear her ;

When sighs and groans and tears may grace the fashion

Of her disgrace, the better so to clear her
From that suspicion which the world might bear her. 1321

To shun this blot, she would not blot the letter

With words, till action might become them better.

To see sad sights moves more than hear them told ;

For then the eye interprets to the ear 1325

The heavy motion that it doth behold,

When every part a part of woe doth bear.

'Tis but a part of sorrow that we hear :

Deep sounds make lesser noise than shallow fords,

And sorrow ebbs, being blown with wind of words. 1330

Her letter now is seal'd, and on it writ

'At Ardea to my lord with more than haste'.

The post attends, and she delivers it,

Charging the sour-fac'd groom to hie as fast

As lagging towl before the northern blast.

Speed more than speed but dull and slow she deems : 1336

Extremity still urgeth such extremes.

The homely villain curtsies to her low ;

And blushing on her, with a steady eye

Receives the scroll without or yea or no,

And forth with bashful innocence doth hie.

But they whose guilt within their bosoms lie 1342

Imagine every eye beholds their blame ;

For Lucrece thought he blush'd to see her shame.

When, silly groom. God wot, it was defect

Of spirit, life, and bold audacity. 1346

Such harmless creatures have a true respect

To taik in deeds, while others saucily

Promise more speed but do it cursorily.

Even so, this pattern of the worn-out age

Pawn'd honest looks, but laid no words to gage. 1351

His kindled duty kindled her mistrust,

That two red fires in both their faces blazed ;

She thought he blush'd as knowing Tarquin's lust,

And, blushing with him, wistly on him

gazed ; 1355

Her earnest eye did make him more amazed ;

The more she saw the blood his cheeks

repenish,

The more she thought he spied in her some blemish.

But long she thinks till he return again,

And yet the duteous vassal scarce is gone.

The weary t me she cannot entertain, 1361

For now 'tis stale to sigh, to weep, and

groan ;

So woe hath wearied woe, moan tired moan,

That she her paints a little while doth

stay,

Pausing for means to mourn some newer way. 1365

THE RAPE OF LUCRECE

At last she calls to mind where hangs a piece
Of skilful painting, made for Priam's Troy ;
Before the which is drawn the power of Greece

For He'en's rape the city to destroy,
Threat'ning cloud-kissing Ilion with annoy;
Which the conceited painter drew so proud, 1371
As heaven, it seem'd, to kiss the turrets bow d.

A thousand lamentable objects there,
In scorn of nature, art gave lifeless life :
Many a dry drop seem'd a weeping tear Shed for the slaught'ed husband by the
wife ; 1376

The red blood reek'd to show the painter's
strife ;
And dying eyes gleam'd forth their ashy
lights,
Like dying coals burnt out in tedious
nights.

There might you see the labouring pioneer Begrin'd with sweat and smeared all with dust ; 1381

And from the towers of Troy there would appear

The very eyes of men through loopholes
thrust,

Gazing upon the Greeks with little lust.
Such sweet observance in this work was had 1385

That one might see those far-off eyes look sad.

In great commanders grace and majesty
You might behold, triumphing in their faces ;

In youth, quick bearing and dexterity ;
And here and there the painter inter-laces

Pale cowards marching on with trembling paces, 1391

Which heartless peasants did so well resemble

That one would swear he saw them quake and tremble.

In Ajax and Ulysses, O what art
Of physiognomy might one behold ! 1395
The face of either cipher'd either's heart ;
Their face their manners most expressly told :

In Ajax' eyes blunt rage and rigour roll'd ;
But the mild glance that sly Ulysses lent Show'd deep regard and smiling government. 1400

There pleading might you see grave Nestor
stand,

As 'twere encouraging the Greeks to fight,
Making such sober action with his hand
That it beguil'd attention, charm'd the
sight.

In speech, it seem'd, his beard all silver
white 1405

Wagg'd up and down, and from his lips
did fly

Thin winding breath, which purl'd up to the sky.

About him were a press of gaping faces,
Which seem'd to swallow up his sound
advice,

All jointly list'ning, but with several graces,
As if some mermaid did their ears entice ;
Some high, some low—the painter was so nice— 1412

The scalps of many, almost hid behind,
To jump up higher seem'd to mock the
mind.

Here one man's hand lean'd on another's
head, 1415

His nose being shadowed by his neighbour's
ear ;

Here one being throng'd bears back, all boll'n and red ;

Another smother'd seems to pelt and swear ;
And in their rage such signs of rage they
bear, 1419

As, but for loss of Nestor's golden words,
It seem'd they would debate with angry
swords.

For much imaginary work was there ;
Conceit deceitful, so compact, so kind,
That for Achilles' image stood his spear,
Grip'd in an armed hand ; himself, behind
Was left unseen, save to the eye of mind :
A hand, a foot, a face a leg, a head, 1427
Stood for the whole to be imagined.

And from the walls of strong-besieged Troy
When their brave hope, bold Hector, march'd to field, 1430

Stood many Trojan mothers, sharing joy
To see their youthful sons bright weapons wield ;

And to their hope they such odd action
yield

That through their light joy seemed to appear,

Like bright things stain'd, a kind of heavy fear. 1435

And from the strond of Dardan where they
fought,

To Simois' reedy banks, the red blood ran,
Whose waves to imitate the battle sought
With swelling ridges ; and their ranks
began 1439

To break upon the galled shore, and than Retire again, till meeting greater ranks
They join, and shoot their foam at Simois' banks.

To this well-painted piece is Lucrece come,
To find a face where all distress is stell'd.
Many she sees where cares have carved some, 1445

THE RAPE OF LUCRECE

But none where all distress and dolour
dwell'd,
Till she despairing Hecuba beheld, Staring on Priam's wounds with her old
eyes,
Which bleeding under Pyrrhus' proud foot lies.

In her the painter had anatomiz'd ¹⁴⁵⁰
Time's ruin, beauty's wrack, and grim care's
reign;
Her cheeks with chaps and wrinkles were disguis'd;
Of what she was no semblance did remain:
Her blue blood chang'd to black in every vein,
Wanting the spring that those shrunk
pipes had fed, ¹⁴⁵⁵
Show'd life imprison'd in a body dead.

On this sad shadow Lucrece spends her eyes,
And shapes her sorrow to the beldam's
woes,
Who nothing wants to answer her but cries,
And bitter words to ban her cruel foes: ¹⁴⁶⁰
The painter was no god to lend her those;
And therefore Lucrece swears he did her
wrong
To give her so much grief and not a
tongue.

'Poor instrument,' quoth she 'without a
sound,
I'll tune thy woes with my lamenting tongue, ¹⁴⁶⁵
And drop sweet balm in Priam's painted
wound,
And rail on Pyrrhus that hath done him
wrong,
And with my tears quench Troy that burns
so long;
And with my knife scratch out the angry eyes ¹⁴⁶⁹
Of all the Greeks that are thine enemies.

'Show me the strumpet that began this stir,
That with my nails her beauty I may tear.
Thy heat of lust, fond Paris, did incur
This load of wrath that burning Troy doth bear. ¹⁴⁷⁴
Thy eye kindled the fire that burneth here;
And here in Troy, for trespass of thine
eye,
The sire, the son, the dame, and daughter
die.

'Why should the private pleasure of some one
Become the public plague of many moe?
Let sin, alone committed, light alone ¹⁴⁸⁰
Upon his head that hath transgressed so;
Let guiltless souls be freed from guilty woe.
For one's offence why should so many
fall,
To plague a private sin in general?

'Lo, here weeps Hecuba, here Priam dies, Here manly Hector faints, here Troilus sounds; ¹⁴⁸⁶
Here friend by friend in bloody channel lies,
And friend to friend gives unadvised
wounds,
And one man's lust these many lives con-
founds.
Had doting Priam check'd his son's desire, ¹⁴⁹⁰
Troy had been bright with fame, and not with fire.'

Here feelingly she weeps Troy's painted
woes;
For sorrow, like a heavy-hanging bell,
Once set on ringing, with his own weight
goes;
Then little strength rings out the doleful
knell; ¹⁴⁹⁵
So Lucrece set a-work sad tales doth tell
To pencill'd pensiveness and colour'd
sorrow;
She lends them words, and she their looks
doth borrow.

She throws her eyes about the painting round, ¹⁴⁹⁹
And who she finds forlorn she doth lament.
At last she sees a wretched image bound
That piteous looks to Phrygian shepherds
lent;
His face, though full of cares, yet show'd
content:
Onward to Troy with the blunt swains
he goes,
So mild that Patience seem'd to scorn
his woes. ¹⁵⁰³

In him the painter labour'd with his skill
To hide deceit, and give the harmless show
An humble gait, calm looks, eyes wailing
still,
A brow unbent, that seem'd to welcome
woe; ¹⁵⁰⁹
Cheeks neither red nor pale, but mingled so That blushing red no guilty instance gave,
Nor ashy pale the fear that false hearts
have;

But, like a constant and confirmed devil,
He entertain'd a show so seeming just,
And therein so ensconc'd his secret evil,
That jealousy itself could not mistrust ¹⁵¹⁶ False-creeping craft and perjury should thrust
Into so bright a day such black-fac'd storms,
Or blot with hell-born sin such saint-like
forms.

The well-skill'd workman this mild image drew ¹⁵²⁰
For perjur'd Sinon, whose enchanting story
The credulous old Priam after slew;

THE RAPE OF LUCRECE

Whose words, like wildfire, burnt the shining glory
Of rich-built Ilion, that the skies were sorry,
And little stars shot from their fixed places, 1525
When their glass fell wherein they view'd their faces.

This picture she advisedly perus'd,
And chid the painter for his wondrous skill ;

Saying, some shape in Sinon's was abus'd,
So fair a form lodg'd not a mind so ill ; 1530
And still on him she gaz'd, and gazing still

Such signs of truth in his plain face she spied

That she concludes the picture was belied.

' It cannot be ' quoth she ' that so much guile '

She would have said ' can lurk in such a look ' 1535

But Tarquin's shape came in her mind the while,

And from her tongue ' can lurk ' from ' cannot ' took ;

' It cannot be ' she in that sense forsook,
And turn'd it thus : ' It cannot be, I find,
But such a face should bear a wicked mind ; 1540

' For even as subtle Sinon here is painted,
So sober-sad, so weary, and so mild,

As if with grief or travail he had fainted,
To me came Tarquin armed ; so beguil'd
With outward honesty, but yet defil'd 1545

With inward vice. As Priam him did cherish,

So did I Tarquin ; so my Troy did perish.

' Look, look, how list'ning Priam wets his eyes,

To see those borrowed tears that Sinon sheds.

Priam, why art thou old, and yet not wise ?
For every tear he falls a Trojan bleeds ;

His eye drops fire, no water thence proceeds ; 1552

Those round clear pearls of his that move thy pity

Are balls of quenchless fire to burn thy city.

' Such devils steal effects from lightless hell ; 1555

For Sinon in his fire doth quake with cold,
And in that cold hot burning fire doth dwell ;

These contraries such unity do hold
Only to flatter fools, and make them bold ;

So Priam's trust false Sinon's tears doth flatter 1560

That he finds means to burn his Troy with water '.

Here, all enrag'd, such passion her assails
That patience is quite beaten from her breast.

She tears the senseless Sinon with her nails,
Comparing him to that unhappy guest 1565
Whose deed hath made herself herself detest.

At last she smilingly with this gives o'er :
' Fool ! fool ! ' quoth she ' his wounds will not be sore.'

Thus ebbs and flows the current of her sorrow,

And time doth weary time with her complaining. 1570

She looks for night, and then she longs for morrow,

And both she thinks too long with her remaining.

Short time seems long in sorrow's sharp sustaining ;

Though woe be heavy, yet it seldom sleeps ;

And they that watch see time how slow it creeps. 1575

Which all this time hath overslipp'd her thought

That she with painted images hath spent,
Being from the feeling of her own grief brought

By deep surmise of others' detriment, 1579
Losing her woes in shows of discontent.

It easeth some, though none it ever cured,

To think their dolour others have endured.

But now the mindful messenger, come back,
Brings home his lord and other company ;

Who finds his Lucrece clad in mourning black, 1585

And round about her tear-distained eye
Blue circles stream'd, like rainbows in the sky.

These water-galls in her dim element
Foretell new storms to those already spent.

Which when her sad-beholding husband saw, 1590

Amazedly in her sad face he stares :
Her eyes, though sod in tears, look'd red and raw,

Her lively colour kill'd with deadly cares.
He hath no power to ask her how she fares ;

Both stood like old acquaintance in a trance, 1595

Met far from home, wond'ring each other's chance.

At last he takes her by the bloodless hand,

And thus begins : ' What uncouth ill event
Hath thee befall'n, that thou dost trembling stand ?

THE RAPE OF LUCRECE

Sweet love, what spite hath thy fair colour
spent ? 1600

Why art thou thus attir'd in discontent ?
Unmask, dear dear, this moody heaviness,

And tell thy grief, that we may give redress'.

Three times with sighs she gives her sorrow
fire

Ere once she can discharge one word of
woe ; 1605

At length address'd to answer his desire,
She modestly prepares to let them know
Her honour is ta'en prisoner by the foe ;
While Collatine and his consorted lords
With sad attention long to hear her words. 1610

And now this pale swan in her wat'ry nest Begins the sad dirge of her certain ending.
'Few words' quoth she 'shall fit the trespass best,

Where no excuse can give the fault amend-
ing :

In me moe woes than words are now
depending ; 1615

And my laments would be drawn out too
long

To tell them all with one poor tired
tongue.

'Then be this all the task it hath to say :
Dear husband, in the interest of thy bed
A stranger came and on that pillow lay 1620
Where thou wast wont to rest thy weary
head ;

And what wrong else may be imagined
By foul enforcement might be done to me
From that, alas, thy Lucrece is not free.

'For in the dreadful dead of dark mid-
night, 1625

With shining falchion in my chamber came
A creeping creature, with a flaming light,
And softly cried "Awake, thou Roman
dame, 1628

And entertain my love ; else lasting shame
On thee and thine this night I will inflict,
If thou my love's desire do contradict.

"For some hard-favour'd groom of thine"
quoth he

"Unless thou yoke thy liking to my will,
I'll murder straight, and then I'll slaughter
thee, 1634

And swear I found you where you did fulfil

The loathsome act of lust, and so did kill
The lechers in their deed : this act will be My fame, and thy perpetual infamy".

'With this I did begin to start and cry,
And then against my heart he set his sword,
Swearing, unless I took all patiently, 1641
I should not live to speak another word.
So should my shame still rest upon record,

And never be forgot in mighty Rome
Th' adulterate death of Lucrece and her
groom. 1645

'Mine enemy was strong, my poor self
weak,

And far the weaker with so strong a fear.
My bloody judge forbade my tongue to
speak ;

No rightful plea might plead for justice
there.

His scarlet lust came evidence to swear 1650
That my poor beauty had purloin'd his
eyes,

And when the judge is robb'd, the prisoner dies.

'O, teach me how to make mine own excuse !
Or, at the least, this refuge let me find :
Though my gross blood be stain'd with this
abuse, 1655

Immaculate and spotless is my mind ;
That was not forc'd ; that never was inclin'd

To accessory yieldings, but still pure
Doth in her poison'd closet yet endure.'

Lo, here, the hopeless merchant of this loss,
With head declin'd and voice damm'd up
with woe, 1661

With sad-set eyes and wretched arms across,

From lips new-waxen pale begins to blow
The grief away that stops his answer so ;

But wretched as he is he strives in vain ;
What he breathes out his breath drinks up again. 1666

As through an arch the violent roaring tide
Outruns the eye that doth behold his haste,
Yet in the eddy boundeth in his pride

Back to the strait that forc'd him on so fast, 1670

In rage sent out, recall'd in rage, being
past ;

Even so his sighs, his sorrows, make a
saw,

To push grief on, and back the same grief draw.

Which speechless woe of his poor she attendeth, 1674

And his untimely frenzy thus awaketh :

'Dear lord, thy sorrow to my sorrow
lendeth

Another power ; no flood by raining slaketh.

My woe too sensible thy passion maketh
More feeling-painful. Let it then suffice To drown one woe, one pair of weeping
eyes. 1680

And for my sake, when I might charm thee so,

For she that was thy Lucrece, now attend
me :

Be suddenly revenged on my foe,

THE RAPE OF LUCRECE

Thine, mine, his own ; suppose thou dost defend me
 From what is past. The help that thou shalt lend me 1685
 Comes all too late, yet let the traitor die ;
 For sparing justice feeds iniquity.

'But ere I name him, you, fair lords,' quoth she,
 Speaking to those that came with Collatine,
 'Shall plight your honourable faiths to me
 With swift pursuit to venge this wrong of mine ; 1691

For 'tis a meritorious fair design
 To chase injustice with revengeful arms :
 Knights, by their oaths, should right poor ladies' harms'.

At this request, with noble disposition 1695
 Each present lord began to promise aid,
 As bound in knighthood to her imposition,
 Longing to hear the hateful foe bewray'd.
 But she, that yet her sad task hath not said,
 The protestation stops. 'O speak,' quoth she 1700
 'How may this forced stain be wip'd from me ?

'What is the quality of my offence,
 Being constrain'd with dreadful circumstance ?
 May my pure mind with the foul act dispense,
 My low-declined honour to advance ? 1705
 May any terms acquit me from this chance ?
 The poisoned fountain clears itself again ;
 And why not I from this compelled stain ?'

With this, they all at once began to say
 Her body's stain her mind untainted clears ;
 While with a joyless smile she turns away
 The face, that map which deep impression bears 1712
 Of hard misfortune, carv'd in it with tears.
 'No, no,' quoth she 'no dame hereafter living
 By my excuse shall claim excuse's giving.' 1715

Here with a sigh, as if her heart would break,
 She throws forth Tarquin's name : 'He, he' she says,
 But more than 'he' her poor tongue could not speak ;
 Till after many accents and delays,
 Untimely breathings, sick, and short assays,
 She utters this : 'He, he, fair lords, 'tis he, 1721
 That guides this hand to give this wound to me'.

Even here she sheathed in her harmless breast

A harmful knife, that thence her soul unsheathed. 1724
 That blow did bail it from the deep unrest
 Of that polluted prison where it breath'd.
 Her contrite sighs unto the clouds bequeathed
 Her winged sprite, and through her wounds doth fly
 Life's lasting date from cancell'd destiny.

Stone-still, astonish'd with this deadly deed, 1730
 Stood Collatine and all his lordly crew ;
 Till Lucrece' father, that beholds her bleed,
 Himself on her self-slaught' red body threw,
 And from the purple fountain Brutus drew
 The murd'rous knife, and, as it left the place, 1735
 Her blood, in poor revenge, held it in chase ;

And bubbling from her breast, it doth divide
 In two slow rivers, that the crimson blood
 Circles her body in on every side, 1739
 Who like a late-sack'd island vastly stood Bare and unpeopled in this fearful flood.
 Some of her blood still pure and red remain'd,
 And some look'd black, and that false Tarquin stain'd.

About the mourning and congealed face
 Of that black blood a wat'ry rigol goes, 1745
 Which seems to weep upon the tainted place ;
 And ever since, as pitying Lucrece' woes,
 Corrupted blood some watery token shows ;
 And blood untainted still doth red abide,
 Blushing at that which is so putrified.

'Daughter, dear daughter,' old Lucretius cries, 1751
 'That life was mine which thou hast here deprived.
 If in the child the father's image lies,
 Where shall I live now Lucrece is unliv'd ?
 Thou wast not to this end from me derived.
 If children predecease progenitors, 1756
 We are their offspring, and they none of ours.

'Poor broken glass, I often did behold
 In thy sweet semblance my old age new born ;
 But now that fair fresh mirror, dim and old, 1760
 Shows me a bare-bon'd death by time outworn ;
 O, from thy cheeks my image thou hast torn,
 And shiver'd all the beauty of my glass,
 That I no more can see what once I was !

'O time, cease thou thy course and last no longer, 1765
 If they surcease to be that shou'd survive.

THE RAPE OF LUCRECE

Shall rotten death make conquest of the stronger,
 And leave the falt'ring feeble souls alive ?
 The old bees die, the young possess their hive.
 Then live, sweet Lucrece, live again, and see ¹⁷⁷⁰
 Thy father die, and not thy father thee.'

By this starts Collatine as from a dream,
 And bids Lucretius give his sorrow place ;
 And then in key-cold Lucrece' bleeding
 stream
 He falls, and bathes the pale fear in his face, ¹⁷⁷⁵
 And counterfeits to die with her a space ;
 Till manly shame bids him possess his
 breath,
 And live, to be revenged on her death.

The deep vexation of his inward soul Hath serv'd a dumb arrest upon his tongue ; ¹⁷⁸⁰
 Who, mad that sorrow should his use control,
 Or keep him from heart-easing words so
 long,
 Begins to talk ; but through his lips do throng
 Weak words, so thick come, in his poor heart's aid,
 That no man could distinguish what he said. ¹⁷⁸⁵

Yet sometime ' Tarquin ' was pronounced
 plain,
 But through his teeth, as if the name he tore.
 This windy tempest, till it blow up rain,
 Held back his sorrow's tide, to make it
 more ;
 At last it rains, and busy winds give o'er ;
 Then son and father weep with equal strife, ¹⁷⁹¹
 Who should weep most for daughter or for wife.

The one doth call her his, the other his,
 Yet neither may possess the claim they lay.
 The father says ' She's mine '. ' O, mine
 she is ! ' ¹⁷⁹⁵
 Replies her husband. ' Do not take away
 My sorrow's interest ; let no mourner
 say
 He weeps for her, for she was only mine,
 And only must be wail'd by Collatine.'

' O,' quoth Lucretius ' I did give that life Which she too early and too late hath spill'd.' ¹⁸⁰¹
 ' Woe, woe,' quoth Collatine ' she was my
 wife,
 I owed her, and 'tis mine that she hath
 kill'd.'
 ' My daughter ! ' and ' My wife ! ' with clamours fill'd

The dispers'd air, who, holding Lucrece' life, ¹⁸⁰⁵
 Answer'd their cries, ' My daughter ! ' and ' My wife ! '

Brutus, who pluck'd the knife from Lucrece' side,
 Seeing such emulation in their woe,
 Began to clothe his wit in state and pride,
 Burying in Lucrece' wound his folly's show.
 He with the Romans was esteemed so ¹⁸¹¹
 As silly jeering idiots are with kings,
 For sportive words and utt'ring foolish
 things.

But now he throws that shallow habit by Wherein deep policy did him disguise, ¹⁸¹⁵
 And arm'd his long-hid wits advisedly
 To check the tears in Collatinus' eyes.
 ' Thou wronged lord of Rome,' quoth he
 ' arise ;
 Let my unsounded self, suppos'd a fool,
 Now set thy long-experienc'd wit to school. ¹⁸²⁰

' Why, Collatine, is woe the cure for woe ?
 Do wounds help wounds, or grief help grievous deeds ?
 Is it revenge to give thyself a blow,
 For his foul act by whom thy fair wife bleeds ?
 Such childish humour from weak minds proceeds. ¹⁸²⁵
 Thy wretched wife mistook the matter so,
 To slay herself that should have slain her
 foe.

' Courageous Roman, do not steep thy
 heart
 In such relenting dew of amentations,
 But kneel with me, and help to bear thy part ¹⁸³⁰
 To rouse our Roman gods with invocations
 That they will suffer these abominations—Since Rome herself in them doth stand
 disgraced—
 By our strong arms from forth her fair streets chased.

' Now by the Capitol that we adore, ¹⁸³⁵
 And by this chaste blood so unjustly stained,
 By heaven's fair sun that breeds the fat
 earth's store,
 By all our country rights in Rome maintained,
 And by chaste Lucrece' soul that late complained
 Her wrongs to us, and by this bloody knife, ¹⁸⁴⁰
 We will revenge the death of this true
 wife.'

This said, he struck his hand upon his
 breast,
 And kiss'd the fatal knife to end his vow ;
 And to his protestation urg'd the rest,

THE RAPE OF LUCRECE

Who, wond'ring at him, did his words allow ;

Then jointly to the ground their knees they
bow

And that deep vow which Brutus made
before

He doth again repeat, and that they swore.

1845

When they had sworn to this advised doom,
They did conclude to bear dead Lucrece
thence,

1850

To show her bleeding body thorough Rome,
And so to publish Tarquin's foul offence ;
Which being done with speedy diligence,
The Romans plausibly did give consent
To Tarquin's everlasting banishment.

1

FROM fairest creatures we desire increase,
That thereby beauty's rose might never die,
But as the ripper should by time decease,
His tender heir might bear his memory ;
But thou, contracted to thine own bright

eyes,
Feed'st thy light's flame with self-substantial fuel,

Making a famine where abundance lies,
Thyself thy foe, to thy sweet self too cruel.
Thou that art now the world's fresh ornament

And only herald to the gaudy spring, 10
Within thine own bud buriest thy content,
And, tender churl, mak'st waste in niggarding.

Pity the world, or else this glutton be,
To eat the world's due, by the grave and
thee.

2

When forty winters shall besiege thy brow,
And dig deep trenches in thy beauty's field,
Thy youth's proud livery, so gaz'd on now,
Will be a tatter'd weed of small worth held.
Then being ask'd where all thy beauty lies,
Where all the treasure of thy lusty days, 6
To say within thine own deep-sunken eyes Were an all-eating shame and thriftless
praise.

How much more praise deserv'd thy beauty's use,

If thou couldst answer ' This fair child of
mine 10

Shall sum my count, and make my old excuse,

Proving his beauty by succession thine !

This were to be new made when thou art
old,

And see thy blood warm when thou feel'st it cold.

3

Look in thy glass, and tell the face thou viewest

Now is the time that face should form
another ;

Whose fresh repair if now thou not renewest, Thou dost beguile the world, unbless some
mother.

For where is she so fair whose unear'd
womb 5

Disdains the tillage of thy husbandry ?
Or who is he so fond will be the tomb
Of his self-love, to stop posterity ?

Thou art thy mother's glass, and she in thee
Calls back the lovely April of her prime ; 10
So thou through windows of thine age shalt
see,

Despite of wrinkles, this thy golden time.
But if thou live rememb'rd not to be,
Die single, and thine image dies with thee.

Unthrifty loveliness, why dost thou spend Upon thyself thy beauty's legacy ?

Nature's bequest gives nothing, but doth lend,

And, being frank, she lends to those are free.
Then, beauteous niggard, why dost thou
abuse 5

The bounteous largess given thee to give ?
Profitless usurer, why dost thou use

So great a sum of sums, yet canst not live ?
For having traffic with thyself alone,

Thou of thyself thy sweet self dost deceive.
Then how when nature calls thee to be
gone, 11

What acceptable audit canst thou leave ?
Thy unus'd beauty must be tomb'd with
thee,

Which, used, lives th' executor to be.

5

Those hours that with gentle work did
frame

The lovely gaze where every eye doth dwell
Will play the tyrants to the very same,

And that unfair which fairly doth excel ;
For never-resting time leads summer on 5

To hideous winter, and confounds him
there ;

Sap check'd with frost and lusty leaves
quite gone,

Beauty o'ersnow'd, and bareness every where.

Then, were not summer's distillation left
A liquid prisoner pent in walls of glass, 10
Beauty's effect with beauty were bereft,

SONNETS

Nor it, nor no remembrance what it was ;
But flowers distill'd, though they with winter meet,
Leese but their show : their substance still lives sweet.

6

Then let not winter's ragged hand deface
In thee thy summer ere thou be distill'd ;
Make sweet some vial ; treasure thou some
place
With beauty's treasure ere it be self-kill'd.
That use is not forbidden usury Which happies those that pay the willing loan—
That's for thyself to breed an other thee,
Or ten times happier, be it ten for one ;
Ten times thy self were happier than thou
art,
If ten of thine ten times refigur'd thee.
Then what could Death do if thou shouldst
depart,
Leaving thee living in posterity ?
Be not self-will'd, for thou art much too
fair
To be death's conquest and make worms thine heir.

7

Lo, in the orient when the gracious light
Lifts up his burning head, each under eye
Doth homage to his new-appearing sight,
Serving with looks his sacred majesty ;
And having climb'd the steep-up heavenly hill,
Resembling strong youth in his middle age,
Yet mortal looks adore his beauty still,
Attending on his golden pilgrimage ;
But when from highmost pitch, with weary car,
Like feeble age he reeleth from the day,
The eyes, 'fore duteous, now converted are
From his low tract and look another way ;
So thou, thyself outgoing in thy noon,
Unlook'd on diest, unless thou get a son.

8

Music to hear, why hear'st thou music sadly ?
Sweets with sweets war not, joy delights in
joy.
Why lov'st thou that which thou receiv'st not gladly,
Or else receiv'st with pleasure thine annoy ?
If the true concord of well-tuned sounds,
By unions married, do offend thine ear,
They do but sweetly chide thee, who con-
founds
In singleness the parts that thou shouldst
bear.
Mark how one string, sweet husband to
another,
Strikes each in each by mutual ordering ;

Resembling sire, and child, and happy
mother,
Who, all in one, one pleasing note do sing ;
Whose speechless song, being many,
seeming one,
Sings this to thee : 'Thou single wilt prove none'.

9

Is it for fear to wet a widow's eye
That thou consum'st thyself in single life ?
Ah ! if thou issueless shalt hap to die,
The world will wail thee like a makeless
wife :
The world will be thy widow, and still weep
That thou no form of thee hast left behind,
When every private widow well may keep,
By children's eyes, her husband's shape in
mind.
Look what an unthrift in the world doth spend Shifts but his place, for still the world enjoys it ;
But beauty's waste hath in the world an
end,
And kept unus'd, the user so destroys it.
No love toward others in that bosom sits
That on himself such murd'rous shame commits.

10

For shame ! deny that thou bear'st love to any,
Who for thy self art so unprovident.
Grant, if thou wilt, thou art belov'd of many,
But that thou none lov'st is most evident ;
For thou art so possess'd with murd'rous hate
That 'gainst thyself thou stick'st not to conspire,
Seeking that beauteous roof to ruinate
Which to repair should be thy chief desire.
O, change thy thought, that I may change my mind !
Shall hate be fairer lodg'd than gentle love ?
Be, as thy presence is, gracious and kind,
Or to thy self at least kind-hearted prove ;
Make thee an other self for love of me,
That beauty still may live in thine or
thee.

11

As fast as thou shalt wane, so fast thou
grow'st
In one of thine, from that which thou departest ;
And that fresh blood which youngly thou bestow'st
Thou mayst call thine when thou from youth convertest.
Herein lives wisdom, beauty, and increase ;

Without this folly, age, and cold decay. 6
 If all were minded so, the times should cease,
 And threescore year would make the world
 away.
 Let those whom Nature hath not made for store,
 Harsh, featureless, and rude, barrenly perish. 10
 Look whom she best endow'd she gave the
 more;
 Which bounteous gift thou shouldst in bounty cherish;
 She carv'd thee for her seal, and meant thereby Thou shouldst print more, not let that copy die.

12

When I do count the clock that tells the
 time,
 And see the brave day sunk in hideous
 night;
 When I behold the violet past prime,
 And sable curls all silver'd o'er with white;
 When lofty trees I see barren of leaves, 5
 Which erst from heat did canopy the herd,
 And summer's green all girded up in sheaves Borne on the bier with white and bristly
 beard;
 Then of thy beauty do I question make That thou among the wastes of time must
 go, 10
 Since sweets and beauties do themselves
 forsake,
 And die as fast as they see others grow;
 And nothing 'gainst Time's scythe can make defence
 Save breed, to brave him when he takes thee hence.

13

O that you were yourself! But, love, you
 are
 No longer yours than you your self here
 live.
 Against this coming end you should prepare,
 And your sweet semblance to some other
 give.
 So should that beauty which you hold in lease 5
 Find no determination; then you were
 Your self again, after your self's decease,
 When your sweet issue your sweet form should bear.
 Who lets so fair a house fall to decay, 9
 Which husbandry in honour might uphold
 Against the stormy gusts of winter's day
 And barren rage of death's eternal cold?
 O, none but unthrifs! Dear my love, you know
 You had a father: let your son say so.

14

Not from the stars do I my judgment pluck,
 And yet methinks I have astronomy;
 But not to tell of good or evil luck,
 Of plagues, of dearths, or seasons' quality;
 Nor can I fortune to brief minutes tell, 5 Pointing to each his thunder, rain, and
 wind,
 Or say with princes if it shall go well
 By oft predict that I in heaven find;
 But from thine eyes my knowledge I derive,
 And, constant stars, in them I read such
 art 10
 As truth and beauty shall together thrive,
 If from thy self to store thou wouldst convert.
 Or else of thee this I prognosticate:
 Thy end is truth's and beauty's doom and date.

15

When I consider every thing that grows
 Holds in perfection but a little moment,
 That this huge stage presenteth nought but shows
 Whereon the stars in secret influence comment;
 When I perceive that men as plants increase, 5
 Cheered and check'd even by the self-same
 sky,
 Vaunt in their youthful sap, at height decrease,
 And wear their brave state out of memory;
 Then the conceit of this inconstant stay Sets you most rich in youth before my
 sight, 10
 Where wasteful Time debateth with
 Decay
 To change your day of youth to sullied
 night;
 And all in war with Time for love of you,
 As he takes from you, I engraft you new.

16

But wherefore do not you a mightier way
 Make war upon this bloody tyrant Time?
 And fortify your self in your decay
 With means more blessed than my barren rhyme?
 Now stand you on the top of happy hours,
 And many maiden gardens, yet unset, 6
 With virtuous wish would bear your living
 flowers,
 Much liker than your painted counterfeit;
 So should the lines of life that life repair, 9
 Which this, Time's pencil or my pupil pen,
 Neither in inward worth, nor outward fair,
 Can make you live your self in eyes of men.
 To give away your self keeps your self
 still;
 And you must live, drawn by your own sweet skill.

SONNETS

17

Who will believe my verse in time to come,
If it were fill'd with your most high deserts?
Though yet, heaven knows, it is but as a tomb
Which hides your life and shows not half your parts.
If I could write the beauty of your eyes ⁵
And in fresh numbers number all your graces,
The age to come would say ' This poet lies ;
Such heavenly touches ne'er touch'd earthly faces ' .
So should my papers, yellowed with their
age,
Be scorn'd, like old men of less truth than tongue ; ¹⁰
And your true rights be term'd a poet's
rage,
And stretched metre of an antique song.
But were some child of yours alive that
time,
You should live twice—in it, and in my rhyme.

18

Shall I compare thee to a summer's day ?
Thou art more lovely and more temperate.
Rough winds do shake the darling buds of
May,
And summer's lease hath all too short a date : ⁴
Sometime too hot the eye of heaven shines,
And often is his gold complexion dimm'd ;
And every fair from fair some time declines,
By chance, or nature's changing course,
untrimm'd ;
But thy eternal summer shall not fade ⁹
Nor lose possession of that fair thou ow'st ;
Nor shall Death brag thou wand'rest in his
shade,
When in eternal lines to time thou grow'st.
So long as men can breathe or eyes can
see,
So long lives this, and this gives life to
thee.

19

Devouring Time, blunt thou the lion's paws,
And make the earth devour her own sweet brood ;
Pluck the keen teeth from the fierce tiger's
jaws,
And burn the long-liv'd phoenix in her blood ; ⁴
Make glad and sorry seasons as thou fleet'st,
And do whate'er thou wilt, swift-footed
Time,
To the wide world and all her fading sweets ;
But I forbid thee one most heinous crime :
O, carve not with thy hours my love's fair
brow,

Nor draw no lines there with thine antique pen ; ¹⁰
Him in thy course untainted do allow
For beauty's pattern to succeeding men.
Yet, do thy worst, old Time. Despite thy
wrong,
My love shall in my verse ever live young.

20

A woman's face, with Nature's own hand painted,
Hast thou, the Master Mistress of my
passion ;
A woman's gentle heart, but not acquainted With shifting change, as is false woman's fashion ;
An eye more bright than theirs, less false ⁵
in rolling,
Gilding the object whereupon it gazeth ;
A man in hue all hues in his controlling,
Which steals men's eyes and women's souls amazeth.
And for a woman wert thou first created ;
Till Nature, as she wrought thee, fell adoting, ¹⁰
And by addition me of thee defeated
By adding one thing to my purpose nothing.
But since she prick'd thee out for women's
pleasure,
Mine be thy love, and thy love's use their treasure.

21

So is it not with me as with that Muse,
Stirr'd by a painted beauty to his verse ;
Who heaven itself for ornament doth use,
And every fair with his fair doth rehearse,
Making a couplement of proud compare ⁵
With sun and moon, with earth and sea's rich gems,
With April's first-born flowers, and all things rare
That heaven's air in this huge rondure hems.
O, let me, true in love, but truly write,
And then believe me, my love is as fair ¹⁰
As any mother's child, though not so bright
As those gold candles fix'd in heaven's air.
Let them say more that like of hearsay
well :
I will not praise that purpose not to sell.

22

My glass shall not persuade me I am old
So long as youth and thou are of one date ;
But when in three time's furrows I behold,
Then look I death my days should expiate.
For all that beauty that doth cover thee ⁵
Is but the seemly raiment of my heart,
Which in thy breast doth live, as thine in
me ;
How can I then be elder than thou art ?

SONNETS

O, therefore, love, be of thyself so wary,
 As I not for myself but for thee will ; 10 Bearing thy heart, which I will keep so chary
 As tender nurse her babe from faring ill.
 Presume not on thy heart when mine is
 slain ;
 Thou gav'st me thine, not to give back
 again.

23

As an unperfect actor on the stage
 Who with his fear is put besides his part,
 Or some fierce thing replete with too much
 rage,
 Whose strength's abundance weakens his own heart ;
 So I, for fear of trust, forget to say 5
 The perfect ceremony of love's rite,
 And in mine own love's strength seem to
 decay,
 O'ercharg'd with burthen of mine own love's might.
 O, let my looks be then the eloquence
 And dumb presagers of my speaking breast ;
 Who plead for love, and look for recom- 11
 pense,
 More than that tongue that more hath more
 express'd.
 O, learn to read what silent love hath writ !
 To hear with eyes belongs to love's fine
 wit.

24

Mine eye hath play'd the painter and hath stell'd
 Thy beauty's form in table of my heart ;
 My body is the frame wherein 'tis held,
 And perspective it is best painter's art.
 For through the painter must you see his
 skill 5
 To find where your true image pictur'd lies,
 Which in my bosom's shop is hanging still,
 That hath his windows glazed with thine
 eyes.
 Now see what good turns eyes for eyes have
 done :
 Mine eyes have drawn thy shape, and thine 10
 for me
 Are windows to my breast, where through the sun
 Delights to peep, to gaze therein on thee ;
 Yet eyes this cunning want to grace their
 art :
 They draw but what they see, know not the heart.

25

Let those who are in favour with their stars
 Of public honour and proud titles boast, Whilst I, whom fortune of such triumph bars,
 Unlook'd for joy in that I honour most.

1312

Great princes' favourites their fair leaves
 spread 5
 But as the marigold at the sun's eye ;
 And in themselves their pride lies buried,
 For at a frown they in their glory die.
 The painful warrior famoused for fight,
 After a thousand victories once foil'd, 10
 Is from the book of honour razed quite,
 And all the rest forgot for which he toil'd.
 Then happy I, that love and am beloved Where I may not remove nor be removed.

26

Lord of my love, to whom in vassalage
 Thy merit hath my duty strongly knit,
 To thee I send this written embassy,
 To witness duty, not to show my wit ;
 Duty so great, which wit so poor as mine 5
 May make seem bare, in wanting words to show it,
 But that I hope some good conceit of thine
 In thy soul's thought, all naked, will bestow
 it ;
 Till whatsoever star that guides my moving
 Points on me graciously with fair aspect, 10
 And puts apparel on my tattered loving
 To show me worthy of thy sweet respect.
 Then may I dare to boast how I do
 love thee ;
 Till then not show my head where thou mayst prove me.

27

Weary with toil, I haste me to my bed,
 The dear repose for limbs with travel tired ;
 But then begins a journey in my head
 To work my mind when body's work's expired ;
 For then my thoughts, from far where I 5
 abide,
 Intend a zealous pilgrimage to thee,
 And keep my drooping eyelids open wide,
 Looking on darkness which the blind do see ;
 Save that my soul's imaginary sight 9
 Presents thy shadow to my sightless view,
 Which, like a jewel hung in ghastly night,
 Makes black night beautiful and her old face new.
 Lo, thus, by day my limbs, by night my 10
 mind,
 For thee, and for myself, no quiet find.

28

How can I then return in happy plight
 That am debarr'd the benefit of rest ?
 When day's oppression is not eas'd by
 night,
 But day by night and night by day 4
 oppress'd ?
 And each, though enemies to either's reign,
 Do in consent shake hands to torture me,
 The one by toil, the other to complain

SONNETS

How far I toil, still farther off from thee.
 I tell the day, to please him, thou art bright
 And dost him grace when clouds do blot the heaven ;¹⁰
 So flatter I the swart-complexion'd night,
 When sparkling stars twire not, thou gild'st
 the even.
 But day doth daily draw my sorrows longer,
 And night doth nightly make grief's strength seem stronger.

29

When in disgrace with Fortune and men's
 eyes,
 I all alone bewEEP my outcast state,
 And trouble deaf heaven with my bootless
 cries,
 And look upon myself, and curse my fate,
 Wishing me like to one more rich in hope, ⁵
 Featur'd like him, like him with friends
 possess'd,
 Desiring this man's art, and that man's
 scope,
 With what I most enjoy contented least ;
 Yet in these thoughts myself almost despising,⁹
 Haply I think on thee, and then my state,
 Like to the lark at break of day arising From sullen earth, sings hymns at heaven's gate ;
 For thy sweet love rememb'ed such wealth brings
 That then I scorn to change my state with kings.

30

When to the sessions of sweet silent
 thought
 I summon up remembrance of things past,
 I sigh the lack of many a thing I sought,
 And with old woes new wail my dear time's waste.
 Then can I drown an eye, unus'd to flow, ⁵
 For precious friends hid in death's dateless
 night,
 And weep afresh love's long since cancell'd
 woe,
 And moan th' expense of many a vanish'd
 sight.
 Then can I grieve at grievances foregone,
 And heavily from woe to woe tell o'er ¹⁰
 The sad account of fore-bemoaned moan,
 Which I new pay as if not paid before.
 But if the while I think on thee, dear
 friend,
 All losses are restor'd, and sorrows end.

31

Thy bosom is endeared with all hearts
 Which I by lacking have supposed dead ;
 And there reigns love and all love's loving
 parts,

And all those friends which I thought buried.
 How many a holy and obsequious tear ⁵
 Hath dear religious love stol'n from mine
 eye,
 As interest of the dead, which now appear
 But things remov'd that hidden in thee
 lie !
 Thou art the grave where buried love doth live,⁹
 Hung with the trophies of my lovers gone,
 Who all their parts of me to thee did give ;
 That due of many now is thine alone.
 Their images I lov'd I view in thee,
 And thou, all they, hast all the all of me.

32

If thou survive my well-contented day
 When that churl Death my bones with dust shall cover,
 And shalt by fortune once more re-survey
 These poor rude lines of thy deceased
 lover,
 Compare them with the bett'ring of the time,⁵
 And though they be outstripp'd by every pen,
 Reserve them for my love, not for their
 rhyme,
 Exceeded by the height of happier men.
 O, then vouchsafe me but this loving
 thought :
 ' Had my friend's Muse grown with this growing age,¹⁰
 A dearer birth than this his love had brought,
 To march in ranks of better equipage ;
 But since he died, and poets better prove,
 Theirs for their style I'll read, his for his love'.

33

Full many a glorious morning have I seen Flatter the mountain-tops with sovereign
 eye,
 Kissing with golden face the meadows
 green,
 Gilding pale streams with heavenly alchemy ;
 Anon permit the basest clouds to ride ⁵
 With ugly rack on his celestial face,
 And from the forlorn world his visage hide,
 Stealing unseen to west with this disgrace.
 Even so my sun one early morn did shine
 With all triumphant splendour on my brow ;¹⁰
 But out, alack ! he was but one hour
 mine,
 The region cloud hath mask'd him from me
 now.
 Yet him for this my love no whit dis-
 daineth ;
 Suns of the world may stain when heaven's sun staineth.

34

Why didst thou promise such a beauteous day,
 And make me travel forth without my cloak,
 To let base clouds o'ertake me in my way,
 Hiding thy brav'ry in their rotten smoke?
 'Tis not enough that through the cloud thou break
 To dry the rain on my storm-beaten face,
 For no man well of such a salve can speak
 That heals the wound, and cures not the disgrace.
 Nor can thy shame give physic to my grief;
 Though thou repent, yet I have still the loss.
 Th' offender's sorrow lends but weak relief
 To him that bears the strong offence's cross.
 Ah! but those tears are pearl which thy love sheds,
 And they are rich, and ransom all ill
 deeds.

35

No more be griev'd at that which thou hast
 done:
 Roses have thorns, and silver fountains
 mud;
 Clouds and eclipses stain both moon and
 sun,
 And loathsome canker lives in sweetest bud.
 All men make faults, and even I in this,
 Authorizing thy trespass with compare,
 Myself corrupting, salving thy amiss, Excusing thy sins more than thy sins are;
 For to thy sensual fault I bring in sense—
 Thy adverse party is thy advocate—
 And 'gainst myself a lawful plea commence;
 Such civil war is in my love and hate
 That I an accessory needs must be To that sweet thief which sourly robs
 from me.

36

Let me confess that we two must be twain,
 Although our undivided loves are one;
 So shall those blots that do with me remain,
 Without thy help, by me be borne alone.
 In our two loves there is but one respect,
 Though in our lives a separable spite,
 Which though it alter not love's sole effect,
 Yet doth it steal sweet hours from love's
 delight.
 I may not evermore acknowledge thee,
 Lest my bewailed guilt should do thee
 shame;
 Nor thou with public kindness honour me,
 Unless thou take that honour from thy
 name.
 But do not so; I love thee in such sort
 As, thou being mine, mine is thy good report.

37

As a decrepit father takes Delight
 To see his active child do deeds of youth,
 So I, made lame by Fortune's dearest spite, Take all my comfort of thy worth and
 truth;
 For whether beauty, birth, or wealth, or
 wit,
 Or any of these all, or all, or more,
 Entitled in thy parts do crowned sit,
 I make my love engrafted to this store.
 So then I am not lame, poor, nor despis'd, Whilst that this shadow doth such substance give
 That I in thy abundance am suffic'd,
 And by a part of all thy glory live.
 Look what is best, that best I wish in
 thee;
 This wish I have; then ten times happy
 me!

38

How can my Muse want subject to invent, While thou dost breathe that pour'st into my verse
 Thine own sweet argument, too excellent
 For every vulgar paper to rehearse?
 O, give thyself the thanks if aught in me
 Worthy perusal stand against thy sight;
 For who's so dumb that cannot write to
 thee,
 When thou thy self dost give invention
 light?
 Be thou the tenth Muse, ten times more in
 worth
 Than those old nine which rhymers invocate;
 And he that calls on thee, let him bring
 forth
 Eternal numbers to outlive long date.
 If my slight Muse do please these curious
 days,
 The pain be mine, but thine shall be the praise.

39

O, how thy worth with manners may I sing,
 When thou art all the better part of me?
 What can mine own praise to mine own self bring?
 And what is't but mine own, when I praise
 thee?
 Even for this let us divided live,
 And our dear love lose name of single one,
 That by this separation I may give That due to thee which thou deserv'st
 alone.
 O absence, what a torment wouldst thou
 prove,
 Were it not thy sour leisure gave sweet
 leave
 To entertain the time with thoughts of love;

SONNETS

Which time and thoughts so sweetly doth deceive,
And that thou teachest how to make one
twain,
By praising him here who doth hence remain !

40

Take all my loves, my love, yea, take them
all ;
What hast thou then more than thou hadst
before ?

No love, my love, that thou mayst true love
call ;

All mine was thine before thou hadst this
more.

Then if for my love thou my love receivest,
I cannot blame thee, for my love thou usest ;
But yet be blam'd, if thou thyself deceivest
By wilful taste of what thyself refuseth.

I do forgive thy robb'ry, gentle thief, 9
Although thou steal thee all my poverty ;
And yet love knows it is a greater grief
To bear love's wrong than hate's known injury.

Lascivious grace, in whom all ill well
shows,
Kill me with spites ; yet we must not be foes.

41

Those pretty wrongs that liberty commits When I am sometime absent from thy
heart,

Thy beauty and thy years full well befits,
For still temptation follows where thou art.
Gentle thou art, and therefore to be won,
Beauteous thou art, therefore to be assailed ;
And when a woman woos, what woman's
son 7

Will sourly leave her till she have prevailed ?
Ay me ! but yet thou mightst my seat
forbear,

And chide thy beauty and thy straying
youth, 10

Who lead thee in their riot even there Where thou art forc'd to break a twofold
truth :

Hers, by thy beauty tempting her to thee,
Thine, by thy beauty being false to me.

42

That thou hast her, it is not all my grief,
And yet it may be said I lov'd her dearly ;
That she hath thee is of my wailing chief,
A loss in love that touches me more nearly.
Loving offenders, thus I will excuse ye : 5
Thou dost love her because thou know'st I love her,

And for my sake even so doth she abuse me,
Suff'ring my friend for my sake to approve
her.

If I lose thee, my loss is my love's gain,
And, losing her, my friend hath found that loss ; 10

Both find each other, and I lose both twain,
And both for my sake lay on me this cross.

But here's the joy : my friend and I are
one ;

Sweet flattery ! then she loves but me alone.

43

When most I wink, then do mine eyes best
see,

For all the day they view things un-respected ;

But when I sleep, in dreams they look on
thee,

And, darkly bright, are bright in dark directed ;

Then thou whose shadow shadows doth make bright, 5

How would thy shadow's form form happy
show

To the clear day with thy much clearer
light,

When to unseeing eyes thy shade shines so !
How would, I say, mine eyes be blessed
made

By looking on thee in the living day, 10
When in dead night thy fair imperfect
shade

Through heavy sleep on sightless eyes doth
stay !

All days are nights to see till I see
thee,

And nights bright days when dreams do show thee me.

44

If the dull substance of my flesh were
thought,

Injurious distance should not stop my way ;
For then, despite of space, I would be brought

From limits far remote, where thou dost
stay.

No matter then, although my foot did
stand 5

Upon the farthest earth remov'd from thee,
For nimble thought can jump both sea and land

As soon as think the place where he would
be.

But ah ! thought kills me that I am not
thought,

To leap large lengths of miles when thou art gone, 10

But that, so much of earth and water
wrought,

I must attend time's leisure with my moan,
Receiving nought by elements so slow

But heavy tears, badges of either's woe.

45

The other two, slight air and purging fire,
Are both with thee, wherever I abide ;
The first my thought, the other my desire,
These present-absent with swift motion slide.

For when these quicker elements are gone
In tender embassy of love to thee,
My life, being made of four, with two alone Sinks down to death, oppress'd with
melancholy ;

Until life's composition be recured
By those swift messengers return'd from
thee,

Who even but now come back again,
assured

Of thy fair health, recounting it to me.
This told, I joy ; but then no longer glad,
I send them back again, and straight grow sad.

46

Mine eye and heart are at a mortal war
How to divide the conquest of thy sight ;
Mine eye my heart thy picture's sight
would bar,

My heart mine eye the freedom of that right.

My heart doth plead that thou in him dost
lie,

A closet never pierc'd with crystal eyes ;
But the defendant doth that plea deny,
And says in him thy fair appearance lies.
To 'cide this title is impanelled

A quest of thoughts, all tenants to the
heart ;

And by their verdict is determined
The clear eye's moiety and the dear heart's part—

As thus : mine eye's due is thine outward part,

And my heart's right thine inward love of heart.

47

Betwixt mine eye and heart a league is took,
And each doth good turns now unto the other.

When that mine eye is famish'd for a look,
Or heart in love with sighs himself doth
smother ;

With my love's picture then my eye doth
feast,

And to the painted banquet bids my heart ;
Another time mine eye is my heart's guest,
And in his thoughts of love doth share a
part ;

So, either by thy picture or my love,
Thyself away art present still with me ;
For thou not farther than my thoughts
canst move,

And I am still with them, and they with
thee ;

Or if they sleep, thy picture in my sight Awakes my heart to heart's and eye's delight.

48

How careful was I when I took my way,
Each trifle under truest bars to thrust,
That to my use it might unused stay
From hands of falsehood, in sure wards of trust !

But thou, to whom my jewels trifles are, 5
Most worthy comfort, now my greatest
grief,

Thou, best of dearest, and mine only care,
Art left the prey of every vulgar thief.

Thee have I not lock'd up in any chest,
Save where thou art not, though I feel thou
art,

Within the gentle closure of my breast,
From whence at pleasure thou mayst come and part ;

And even thence thou wilt be stol'n, I
fear,

For truth proves thievish for a prize so
dear.

49

Against that time, if ever that time come,
When I shall see thee frown on my defects,
When as thy love hath cast his utmost sum,
Call'd to that audit by advis'd respects ;
Against that time when thou shalt strangely pass

And scarcely greet me with that sun, thine
eye,

When love, converted from the thing it was,
Shall reasons find of settled gravity—

Against that time do I ensconce me here
Within the knowledge of mine own desert,
And this my hand against myself uprear, 11
To guard the lawful reasons on thy part :

To leave poor me thou hast the strength of laws,

Since why to love I can allege no cause.

50

How heavy do I journey on the way,
When what I seek—my weary travel's
end—

Doth teach that ease and that repose to say
' Thus far the miles are measur'd from thy
friend ! '

The beast that bears me, tired with my woe,
Plods dully on, to bear that weight in me,
As if by some instinct the wretch did know
His rider lov'd not speed being made from
thee.

The bloody spur cannot provoke him on 6
That sometimes anger thrusts into his hide,
Which heavily he answers with a groan,
More sharp to me than spurring to his side ;
For that same groan doth put this in my
mind :

My grief lies onward, and my joy behind.

51

Thus can my love excuse the slow offence
Of my dull bearer, when from thee I speed:
From where thou art why should I haste me
thence?

Till I return, of posting is no need.
O, what excuse will my poor beast then
find,

When swift extremity can seem but slow?
Then should I spur, though mounted on the
wind;

In winged speed no motion shall I know.
Then can no horse with my desire keep pace;

Therefore desire, of perfect'st love being
made,

Shall weigh no dull flesh in his fiery race;
But love, for love, thus shall excuse my jade:

Since from thee going he went wilful
slow,

Towards thee I'll run, and give him leave to go.

52

So am I as the rich whose blessed key Can bring him to his sweet up-locked
treasure,

The which he will not ev'ry hour survey,
For blunting the fine point of seldom
pleasure.

Therefore are feasts so so'lemn and so rare,
Since seldom coming, in the long year set,
Like stones of worth they thinly placed are,
Or captain jewels in the carcanet.

So is the time that keeps you as my chest,
Or as the wardrobe which the robe doth hide,

To make some special instant special blest
By new unfolding his imprison'd pride.

Blessed are you, whose worthiness gives
scope,

Being had, to triumph, being lack'd, to hope.

53

What is your substance, whereof are you
made,

That millions of strange shadows on you tend?

Since every one hath, every one, one
shade,

And you, but one, can every shadow lend.
Describe Adonis, and the counterfeit

Is poorly imitated after you;
On Helen's cheek all art of beauty set,

And you in Grecian tires are painted new.
Speak of the spring and foison of the year:

The one doth shadow of your beauty show,
The other as your bounty doth appear,

And you in every blessed shape we know.
In all external grace you have some part,

But you like none, none you, for constant
heart.

54

O, how much more doth beauty beauteous
seem

By that sweet ornament which truth doth
give!

The rose looks fair, but fairer we it deem
For that sweet odour which doth in it live.

The canker-blooms have full as deep a dye
As the perfumed tincture of the roses,
Hang on such thorns, and play as wantonly

When summer's breath their masked buds discloses;

But for their virtue only is their show,
They lived unwoo'd, and unrespected fade;

Die to themselves. Sweet roses do not so:
Of their sweet deaths are sweetest odours
made.

And so of you, beauteous and lovely
youth,

When that shall vade, by verse distills your truth.

55

Not marble nor the gilded monuments
Of princes shall outlive this pow'rful
rhyme;

But you shall shine more bright in these contents

Than unswept stone, besmear'd with sluttish time.

When wasteful war shall statues overturn,
And broils root out the work of masonry,

Nor Mars his sword nor war's quick fire shall burn

The living record of your memory.

'Gainst death and all-oblivious enmity

Shall you pace forth; your praise shall still find room,

Even in the eyes of all posterity

That wear this world out to the ending doom.

So, till the judgment that yourself arise,
You live in this, and dwell in lovers' eyes.

56

Sweet love, renew thy force; be it not said

Thy edge should blunter be than appetite,
Which but to-day by feeding is allay'd,

To-morrow sharp'n'd in his former might.
So, love, be thou; although to-day thou fill

Thy hungry eyes, even till they wink with fulness,

To-morrow see again, and do not kill

The spirit of love with a perpetual dullness.
Let this sad int'rim like the ocean be

Which parts the shore where two contracted new

Come daily to the banks, that, when they see

SONNETS

Return of love, more blest may be the view;
Or call it winter, which, being full of care,
Makes summer's welcome thrice more wish'd, more rare.

57

Being your slave, what should I do but tend
Upon the hours and times of your desire ?
I have no precious time at all to spend,
Nor services to do, till you require.
Nor dare I chide the world-without-end
hour,
Whilst I, my sovereign, watch the clock for
you,
Nor think the bitterness of absence sour,
When you have bid your servant once
adieu;
Nor dare I question with my jealous
thought
Where you may be, or your affairs suppose,
But, like a sad slave, stay and think of nought
Save where you are how happy you make those.
So true a fool is love that in your will,
Though you do anything, he thinks no ill.

58

That god forbid that made me first your slave
I should in thought control your times of
pleasure,
Or at your hand th' account of hours to crave,
Being your vassal bound to stay your leisure !
O, let me suffer, being at your beck,
Th' imprison'd absence of your liberty,
And patience, tame to sufferance, bide each
check
Without accusing you of injury.
Be where you list; your charter is so strong
That you yourself may privilege your time
To what you will; to you it doth belong
Your self to pardon of self-doing crime.
I am to wait, though waiting so be hell;
Not blame your pleasure, be it ill or well.

59

If there be nothing new, but that which is Hath been before, how are our brains
beguil'd,
Which labouring for invention bear amiss
The second burthen of a former child !
O, that record could with a backward look,
Even of five hundred courses of the sun,
Show me your image in some antique book,
Since mind at first in character was done !
That I might see what the old world could
say

To this composed wonder of your frame ;
Whether we are mended, or whe'er better
they,
Or whether revolution be the same.
O, sure I am, the wits of former days
To subjects worse have given admiring praise.

60

Like as the waves make towards the pebbled shore,
So do our minutes hasten to their end ;
Each changing place with that which goes
before,
In sequent toil all forwards do contend.
Nativity, once in the main of light, Crawls to maturity, wherewith being
crown'd,
Crooked eclipses 'gainst his glory fight,
And Time that gave doth now his gift con-
found.
Time doth transfix the flourish set on
youth,
And delves the parallels in beauty's brow,
Feeds on the rarities of nature's truth,
And nothing stands but for his scythe to mow.
And yet to times in hope my verse shall
stand,
Praising thy worth, despite his cruel
hand.

61

Is it thy will thy image should keep open
My heavy eyelids to the weary night ?
Dost thou desire my slumbers should be broken,
While shadows like to thee do mock my
sight ?
Is it thy spirit that thou send'st from thee
So far from home into my deeds to pry,
To find out shames and idle hours in me,
The scope and tenour of thy jealousy ?
O no ! thy love, though much, is not so great :
It is my love that keeps mine eye awake ;
Mine own true love that doth my rest defeat
To play the watchman ever for thy sake.
For thee watch I, whilst thou dost wake elsewhere,
From me far off, with others all too near.

62

Sin of self-love possesseth all mine eye,
And all my soul, and all my every part ;
And for this sin there is no remedy,
It is so grounded inward in my heart.
Methinks no face so gracious is as mine,
No shape so true, no truth of such account,
And for myself mine own worth do define
As I all other in all worths surmount.
But when my glass shows me myself indeed,

Beated and chopt with tann'd antiquity, 10
Mine own self-love quite contrary I read ;
Self so self-loving were iniquity.

'Tis thee, my self, that for myself I praise,
Painting my age with beauty of thy days.

63

Against my love shall be as I am now, With Time's injurious hand crush'd and o'erworn ;

When hours have drain'd his blood, and fill'd his brow

With lines and wrinkles ; when his youthful morn

Hath travell'd on to age's steepy night ; 5
And all those beauties whereof now he's
king

Are vanishing or vanish'd out of sight,
Stealing away the treasure of his spring—
For such a time do I now fortify Against confounding age's cruel knife, 10
That he shall never cut from memory
My sweet love's beauty, though my lover's
life.

His beauty shall in these black lines be
seen,

And they shall live, and he in them still green.

64

When I have seen by Time's fell hand defaced

The rich proud cost of outworn buried age ;
When sometime lofty towers I see down-
rased,

And brass eternal slave to mortal rage ;
When I have seen the hungry ocean gain 5
Advantage on the kingdom of the shore,
And the firm soil win of the wat'ry main,
Increasing store with loss, and loss with
store ;

When I have seen such interchange of state,
Or state itself confounded to decay ; 10
Ruin hath taught me thus to ruminat—
That Time will come and take my love
away.

This thought is as a death, which cannot choose

But weep to have that which it fears to lose.

65

Since brass, nor stone, nor earth, nor boundless sea,

But sad mortality o'ersways their power,
How with this rage shall beauty hold a plea,
Whose action is no stronger than a flower ?
O, how shall summer's honey breath hold 5
out

Against the wrackful siege of batt'ring days,
When rocks impregnable are not so stout,
Nor gates of steel so strong, but Time
decays ?

O fearful meditation ! Where, alack, Shall Time's best jewel from Time's chest lie hid ? 10

Or what strong hand can hold his swift foot
back ?

Or who his spoil of beauty can forbid ?

O, none, unless this miracle have might,
That in black ink my love may still shine bright.

66

Tir'd with all these, for restful death I cry :
As, to behold desert a beggar born,
And needy nothing trimm'd in jollity,
And purest faith unhappily forsworn,
And gilded honour shamefully misplac'd, 5
And maiden virtue rudely strumpeted,
And right perfection wrongfully disgrac'd,
And strength by limping sway disabled,
And art made tongue-tied by authority,
And folly, doctor-like, controlling skill, 10
And simple truth miscall'd simplicity,
And captive good attending captain ill—

Tir'd with all these, from these would I
be gone,

Save that, to die, I leave my love alone.

67

Ah ! wherefore with infection should he live
And with his presence grace impiety,
That sin by him advantage should achieve,
And lace itself with his society ?

Why should false painting imitate his cheek, 5

And steal dead seeming of his living hue ?
Why should poor beauty indirectly seek Roses of shadow, since his rose is true ?
Why should he live now Nature bankrupt is, Beggard of blood to blush through lively 10 veins ?

For she hath no exchequer now but his,
And, proud of many, lives upon his gains.

O, him she stores, to show what wealth
she had

In days long since, before these last so bad.

68

Thus is his cheek the map of days outworn,
When beauty liv'd and died as flowers do
now,

Before these bastard signs of fair were born,
Or durst inhabit on a living brow ;

Before the golden tresses of the dead, 5
The right of sepulchres, were shorn away
To live a second life on second head,
Ere beauty's dead fleece made another gay.

In him those holy antique hours are seen,
Without all ornament, itself and true, 10

Making no summer of another's green,
Robbing no old to dress his beauty new ;

And him as for a map doth Nature store,
To show false Art what beauty was of yore.

69

Those parts of thee that the world's eye
doth view
Want nothing that the thought of hearts can mend.
All tongues, the voice of souls, give thee that due,
Utt'ring bare truth, even so as foes commend.
Thine outward thus with outward praise is
crown'd ;
But those same tongues that give thee so thine own
In other accents do this praise confound
By seeing farther than the eye hath shown.
They look into the beauty of thy mind,
And that, in guess, they measure by thy
deeds ;
Then, churls, their thoughts, although their eyes were kind,
To thy fair flower add the rank smell of
weeds.
But why thy odour matcheth not thy
show,
The soil is this—that thou dost common grow.

70

That thou art blam'd shall not be thy defect,
For slander's mark was ever yet the fair ;
The ornament of beauty is suspect,
A crow that flies in heaven's sweetest air.
So thou be good, slander doth but approve Thy worth the greater, being woo'd of time;
For canker vice the sweetest buds doth love,
And thou present'st a pure unstained prime.
Thou hast pass'd by the ambush of young
days,
Either not assail'd, or victor being charg'd ;
Yet this thy praise cannot be so thy praise
To tie up envy, evermore enlarg'd.
If some suspect of ill mask'd not thy
show,
Then thou alone kingdoms of hearts
shouldst owe.

71

No longer mourn for me when I am dead
Than you shall hear the surly sullen bell
Give warning to the world that I am fled From this vile world, with vilest worms to dwell.
Nay, if you read this line, remember not
The hand that writ it ; for I love you so,
That I in your sweet thoughts would be
forgot,
If thinking on me then should make you
woe.
O, if, I say, you look upon this verse,
When I perhaps compounded am with clay,
Do not so much as my poor name rehearse,

But let your love even with my life decay ;
Lest the wise world should look into your moan,
And mock you with me after I am gone.

72

O, lest the world should task you to recite
What merit liv'd in me, that you should
love
After my death, dear love, forget me quite,
For you in me can nothing worthy prove ;
Unless you would devise some virtuous lie,
To do more for me than mine own desert,
And hang more praise upon deceased I
Than niggard truth would willingly impart.
O, lest your true love may seem false in
this,
That you for love speak well of me untrue,
My name be buried where my body is,
And live no more to shame nor me nor you !
For I am sham'd by that which I bring
forth,
And so should you, to love things nothing worth.

73

That time of year thou mayst in me behold
When yellow leaves, or none, or few, do hang Upon those boughs which shake against the
cold,
Bare ruin'd choirs where late the sweet birds sang.
In me thou seest the twilight of such day
As after sunset fadeth in the west,
Which by and by black night doth take
away,
Death's second self, that seals up all in rest.
In me thou seest the glowing of such fire
That on the ashes of his youth doth lie,
As the death-bed whereon it must expire,
Consum'd with that which it was nourish'd
by.
This thou perceiv'st which makes thy love more strong,
To love that well which thou must leave ere long.

74

But be contented. When that fell arrest
Without all bail shall carry me away,
My life hath in this line some interest,
Which for memorial still with thee shall
stay.
When thou reviewest this, thou dost review
The very part was consecrate to thee.
The earth can have but earth, which is his due ;
My spirit is thine, the better part of me.
So then thou hast but lost the dregs of life,
The prey of worms, my body being dead ;
The coward conquest of a wretch's knife,

Too base of thee to be remembered. 12
The worth of that is that which it contains,
And that is this, and this with thee remains.

75

So are you to my thoughts as food to life,
Or as sweet-season'd showers are to the
ground ;
And for the peace of you I hold such strife
As 'twixt a miser and his wealth is found
Now proud as an enjoyer, and anon 5 Doubting the filching age will steal his
treasure ;
Now counting best to be with you alone
Then better'd that the world may see my
pleasure ;
Sometime all full with feasting on your
sight,
And by and by clean starved for a look ; 10
Possessing or pursuing no delight
Save what is had or must from you be took.
Thus do I pine and surfeit day by day,
Or gluttoning on all, or all away.

76

Why is my verse so barren of new pride ?
So far from variation or quick change ?
Why, with the time, do I not glance aside
To new-found methods and to compounds
strange ?
Why write I still all one, ever the same, 5
And keep invention in a noted weed,
That every word doth almost tell my name,
Showing their birth, and where they did
proceed ?
O, know, sweet love, I always write of
you,
And you and love are still my argument ; 10
So all my best is dressing old words new,
Spending again what is already spent ;
For as the sun is daily new and old,
So is my love still telling what is told.

77

Thy glass will show thee how thy beauties
wear,
Thy dial how thy precious minutes waste ;
The vacant leaves thy mind's imprint will
bear,
And of this book this learning mayst thou
taste.
The wrinkles which thy glass will truly
show 5
Of mouthed graves will give thee memory ;
Thou by thy dial's shady stealth mayst
know
Time's thievish progress to eternity.
Look what thy memory cannot contain Commit to these waste blanks, and thou shalt find 10

Those children nurs'd, deliver'd from thy
brain,
To take a new acquaintance of thy mind.
These offices, so oft as thou wilt look,
Shall profit thee, and much enrich thy book.

78

So oft have I invok'd thee for my Muse,
And found such fair assistance in my verse,
As every alien pen hath got my use,
And under thee their poesy disperse.
Thine eyes, that taught the dumb on high 5
to sing
And heavy ignorance aloft to fly,
Have added feathers to the learned's wing
And given grace a double majesty.
Yet be most proud of that which I compile,
Whose influence is thine, and born of thee :
In others' works thou dost but mend the style, 11
And arts with thy sweet graces graced be ;
But thou art all my art, and dost advance
As high as learning my rude ignorance.

79

Whilst I alone did call upon thy aid,
My verse alone had all thy gentle grace ;
But now my gracious numbers are decay'd,
And my sick Muse doth give another place.
I grant, sweet love, thy lovely argument 5
Deserves the travail of a worthier pen ;
Yet what of thee thy poet doth invent
He robs thee of, and pays it thee again. 8
He lends thee virtue, and he stole that word
From thy behaviour ; beauty doth he give,
And found it in thy cheek ; he can afford
No praise to thee but what in thee doth live.
Then thank him not for that which he doth say,
Since what he owes thee thou thyself dost
pay.

80

O, how I faint when I of you do write,
Knowing a better spirit doth use your name
And in the praise thereof spends all his might
To make me tongue-tied, speaking of your fame ! 4
But since your worth, wide as the ocean is,
The humble as the proudest sail doth bear,
My saucy bark, inferior far to his,
On your broad main doth wilfully appear.
Your shallowest help will hold me up afloat,
Whilst he upon your soundless deep doth
ride ; 10
Or, being wreck'd, I am a worthless boat,
He of tall building and of goodly pride.
Then if he thrive, and I be cast away,
The worst was this : my love was my decay.

81

Or I shall live your epitaph to make,
Or you survive when I in earth am rotten;
From hence your memory death cannot
take,

Although in me each part will be forgotten.
Your name from hence immortal life shall have,

Though I, once gone, to all the world must
die;

The earth can yield me but a common
grave,

When you entombed in men's eyes shall lie.
Your monument shall be my gentle verse,
Which eyes not yet created shall o'er-read;
And tongues to be your being shall rehearse,
When all the breathers of this world are
dead.

You still shall live, such virtue hath my
pen,

Where breath most breathes, even in the mouths of men.

82

I grant thou wert not married to my Muse,
And therefore mayst without attaint o'er-
look

The dedicated words which writers use
Of their fair subject, blessing every book.
Thou art as fair in knowledge as in hue,
Finding thy worth a limit past my praise
And therefore art enforc'd to seek anew
Some fresher stamp of the time-bettering days.

And do so, love; yet when they have devis'd

What strained touches rhetoric can lend,
Thou truly fair wert truly sympathiz'd
In true plain words by thy true-telling
friend;

And thy gross painting might be better
us'd

Where cheeks need blood; in thee it is abus'd.

83

I never saw that you did painting need,
And therefore to your fair no painting set;
I found, or thought I found, you did exceed
The barren tender of a poet's debt;
And therefore have I slept in your report,
That you your self, being extant, well might show

How far a modern quill doth come too
short,

Speaking of worth, what worth in you doth
grow.

This silence for my sin you did impute,
Which shall be most my glory, being dumb;
For I impair not beauty, being mute,
When others would give life, and bring a tomb.

There lives more life in one of your fair
eyes

Than both your poets can in praise devise.

84

Who is it that says most which can say
more

Than this rich praise—that you alone are
you?

In whose confine immured is the store
Which should example where your equal grew?

Lean penury within that pen doth dwell
That to his subject lends not some small glory;

But he that writes of you, if he can tell
That you are you, so dignifies his story.
Let him but copy what in you is writ,
Not making worse what nature made so
clear,

And such a counterpart shall fame his wit,
Making his style admired every where.

You to your beauteous blessings add a
curse,

Being fond on praise, which makes your praises worse.

85

My tongue-tied Muse in manners holds her
still,

While comments of your praise, richly
compil'd,

Reserve their character with golden quill
And precious phrase by all the Muses fil'd,
I think good thoughts, whilst other write good words,

And, like unlettered clerk, still cry 'Amen'
To every hymn that ab'le spirit affords
In polish'd form of well-refined pen.

Hearing you prais'd, I say 'Tis so, 'tis
true',

And to the most of praise add something
more;

But that is in my thought, whose love to
you,

Though words come hindmost, holds his rank before.

Then others for the breath of words respect,

Me for my dumb thoughts, speaking in effect.

86

Was it the proud full sail of his great verse,
Bound for the prize of all-too-precious you,
That did my ripe thoughts in my brain
inhearse,

Making their tomb the womb wherein they grew?

Was it his spirit, by spirits taught to write
Above a mortal pitch, that struck me dead?
No, neither he, nor his compeers by night

Giving him aid, my verse astonished.
 He nor that affable familiar ghost
 Which nightly gulls him with intelligence,
 As victors, of my silence cannot boast : 11
 I was not sick of any fear from thence.
 But when your countenance fill'd up his line,
 Then lack'd I matter ; that enfeebled
 mine.

87

Farewell ! thou art too dear for my possessing,
 And like enough thou know'st thy estimate.
 The charter of thy worth gives thee releasing ;
 My bonds in thee are all determinate. 4
 For how do I hold thee but by thy granting ?
 And for that riches where is my deserving ?
 The cause of this fair gift in me is wanting,
 And so my patent back again is swerving.
 Thy self thou gav'st, thy own worth then not knowing,
 Or me, to whom thou gav'st it, else mistaking ; 10
 So thy great gift, upon misprision growing, Comes home again, on better judgment making.
 Thus have I had thee, as a dream doth flatter :
 In sleep a king, but waking no such matter.

88

When thou shalt be dispos'd to set me light,
 And place my merit in the eye of scorn,
 Upon thy side against myself I'll fight,
 And prove thee virtuous, though thou art
 forsworn.
 With mine own weakness being best
 acquainted,
 Upon thy part I can set down a story
 Of faults conceal'd, wherein I am attainted ;
 That thou, in losing me, shall win much
 glory.
 And I by this will be a gainer too ;
 For bending all my loving thoughts on
 thee, 10
 The injuries that to myself I do,
 Doing thee vantage, double vantage me.
 Such is my love, to thee I so belong,
 That for thy right myself will bear all wrong.

89

Say that thou didst forsake me for some fault,
 And I will comment upon that offence ;
 Speak of my lameness, and I straight will halt ;
 Against thy reasons making no defence.
 Thou canst not, love, disgrace me half so
 ill, 5

To set a form upon desired change,
 As I'll myself disgrace, knowing thy will.
 I will acquaintance strangle and look
 strange,
 Be absent from thy walks, and in my
 tongue
 Thy sweet beloved name no more shall dwell, 10
 Lest I, too much profane, should do it
 wrong,
 And haply of our old acquaintance tell.
 For thee, against myself I'll vow debate,
 For I must ne'er love him whom thou dost hate.

90

Then hate me when thou wilt ; if ever,
 now ;
 Now while the world is bent my deeds to
 cross,
 Join with the spite of fortune, make me
 bow,
 And do not drop in for an after-loss.
 Ah, do not, when my heart hath scap'd this
 sorrow, 5
 Come in the rearward of a conquer'd woe ;
 Give not a windy night a rainy morrow,
 To linger out a purpos'd overthrow.
 If thou wilt leave me, do not leave me
 last,
 When other petty griefs have done their spite, 10
 But in the onset come ; so shall I taste
 At first the very worst of fortune's might ;
 And other strains of woe, which now seem
 woe,
 Compar'd with loss of thee will not seem so.

91

Some glory in their birth, some in their
 skill,
 Some in their wealth, some in their body's
 force ;
 Some in their garments, though new-fangled ill ;
 Some in their hawks and hounds, some in their horse ;
 And every humour hath his adjunct
 pleasure, 5
 Wherein it finds a joy above the rest ;
 But these particulars are not my measure :
 All these I better in one general best.
 Thy love is better than high birth to me, Richer than wealth, prouder than garments'
 cost, 10
 Of more delight than hawks and horses be ;
 And, having thee, of all men's pride I boast—
 Wretched in this alone, that thou mayst
 take
 All this away, and me most wretched make.

92

But do thy worst to steal thy self away,
 For term of life thou art assured mine;
 And life no longer than thy love will stay,
 For it depends upon that love of thine. 4
 Then need I not to fear the worst of wrongs,
 When in the least of them my life hath end.
 I see a better state to me belongs
 Than that which on thy humour doth depend.
 Thou canst not vex me with inconstant
 mind,
 Since that my life on thy revolt doth lie. 10
 O what a happy title do I find,
 Happy to have thy love, happy to die!
 But what's so blessed-fair that fears no
 blot?
 Thou mayst be false, and yet I know it
 not.

93

So shall I live, supposing thou art true,
 Like a deceived husband; so love's face
 May still seem love to me, though alter'd new—
 Thy looks with me, thy heart in other
 place. 4
 For there can live no hatred in thine eye;
 Therefore in that I cannot know thy
 change.
 In many's looks the false heart's history
 Is writ in moods and frowns and wrinkles
 strange;
 But heaven in thy creation did decree
 That in thy face sweet love should ever dwell; 10
 Whate'er thy thoughts or thy heart's workings be,
 Thy looks should nothing thence but sweetness tell.
 How like Eve's apple doth thy beauty
 grow,
 If thy sweet virtue answer not thy show!

94

They that have power to hurt and will do
 none,
 That do not do the thing they most do show,
 Who, moving others, are themselves as
 stone,
 Unmoved, cold, and to temptation slow—
 They rightly do inherit Heaven's graces, 5
 And husband nature's riches from expense;
 They are the lords and owners of their faces,
 Others but stewards of their excellence.
 The summer's flow'r is to the summer sweet
 Though to itself it only live and die; 10
 But if that flow'r with base infection meet,
 The basest weed outbraves his dignity.
 For sweetest things turn sourest by their
 deeds:
 Lilies that fester smell far worse than weeds.

95

How sweet and lovely dost thou make the
 shame
 Which, like a canker in the fragrant rose,
 Doth spot the beauty of thy budding name!
 O, in what sweets dost thou thy sins enclose! 4
 That tongue that tells the story of thy days,
 Making lascivious comments on thy sport,
 Cannot dispraise but in a kind of praise:
 Naming thy name blesses an ill report.
 O, what a mansion have those vices got 9
 Which for their habitation chose out thee,
 Where beauty's veil doth cover every blot,
 And all things turns to fair that eyes can see!
 Take heed, dear heart, of this large privilege;
 The hardest knife ill-us'd doth lose his edge.

96

Some say thy fault is youth, some wanton-
 ness;
 Some say thy grace is youth and gentle
 sport;
 Both grace and faults are lov'd of more and
 less:
 Thou mak'st faults graces that to thee resort.
 As on the finger of a throned queen 5
 The basest jewel will be well esteem'd;
 So are those errors that in thee are seen
 To truths translated and for true things deem'd.
 How many lambs might the stern wolf betray, 9
 If like a lamb he could his looks translate!
 How many gazers mightst thou lead away,
 If thou wouldst use the strength of all thy
 state!
 But do not so; I love thee in such sort,
 As, thou being mine, mine is thy good
 report.

97

How like a winter hath my absence been
 From thee, the pleasure of the fleeting year!
 What freezings have I felt, what dark days
 seen!
 What old December's bareness everywhere!
 And yet this time remov'd was summer's
 time, 5
 The teeming autumn, big with rich increase,
 Bearing the wanton burden of the prime,
 Like widowed wombs after their lord's decease;
 Yet this abundant issue seem'd to me 9
 But hope of orphans, and unfathered fruit;
 For summer and his pleasures wait on thee,
 And, thou away, the very birds are mute;
 Or, if they sing, 'tis with so dull a cheer That leaves look pale, dreading the winter's near.

98

From you have I been absent in the spring, When proud-pied April, dress'd in all his
 trim,
 Hath put a spirit of youth in every thing,
 That heavy Saturn laugh'd and leap'd with
 him.
 Yet nor the lays of birds, nor the sweet smell⁵
 Of different flowers in odour and in hue,
 Could make me any summer's story tell,
 Or from their proud lap pluck them where they grew ;
 Nor did I wonder at the lily's white,⁹
 Nor praise the deep vermilion in the rose :
 They were but sweet, but figures of delight,
 Drawn after you, you pattern of all those.
 Yet seem'd it winter still, and, you away,
 As with your shadow I with these did play.

99

The forward violet thus did I chide :
 Sweet thief, whence didst thou steal thy sweet that smells,
 If not from my love's breath ? The purple
 pride
 Which on thy soft cheek for complexion dwells
 In my love's veins thou hast too grossly dy'd.⁵
 The lily I condemned for thy hand,
 And buds of marjoram had stol'n thy hair ;
 The roses fearfully on thorns did stand,
 One blushing shame, another white despair ;
 A third, nor red nor white, had stol'n of both,¹⁰
 And to his robb'ry had annex'd thy breath ;
 But, for his theft, in pride of all his growth
 A vengeful canker eat him up to death.
 More flowers I noted, yet I none could see But sweet or colour it had stol'n from thee.

100

Where art thou, Muse, that thou forget'st
 so long
 To speak of that which gives thee all thy might ?
 Spend'st thou thy fury on some worthless
 song,
 Dark'ning thy power to lend base subjects
 light ?
 Return, forgetful Muse, and straight redeem⁵
 In gentle numbers time so idly spent ;
 Sing to the ear that doth thy lays esteem
 And gives thy pen both skill and argument.
 Rise, resty Muse, my love's sweet face survey,
 If Time have any wrinkle graven there ;¹⁰
 If any, be a satire to decay,

And make Time's spoils despised everywhere.
 Give my love fame faster than Time wastes life ;
 So thou prevent'st his scythe and crooked knife.

101

O truant Muse, what shall be thy amends
 For thy neglect of truth in beauty dy'd ?
 Both truth and beauty on my love depends ;
 So dost thou too, and therein dignified.
 Make answer, Muse. Wilt thou not haply say⁵
 ' Truth needs no colour with his colour
 fix'd ;
 Beauty no pencil, beauty's truth to lay ;
 But best is best, if never intermix'd ' ?
 Because he needs no praise, wilt thou be dumb ?
 Excuse not silence so ; for't lies in thee¹⁰
 To make him much outlive a gilded tomb,
 And to be prais'd of ages yet to be.
 Then do thy office, Muse. I teach thee
 how
 To make him seem long hence as he shows now.

102

My love is strength'n'd, though more weak in seeming ;
 I love not less, though less the show appear ;
 That love is merchandiz'd whose rich
 esteeming
 The owner's tongue doth publish every where.
 Our love was new, and then but in the spring,⁵
 When I was wont to greet it with my lays ;
 As Philomel in summer's front doth sing,
 And stops her pipe in growth of riper days.
 Not that the summer is less pleasant now Than when her mournful hymns did hush
 the night,¹⁰
 But that wild music burthens every bough,
 And sweets grown common lose their dear
 delight.
 Therefore, like her, I sometime hold my
 tongue,
 Because I would not dull you with my song.

103

Alack, what poverty my Muse brings forth,
 That, having such a scope to show her
 pride,
 The argument all bare is of more worth
 Than when it hath my added praise beside !
 O, blame me not, if I no more can write !⁵
 Look in your glass, and there appears a face
 That over-goes my blunt invention quite,
 Dulling my lines, and doing me disgrace.

Were it not sinful then, striving to mend,
 To mar the subject that before was well ?
 For to no other pass my verses tend ¹¹
 Than of your graces and your gifts to tell ;
 And more, much more, than in my verse can sit
 Your own glass shows you, when you look in it.

104

To me, fair friend, you never can be old,
 For as you were when first your eye I ey'd, Such seems your beauty still. Three winters cold
 Have from the forests shook three summers'
 pride,
 Three beauteous springs to yellow autumn
 turn'd ⁵
 In process of the seasons have I seen,
 Three April perfumes in three hot Junes burn'd,
 Since first I saw you fresh, which yet are
 green.
 Ah, yet doth beauty, like a dial-hand, Steal from his figure, and no pace perceiv'd ; ¹⁰
 So your sweet hue, which methinks still doth stand,
 Hath motion, and mine eye may be deceiv'd.
 For fear of which, hear this, thou age
 unbred :
 Ere you were born was beauty's summer
 dead.

105

Let not my love be call'd idolatry,
 Nor my beloved as an idol show,
 Since all alike my songs and praises be
 To one, of one, still such, and ever so.
 Kind is my love to-day, to-morrow kind, ⁵
 Still constant in a wondrous excellence ;
 Therefore my verse, to constancy confin'd,
 One thing expressing, leaves out difference.
 ' Fair, kind, and true ' is all my argument,
 ' Fair, kind, and true ' varying to other words ; ¹⁰
 And in this change is my invention spent,
 Three themes in one, which wondrous scope
 affords.
 Fair, kind, and true, have often liv'd
 alone,
 Which three, till now, never kept seat
 in one.

106

When in the chronicle of wasted time
 I see descriptions of the fairest wights,
 And beauty making beautiful old rhyme
 In praise of ladies dead and lovely knights,
 Then, in the blazon of sweet beauty's best,
 Of hand, of foot, of lip, of eye, of brow, ⁶
 I see their antique pen would have ex-press'd
 Even such a beauty as you master now.

1326

So all their praises are but prophecies
 Of this our time, all you prefiguring ; ¹⁰
 And, for they look'd but with divining
 eyes,
 They had not skill enough your worth to
 sing ;
 For we, which now behold these present
 days,
 Have eyes to wonder, but lack tongues to praise.

107

Not mine own fears, nor the prophetic soul
 Of the wide world dreaming on things to
 come,
 Can yet the lease of my true love control,
 Suppos'd as forfeit to a confin'd doom. ⁴
 The mortal moon hath her eclipse endur'd,
 And the sad augurs mock their own pres-
 age ;
 Incertainties now crown themselves assur'd,
 And peace proclaims olives of endless age.
 Now with the drops of this most balmy
 time
 My love looks fresh, and Death to me
 subscribes, ¹⁰
 Since spite of him I'll live in this poor
 rhyme,
 While he insults o'er dull and speechless tribes.
 And thou in this shalt find thy monument,
 When tyrants' crests and tombs of brass are spent.

108

What's in the brain that ink may character
 Which hath not figur'd to thee my true spirit ?
 What's new to speak, what new to register,
 That may express my love or thy dear merit ?
 Nothing, sweet boy ; but yet, like prayers divine, ⁵
 I must each day say o'er the very same ;
 Counting no old thing old, thou mine, I
 thine,
 Even as when first I hallowed thy fair
 name.
 So that eternal love in love's fresh case
 Weighs not the dust and injury of age, ¹⁰
 Nor gives to necessary wrinkles place,
 But makes antiquity for aye his page ;
 Finding the first conceit of love there
 bred,
 Where time and outward form would show it dead.

109

O, never say that I was false of heart,
 Though absence seem'd my flame to qualify !
 As easy might I from my self depart
 As from my soul, which in thy breast doth lie ; ⁴

That is my home of love. If I have rang'd,
Like him that travels, I return again,
Just to the time, not with the time ex-
chang'd,
So that my self bring water for my stain.
Never believe, though in my nature reign'd
All frailties that besiege all kinds of blood,
That it could so preposterously be stain'd
To leave for nothing all thy sum of good ;
For nothing this wide universe I call ¹³
Save thou, my rose ; in it thou art my all.

110

Alas, 'tis true I have gone here and there
And made myself a motley to the view, Gor'd mine own thoughts, sold cheap what is most dear,
Made old offences of affections new. ⁴
Most true it is that I have look'd on truth
Askance and strangely ; but, by all above,
These blenches gave my heart another
youth,
And worse essays prov'd thee my best of
love.
Now all is done, have what shall have no
end ;
Mine appetite I never more will grind ¹⁰
On newer proof, to try an older friend,
A god in love, to whom I am confin'd.
Then give me welcome, next my heaven
the best,
Even to thy pure and most most loving breast.

111

O, for my sake do you with Fortune chide,
The guilty goddess of my harmful deeds,
That did not better for my life provide Than public means which public manners breeds.
Thence comes it that my name receives a brand, ⁵
And almost thence my nature is subdu'd
To what it works in, like the dyer's hand.
Pity me then, and wish I were renew'd ;
Whilst, like a willing patient, I will drink Potions of eisel, 'gainst my strong infection ; ¹⁰
No bitterness that I will bitter think,
Nor double penance, to correct correction.
Pity me then, dear friend, and I assure
ye,
Even that your pity is enough to cure me.

112

Your love and pity doth th' impression fill Which vulgar scandal stamp'd upon my
brow ;
For what care I who calls me well or ill,
So you o'ergreen my bad, my good allow ?
You are my all the world, and I must strive To know my shames and praises from your tongue ; ⁶

None else to me, nor I to none alive,
That my steel'd sense or changes right or wrong.

In so profound abysm I throw all care
Of others' voices that my adder's sense ¹⁰
To critic and to flatterer stopped are.
Mark how with my neglect I do dispense :
You are so strongly in my purpose bred
That all the world besides methinks are dead.

113

Since I left you, mine eye is in my mind ;
And that which governs me to go about
Doth part his function, and is partly blind,
Seems seeing, but effectually is out ;
For it no form delivers to the heart ⁵
Of bird, of flow'r, or shape, which it doth
latch ;
Of his quick objects hath the mind no part,
Nor his own vision holds what it doth catch ;
For if it see the rud'st or gentlest sight,
The most sweet favour or deformed'st creature, ¹⁰
The mountain or the sea, the day or night,
The crow or dove, it shapes them to your feature.
Incapable of more, replete with you,
My most true mind thus mak'th mine eye untrue.

114

Or whether doth my mind, being crown'd
with you,
Drink up the monarch's plague, this flattery ?
Or whether shall I say mine eye saith true,
And that your love taught it this alchemy
To make of monsters and things indigest ⁵
Such cherubins as your sweet self resemble,
Creating every bad a perfect best
As fast as objects to his beams assemble ?
O, 'tis the first ; 'tis flatt'ry in my seeing,
And my great mind most kingly drinks
it up. ¹⁰
Mine eye well knows what with his gust is
'greeing,
And to his palate doth prepare the cup.
If it be poison'd, 'tis the lesser sin
That mine eye loves it, and doth first begin.

115

Those lines that I before have writ do lie ;
Even those that said I could not love you
dearer ;
Yet then my judgment knew no reason
why
My most full flame should afterwards burn clearer.
But reckoning Time, whose million'd accidents ⁵

SONNETS

Creep in 'twixt vows and change decrees of
 kings,
 Tan sacred beauty, blunt the sharp'st intents,
 Divert strong minds to th' course of alt'ring
 things—
 Alas, why, fearing of Time's tyranny, Might I not then say 'Now I love you
 best'
 When I was certain o'er incertainty,
 Crowning the present, doubting of the rest?
 Love is a babe; then might I not say so,
 To give full growth to that which still doth grow?

116

Let me not to the marriage of true minds
 Admit impediments. Love is not love
 Which alters when it alteration finds,
 Or bends with the remover to remove.
 O, no! it is an ever-fixed mark,
 That looks on tempests and is never shaken;
 It is the star to every wand'ring bark, Whose worth's unk'own, although his height be taken.
 Love's not Time's fool, though rosy lips and cheeks
 Within his bending sickle's compass come; Love alters not with his brief hours and weeks,
 But bears it out even to the edge of doom.
 If this be error, and upon me prov'd,
 I never writ, nor no man ever lov'd.

117

Accuse me thus: that I have scanted all
 Wherein I should your great deserts repay;
 Forgot upon your dearest love to call,
 Whereto all bonds do tie me day by day;
 That I have frequent been with unknown
 minds,
 And given to time your own dear-purchas'd
 right;
 That I have hoisted sail to all the winds Which should transport me farthest from your sight.
 Book both my wilfulness and errors down,
 And on just proof surmise accumulate;
 Bring me within the level of your frown,
 But shoot not at me in your wakened hate;
 Since my appeal says I did strive to prove
 The constancy and virtue of your love.

118

Like as to make our appetites more keen
 With eager compounds we our palate urge,
 As to prevent our maladies unseen
 We sicken to shun sickness when we purge;
 Even so, being full of your ne'er-cloying sweetness,
 To bitter sauces did I frame my feeding,

And, sick of welfare, found a kind of meetness
 To be diseas'd ere that there was true needing.
 Thus policy in love, t' anticipate
 The ills that were not, grew to faults
 assured,
 And brought to medicine a healthful state,
 Which, rank of goodness, would by ill be cured.
 But thence I learn, and find the lesson
 true,
 Drugs poison him that so fell sick of you.

119

What potions have I drunk of Siren tears, Distill'd from limbeck's fowl as hell within,
 Applying fears to hopes, and hopes to fears,
 Still losing when I saw my self to win!
 What wretched errors hath my heart committed,
 Whilst it hath thought it self so blessed never!
 How have mine eyes out of their spheres been fitted
 In the distraction of this madding fever!
 O benefit of ill! Now I find true
 That better is by evil still made better;
 And ruin'd love, when it is built anew,
 Grows fairer than at first, more strong, far greater.
 So I return rebuk'd to my content,
 And gain by ill thrice more than I have spent.

120

That you were once unkind befriends me
 now,
 And for that sorrow which I then did feel Needs must I under my transgression bow, Unless my nerves were brass or hammered
 steel.
 For if you were by my unkindness shaken,
 As I by yours, y'have pass'd a hell of time;
 And I, a tyrant, have no leisure taken
 To weigh how once I suffered in your crime.
 O that our night of woe might have remem-b'rd
 My deepest sense how hard true sorrow hits,
 And soon to you, as you to me, then tend'red
 The humble salve which wounded bosoms
 fits!
 But that your trespass now becomes a
 fee;
 Mine ransoms yours, and yours must ransom me.

121

'Tis better to be vile than vile esteemed,
 When not to be receives reproach of being,
 And the just pleasure lost, which is so deemed

SONNETS

Not by our feeling, but by others' seeing.
For why should others' false adulterate eyes
Give salutation to my sportive blood ? 6
Or on my frailties why are frailer spies,
Which in their wills count bad what I think
good ?

No ; I am that I am ; and they that level
At my abuses reckon up their own. 10
I may be straight though they themselves be bevel ;

By their rank thoughts my deeds must not be shown,
Unless this general evil they maintain :
All men are bad, and in their badness reign.

122

Thy gift, thy tables, are within my brain
Full character'd with lasting memory,
Which shall above that idle rank remain
Beyond all date, even to eternity ;
Or at the least so long as brain and heart 5
Have faculty by nature to subsist ;
Till each to raz'd oblivion yield his part
Of thee, thy record never can be miss'd.
That poor retention could not so much
hold,

Nor need I tallies thy dear love to score ; 10
Therefore to give them from me was I bold,
To trust those tables that receive thee more.
To keep an adjunct to remember thee
Were to import forgetfulness in me.

123

No, Time, thou shalt not boast that I do
change.

Thy pyramids built up with newer might
To me are nothing novel, nothing strange ;
They are but dressings of a former sight. 4
Our dates are brief, and therefore we admire
What thou dost foist upon us that is old,
And rather make them born to our desire
Than think that we before have heard them
told.

Thy registers and thee I both defy, 9
Not wond'ring at the present nor the past,
For thy records and what we see doth lie,
Made more or less by thy continual haste.

This I do vow, and this shall ever be :
I will be true, despite thy scythe and
thee.

124

If my dear love were but the child of state,
It might for Fortune's bastard be unfather'd,

As subject to Time's love or to Time's hate, Weeds among weeds, or flowers with flowers
gather'd.

No, it was builded far from accident ; 5
It suffers not in smiling pomp, nor falls
Under the blow of thrall'd discontent,
Whereto th' inviting time our fashion calls.

It fears not Policy, that heretic,
Which works on leases of short-numb'ed
hours, 10
But all alone stands hugely politic,
That it nor grows with heat nor drowns with show'rs.

To this I witness call the fools of time,
Which die for goodness, who have liv'd for crime.

125

Were't aught to me I bore the canopy,
With my extern the outward honouring,
Or laid great bases for eternity,
Which proves more short than waste or ruining ?

Have I not seen dwellers on form and
favour 5

Lose all, and more, by paying too much rent,

For compound sweet forgoing simple savour—

Pitiful thrivers, in their gazing spent ?

No, let me be obsequious in thy heart,
And take thou my oblation, poor but free,
Which is not mix'd with seconds, knows no
art 11

But mutual render, only me for thee.

Hence, thou suborn'd informer ! A true
soul,

When most impeach'd, stands least in thy control.

126

O thou, my lovely boy, who in thy power
Dost hold Time's fickle glass, his sickle
hour ;

Who hast by waning grown, and therein
show'st

Thy lovers withering as thy sweet self
grow'st ;

If Nature, sovereign mistress over wrack, 5
As thou goest onwards, still will pluck thee
back,

She keeps thee to this purpose, that her
skill

May time disgrace, and wretched minutes
kill.

Yet fear her, O thou minion of her pleasure !
She may detain, but not still keep, her
treasure ; 10

Her audit, though delay'd, answer'd must be,

And her quietus is to render thee.

127

In the old age black was not counted fair,
Or if it were, it bore not beauty's name ;
But now is black beauty's successive heir,
And beauty slander'd with a bastard
shame ;

For since each hand hath put on nature's power, 5

SONNETS

Fairing the foul with art's false borrow'd
face,
Sweet beauty hath no name, no holy bower,
But is profan'd, if not lives in disgrace.
Therefore my mistress' brows are raven
black,
Her eyes so suited, and they mourners seem
At such who, not born fair, no beauty lack,
Stand'ring creation with a false esteem.
Yet so they mourn, becoming of their
woe,
That every tongue says beauty should look so.

128

How oft, when thou, my music, music
play'st
Upon that blessed wood whose motion
sounds
With thy sweet fingers, when thou gently sway'st
The wiry concord that mine ear confounds,
Do I envy those jacks that nimble leap
To kiss the tender inward of thy hand, Whilst my poor lips, which should that harvest reap,
At the wood's boldness by thee blushing
stand!
To be so tickled, they would change their
state
And situation with those dancing chips
O'er whom thy fingers walk with gentle
gait,
Making dead wood more blest than living
lips.
Since saucy jacks so happy are in this,
Give them thy fingers, me thy lips to kiss.

129

Th' expense of spirit in a waste of shame
Is lust in action; and till action, lust Is perjur'd, murd'rous, bloody, full of blame,
Savage, extreme, rude, cruel, not to trust;
Enjoy'd no sooner but despised straight;
Past reason hunted, and, no sooner had,
Past reason hated, as a swallowed bait,
On purpose laid to make the taker mad—
Mad in pursuit, and in possession so;
Had, having, and in quest to have, extreme;
A bliss in proof, and prov'd, a very woe;
Before, a joy propos'd; behind, a dream.
All this the world well knows; yet none knows well
To shun the heaven that leads men to this hell.

130

My mistress' eyes are nothing like the sun;
Coral is far more red than her lips' red;
If snow be white, why then her breasts are dun;
If hairs be wires, black wires grow on her
head.

I have seen roses damask'd, red and white,
But no such roses see I in her cheeks;
And in some perfumes is there more delight
Than in the breath that from my mistress reeks.
I love to hear her speak, yet well I know
That music hath a far more pleasing sound;
I grant I never saw a goddess go—
My mistress when she walks treads on the ground.
And yet, by heaven, I think my love as rare
As any she belied with false compare.

131

Thou art as tyrannous, so as thou art,
As those whose beauties proudly make them
cruel;
For well thou know'st to my dear dotting
heart
Thou art the fairest and most precious jewel.
Yet, in good faith, some say that thee beheld Thy face hath not the power to make love
groan.
To say they err I dare not be so bold,
Although I swear it to myself alone.
And, to be sure that is not false I swear,
A thousand groans, but thinking on thy
face,
One on another's neck, do witness bear
Thy black is fairest in my judgment's place.
In nothing art thou black save in thy
deeds,
And thence this slander, as I think,
proceeds.

132

Thine eyes I love, and they, as pitying me, Knowing thy heart torments me with
disdain,
Have put on black, and loving mourners be,
Looking with pretty ruth upon my pain.
And truly not the morning sun of heaven
Better becomes the grey cheeks of the east,
Nor that full star that ushers in the even Doth half that glory to the sober west,
As those two mourning eyes become thy
face.
O, let it then as well beseech thy heart
To mourn for me, since mourning doth thee
grace,
And suit thy pity like in every part.
Then will I swear beauty herself is black,
And all they foul that thy complexion lack.

133

Beshrew that heart that makes my heart to groan
For that deep wound it gives my friend and me!

SONNETS

Is't not enough to torture me alone,
But slave to slavery my sweet'st friend
must be ?

Me from my self thy cruel eye hath taken, 5
And my next self thou harder hast engrossed ;

Of him, my self, and thee, I am forsaken ;
A torment thrice three-fold thus to be crossed.

Prison my heart in thy steel bosom's ward,
But then my friend's heart let my poor heart bail ; 10

Whoe'er keeps me, let my heart be his
guard ;

Thou canst not then use rigour in my gaol.
And yet thou wilt ; for I, being pent in
thee,

Perforce am thine, and all that is in me.

134

So now I have confess'd that he is thine,
And I myself am mortgag'd to thy will ;
My self I'll forfeit, so that other mine
Thou wilt restore to be my comfort still.
But thou wilt not, nor he will not be free, 5
For thou art covetous, and he is kind ;
He learn'd but surety-like to write for me
Under that bond that him as fast doth bind.
The statute of thy beauty thou wilt take,
Thou usurer that put'st forth all to use, 10
And sue a friend came debtor for my sake ;
So him I lose through my unkind abuse.

Him have I lost ; thou hast both him
and me ;

He pays the whole, and yet am I not free.

135

Whoever hath her wish, thou hast thy
Will,

And Will to boot, and Will in over-plus ;
More than enough am I that vex thee still,
To thy sweet will making addition thus. 4

Wilt thou, whose will is large and spacious,
Not once vouchsafe to hide my will in
thine ?

Shall will in others seem right gracious,
And in my will no fair acceptance shine ?
The sea, all water, yet receives rain still,
And in abundance addeth to his store ; 10
So thou, being rich in Will, add to thy Will One will of mine, to make thy large Will
more.

Let no unkind, no fair beseechers kill ;
Think all but one, and me in that one Will.

136

If thy soul check thee that I come so near,
Swear to thy blind soul that I was thy Will,
And will, thy soul knows, is admitted there ;
Thus far for love my love-suit, sweet, fulfil.
Will will fulfil the treasure of thy love, 5
Ay, fill it full with wills, and my will one.

In things of great receipt with ease we prove

Among a number one is reckon'd none.

Then in the number let me pass untold,
Though in thy store's account I one must
be ; 10

For nothing hold me, so it please thee hold That nothing me, a something sweet to
thee ;

Make but my name thy love, and love that still,

And then thou lov'st me, for my name is Will.

137

Thou blind fool, Love, what dost thou to mine eyes

That they behold, and see not what they see ?

They know what beauty is, see where it lies,
Yet what the best is take the worst to be.
If eyes, corrupt by over-partial looks, 5
Be anchor'd in the bay where all men ride,
Why of eyes' falsehood hast thou forged hooks,

Whereto the judgment of my heart is tied ?
Why should my heart think that a several plot,

Which my heart knows the wide world's common place ? 10

Or mine eyes, seeing this, say this is not,
To put fair truth upon so foul a face ?

In things right true my heart and eyes have erred,

And to this false plague are they now transferred.

138

When my love swears that she is made of
truth,

I do believe her, though I know she lies,
That she might think me some untutor'd
youth,

Unlearned in the world's false subtleties.

Thus vainly thinking that she thinks me young, 5

Although she knows my days are past the
best,

Simply I credit her false-speaking tongue ;
On both sides thus is simple truth sup-
press'd.

But wherefore says she not she is unjust ?
And wherefore say not I that I am old ? 10

O, love's best habit is in seeming trust,
And age in love loves not to have years told.

Therefore I lie with her, and she with me,
And in our faults by lies we flattered be.

139

O, call not me to justify the wrong

That thy unkindness lays upon my heart ; Wound me not with thine eye, but with thy
tongue ;

Use power with power, and slay me not by
art.

Tell me thou lov'st elsewhere; but in my
sight,

Dear heart, forbear to glance thine eye aside.

What need'st thou wound with cunning, when thy might

Is more than my o'erpress'd defence can bide?

Let me excuse thee: ah! my love well
knows

Her pretty looks have been mine enemies;
And therefore from my face she turns my
foes,

That they elsewhere might dart their injuries.

Yet do not so; but since I am near slain, Kill me outright with looks and rid my pain.

140

Be wise as thou art cruel; do not press
My tongue-tied patience with too much
disdain;

Lest sorrow lend me words, and words express

The manner of my pity-wanting pain.

If I might teach thee wit, better it were, 5
Though not to love, yet, love, to tell me so;

As testy sick men, when their deaths be near,

No news but health from their physicians
know.

For, if I should despair, I should grow mad,
And in my madness might speak ill of
thee.

Now this ill-wresting world is grown so bad
Mad slanderers by mad ears believed be. 12

That I may not be so, nor thou belied, Bear thine eyes straight, though thy proud heart go wide.

141

In faith, I do not love thee with mine eyes,
For they in thee a thousand errors note;
But 'tis my heart that loves what they despise,

Who in despite of view is pleas'd to dote.
Nor are mine ears with thy tongue's tune delighted;

Nor tender feeling to base touches prone,
Nor taste nor smell desire to be invited
To any sensual feast with thee alone;
But my five wits nor my five senses can Dissuade one foolish heart from serving
thee,

Who leaves unsway'd the likeness of a man,
Thy proud heart's slave and vassal wretch to be.

Only my plague thus far I count my gain,
That she that makes me sin awards me
pain.

142

Love is my sin, and thy dear virtue hate,
Hate of my sin, grounded on sinful loving.
O, but with mine compare thou thine own
state,

And thou shalt find it merits not reproving;
Or, if it do, not from those lips of thine, 5

That have profan'd their scarlet ornaments,
And seal'd false bonds of love as oft as
mine;

Robb'd others' beds' revenues of their rents.

Be it lawful I love thee as thou lov'st those Whom thine eyes woo as mine importune
thee. 10

Root pity in thy heart, that, when it grows,
Thy pity may deserve to pitied be.

If thou dost seek to have what thou dost
hide,

By self-example mayst thou be denied!

143

Lo as a careful huswife runs to catch

One of her feathered creatures broke away, Sets down her babe, and makes all swift
dispatch

In pursuit of the thing she would have stay; Whilst her neglected child holds her in chase, 5

Cries to catch her whose busy care is bent

To follow that which flies before her face,
Not prizing her poor infant's discontent;
So run'st thou after that which flies from
thee,

Whilst I thy babe chase thee afar behind;
But if thou catch thy hope, turn back to
me, 10

And play the mother's part, kiss me, be kind.

So will I pray that thou mayst have thy
Will,

If thou turn back and my loud crying
still.

144

Two loves I have, of comfort and despair,
Which like two spirits do suggest me still;
The better angel is a man right fair,
The worser spirit a woman colour'd ill.

To win me soon to hell, my female evil 5
Tempteth my better angel from my side,
And would corrupt my saint to be a devil,
Wooing his purity with her foul pride.

And whether that my angel be turn'd fiend,
Suspect I may, yet not directly tell; 10
But being both from me, both to each
friend,

I guess one angel in another's hell.

Yet this shall I ne'er know, but live in doubt,

Till my bad angel fire my good one out.

145

Those lips that Love's own hand did make Breath'd forth the sound that said 'I hate'
 To me that languish'd for her sake;
 But when she saw my woeful state,
 Straight in her heart did mercy come,
 Chiding that tongue that ever sweet
 Was us'd in giving gentle doom;
 And taught it thus anew to greet:
 'I hate' she alter'd with an end
 That follow'd it as gentle day
 Doth follow night, who like a fiend
 From heaven to hell is flown away:
 'I hate' from hate away she threw,
 And sav'd my life, saying 'not you'.

146

Poor soul, the centre of my sinful earth, [My sinful earth] these rebel pow'rs that thee array,
 Why dost thou pine within and suffer
 dearth,
 Painting thy outward walls so costly gay?
 Why so large cost, having so short a lease,
 Dost thou upon thy fading mansion spend?
 Shall worms, inheritors of this excess,
 Eat up thy charge? Is this thy body's end?
 Then, soul, live thou upon thy servant's
 loss,
 And let that pine to aggravate thy store;
 Buy terms divine in selling hours of dross;
 Within be fed, without be rich no more.
 So shalt thou feed on Death, that feeds on men,
 And, Death once dead, there's no more dying then.

147

My love is as a fever, longing still
 For that which longer nurseth the disease;
 Feeding on that which doth preserve the ill,
 Th' uncertain sickly appetite to please.
 My Reason, the physician to my Love,
 Angry that his prescriptions are not kept,
 Hath left me, and I desperate now approve Desire is death, which physic did except.
 Past cure I am, now reason is past care,
 And frantic mad with evermore unrest;
 My thoughts and my discourse as mad men's
 are,
 At random from the truth vainly express'd;
 For I have sworn thee fair, and thought thee bright,
 Who art as black as hell, as dark as night.

148

O me, what eyes hath Love put in my head,
 Which have no correspondence with true
 sight!
 Or, if they have, where is my judgment fled,
 That censures falsely what they see aright?

If that be fair whereon my false eyes dote,
 What means the world to say it is not so?
 If it be not, then love doth well denote Love's eye is not so true as all men's—no, How can it? O, how can Love's eye be
 true,

That is so vex'd with watching and with tears?

No marvel then though I mistake my view:
 The sun itself sees not till heaven clears.

O cunning Love! with tears thou keep'st me blind,

Lest eyes well seeing thy foul faults
 should find.

149

Canst thou, O cruel! say I love thee not,
 When I against myself with thee partake?
 Do I not think on thee when I forgot
 Am of myself, all tyrant, for thy sake?
 Who hateth thee that I do cail my friend?
 On whom frown'st thou that I do fawn
 upon?

Nay, if thou lour'st on me, do I not spend Revenge upon myself with present moan?
 What merit do I in myself respect

That is so proud thy service to despise,
 When all my best doth worship thy defect,
 Commanded by the motion of thine eyes?

But, love, hate on, for now I know thy
 mind:

Those that can see thou lov'st, and I am blind.

150

O, from what pow'r hast thou this pow'ful
 might

With insufficiency my heart to sway?
 To make me give the lie to my true sight,
 And swear that brightness doth not grace
 the day?

Whence hast thou this becoming of things
 ill,

That in the very refuse of thy deeds
 There is such strength and warrantise of
 skill

That in my mind thy worst all best exceeds?
 Who taught thee how to make me love thee
 more,

The more I hear and see just cause of hate?
 O, though I love what others do abhor,
 With others thou shouldst not abhor my
 state;

If thy unworthiness rais'd love in me,
 More worthy I to be belov'd of thee.

151

Love is too young to know what conscience is;

Yet who knows not conscience is born of
 love?

Then, gentle cheater, urge not my amiss,
 Lest guilty of my faults thy sweet self prove.

For thou betraying me, I do betray 5
 My nobler part to my gross body's treason;
 My soul doth tell my body that he may Triumph in love; flesh stays no farther
 reason,
 But, rising at thy name, doth point out thee
 As his triumphant prize. Proud of this
 pride, 10
 He is contented thy poor drudge to be,
 To stand in thy affairs, fall by thy side.
 No want of conscience hold it that I call Her 'love' for whose dear love I rise and fall.

152

In loving thee thou know'st I am forsworn,
 But thou art twice forsworn, to me love
 swearing;
 In act thy bed-vow broke, and new faith torn
 In vowing new hate after new love bearing.
 But why of two oaths' breach do I accuse
 thee, 5
 When I break twenty? I am perjur'd most;
 For all my vows are oaths but to misuse
 thee,
 And all my honest faith in thee is lost;
 For I have sworn deep oaths of thy deep
 kindness,
 Oaths of thy love, thy truth, thy constancy;
 And, to enlighten thee, gave eyes to blind-
 ness, 11
 Or made them swear against the thing they
 see;
 For I have sworn thee fair—more per-jur'd I,
 To swear against the truth so foul a lie!

153

Cupid laid by his brand, and fell asleep.
 A maid of Dian's this advantage found,

And his love-kindling fire did quickly steep
 In a cold valley-fountain of that ground;
 Which borrow'd from this holy fire of
 Love
 A dateless lively heat, still to endure, 6
 And grew a seething bath, which yet men prove
 Against strange maladies a sovereign cure,
 But at my mistress' eye Love's brand new-fired,
 The boy for trial needs would touch my
 breast; 10
 I, sick withal, the help of bath desired,
 And thither hied, a sad distemper'd guest,
 But found no cure. The bath for my help lies
 Where Cupid got new fire—my mistress'
 eyes.

154

The little love-god, lying once asleep,
 Laid by his side his heart-inflaming brand,
 Whilst many nymphs that vow'd chaste life to keep Came tripping by; but in her maiden
 hand
 The fairest votary took up that fire 15
 Which many legions of true hearts had warm'd;
 And so the general of hot desire
 Was sleeping by a virgin hand disarm'd.
 This brand she quenched in a cool well
 by,
 Which from Love's fire took heat perpetual,
 Growing a bath and healthful remedy 11
 For men diseas'd; but I, my mistress' thrall,
 Came there for cure, and this by that I prove:
 Love's fire heats water, water cools not
 love.

A LOVER'S COMPLAINT

FROM off a hill whose concave womb re-worded

A plaintful story from a sist'ring vale,
My spirits t' attend this double voice accorded,

And down I laid to list the sad-tun'd tale ;
Ere long espied a fickle maid full pale, 5
Tearing of papers, breaking rings a-twain, Storming her world with sorrow's wind and rain.

Upon her head a platted hive of straw,
Which fortified her visage from the sun, Whereon the thought might think sometime it saw 10

The carcase of a beauty spent and done.
Time had not scythed all that youth begun,
Nor youth all quit ; but, spite of heaven's
fel. rage,

Some beauty peep'd through lattice of sear'd age. 14

Oft did she heave her napkin to her eyne,
Which on it had conceited characters,
Laund'ring the silken figures in the brine
That seasoned woe had pelleted in tears,
And often reading what contents it bears ;
As often shrieking undistinguish'd woe, 20
In clamours of all size, both high and low.

Sometimes her levell'd eyes their carriage
ride,

As they did batt'ry to the spheres intend ;
Sometime diverted their poor balls are tied To th' orb'd earth ; sometimes they do extend 25

Their view right on ; anon their gazes lend
To every place at once, and nowhere fix'd,
The mind and sight distractedly commix'd.

Her hair, nor loose nor tied in formal plat,
Proclaim'd in her a careless hand of pride ;
For some, untuck'd, descended her sheav'd hat, 31

Hanging her pale and pined cheek beside ;
Some in her threaden fillet still did bide,
And, true to bondage, would not break from thence, 34

Though slackly braided in loose negligence.

A thousand favours from a maund she drew
Of amber, crystal, and of beaded jet,
Which one by one she in a river threw,
Upon whose weeping margin she was set ;
Like usury, applying wet to wet, 40
Or monarch's hands that lets not bounty fall
Where want cries some but where excess begs all.

Of folded schedules had she many a one,
Which she perus'd, sigh'd, tore, and gave the flood ;

Crack'd many a ring of posied gold and
bone, 45

Bidding them find their sepulchres in mud ; Found yet moe letters sadly penn'd in
blood,

With sleided silk feat and affectedly
Enswath'd and seal'd to curious secrecy. 49

These often bath'd she in her fluxive eyes,
And often kiss'd, and often gan to tear ;
Cried 'O false blood, thou register of lies,

What unapproved witness dost thou bear !
Ink would have seem'd more black and damned here ! ' 54

This said, in top of rage the lines she rents,
Big discontent so breaking their contents.

A reverend man that graz'd his cattle nigh,
Sometime a blusterer that the ruffle knew
Of court, of city, and had let go by 59
The swiftest hours observed as they flew,
Towards this afflicted fancy fastly drew ;
And, privileg'd by age, desires to know
In brief the grounds and motives of her woe.

So slides he down upon his grained bat,
And comely distant sits he by her side ; 65
When he again desires her, being sat,
Her grievance with his hearing to divide.
If that from him there may be aught applied

Which may her suffering ecstasy assuage,
'Tis promis'd in the charity of age. 70

'Father,' she says 'though in me you
behold

The injury of many a blasting hour,
Let it not tell your judgment I am old :
Not age, but sorrow, over me hath power.
I might as yet have been a spreading
flower, 75

Fresh to myself, if I had self-applied Love to myself, and to no love beside.

'But woe is me ! too early I attended 78
A youthful suit—it was to gain my grace—
O ! one by nature's outwards so commended
That maidens' eyes stuck over all his face.
Love lack'd a dwelling and made him her
place ;

And when in his fair parts she did abide,
She was new lodg'd and newly deified.

'His browny locks did hang in crooked
curls ; 85

And every light occasion of the wind
Upon his lips their silken parcels hurls.
What's sweet to do, to do will aptly find :
Each eye that saw him did enchant the
mind ;

For on his visage was in little drawn 90

A LOVER'S COMPLAINT

What largeness thinks in Paradise was sawn.

' Small show of man was yet upon his chin ;
His phoenix down began but to appear,
Like unshorn velvet, on that termless skin,
Whose bare out-bragg'd the web it seem'd to wear ; 95

Yet show'd his visage by that cost more
dear ; -

And nice affections wavering stood in doubt
If best were as it was, or best without.

' His qualities were beauteous as his form,
For maiden-tongu'd he was, and thereof
free ; 100

Yet, if men mov'd him, was he such a storm
As oft 'twixt May and April is to see,
When winds breathe sweet, unruly though they be.

His rudeness so with his authoriz'd youth
Did livery falseness in a pride of truth. 105

' Well could he ride, and often men would say

" That horse his mettle from his rider takes:
Proud of subjection, noble by the sway,
What rounds, what bounds, what course,
what stop he makes ! " 109

And controversy hence a question takes,
Whether the horse by him became his deed,
Or he his manage by th' well-doing steed.

' But quickly on this side the verdict went :
His real habitude gave life and grace
To appertainings and to ornament, 115
Accomplish'd in himself, not in his case.
All aids, themselves made fairer by their
place,

Came for additions ; yet their purpos'd trim Piec'd not his grace, but were all grac'd by
him.

' So on the tip of his subduing tongue 120
All kind of arguments and question deep,
All replication prompt, and reason strong,
For his advantage still did wake and sleep.
To make the weeper laugh, the laughter
weep,

He had the dialect and different skill, 125
Catching all passions in his craft of will ;

' That he did in the general bosom reign
Of young, of old, and sexes both enchanted,
To dwell with him in thoughts, or to remain

In personal duty, following where he
haunted. 130

Consents bewitch'd, ere he desire, have
granted,

And dialogu'd for him what he would say,
Ask'd their own wills, and made their wills obey.

' Many there were that did his picture get,
To serve their eyes, and in it put their
mind ; 135

Like foo's that in th' imagination set
The goodly objects which abroad they find
Of lands and mansions, theirs in thought
assign'd ;

And labouring in moe pleasures to bestow
them

Than the true gouty landlord which doth
owe them. 140

' So many have, that never touch'd his
hand,

Sweetly suppos'd them mistress of his heart.
My woeful self, that did in freedom stand,
And was my own fee-simple, not in part,
What with his art in youth, and youth in art, 145

Threw my affections in his charmed power, Reserv'd the stalk and gave him all my flower.

' Yet did I not, as some my equals did,
Demand of him, nor being desired yielded ;
Finding myself in honour so forbid, 150

With safest distance I mine honour shielded.
Experience for me many bulwarks builded Of proofs new-bleeding, which remain'd the foil 153

Of this false jewel, and his amorous spoil.

' But ah ! who ever shunn'd by precedent
The destin'd ill she must herself assay ?

Or forc'd examples, 'gainst her own content,

To put the by-past perils in her way ?
Counsel may stop awhile what will not stay ;
For when we rage, advice is often seen 160
By blunting us to make ou. wits more keen.

Nor gives it satisfaction to our blood
That we must curb it upon others' proof,
To be forbad the sweets that seem so good 164

For fear of harms that preach in our behoof.
O appetite, from judgment stand aloof !
The one a pa ate hath that needs will taste, Though Reason weep, and cry " It is thy
last ".

' For further I could say " This man's untrue ",

And knew the patterns of his foul beguiling ; 170

Heard where his plants in others' orchards
grew ;

Saw how deceits were gilded in his smiling ;
Knew vows were ever brokers to defiling ;
Thought characters and words merely but
art, 174

And bastards of his foul adulterate heart.

' And long upon these terms I held my city, Till thus he gan besiege me : " Gentle
maid,

Have of my suffering youth some feeling
pity,

And be not of my holy vows afraid. 179
That's to ye sworn to none was ever said ;

A LOVER'S COMPLAINT

For feasts of love I have been call'd unto,
Till now did ne'er invite nor never woo.

" All my offences that abroad you see
Are errors of the blood, none of the mind ;
Love made them not ; with acture they may be, 185

Where neither party is nor true nor kind.
They sought their shame that so their shame did find ;

And so much less of shame in me remains
By how much of me their reproach contains.

" Among the many that mine eyes have
seen, 190

Not one whose flame my heart so much as warmed,

Or my affection put to th' smallest teen,
Or any of my leisures ever charmed.
Harm have I done to them, but ne'er was harm'd ;

Kept hearts in liveries, but mine own was free, 195

And reign'd commanding in his monarchy.

" Look here what tributes wounded fancies sent me,

Of pallid pearls and rubies red as blood ;
Figuring that they their passions likewise
lent me

Of grief and blushes, aptly understood 200
In bloodless white and the encrimson'd
mood—

Effects of terror and dear modesty,
Encamp'd in hearts, but fighting outwardly.

" And, io, behold these talents of their hair, 204

With twisted metal amorously empleach'd,
I have receiv'd from many a several fair,
Their kind acceptance weepingly beseech'd,
With the annexions of fair gems enrich'd,
And deep-brain'd sonnets that did amplify Each stone's dear nature, worth, and quality. 210

" The diamond—why, 'twas beautiful and
hard,

Whereto his invis'd properties did tend ;
The deep-green em'rald, in whose fresh regard

Weak sights their sickly radiance do amend ;
The heaven-hu'd sapphire and the opal blend 215

With objects manifold ; each several stone,
With wit wel. blazon'd, smil'd, or made some moan.

" Lo, all these trophies of affections hot,
Of pensiv'd and subdu'd desires the tender, Nature hath charg'd me that I hoard them
not, 220

But yield them up where I myself must render—

That is, to you, my origin and ender ;
For these, of force, must your oblations be,
Since I their altar, you enpatron me.

" O, then, advance of yours that phraseless
hand 225

Whose white weighs down the airy scale of praise ;

Take all these similes to your own command,

Hallowed with sighs that burning lungs did raise ; 228

What me, your minister, for you obeys, Works under you ; and to your audit comes
Their distract parcels in combined sums.

" Lo, this device was sent me from a nun,
Or sister sanctified, of holiest note,
Which late her noble suit in court did shun, Whose rarest havings made the blossoms
dote ; 235

For she was sought by spirits of richest coat,
But kept cold distance, and did thence remove

To spend her living in eternal love.

" But, O my sweet, what labour is't to
leave

The thing we have not, mast'ring what not strives, 240

Paling the place which did no form receive,
Playing patient sports in unconstrained
gyves !

She that her fame so to herself contrives,
The scars of battle scapeth by the flight,
And makes her absence valiant, not her
might. 245

" O, pardon me, in that my boast is true !
The accident which brought me to her eye
Upon the moment did her force subdue,
And now she would the caged cloister fly.
Religious love put out religion's eye. 250
Not to be tempted, would she be immur'd,
And now, to tempt all, liberty procur'd.

" How mighty then you are, O, hear me
tell ! 253

The broken bosoms that to me belong
Have emptied all their fountains in my well,
And mine I pour your ocean all among.
I strong o'er them, and you o'er me being
strong,

Must for your victory us all congest,
As compound love to physic your cold
breast.

" My parts had pow'r to charm a sacred nun, 260

Who, disciplin'd, ay, dieted in grace,
Believ'd her eyes when they t' assail begun,
All vows and consecrations giving place.

O most potential love ! vow, bond, nor
space,

In thee hath neither sting, knot, nor confine, 265

For thou art all, and all things else are
thine.

" When thou impresses, what are precepts worth

A LOVER'S COMPLAINT

Of stale example ? When thou wilt inflame,
How coldly those impediments stand forth,
Of wealth, of filial fear, law, kindred, fame !
Love's arms are peace, 'gainst rule, 'gainst sense, 'gainst shame, ²⁷¹

And sweetens, in the suff'ring pangs it bears,
The aloes of all forces, shocks, and fears.

' " Now all these hearts that do on mine
depend,

Feeling it break, with bleeding groans they pine, ²⁷⁵

And supplicant their sighs to you extend,
To leave the batt'ry that you make 'gainst
mine,

Lending soft audience to my sweet design,
And credent soul to that strong-bonded oath, ²⁷⁹

That shall prefer and undertake my troth "

' This said, his wat'ry eyes he did dismount, Whose sights till then were levell'd on my
face ;

Each cheek a river running from a fount
With brinish current downward flow'd apace.

O, how the channel to the stream gave grace ! ²⁸⁵

Who glaz'd with crystal gate the glowing roses

That flame through water which their hue encloses.

' O father, what a hell of witchcraft lies
In the small orb of one particular tear !
But with the inundation of the eyes ²⁹⁰
What rocky heart to water will not wear ?
What breast so cold that is not warmed
here ?

O cleft effect ! cold modesty, hot wrath,
Both fire from hence and chill extincture hath. ²⁹⁴

' For lo, his passion, but an art of craft,
Even there resolv'd my reason into tears ;
There my white stole of chastity I daff'd,
Shook off my sober guards and civil fears ;
Appear to him as he to me appears,

All melting ; though our drops this diff'r-ence bore : ³⁰⁰

His poison'd me, and mine did him restore.

' In him a plenitude of subtle matter,
Applied to cautels, all strange forms receives,

Of burning blushes or of weeping water,
Or swooning paleness ; and he takes and leaves, ³⁰⁵

In either's aptness, as it best deceives,
To blush at speeches rank, to weep at woes,
Or to turn white and swoon at tragic
shows ;

' That not a heart which in his level came Could scape the hail of his all-hurting aim, ³¹⁰

Showing fair nature is both kind and tame ;
And, veil'd in them, did win whom he would maim.

Against the thing he sought he would exclaim ;

When he most burn'd in heart-wish'd
luxury,

He preach'd pure maid and prais'd cold
chastity. ³¹⁵

' Thus merely with the garment of a Grace
The naked and concealed fiend he cover'd,
That th' unexperient gave the tempter
place,

Which, like a cherubin, above them hover'd.
Who, young and simple, would not be so lover'd ? ³²⁰

Ay me ! I feel ; and yet do question make
What I should do again for such a sake.

' O, that infected moisture of his eye,
O, that false fire which in his cheek so glowed,

O, that forc'd thunder from his heart did fly, ³²⁵

O, that sad breath his spongy lungs
bestowed,

O, all that borrowed motion, seeming owed,
Would yet again betray the fore-betray'd,
And new pervert a reconciled maid !'

THE PASSIONATE PILGRIM

1

When my love swears that she is made of truth,
I do believe her, though I know she lies,
That she might think me some untutor'd youth,
Unskilful in the world's false forgeries. 4
Thus vainly thinking that she thinks me young,
Although I know my years be past the best,
I smiling credit her false-speaking tongue,
Outfacing faults in love with love's ill rest.
But wherefore says my love that she is young?
And wherefore say not I that I am old? 10
O, love's best habit is a soothing tongue,
And age in love loves not to have years told.
Therefore I'll lie with love, and love with me,
Since that our faults in love thus smother'd be.

2

Two loves I have, of comfort and despair,
That like two spirits do suggest me still;
My better angel is a man right fair,
My worsèr spirit a woman colour'd ill. 5
To win me soon to hell, my female evil
Tempteth my better angel from my side,
And would corrupt my saint to be a devil,
Wooing his purity with her fair pride.
And whether that my angel be turn'd fiend,
Suspect I may, yet not directly tell; 10
For being both to me, both to each friend,
I guess one angel in another's hell.
The truth I shall not know, but live in doubt,
Till my bad angel fire my good one out.

3

Did not the heavenly rhetoric of thine eye,
'Gainst whom the world could not hold argument,
Persuade my heart to th's false perjury?
Vows for which thou broke deserve not punishment.
A woman I forswore; but I will prove, 5
Thou being a goddess, I forswore not thee:
My vow was earthly, thou a heavenly love;
Thy grace being gain'd cures all disgrace in me.
My vow was breath, and breath a vapour is;
Then, thou fair sun, that on this earth doth shine, 10
Exhale this vapour vow; in thee it is:
If broken, then it is no fault of mine.
If by me broke, what fool is not so wise
To break an oath, to win a paradise?

4

Sweet Cytherea, sitting by a brook
With young Adonis, lovely, fresh, and green,
Did court the lad with many a lovely look,
Such looks as none could look but beauty's queen.
She told him stories to delight his ear; 5
She show'd him favours to allure his eye;
To win his heart she touch'd him here and there:
Touches so soft still conquer chastity.
But whether unripe years did want conceit,
Or he refus'd to take her figured proffer, 10
The tender nibbler would not touch the bait,
But smile and jest at every gentle offer.
Then fell she on her back, fair queen, and toward:
He rose and ran away; ah, fool too froward!

5

If love make me forsworn, how shall I swear to love?
O never faith could hold, if not to beauty vowed;
Though to myself forsworn, to thee I'll constant prove;
Those thoughts, to me like oaks, to thee like osiers bowed.
Study his bias leaves and makes his book thine eyes, 5
Where all those pleasures live that art can comprehend.
If knowledge be the mark, to know thee shall suffice;
Well learned is that tongue that well can thee commend;
All ignorant that soul that sees thee without wonder;
Which is to me some praise, that I thy parts admire. 10
Thine eye Jove's lightning seems, thy voice his dreadful thunder,
Which, not to anger bent, is music and sweet fire.
Celestial as thou art, O, do not love that wrong,
To sing heaven's praise with such an earthly tongue.

6

Scarce had the sun dried up the dewy morn,
And scarce the herd gone to the hedge for shade,
When Cytherea, all in love forlorn,
A longing tarriance for Adonis made Under an osier growing by a brook, 5

THE PASSIONATE PILGRIM

A brook where Adon us'd to cool his spleen.
Hot was the day ; she hotter that did look
For his approach that often there had been.
Anon he comes, and throws his mantle by,
And stood stark naked on the brook's green brim.

The sun look'd on the world with glorious
eye,

Yet not so wistly as this queen on him.

He, spying her, bounc'd in whereas he stood ;

' O Jove,' quoth she ' why was not I a flood ? '

7

Fair is my love, but not so fair as fickle ;
Mild as a dove, but neither true nor trusty ;
Brighter than glass, and yet, as glass is,
brittle ;

Softer than wax, and yet, as iron, rusty ; 4
A lily pale, with damask dye to grace her ;
None fairer, nor none falser to deface her.

Her lips to mine how often hath she joined,
Between each kiss her oaths of true love
swearing !

How many tales to please me hath she coined,

Dreading my love, the loss whereof still fearing !

Yet, in the midst of all her pure protestings,

Her faith, her oaths, her tears, and all,
were jestings.

She burn'd with love, as straw with fire
flameth,

She burn'd out love, as soon as straw outburneth ;

She fram'd the love, and yet she foil'd the framing,

She bade love last, and yet she fell a-turning.

Was this a lover, or a lecher whether ?

Bad in the best, though excellent in neither.

8

If music and sweet poetry agree,
As they must needs, the sister and the
brother,

Then must the love be great 'twixt thee
and me,

Because thou lov'st the one, and I the other.

Dowland to thee is dear, whose heavenly touch

Upon the lute doth ravish human sense ;
Spenser to me, whose deep conceit is such

As, passing all conceit, needs no defence.
Thou lov'st to hear the sweet melodious
sound

That Phoebus' lute, the queen of music, makes ;

And I in deep delight am chiefly drown'd

Whenas himself to singing he betakes.

One god is god of both, as poets feign ;
One knight loves both, and both in thee remain.

9

Fair was the morn, when the fair queen of
love,

* * * * *

Paler for sorrow than her milk-white dove,
For Adon's sake, a youngster proud and
wild,

Her stand she takes upon a steep-up hill. 5
Anon Adonis comes with horn and hounds ;
She, silly queen, with more than love's good
will,

Forbade the boy he should not pass those grounds.

' Once ' quoth she ' did I see a fair sweet
youth

Here in these brakes deep-wounded with a
boar,

Deep in the thigh, a spectacle of ruth !
See in my thigh,' quoth she ' here was the sore.'

She showed hers ; he saw more wounds than one,

And blushing fled, and left her all alone.

10

Sweet rose, fair flower, untimely pluck'd,
soon vaded,

Pluck'd in the bud, and vaded in the spring !
Bright orient pearl, alack, too timely shaded !

Fair creature, kill'd too soon by death's sharp sting !

Like a green plum that hangs upon a tree, 5
And falls, through wind, before the fall
should be.

I weep for thee, and yet no cause I have ;
For why thou lests me nothing in thy will.
And yet thou lests me more than I did
crave ;

For why I craved nothing of thee still. 10
O yes, dear friend, I pardon crave of
thee !

Thy discontent thou didst bequeath to
me.

11

Venus, with Adonis sitting by her
Under a myrtle shade, began to woo him.
She told the youngling how god Mars did try her,

And as he fell to her, she fell to him.
' Even thus ' quoth she ' the warlike god
embrac'd me.'

And then she clipp'd Adonis in her arms.
' Even thus ' quoth she ' the warlike god
unlac'd me'

As if the boy should use like loving charms.
' Even thus ' quoth she ' he seized on my lips'

THE PASSIONATE PILGRIM

And with her lips on his did act the seizure ;
And as she fetched breath, away he skips,
And would not take her meaning nor her
pleasure.

Ah ! that I had my lady at this bay,
To kiss and clip me till I run away !

12

Crabbed age and youth cannot live together :

Youth is full of pleasance, age is full of care;
Youth like summer morn, age like winter
weather ;

Youth like summer brave, age like winter bare.

Youth is full of sport, age's breath is short ;
Youth is nimble, age is lame ;

Youth is hot and bold, age is weak and
cold ;

Youth is wild, and age is tame.

Age, I do abhor thee ; youth, I do adore
thee.

O, my love, my love is young !

Age, I do defy thee.

O sweet shepherd, hie thee,

For methinks thou stays too long.

13

Beauty is but a vain and doubtful good,
A shining gloss that vadeth suddenly ;

A flower that dies when first it gins to bud ;
A brittle glass that's broken presently ;

A doubtful good, a gloss, a glass, a flower, Lost, vaded, broken, dead within an hour.

And as goods lost are sold or never found,
As vaded gloss no rubbing will refresh,

As flowers dead lie withered on the ground,
As broken glass no cement can redress ;

So beauty, blemish'd once, for ever lost,
In spite of physic, painting, pain, and cost.

14

Good night, good rest. Ah, neither be my share !

She bade good night that kept my rest
away,

And daff'd me to a cabin hang'd with care,
To descant on the doubts of my decay.

'Farewell,' quoth she 'and come again
to-morrow.'

Fare well I could not, for I supp'd with sorrow.

Yet at my parting sweetly did she smile,
In scorn or friendship, nill I construe
whether :

It may be she joy'd to jest at my exile ;
It may be again to make me wander thither—

'Wander', a word for shadows like myself

As take the pain but cannot pluck the pelf.

Lord, how mine eyes throw gazes to the east !

My heart doth charge the watch ; the morning rise

Doth cite each moving sense from idle rest,
Not daring trust the office of mine eyes.

While Philomela sits and sings, I sit and
mark,

And wish her lays were tuned like the lark ;

For she doth welcome daylight with her ditty,

And drives away dark dreaming night.

The night so pack'd, I post unto my pretty;
Heart hath his hope, and eyes their wished
sight ;

Sorrow chang'd to solace, and solace
mix'd with sorrow ;

For why she sigh'd, and bade me come
to-morrow.

Were I with her, the night would post too
soon ;

But now are minutes added to the hours ;
To spite me now, each minute seems a
moon ;

Yet not for me, shine sun to succour flowers !
Pack night, peep day ; good day, of night now borrow ;

Short, night, to-night, and length thyself
to-morrow.

15

It was a lording's daughter, the fairest one of three,

That liked of her master as well as well might be,

Till looking on an Englishman, the fairest that eye could see,

Her fancy fell a-turning.

Long was the combat doubtful that love with love did fight,

To leave the master loveless, or kill the gallant knight ;

To put in practice either, alas, it was a spite Unto the silly damsel !

But one must be refused ; more mickle was the pain

That nothing could be used to turn them
both to gain,

For of the two the trusty knight was wounded with disdain.

Alas, she could not help it !

Thus art with arms contending was victor of the day,

Which by a gift of learning did bear the maid away.

Then, lullaby, the learned man hath got the lady gay ;

For now my song is ended.

16

On a day, alack the day !

Love, whose month was ever May,

THE PASSIONATE PILGRIM

Spied a blossom passing fair,
 Playing in the wanton air.
 Through the velvet leaves the wind,
 All unseen, gan passage find ;
 That the lover, sick to death,
 Wish'd himself the heaven's breath.
 ' Air,' quoth he ' thy cheeks may blow ;
 Air, would I might triumph so !
 But, alas, my hand hath sworn Ne'er to pluck thee from thy thorn ;
 Vow, alack, for youth unmeet,
 Youth, so apt to pluck a sweet.
 Thou for whom Jove would swear
 Juno but an Ethiope were ;
 And deny himself for Jove,
 Turning mortal for thy love.'

17

My flocks feed not,
 My ewes breed not,
 My rams speed not,
 All is amiss ;
 Love is dying,
 Faith's defying,
 Heart's denying,
 | Causer of this.
 All my merry jigs are quite forgot,
 All my lady's love is lost, God wot.
 Where her faith was firmly fix'd in love,
 There a nay is plac'd without remove.
 One silly cross
 Wrought all my loss.
 | O frowning Fortune, cursed fickle dame !
 For now I see
 Inconstancy
 | More in women than in men remain.

In black mourn I,
 All fears scorn I,
 Love hath forlorn me,
 Living in thrall ;
 Heart is bleeding,
 All help needing,
 O cruel speeding,
 Fraughted with gall !
 My shepherd's pipe can sound no deal ;
 My wether's bell rings doleful knell ;
 My curtail dog, that wont to have play'd,
 Plays not at all, but seems afraid.
 With sighs so deep,
 Procures to weep,
 In howling wise, to see my doleful plight.
 How sighs resound
 Through heartless ground,
 Like a thousand vanquish'd men in bloody fight !

Clear wells spring not,
 Sweet birds sing not,
 Green plants bring not
 Forth their dye.
 Herds stand weeping,
 Flocks all sleeping,

1342

Nymphs back peeping
 Fearfully.
 All our pleasure known to us poor swains,
 All our merry meetings on the plains,
 All our evening sport from us is fled,
 All our love is lost, for Love is dead.
 Farewell, sweet lass ;
 Thy like ne'er was
 For a sweet content, the cause of all my moan.
 Poor Corydon
 Must live alone ;
 Other help for him I see that there is none.

18

When as thine eye hath chose the dame,
 And stall'd the deer that thou shouldst
 strike,
 Let reason rule things worthy blame,
 As well as fancy, partial wight ;
 Take counsel of some wiser head,
 Neither too young nor yet unwed.
 And when thou com'st thy tale to tell,
 Smooth not thy tongue with filed talk,
 Lest she some subtle practice smell—
 A cripple soon can find a halt ;
 But plainly say thou lov'st her well,
 And set her person forth to sell.

And to her will frame all thy ways ;
 Spare not to spend, and chiefly there
 Where thy desert may merit praise
 By ringing in thy lady's ear.
 The strongest castle, tower, and town,
 The golden bullet beats it down.

Serve always with assured trust,
 And in thy suit be humble-true ;
 Unless thy lady prove unjust,
 Press never thou to choose a new.
 When time shall serve, be thou not slack
 To proffer, though she put thee back.

What though her frowning brows be bent
 Her cloudy looks will calm ere night ;
 And then too late she will repent
 That thus dissembled her delight ;
 And twice desire, ere it be day,
 That which with scorn she put away.

What though she strive to try her strength,
 And ban and brawl and say thee nay ?
 Her feeble force will yield at length,
 When craft hath taught her thus to say :
 ' Had women been so strong as men,
 In faith, you had not had it then '.

The wiles and guiles that women work,
 Dissembled with an outward show,
 The tricks and toys that in them lurk,
 The cock that treads them shall not know.
 Have you not heard it said full oft,
 A woman's nay doth stand for nought ?

THE PASSIONATE PILGRIM

Think women still to strive with men
 To sin, and never for to saint ;
 Here is no heaven—be holy then— 45
 When time with age shall them attain.
 Were kisses all the joys in bed,
 One woman would another wed.

But soft ; enough—too much I fear ;
 Best that my mistress hear my song ; 50
 He will not stick to round me on th' ear,
 To teach my tongue to be so long.
 Yet will she blush, here be it said,
 To hear her secrets so bewray'd.

19

Live with me, and be my love,
 And we will all the pleasures prove
 That hills and valleys, dales and fields,
 And all the craggy mountains yields.

There will we sit upon the rocks, 5
 And see the shepherds feed their flocks,
 By shallow rivers, by whose falls
 Melodious birds sing madrigals.

There will I make thee a bed of roses,
 With a thousand fragrant posies, 10
 A cap of flowers, and a kirtle
 Embroidered all with leaves of myrtle ;

A belt of straw and ivy buds,
 With coral clasps and amber studs.
 And if these pleasures may thee move, 15
 Then live with me and be my love.

LOVE'S ANSWER

If that the world and love were young,
 And truth in every shepherd's tongue,
 These pretty pleasures might me move, 20
 To live with thee and be thy love.

20

As it fell upon a day,
 In the merry month of May,
 Sitting in a pleasant shade
 Which a grove of myrtles made,
 Beasts did leap and birds did sing, 5
 Trees did grow and plants did spring ;
 Every thing did banish moan,
 Save the nightingale alone.

She, poor bird, as all forlorn,
 Lean'd her breast up-till a thorn, 10
 And there sung the dolefull'st ditty,
 That to hear it was great pity.
 ' Fie, fie, fie ! ' now would she cry ;
 ' Teru, Teru ! ' by and by ;
 That to hear her so complain 15
 Scarce I could from tears refrain ;
 For her griefs, so lively shown,
 Made me think upon mine own.
 Ah, thought I, thou mourn'st in vain ;
 None takes pity on thy pain : 20
 Senseless trees, they cannot hear thee ;
 Ruthless bears, they will not cheer thee.
 King Pandion, he is dead ;
 All thy friends are lapp'd in lead ;
 All thy fellow birds do sing, 25
 Careless of thy sorrowing.
 Even so, poor bird, like thee,
 None alive will pity me.
 Whilst as fickle Fortune smil'd,
 Thou and I were both beguil'd. 30
 Every one that flatters thee
 Is no friend in misery.
 Words are easy, like the wind ;
 Faithful friends are hard to find. 35
 Every man will be thy friend
 Whilst thou hast wherewith to spend ;
 But if store of crowns be scant,
 No man will supply thy want.
 If that one be prodigal, 40
 Bountiful they will him call,
 And with such-like flattering,
 ' Pity but he were a king '.
 If he be addict to vice,
 Quickly him they will entice ;
 If to women he be bent, 45
 They have at commandement ;
 But if Fortune once do frown,
 Then farewell his great renown.
 They that fawn'd on him before
 Use his company no more. 50
 He that is thy friend indeed,
 He will help thee in thy need ;
 If thou sorrow, he will weep ;
 If thou wake, he cannot sleep.
 Thus of every grief in heart 55
 He with thee doth bear a part.
 These are certain signs to know
 Faithful friend from flatt'ring foe.

THE PHOENIX AND TURTLE

LET the bird of loudest lay,
On the sole Arabian tree,
Herald sad and trumpet be,
To whose sound chaste wings obey.

But thou shrieking harbinger,
Foul precursor of the fiend,
Augur of the fever's end,
To this troop come thou not near.

From this session interdict
Every fowl of tyrant wing,
Save the eagle, feath' red king :
Keep the obsequy so strict.

Let the priest in surplice white,
That defunctive music can,
Be the death-divining swan,
Lest the requiem lack his right.

And thou treble-dated crow,
That thy sable gender mak'st
With the breath thou giv'st and tak'st,
'Mongst our mourners shalt thou go.

Here the anthem doth commence :
Love and constancy is dead ;
Phoenix and the turtle fled
In a mutual flame from hence.

So they lov'd as love in twain
Had the essence but in one ;
Two distincts, division none :
Number there in love was slain.

Hearts remote, yet not asunder ;
Distance, and no space was seen
'Twixt this turtle and his queen ;
But in them it were a wonder.

So between them love did shine
That the turtle saw his right
Flaming in the phoenix' sight :
Either was the other's mine.

Property was thus appalled,
That the self was not the same ;
Single nature's double name
Neither two nor one was called.

Reason, in itself confounded,
Saw division grow together,
To themselves yet either neither,
Simple were so well compounded,

That it cried ' How true a twain
Seemeth this concordant one !
Love hath reason, reason none,
If what parts can so remain '.

Whereupon it made this threne
To the phoenix and the dove,
Co-supremes and stars of love,
As chorus to their tragic scene.

THRENOS

Beauty, truth, and rarity,
Grace in all simplicity,
Here enclos'd in cinders lie.

Death is now the phoenix' nest ;
And the turtle's loyal breast
To eternity doth rest,

Leaving no posterity—
'Twas not their infirmity,
It was married chastity.

Truth may seem, but cannot be ;
Beauty brag, but 'tis not she :
Truth and beauty buried be.

To this urn let those repair
That are either true or fair ;
For these dead birds sigh a prayer.

APPENDIX

THIS transcript, reproduced in type-facsimile, of 147 lines from the manuscript of the play of Sir Thomas More, is included by the generous permission of Sir Walter Greg, who made it, and the syndics of the Cambridge University Press. It can be studied with complete advantage only in the context for which Dr. Greg designed it—namely, Shakespeare's Hand in Sir Thomas More,* a study from all angles of the authorship of these lines by a group of scholars who proved, beyond reasonable question, that Shakespeare wrote them, and that chance has preserved for us, in addition to the six, possibly seven, genuine signatures, this

Though only a comparison of the transcript with a facsimile of the original will make clear the full implications of this discovery, the reader has here before him a fragment of the master's composition, transcribed with a care that will permit him to understand more adequately than any description the difficulties confronting Heminge and Condell in their editorial labours. The 147 lines occupy both sides of a leaf of paper and one side of a second leaf, and form part of a scene Shakespeare contributed to a piece by some fellow playwrights. The original author or authors had difficulty with the licenser of plays. That official was not troubled by the play's protagonist being More, a martyr to the cause of Catholicism : a Protestant audience under the Protestant Elizabeth had a sufficiently catholic attitude to understand and appreciate his character. But a series of episodes in which he is represented as intervening in person to quell the ' ill May-day ' riot of 1517 so disturbed the licenser that after marking several passages for omission he turned back and wrote at the beginning of the manuscript :

' Leave out the insurrection wholly and the cause thereof and begin with Sir Thomas More at the Mayor's sessions with a report afterwards of his good service done being Sheriff of London upon a mutiny against the Lombards. Only by a short report and not otherwise at your own perils.—TYLLNEY '.

The constant danger of attack on the foreign colonies in London from riotous native elements was too present to the licenser's mind to allow him to pass episodes which showed historical precedent for such attempts. At some stage in the struggle to fit the play for official favour the author or authors sought the help of Shakespeare, not as some unknown or prentice playwright, but as one whose dexterity and experience would supply the resource required.

Shakespeare's scene opens with the rioters led by Lincoln crying out against the foreigners. To them enters a Sergeant-at-Arms, followed by the Lord Mayor with the Earls of Surrey and Shrewsbury and Sir Thomas More. The crowd cry down the Mayor and Earls but are willing to give More a hearing. The interpretation of the typographical detail of the transcript will be clear from Dr. Greg's own analysis:

'The author wrote the text, at any rate of the first two pages, continuously, dividing the speeches by rules but without indicating the speakers. He then read it through, inserting the prefixes and at the same time making certain additions to the text, some words at the beginning of l. 22, at the end of l. 38, and the whole of l. 45. . . . The addition of the speakers' names was certainly perfunctory, especially on the first page, but, apart from the unsatisfactory condition of the deleted passage on the third, I do not find any evidence of haste or carelessness in composition'.

The scene, however, does not stand in its final state exactly as Shakespeare left it. The heavier type indicates additions and alterations by a second hand, that of a playhouse reviser who tried to clarify and pull together certain details of the original. One instance only of his efforts can be commented on here : he has deleted ll. 112-14 and substituted a phrase of his own. Shakespeare's omission of punctuation 3933 marks and capital letters, his insertion of the phrase 'in in to your obedience' and the extra-metrical nature of the conclusion of l. 114 puzzled the reviser. He took the phrase 'to kneel to be forgiven' with what goes before instead of with what follows, and in his determination to have it all tidy scored out the troublesome passage and inserted a join of his own contriving.

Had this manuscript gone as it stands to the printer it needs no imagination to picture the difficulties that would have confronted the compositor. It is true that these three pages were composed by Shakespeare in circumstances very different from those in which he wrote his own plays. But the handwriting, with all the difficulties and irregularities recorded in Dr. Greg's notes, would be the same; there would be the same minimum of punctuation and capitalization, and possibly, in places, the same insertions, extra-metrical lines, and loose ends. These by themselves would be sufficient to explain many of the blunders that mar the Good Quartos and that must have stood in the transcripts prepared by scribes working from Shakespeare's papers. The three pages of Sir Thomas More here transcribed must, when they were new and fresh, have presented an appearance that might reasonably be described as scarcely blotted; but careful study can discover beneath the discolourings and blurrings that now overlay them the many pitfalls that would await a printer. We need not therefore be surprised, though we may regret, that even with Shakespeare's papers in their possession Heminge and Condell did not succeed in giving us the perfect text. Only the most unrelaxing vigilance and supervision can arrest the brood of error that haunt the printing-house and the copyist's desk alike. The three pages from Shakespeare's own hand may show the reader some of the loopholes through which those intruders have found their way into Shakespeare's text.

The writer probably intended let us but forgot to cross out the s

147 found] un has three minims only. you] o* malformed. yf] M it: T omits.
D certainly wrote something after seek and the addition seems to me to improve the sense. The visible traces can be read yf (hardly it), but at the same time they are rather widely separated from the preceding word, and it is possible that they represent an & or some other sign indicating that the original text was to resume at this point.

FINAL NOTE ON CERTAIN READINGS IN LL. 103-14.

103 his (deleted)] The curious symbol superimposed on this word has certainly not the form of the & usual in English hands. It may, however, I think, be a loose attempt at rendering the print form of ampersand, which though rare is not unknown in manuscripts of the period. Since the ink in which the symbol is written is identical with that of the original writing, it seems unlikely that a second hand is involved in the alteration. This also applies to the contraction mark of maie in l. 101.

110 and your] T notes: 'a word was underlined for insertion between these two words, but it appears to have been wiped out while the ink was still wet. The traces of the letters seem to suggest bend.' It appears that and was crossed out and the word, whatever it was, interlined to replace it. But the whole alteration, which was probably never completed, has been erased. The traces are very illegible, but to me they suggest the letters bye rather than bend.

113 warre] T warre noting that the writer 'altered warre to warre by interlining a long s.' I am not myself able to detect any indication of a final e, and believe the supposed f to be the upward curl of the regular English final s.

112-4 In these difficult lines, if the original writer intended the interlined words in in to you obedienc as a substitute for the two half-lines why euen...by obedienc (as has been suggested) one would have expected him to delete the latter. But, with the substitution of hurly for warre he left the passage as it was, and must, I think, have meant it to stand. I conjecture that a stop was intended after feet in l. 111, and that in in to you obedienc should be inserted between ryot; and why. The whole passage is clumsy but I no longer think, as I was once inclined to do, that the author was conscious of having left it in confusion.

The ENGLISH LANGUAGE BOOK SOCIETY, in addition to its low-priced editions of specialist works, publishes a variety of new series for the non-specialist.

Each volume has been selected for its high standard of accuracy and usefulness or interest, and is now available at a lower price than ever before.

If you would like to see other titles added to this 'English Library' Series or are interested in other subjects, send your suggestions and enquiries to:

The English Language Book Society
Box 295, Wimpole Street
London, W.1

All books published by the Society carry this label—and the name of the appropriate series.

★ This edition, published to coincide with the fourth centenary of Shakespeare's birth, is outstanding publishing value. More than 1,400 pages, including all that Shakespeare ever wrote; a critical text; scholarly introduction, notes and glossary—all this for 7s. 6d. (U.K. price)—the lowest-priced Shakespeare in print.
